ious families of the Central Conference of Mennonites find themselves owning this land in a world in which its value seems certain to increase. Mennonites—we Mennonites—Central Conference, General Conference, Illinois Conference, Eastern Conference, and the other groups, have some of the best soil that exists. Experts in geography say that the most favorable combination of natural factors for agriculture on all the globe exists in Central Illinois. Since we Mennonites own large blocks of it by legal title registered in the courthouses, it follows that we are placed in a favored situation.

Do we recognize the opportunity that is ours? Which direction are we going to move?

In ancient Rome in periods of strength, in all recent civilized nations, and especially in England, the country home was made into an estate where good living was developed. People of German origin such as we Mennonites, although we are under classical and Anglo-Saxon influences, (the Angles and Saxons were of German derivation too) call this gemütlichkeit, with our variations in practice. Some of us have already made the rural home a base for a well-rounded, inquiring life, in the manner of such an example as Thomas Jefferson, whose classic seat, Monticello, has seldom been equaled for what can be done with a country estate. Is that the direction in which we shall move?

In this country we reached a period in national development in the Late Thirties, that is, the last decade, when the opportunity was open to all of us to make our farms just such bases for beautiful lives. The man down on the farm today is a much-needed American, as indeed he was always. But more so now than ever he can make his farm the means for a secure and happy life, if he wills it to be so. He has today the wisdom of the ages available at low cost, no matter in what part of the nation he lives. European refugees have made this country the depository of most of Western Civilization. The classics are available in low cost editions and various magazines and books distribution clubs, emanating from New York City and other centers, make any man anywhere as rich as any other, if his values are rightly placed. There is a publication called THE LAND, put out from Washington, D. C. All this may hasten the day, of course, when the industrial worker and farmer may be actually more fortunately placed than the white-collar worker, a condition in which modern Europe is said to have reached in some respects before the war started. Certainly the man on the farm today can have no claim to limitness except as he himself is responsible. Since Mennonites are predominately farmers we today have opportunity equal to any, if we reach for it.

It is this writer's hope then, that Mennonites will realize that now is the time to develop our farms into estates, perhaps with a name, not unlike the English Cavaliers gave to their ancestral homes, with pride in family continuity, sturdy citizenship, and the development of regional specialty in product or culture. This will probably be a good way to meet new industrial conditions. It will mean a self-respecting rural population participating on an equal social footing with other groups.

In turning one's rural home into a family seat, certain things should be kept in mind. Obviously one should keep the title to the land and plan to keep it forever. The old rule of primogeniture in descent has gone out of practice, but its advantage of keeping a holding in one piece can be kept by an agreement if the heirs to a fee-simple estate so will it.

RULES FOR DAILY LIFE

Selected by Fredrick D. Anthony, Baltimore, Md.

Begin the day with God.
Kneel down to him in prayer.
Lift up thy heart to his abode,
And seek his love to share.

Open the Book of God
And read a portion there,
That it may hallow all thy thoughts,
And sweeten all thy care.

Go through the day with God.
Whate'er thy work may be,
Where'er thou art—at home, abroad,
He still is near to thee.

Converse in mind with God;
Thy spirit heavenward raise;
Acknowledge every good bestowed,
And offer grateful praise.

Conclude the day with God;
Thy sins to him confess;
Trust in the Lord's atoning blood,
And plead his righteousness.

Lie down at night with God,
Who gives his servants sleep;
And should'st thou tread the vale of death,
He will thee guard and keep.

CORRESPONDENCE

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Hillsboro, Kansas

We look back over the past five months of church life in our congregation with grateful hearts to our Heavenly Father, Who has manifested Himself unto us in so very many ways. We are deeply grateful to Rev. Lester Hostetler who is ministering unto our souls' needs by bringing to us regularly inspiring and heart-searching messages every Sunday, also to Mrs. Hostetler and their children, who, so unselfishly share him with us.

Twelve people united with the church by letter at Easter time. On Pentecost Sunday eleven young people were received into the church through rites of baptism. To all of us who are in the church, this should be an inspiration and encouragement that there are yet others who are willing to join the ranks and face the challenges of today.

Twice were we invited to the Lord's Table to feed our souls on the bread of heaven.

Mother's Day was observed by the S. S. with special music and each mother was presented with a buttoniere of sweet peas.

On Children's Day the babies of our church were brought by their parents to be consecrated.

April 26th the church was hostess at a dinner given in honor of Rev. Hostetler's birthday. Rev. and Mrs. Hostetler, Dorothy and Hugh were the guests of honor.

Ever a source of wonder and encouragement to us who are prone to complain of lesser "thorns in the flesh" is sweet and cheerful little Peggy Schultz, eight year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schultz, who has been in a caste, more or less, for the last four years.

A happy event of the spring was the marriage of Miss Anna Krause to H. J. Bartel, both of our church.

Thus both joys and sorrow have been present. There have been deaths, births, marriages and serious illnesses. Hearts have been saddened by the calling away of Hearts have been saddened by the calling away of loved ones into the service of the government.

But throughout all we have felt the comforting and compassionate love of the Heavenly Father.

Franklin Hiebert was called into service the latter part of June and our thoughts and prayers do follow him.
—Mrs. Jacob Bartel

—Deer Creek Mennonite Church, Deer Creek, Oklahoma: "On Sunday, May 31, Brother P. H. Richert spoke to our congregation, both morning and evening, in the interest of missions. He based his thoughts on the close relationship between peace and missions and also on the close relationship between the Holy Spirit and missions.

On June 2, Miss Elizabeth Foth and Erwin Wedel visited our church. Miss Foth told about her work in the slums of New York, and Brother Wedel told of the work among the poverty-stricken and spiritually needy people of southern Aabama. Rev. John Lichti, who has had the misfortune of breaking his arm, has been dismissed from the hospital, and his condition is improving." —Corr.

WORKS AND BELIEF

Good works, like any other good thing, may be misused or used rightly. The Bible treats both the misuse and the right use of works. Let us consider the misuse.

Good works may be an attempt to make up for only a partial yielding to God. Lacking in one respect man may seek to make up for it in another sphere. The attempt is made to justify a wrong with a right. Man may engage in all kinds of good works to quiet an accusing conscience.

Good works done out of wrong motives do not make good men and women. Al Capone's soup kitchen in the days of the depression did not make him a good man. The Pharisee's hypocritical prayers and fastings did not make them good. A number of the demons recognized Jesus, a worthy act in itself. However, at the same time they defied Him with all their might. Good works are good in as far as they promote the welfare of others. But they are very detrimental to the spiritual growth of him who does them from a wrong motive. Such good works, like the demons, recognize Jesus to a certain extent, but they defy Him in a larger and more significant area. Such works are a way of skirting the main trouble; they are an attempt at spiritual bribery. They can be the pleasant perfume that is to cover the unpleasant odor of unconfessed sin. They are like a shining coat of paint on a car whose primary trouble is an engine that won't run. Good works can be the covering under which a partially yielded life seeks to hide. As such they are dangerous. As such they are a means by which men and women deceive themselves. As a means of escaping the real issue they help to make bad men and women rather than good.

But, here, beware! Just because good works and wrong motives are sometimes found together does not give us any ground for discrediting good works as a whole. So many of us jump to hasty conclusions. We are tempted to go to the extreme either one way or the other, and thereby we become unbalanced. Good works which spring out of a good heart are most pleasing unto God.

True belief and good works go hand in hand. Too often man clutches at one of the two and thinks he has both. Neither is ever true or complete when taken alone. Both must always exist together to be true and pleasing in God's sight. Where there are works, but not a full yielding, there the works are not true. Where there is belief, but a lack of works, there the beilef is not true. The two must exist together. This is the teaching of Christ as given in the Bible. When the emphasis is only upon one of these, then beware. —rw.

FIFTIETH SESSION OF THE NORTHERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE

Conference Motto—"Hitherto hath the Lord helped us." I Sam. 7:12.

Conference Theme—"Jesus Christ the same yesterday, today and forever." Heb. 13:8.

The conference sessions of the Northern District churches convening from June 6-10 in the Salem Zion Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakota, answered a dual purpose: first, in the observance of its fiftieth anniversary, and second, in its annual business sessions and programs.

The anniversary services were conducted Sunday afternoon. Rev. J. J. Balzer and Mr. Herman Fast, who were active in our conference and who were at the first conference in 1891, were seated on the platform. Rev. Balzer reported on the first conference held in the First Mennonite Church of Mt. Lake, Minnesota. He stated that the General Conference had asked for permission to make use of the afore mentioned church and invited a number of prominent men of the present Northern District Conference area to attend with the thought in mind of urging the churches of this area to unite into a district conference. The first trial conference was conducted entirely by outsiders, mainly from the East. The names of Rev. A. B. Schelly, Rev. David Goertz, Rev. Isaac Sommer, and others, were mentioned. Among those of the present Northern District area the following were freely mentioned: Rev. Gerhard Neufeld, then Elder of the First Mennonite Church, Mt. Lake, Minnesota; Elder H. H. Regier, Bethel Church, Mt. Lake; Rev. J. J. Balzer, Rev. N. F. Toews, etc. From the very beginning the Northern District Conference has exercised a beneficial influence in missionary endeavors, organization and support, both in this district and in the General Conference said Rev. Balzer.

Mr. Herman J. Fast, for twenty-six years a member of the Evangelization Committee, reported on its early work and later development. He stated that Rev. N. F. Toews was sent out for a number of years as a traveling minister for the Northern District. Other ministers also were sent from time to time to shepherd the small and scattered flocks. The Lord has blessed this work, and so the efforts of the conference in this direction have not been in vain. Both Mr. Fast and Rev. Balzer are now eighty-three years of age.

The historical talks were followed by "A Challenge to the Northern Ristrict" by Rev. J. A. Thieszen. He pointed out the field of labor and the possibilities that lie before the workers of the district. The conference guest speaker, Dr. Suckau of Berne, Indiana, then made suggestions to the conference basing his thoughts on II Chronicles 7:14; Psalmns 129; 23; and 24 and suggested Daniel 9 as a prayer.

The conference address, "Counting the Cost" based on Luke 14:26-27,30 was delivered by the president, Dr. J. D. Unruh. He discussed this topic from the standpoint of the individual Christian and, in view of our Fiftieth Anniversary session, from the point of view of the Church and conference. Pertaining to the individual he said, "One of the widest gaps in human experience is that between what we would like to be, and what we actually are." If anyone would follow Jesus he must count the cost; there must be an impelling force from within, and this force comes out of a personal and intimate relationship with Christ.

As a Church, Dr. Unruh said, "It is altogether fitting and proper that we pause to pay tribute on this occasion to the courageous spirits who launched out in the 16th century; — to those of our forebears who for the sake of faith began life anew on the mid-west plains; — to those who visioned pathways to heathen lands; — to those who initiated our schools; — and to those who fifty years ago launched this conference endeavor." Then he called attention to several problem areas that seem to be trends that should cause us concern; namely, the trend to a compromising church membership, that is, lack of discipline from without — the individual is following too much his own intuition; second, an unmistakable trend, a movement from rural to urban centers which results in loss of some of the vitality of our testimony. Then he cited statistics from the articles of J. Winfield Fretz concerning the greater percentage of rural boys going as conscientious objectors compared to those coming from urban centers. And lastly, the trend to over-emphasize the individual conscience in the present crisis. He suggested that the church teach the principles of non-resistance and help the young man to decide.

The Pastors Conference Saturday was well attended. Two topics were discussed, "The Pastor as Steward of the Mysteries of God" by Rev. Willard Claassen and, "The Pastor's Conduct" by Rev. H. E. Widmer. These were followed by a message, "The Pastor as Christ's Ambassador" by Dr. Suckau.

On Sunday forenoon the home mission sermon was preached by Dr. Suckau and a foreign mission sermon by Missionary F. Isaac. In the evening of that day the Sunday School Convention was held.

Monday forenoon the business of the conference started, and various reports were read. The afternoon session was begun with the observance of the Lord's Supper. Dr. Suckau delivered the message for the occasion. After these services Dr. Henry Fast reported on the C. P. S. Camps and gave a very inspirational talk. The conference Peace Committee also reported at this time. Other conference reports followed during the day, and in the evening testimonies were offered by fourteen young workers now on the field or about to enter in full time Christian work. This was followed by a sermon and a consecration service in charge of Dr. Suckau during which two young people decided to enter into Christian work.

Tuesday morning the conference business was finished, and the election of officers was held. The next conference place is to be The Bethel Church of Mt. Lake, Minnesota, of which Rev. Erland Waltner is pastor. Rev. Waltner was also elected as the new president of the Northern District. The Ladies' Mission Service took place in the afternoon and the C. E. Convention in the evening. Wednesday was the day of the Young Peoples Conference, the theme of which was: "For me to live is Christ" "Because of the Cross, the Call, the Commission." The guest speaker was Rev. Walter Gering of Moundridge, Kans.

The spirit of the Lord was manifest throughout the conference sessions and we know that a blessing will follow into each community to which the delegates and guests have returned.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

INSTALLATION OF INDIAN PASTOR AT CHAMPA

By Mrs. Orlando Waltner, Champa, India

We are happy to report that the Champa church has installed its own Indian pastor. Previous to this the church has been served by missionaries, Dr. H. R. Bauman, having served as pastor for four and one-half years. Now P. P. Asna, a brother to Rev. Rufus Asna of Janjgir, has been installed as pastor.

On February 8, 1942, at the Indian Conference held at Jagdishpur, the following were ordained as elders Philip Palak, of Jagdishpur, Ratan Singh, pastor of Korba church, P. P. Asna, of Champa, Dr. H. E. Dester, who is the pastor of the Jagdishpur church, and O. A. Waltner. Israel Nandy was ordained as an evangelist.

When the conference was completed and the people had returned home, the Champa church held its installation service for its new pastor and two deacons. Dr. Bauman spoke very fittingly of the new pastor's duties and also of the duties of the congregation. The new pastor expressed his appreciation of the trust which the people have placed in him and also expressed his realization of the difficulties of his position as pastor. He is an earnest Christian who has served for many years as an evangelist in the village work carried on by the mission. His wife, also, is interested in the Lord's work and has promised to be a help-mate in her husband's work.

The two deacons are Puran Banwar, the Indian caretaker of the leper home, and Ashawan, the headmaster of the primary school. Both of these men are looked up to and trusted by the Christians, and have shown that they have the interests of their fellow-Christians at heart.

We feel that this step has been a forward step for the Champa church. The church feels its responsibilities more than previously and is attempting to carry out its duties from within. We pray that the church may grow and that Christ's blessing may be upon each member.

THE LORD WILL PROVIDE

This statement can express the finest Christian sentiment and confidence, but it can also be used by the stupid or the lazy. You will have read about the many poor in our Basna church area in India. True, we have many poor Christians. Observing the conditions of the poor and studying the problem a bit, one finds that we have three classes of poor brethren among us. One class or group is poor because circumstances have been against them. Their work animals have died. Their crops have failed several years in succession. Sickness has layed low the bread-winner for months on end, etc., etc. Such need our earnest sympathy and help.

A second class of poor are poor because they do not have the brains to lay hold on opportunities to earn; and if they earn they do not know how to conserve. One brother, for example, as soon as he has a rupee (about thirty cents) goes and buys a chicken or some other expensive food and has a big feast. After a few days he comes to me in tears begging for seventy-five cents to pay his land taxes which are long overdue, lest the village chief takes his land away. Another brother, as soon as he has a rupee feels himself to be a great king and scoffs at opportunities for further earnings. I call him and say: "Brother Poinka, I need these bricks to be taken to such and such a place; will you do it?" He laughs and walks off. Somebody else takes the job. After some days brother Poinka comes to me and says, "In my home there has been no food since day before yesterday, and our two little daughters are crying. Won't you help us?" What shall one say or do? One pities the little ones who have to suffer, because their daddy's insight and foresight is so very limited.

Then there is a third class of poor brethren who willfully want to be poor. I was in our Christian Church at Narainpur. After divine services I said to the brethren: "Quite a few of you look rather poor and your houses are ill kept; what is the matter?"

"Yes," they said, "We are very poor; what shall we do; the Lord will provide." So answered father Makund, the oldest Christian brother of the church.

I told them that it was very good that they trusted God, but, "How much land have you?"

Makund answers: "I and my two brothers altogether have thirty-seven acres of land."

"And how deep are the wells in your village area?" was my next question.

Answer: "From twelve to twenty feet."

And that the water in this whole area is good for irrigation everybody knows. Then I said: "Brethren, I have no sympathy with your poverty. God has given you land (and thirty-seven acres in three families is considerable property in India). He has given you children (Makund has five grown sons); God has provided water in the earth which is easy to get; you have four public markets (bazars) every week within ten miles in every direction; now up, make gardens and sell vegetables and fruits which the public wants and quit dishonoring God by refusing His gifts which He holds out towards you."

MENNONITE MEMORIAL CHURCH

Altoona, Pennsylvania

Some time has passed since we last wrote to The Mennonite, and many things have taken place. What a blessed assurance to know that, "Jesus is mine! O what a foretaste of glory divine! Heir of salvation, purchase of God, Born of His Spirit, washed in His blood."

Various happenings in the past few months were as follows: Our sun-rise prayer and praise service was held on Easter morning with a nice group present, and real spiritual blessings were received by those who came out so early in the morning to truly worship "Him" who is risen and is even now at the right hand of God interceding for us. What a blessed thought to know we are worshiping a living Christ and the assurance that some day, perhaps soon, He is coming again for His own.

After the service there was a time of fellowship, and breakfast was served in the parsonage for all those who were able to stay.

Following this was the Sunday School and morning worship service. The Easter program by the children was held in the evening, followed by a message, "The Risen Christ" by Rev. Sidney. This was the beginning of our week's evangelistic services. Local pastors from the Altoona ministerium were the speakers for the week. A wonderful cooperation on the part of the pastors, a real interest by those who attended, and real blessings were received throughout the week. The message of salvation was brought forth in a plain and simple way at each service.

The Friday night Bible hour for the boys and girls for the winter months was held until the week before Easter after which we had an entire week of meetings for them in connection with the evangelistic services.

Mother's Day was observed with a special program and message for the mothers by one of the local pastors. Each mother was then presented with a little token, namely: a "Book Mark" for their Bibles, on the reverse side was a reminder to "Read the Bible." What a great thought in the little chorus "Let's go on, Let's go on, Reading the Bible every day, Let's go on, Let's go on, Reading the word of God." This exhortation is not for mothers only, but for fathers and boys and girls as well.

We had a lovely time on Memorial Day with some Christian friends who had asked us to take them up on the mountain to the cemetary. Here special memorial services were held after which we were invited out to dinner at a farm home. Had a wonderful opportunity to witness for our Lord and Saviour and give words of encouragement and exhortation to a mother who said she was a Christian, but had now become very bitter towards God, because He had taken from her, her husband and only son. After quoting much scripture to her and dealing with her in a plain way her heart was softened and she invited us to come and visit her in her home. Also handed us some money to be used in the Lord's work. We are trusting that she will really "Look Up" and let Him have His way in her heart and life. Satan has been having a hold of her and knows her weakest point, that of discouragement.

Two persons came to us lately and stated how glad they were for moving on the hill, stating that they might still be living in sin if it had not been for us and the mission here. We had come in contact with them while out visiting, making the way of salvation plain to the one, while in her home, she was ready to receive Christ as her Saviour; later she openly confessed him while attending special services in the city, was baptized in our church, and also is now a member here. The other one had been a backslider.

Two members were added to our Ladies Aid since the beginning of the year. One of them a Catholic girl. She remarked last night at our meeting how she enjoys coming. O, that we might be a real witness and testimony to all those with whom we come in contact.

Our Bible School begins June 15. We are looking forward to real spiritual blessings and praise the Lord for the opportunity to implant the word of God in these young hearts, trusting that the seed sown will bring forth much fruit.

CIVILIAN BONDS

Since last week's press release of Secretary of the Treasury, Henry M. Morgenthau Jr.'s letter of June 2 to Paul French, naturally many inquiries have come to M. C. C. headquarters as to the necessary next steps in taking advantage of this announced provision for purchase of non-war Bonds. A committee representative of the several groups most interested in this has held a number of meetings and is in process of completing arrangements with the Provident Trust Company of Philapelphia to serve as intermediary in this matter. It is expected that the detailed plans to make the arrangement effective will be ready for submission to the responsible agencies in these several groups by June 24. It is hoped that fully detailed information will be available for any one interested in using this provision before the end of June. Naturally, all who are concerned in this problem are appreciative of the Treasury Department's attitude.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

EDUCATED FARMERS

Many people claim that a man doesn't need a college education to be a farmer. If these people mean by this that a man can earn his living on the farm without the benefit of a college education, they are correct. Thousands of farmers are demonstrating this fact every day. But a genuine Christian college education would help most farmers enjoy living as well as merely earning a living. Unfortunately most people who oppose higher education do so on purely financial grounds completely overlooking the spiritual values that such a training would or could provide. While I do not wish to prove the point, I believe it could be demonstrated with factual data that a college education for farmers is a paying proposition financially as well as spiritually. No other occupation provides such a perfect opportunity to use and appreciate the subjects studied in college as does farming.

Appreciative Farmers

Farmers because of the nature of their work spend a large proportion of their time working alone. As they do the chores around home, as they ride up and down the field on the tractor while plowing, or while performing any of the other hundreds of tasks that wait to be done on the farm, there is opportunity to meditate. What a wonderful opportunity to meditate on the meaning of things read or heard in college but which were never carefully thought through. The inspiration and information received from the studies in the life of Jesus alone would provide sufficient substance for several years of thought, not to mention the lives and experiences of hundreds of Bible characters. It is pleasant to think of the enthusiastic discussions we would have in Sunday school classes and the alert listeners in our congregations if our farmers who have been away to school would apply the things learned there to the weekly Sunday school lessons and sermons. A Christian education should provide men with training to make them devoted Sunday school teachers, consecrated lay church men, and intelligent community leaders. Unfortunately too many trained men have returned to the farms more worldly wise than spiritually mature. This, of course, need not be so.

But God speaks to men in many ways. Not only does He speak through the written Word, but He reveals Himself through the pages of. history and through the wonders of nature. Who of us has not been taught a great lesson in life through careful observation of animal, insect, or plant behavior? Here is another realm where college courses such as studies in biology, physics, chemistry, psychology, sociology and others can help us to see what we have formerly not seen. Many of the greatest truths in life are those simple little things all around us which we have never observed of our own accord. It required a teacher to point them out to us. Jesus illustrated this point when he called our attention to the significance of a little sparrow, the beauty of the lily, the uselessness of a barren fig tree.

A good education ought to help us see the big truths in the little things all around us. Yes, farmers need to be educated, but an education is more than an accumulation of facts. It is the ability to interpret and use these facts toward worthy ends. The words of Solomon (Proverbs 4:7) express this need for a real education: "Wisdom is the principle thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting get understanding."

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By P. H. Unruh, Goessel, Kansas

JULY 8—"I know that my redeemer liveth." Job 19:25.

During this month of July we shall meditate on "What We Christians Know." This word from Job for today is a very precious one. For the soul aware of this truth but conscious that all are sinners, this is a consolation and comfort. As the personal Redeemer in such inspired word the personal contact is made, and it assures the redeemed of his salvation. Full confidence and peace is anchored in him, the victorious redeemer from the open tomb. Before us is this redeemer as our saviour through His life pure and holy, His death conquering our great enemy and His resurrection giving assurance of the believer's victory in due time. Now I fully trust Him and know that my redeemer liveth. I look up in a living hope and rejoice in His Holy Name.

JULY 9—"I know, O Lord, that thy judgements are right" Ps. 119:75.

There are many people who deny God, because they cannot understand his judgements. There is no reason to lose confidence in God, because we do not understand Him in all He does, including his judgments. We now see only in part, but then we shall see it all in the light of his righteousness and wisdom. Some of his judgments may at present seem heartless and hard. For example, the judgment upon the nations of Cannan when Israel took possession of it, but Israel had to wait until the nations living in the land lost the right of possession through their godless living. Then the judgment came by the edge of the sword. Individuals and nations forfeit life by mounting sin upon sin. Even today we are shocked by world conditions. God is judging the nations today, for they have sinned against God. Death is the penalty of sin. Then, O Lord, thy judgments are right. Confessing, We pray thee, O Lord, have mercy upon us.

JULY 10—"But we are sure that the judgment of God is according to truth against them which commit such things." Rom. 2:2.

We must read what is written in verse one as there is a particular sin mentioned there to which the phrase, "Them which commit such things" refers. It is the sin of judging others. This is a widespread and common sin. While looking away to find fault in others we are blind to our own sins. Then in judging others we are proud and self-righteous, two things which are offenses in God's sight. Often the things we judge severely in others we are guilty of also. Judgment therefore by men is never just and true. Shall we therefore not judge others. Judgment we leave to the Lord; it is His business and not mine. We are sure that the judgment of God is according to the truth.

July 11—"Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with Him that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin." Rom. 6:6

This is indeed a startling expression. Such faith is victorious over our little strength. It is a challenge to Satan, our enemy, a challenge to our old nature, and it is a challenge to all the world about us. And yet it is true there are many things in our life which are not in harmony with the expression of confidence and peace of our text. Nevertheless Scripture is right. When Christ was crucified on the cross on Calvary, even before we repented or were born, our old man was crucified with Him. This fact makes it possible to live in newness of life now. It opens wide the door for the penitent sinner's return. Continue in saving faith, and he will keep you in saving grace through all the trials and testing by which "the body of sin is destroyed" attaining that high position where and when the service of sin is ended.

JULY 12—"I know that in me dwelleth no good thing." .Rom. 7:18.

What a shocking statement. A statement by a man known as the greatest of the apostles. This chapter opens our eyes to the relation of this body, (the flesh) of death and the service in the newness of the spirit. Even after we have been born again we discover within us something which gives us grief and trouble and we realize that we must be constantly on guard. Not until we have this experience do we realize the extent of the fall. We, of ourselves, must become completely bankrupt. This is a bitter lesson to learn. Riches, honors, high position, and prestige are of no value. By the new birth this all changes. A new creation in Christ is brought forth. The "no good thing in me" is removed and Jesus has entered and dwelleth in me. And now he by the power of his resurrection will change this vile body of flesh and blood to a glorious body like his own. Thanks to Him.

JULY 13—"We know, that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are called according to his purpose." Rom. 8:28.

This is one of the Bible verses often used as a memory verse. The lesson it teaches is important for correct evaluation of experiences which we must go through in life. It is written for the children of God. Therefore, those who in childlike faith accept this are at peace in the midst of great tribulation. They look upon their Lord with confidence and trust. Here is the secret of the power of the hero of faith. He is fully trusting Him. Christ is made the captain of the boat and He is in full control. All experiences, good or bad, are divinely arranged to accomplish his purpose. Here faith surrenders: "Have thine own way, Lord! Have thine own way! Thou are the Potter; I am the clay. Mould me and make me after Thy will, While I am waiting, Yielded and still."

JULY 14—"And that, Knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep; for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed." Rom. 13:11.

The world conditions of today are calling our attention to the fact that this age of grace is fast drawing to its close. The return of our Lord is not far away. The great international conflict now raging over all the world follows in startling detail what Jesus said about the end of this age. But even today there are many who scoff at this hope of the children of God. That, however, does not change God's program at all but confirms all the more what Jesus said and is in itself a sign of the times. Christians are not confused; they know it is high time to awake out of sleep. The bride must prepare herself for that blessed event, the mid-night call, "the Bridegroom cometh." Yes, come Lord Jesus.

JULY 15—"Now we have not received the spirit of the world, but the spirit of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God. I Cor. 2:12.

This verse is the key to the mystery that Christians are not understood even by the intelligent children of the world. The children of the world have the spirit of the world, and the children of God have the spirit of God. The world lieth in the evil one, and therefore the spirit of the world is evil. In recompensation for the loss of the thing the world gives, we know the things which are freely given. These are: remission of sins, peace, life eternal, the word of God, our eternal home. To this we are heirs because we are children of God (Rom. 8:17). We have a rich father and he willed it all to his children.

JULY 16—"Ye know that ye were Gentiles, carried away unto these dumb idols, even as ye were led." I Cor. 12:2.

We just wonder, is it important to know and remember what we once were. Indeed, it is, for if we know that once we were serving dumb idols and what through grace we are now, we are humiliated. For this grace we praise God in Christ Jesus and thank Him for his mercy. Indeed we have nothing to boast or to be proud of. Even now there may be some things we loved when we were not children of God and which we have taken over into our new life only causing us trouble. These must be put away. Comforting is the expression, "were Gentiles" but are not now. What we are now counts. Christ came in and removed the past from us. Now we are his own, a new creation in Him.

JULY 17—"Knowing that he which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also by Jesus, and shall present us with you." II Cor. 4:14.

When we think of death, our own death, it makes us tremble. A verse like our text takes all fear of death away and strips the grave of its horrors. We know there is one greater than death, whom death could not keep. He was raised from the dead, even our Lord Jesus. Jesus is our ressurrection, who will, as the result of his victory over sin and death, present the whole body of believers blameless before God and all the hosts of heaven. A wonderful encouragement to accept Jesus as our Saviour and Lord. This anchor holds even in storm just before the landing. Even if death overtakes us it cannot hold us. We will be raised never more to die. "O death, where is thy sting? O grave where is thy victory!"

JULY 18—"For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were desolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." II Cor. 5:1.

Moving day is coming. Our landlord has served notice and gives ample time to prepare for it. In preparation spend no time on what to take or one would like to take along. That is wasted time and energy. All is left here. When this earthly house crumbles it is time to go. And where can we go? The children of God have a place prepared by God. Jesus speaks of this as "his Father's house with many mansions therein." John 14:2. This is the building of God, a house not made with hands. We have not yet seen it, but we know it is there in beauty far surpassing our keenest expectation. Let moving day come. I know where I go.

RELIEF

Dr. Herbert Schmidt Returns

On April 19 Dr. Herbert Schmidt of Newton, Kansas, left for Paraguay by plane, arriving April 23. For the remainder of April and throughout May Dr. Schmidt, with his brother Dr. John Schmidt, performed necessary surgical operations for the Mennonites in the Chaco. In the beginning of June Dr. Herbert Schmidt returned by plane to the United States.

The following action was taken by Fernheim Colony Meeting at Philadelphia, Chaco, Paraguay on May 15, 1942.

"An expression of thanks to the Mennonite Central Committee and to Dr. Herbert Schmidt. The oberschulz gave a brief report of the surgical work undertaken by Dr. Herbert Schmidt and carried through in the colony hospital. The colony assembly brings to Dr. Schmidt their most heartfelt thanks for this service and for the sacrifice that both he and his family made in his coming to Paraguay to help in this need. The colony also expresses its thanks again to the Mennonite Central Committee for sending Dr. Schmidt and for this help to our sick folks. The need of many in Fernheim was relieved."

Extending the Usefulness of Our Retreats

By Walter H. Dyck *

It is not our purpose to advance arguments for the establishment of retreats. They have already become a vital part in our church program. Their usefulness lies in providing wholesome opportunity for a blending of our natural desires with a yearning for those things which are even more needful. To come apart and rest a while, to fellowship, to play, to study, and pray with likeminded young people of other churches and communities is very "needful".

It seems to me that usefulness of our retreats could be extended by a more careful selection and preparation of (1) the young people, (2) the leaders, (3) the program, (4) the surroundings, and (5) the goals to be attained.

1. We need a more careful selection of young people. Too often only those financially able and socially active found it possible to go. The quiet, the unassuming ones in the shop, the home, or the farm have had to stay by the "stuff". Those who have been attending a Christian college during the past year, though we are happy if they attend, are not the ones who need this inspiration the most. They have enjoyed it all year. We need the active and the reticent, those able to pay their way as well as those less able, spiritually mature as well as "babes in Christ." A certain church pays one-half of the retreat fee in order to be able to select worthy retreaters. Selection is valuable, too, in that it insures a higher spiritual plane. The spirit of a retreat is sometimes disrupted by those whose lack of interest or spiritual concern creates discipline problems. Our most serious minded young people want a truly Christian study-vacation. A high plane of atmosphere and conduct should become traditional.

2. We need a more careful selection of leaders.

* Rev. Walter H. Dyck, Western District Y. P. Representative who has made a survey of our General Conference retreats.

Whether they be ministers, missionaries, or laymen seems immaterial. Each have a contribution to make. Instructors in our schools should be used. Above all, they need to be thoroughly Christian and fully consecrated men and women. They must need feel their unworthiness as they present Christ as Savior and Lord. They must have a sympathetic, congenial, and cooperative attitude, and be seriously concerned with the spiritual welfare of those entrusted to their care. Whether they be Mennonites is also probably immaterial, provided they are in sympathy with the basic tenets of our faith. One hears of men absolutely opposed to our historic position being called as leaders. This is definitely disruptive. Otherwise an exchange of leaders between districts is very valuable. Retreat committees are to be encouraged not to remunerate such leaders much above actual expenses so that smaller groups will feel free to engage in such exchanges of speakers.

3. We need a more careful selection in the preparation of a program. There must be a variety of study, meditation, recreation, and wholesome contacts with fellow retreaters. This calls for balance in a crowded schedule. Three to four hours should be used for instruction and discussion. The courses will vary: Bible Study, Nature Study, Young People's Problems, Mennonite History and practice, and a variety of other subjects will come up from year to year. An equal time should be allowed for inspirational messages, meditation, counselling, etc. Not less than four hours of strenous exercise will be necessary to tire the body enough for twice that many hours of sleep. Several hours will pass in fellowship at the table and in informal chats (of course, the whole retreat is informal) at the water fountain, under the trees, beside the lake or stream. Happy is the retreat committee which is able to so plan a program with the young people so as to best blend their natural interests with a yearning for "things above."

4. We need a more careful selection of the surroundings in which retreats are to be held. Those groups who have yet tried the camp-type retreat still have a very worth-while experience ahead. It is more comfortable, of course, to sit in church. But we don't want comfort now. Comfort brings the temptation of drowsiness. Now we sit on a log, a blanket, or even the grass (we dress so that grass stains no not matter). The twitter of birds, the chirp of the cricket, or even the croak of the frog is a setting that seems to inspire young people. Add to this the crackle of the camp fire and the changing hues of glowing embers as the camp-fire service progresses, to listen to the words meaningfully spoken, "Come ye apart and rest a while—." The nearness of nature helped our Lord Jesus to experience the nearness of the Father. We, too, need to get away from the monotonous and secularizing grind of our everyday lives and be drawn "near to the heart of God."

5. Lastly, and of major importance, we need a more careful selection of aims to be accomplished. Retreaters must be brought to be very conscious of them. These brief days must be more than merely a good time. We would suggest at least six pointed questions to be submitted in questionnaire form to each of the retreaters at the beginning of the period: (a) What influenced you to come to retreat this year? (b) For what personal purpose did you come? (c) What do you expect to get out of retreat? (d) What are you planning to contribute to make this retreat most nearly ideal for the camp group? (e) Please give ideas and suggestions for making this retreat most beneficial. (f) With what particular problems, if any, are you wrestling at this time? To accept and enthrone Christ as Savior and Lord means also to form attitudes toward Christian ideals, such as spirituality, devotion, achievement. For this we need adjustment in our social life, home life, public and private worship, in business life, recreation, etc.

We urge every young person who can possibly get away to plan to go. Remember, you retreat by not attending a "retreat".

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DAY

Inspiration

The closing day of the Northern District Conference, held at the Salem Zion Mennonite Church of Freeman, South Dakota, was again given over to the activities of the young people. Rev. Walter Gering of Moundridge, Kansas, was the guest speaker, bringing three inspirational messages on the theme, "For Me to Live is Christ, because of the Cross, the Call, and the Commission." Dr. Sukau, Berne Indiana, also gave a challenging talk on "Heroes Among the Mennonites." During the evening services the young people joined together in a huge thrilling chorus to sing to the praise of God. The choir was under the direction of Mr. Ellis Graber of Marion, South Dakota.

During the business meeting two projects which the young people are to support were decided upon, namely, the C. P. S. camps, and the support of an evangelist in a new field of the Northern District. It was also unanimously agreed to undertake the edition of a Northern District Y. P. paper. Two sample copies had been edited prior to this to discover the reaction and sentiment towards such a project. Miss Hermie Preheim, of Freeman, South Dakota, has been appointed editor of this paper which is to be published quarterly. As secretary-treasurer of the Y. P. Committee, the group elected Edwin Epp of Henderson, Nebraska.

It was a day of blessing for all as the young people, the church of tomorrow, gathered together in fellowship and communion to discuss further plans for their organization. —Contributed

No. 1 of Three Studies on The Choice of a Life Work

FINDING THE WILL OF GOD

I Cor. 10:31-33; 11:1

I. Worship Service:

(1) Songs: "Master, Speak! Thy Servant Heareth," No. 219; "Have Thine Own Way, Lord!" No 217. (2) Scripture passage, prayer, and leader's remarks. (3) Reading: "The Watered Lilies" (order from Mrs. Gerhard Friesen, Newton, Kansas, for three cents. (4) Offering for Civilian Public Service Camps.

II. Leader's Introduction:

The fundamental law of Christian living is the law of love. Love to God first and love to men next helps decide many a knotty problem. Young people ask and have a right to ask, "What is the will of God for my life?" Certain things God has given you; these you are to take stock of. They are your talents. What can you do well? Where lie your best abilities? Use and develop your talents by using them; they are given you for that purpose.

To find His will you must use your eyes and ears—see what needs there are to be met. When Christ saw the five thousand hungry people He said to the disciples, "Give ye them to eat." When Jacob Riis saw the life of the poor in the slums he used his ability as a newspaper man to bring about changed conditions. Clara Barton and Florence Nnghtingale let the needs that they met become a call for their lifework. Louis Pasteur labored incessantly in the field of medicine to alleviate human suffering.

A third factor to be considered is circumstances which may or may not be a deciding factor. A young man gifted with a fine voice and possibilities in that line finds himself tied down by a mother dependent on his staying on the farm for lack of funds. He should like to become a great singer, but he uses his voice to help locally in church work.

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

(1) An elder's unselfishness (Gen. 13:8, 9); (2) Love for enemies (Matt. 5:44); (3) A devoted friendship (I am. 18:1, 3); (4) Willing to be accursed (Rom. 9:3); (5) Willing to risk life (Esther 4:16); (6) Love for mother church (II Cor. 8:1-5).

IV. For Discussion:

Do you think Edison did the will of God in his lifework? Benjamin Franklin? Madame Curie? Luther Burbank? Adoniram Judson? Dwight L. Moody? Why?

V. Facts for Study:

The prayer, "Not my will, but Thine be done," must become the heart-felt prayer of every sincere Christian. It must mean to him a willingness that God's will be done in his life, a resignation to it, an acquiescence to it. There must be submission of the will, an attitude of obedience. "What he says unto you, do it." Don't try to do otherwise, to circumnavigate His orders to you.

It must mean even more than that—it must mean an attitude of joyous consecration and wholehearted determination. To be glad to walk the way the Lord leads, to want to do His will, to desire to do it and use all our influence and ability to see it done, that will make your life an abundant life.

VI. Illustration:

A Christian woman, who had been longing to serve Christ more definitely, received an appeal for sympathy and help from a member of her own family, and thought impatiently, "They are always in trouble." Immediately she seemed to hear the words of Jesus in the garden of Gethsemane, "What, could ye not watch with me one hour?" "Oh, Lord," she cried, "this is the only way we can watch in thy Gethsemane, by lifting up and cheering thy people in their dark hours. May I never fail in doing it!"

VII. Food for Thought:

"I dreamt and thought that life was duty,
I waked and found that life was beauty."

STORIES OF GREAT MISSIONARIES

This a topic for which you should do quite a bit of research. We will suggest some Bible missionaries and a few later ones. Probably it would be a good idea for you to assign a certain field of our mission work to different people and have them prepare a brief story of one of our own missionaries. We have some real heroes in our work. Have a roll call meeting and have each member respond with the name, field, and important work of some one missionary. Ask your superintendent or pastor for aid in finding material. Help can be found in The Mennonite, The Yearbook, and Missionary News and Notes.

Bible Missionaries

The Woman of Samaria (John 4:27-30, 39-42); Philip (Acts 8:5, 6); Barnabas (Acts 13:2-5); Apollos (Acts 18:24-28); Silas (Acts 16:19-40); Paul (Acts 17:16-20). Stories of Great Missionaries: Matthew 28:16-20.

Wilfred Grenfell—Medical Missionary

In England there lived, not many years ago, a young medical student who resolved to use his talent for medicine for helping the poor and desolate. As a boy he had read about the fishermen who lived in Labrador, and of how they had no doctor to cure them when they were ill or set their bones when they were injured. Wilfred Grenfell decided that would be a splendid place to use his talent for God. It was so far away, so cold and so desolate that no other doctor cared to go.

With a stout sled and his team of dogs he would drive here and there over the snow-covered field, answering calls for help. He was a good Samaritan to many a man by the wayside. Sometimes he would get lost and then he would turn the sled on its side, dig a hole in the snow, light a fire and crawl into his sleeping bag and spend the night outdoors. When morning came he would be able to find his way and off they would go again.

Do you wonder that these people all loved Dr. Grenfell? God must be well pleased with one who is such a fine steward of his talents.—N.M.W.

HEROES OF THE NEW TESTAMENT,
Acts 4:13-21

Introduction

Why do we choose heroes and heroines? Isn't it because certain people are of particular concern to us? Are they not an ideal to us, so therefore we strive to know all we can about them. Sometimes we have been very mistaken about certain people until we learn to know them better. When our hero leads us into wrong company and places, then it is time to change.

John the Baptist—A humble man, who preached plain truths and prepared the way for Jesus.

Matthew—a publican, but one who left his work and became a true follower of Jesus and brought others to become disciples too.

Paul—one who suffered ship-wreck, imprisonment, and abuse, but would not forsake his Lord.

Stephen—a martyr, who went to death, by being stoned, for the cause of Christ.

The Question Bee

Associate the following with what heroic traits: Peter, the widow, Cornelius, Mary the mother of Jesus.

NOTICE

Rev. Ernest J. Bohn, 203 Broad Street, Souderton, Pa., now handles the Peace Certificates and Stamps formerly handled by Rev. P. H. Unruh. So all district representatives should get their supplies from Rev. Bohn. Individual churches in each district should get their supplies from their district representative. See Mennonite, June 2, page 2. Individual churches should not seek to order their supplies from Rev. Bohn.

The Prayer List

(a) Ask God to give us wisdom to meet the excuses of others in the proper way and in the proper attitude. (b) to forgive us our weaknesses in attempting to excuse ourselves at times from serving the Christ and, (c) to lead us into opportunities of service.

"I have to live with myself, and so
I want to be fit for myself to know.
I want to be able as the days go by
To always look myself straight in the eye,
I don't want to stand with the setting sun
And hate myself for the things I've done.
I can never hide myself from me,
I see what others may never see,
I know what others may never know,
And have to live with myself, and so,
Whatever happens, I want to be Self respecting and conscience free."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
A. S. BECHTEL

July 19, 1942
CAIN AND ABLE; A CONTRAST
Gen. 4:1-15 read chap. 4
Topic: AM I MY BROTHER'S KEEPER?

Introduction

Our lesson narrative reveals the fact that sin, after entering into the world, had a deadening effect upon man. Our lesson reveals its outward manifestation in a most vicious form. Cain's inward depravity is evident from his jealousy and anger which led to murder, and to the telling of a falsehood to the Lord. He gave free expression to his depraved heart and he became an outcast. His descendants became corrupt and godless and were completely wiped out by the flood. Some who have never committed any crime, have harbored hatred in their hearts and are culpable in God's sight.

Cain and Abel Bring Offerings vss. 1-7

Eve recognized her first child, Cain, as the fulfillment of God's promise of seed to her (Gen. 3:15). This birth of the first child in human history was a notable event. Parents do well to consider each child born into the world as a Divine gift to be cherished as a sacred trust. Cain and Abel when fully grown, introduced pastoral and agricultural life, highly honorable and necessary occupations and approved by God. It is evident that God had given instructions concerning sacrifices—offerings—for sins. Such an offering was a gift unto the Lord. Cain brought what he had to offer, a most natural one for him, and no criticism is made of the nature of his gift. Abel brought one of the first-born of his flock, the best he had to offer. The first symbolic ceremony was the sin offering. God approved of Abel and his offering (note the order here). God did NOT have respect to Cain—note again, the man is mentioned first—and for his offering, because of his evil character and deeds. God will accept only the sacrifice made with clean hands and a pure heart. Cain became very angry. There was no sorrow for sin, no repentence and no humility. The spirit in which we offer a gift to God, not the gift itself, determines its value in His sight.

God did not desert Cain. He spoke to him pleadingly. Cain had given place to sin which was lying at his heart's door, ready to devour him. He warns Cain and urges him to control and subdue his temper, his evil desires and passions. We too need this warning and need to heed it. We need to conquer the rising temptation before it conquers us.

Cain Becomes a Murderer vss. 8-15

The whole passage shows the progress of sin in Cain's heart. His envy and hatred led to murder, apparently premeditated murder. Cain could not hide his crime from God's eye. He asked a question which went straight to Cain's conscience. He answered with a direct lie—a further evidence of his evil character. We can not decieve God. With defiant impudence, Cain repudiated all obligations of brotherhood. The question, "What hast thou done?", is asked by conscience of every transgressor of God's law. Murder cries out for justice and retribution. Cain did not escape punishment (vss. 11, 12). The ground which he had cultivated would no longer produce a harvest for him and he was to be a wanderer in the earth, driven by an alarmed conscience.

Cain realizes what he has brought upon himself (vss. 13, 14). He sees the severity of the punishment and appears to bewail that much more than the seriousness of his crime. He feared to go beyond the realm of God's protection. He did not understand that God is everywhere. He feared vengeance would be taken upon him. God forbade blood revenge upon Cain. This did not relieve him of the curse.

People may be divided into two groups—those who sincerely try to do their duty to fellow-man and those who do not. Many are so self-centered that they have no concern for others. Their attitude is, "Why should I do anything about it?" Others, like Cain, actually injure fellow-men. This is done both by doing injurious acts and by not using our influence against such deeds. We need a good understanding of our brother's needs.

Many have a true concern for their brother's welfare, are really his keeper, are interested in both his temporal and spiritual condition. We should oppose every attempt to exploit the weak or to lead others into sin or to create appetites in youths which will be a curse to them later.

God clearly expects us to be our "brother's keeper." His welfare is our concern.

What does it mean to be our "brother's keeper?"

What is the effect of anger upon the one who becomes angry?

Why did Cain murder his brother Abel? What was his purpose?

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Allentown, Pennsylvania

A delegation of young people from our C. E. Society attended the annual convention at West Swamp on Decoration Day and heard Ernest Bennett, who has lately returned from France, where he was engaged in doing relief work. He gave a very interesting and informative talk.

We held our Children's Day Service on June 14th, at which time the Primary Department presented the Church with two new silk flags, the one an American flag and the other the Christian flag. The program was very fitly worked around the theme "How Christian Children Can Make America a Better Land to Live in." Infant consecration was also a part of the Children's Day service.

We are now on our Summer schedule of Church service, i.e., Sunday School and church services in the morning, every Sunday, and no evening service. This is to continue for the months of June, July, and August.

Mennolan, the site of our retreat grounds, is being made ready for occupancy. Three cabins have been erected by the several churches of the conference, our church being the third. The Sunday-School donated three hundred dollars twoard the erection of the Allentown cabin. The young people of the churches spend their Saturdays at Mennolan, making themselves useful at whatever is to be done toward the completion of the project.

Our members had the happy experience of being hosts to the delegates of the Eastern District Conference. The communion service was especially impressive, and the messages of Mrs. Pannabecker and Rev. Russel Mast outstanding in information and inspiration. —Mary M. Beidler, Corr.

HEREFORD MENNONITE CHURCH

Bally, Pennsylvania

Our annual Children's Day Services were held in connection with the morning worship services on Sunday morning, June 14th. This is one of the few Sundays in a year in which our Primary Department attends church services in a body and takes part in the worship service by singing in a body and presenting instrumental selections on different instruments which they can play.

At the beginning of the year, our pastor, Dr. Elmer E. S. Johnson, gave our members a copy of "A Year with the Bible" which contains daily readings out of the Bible. He is preaching his sermons on the daily reading listed in this book. The theme followed is "The Faith by Which We Live." The members find a lot of spiritual aid by following the daily readings.

For the last few years we have been conducting very successful Daily Vacation Bible School sessions. At these sessions we brought many children into a Sunday School and Church building who had never been there before. They were brought in by men and women on their automobiles but with gas rationing, to which we have become subject in eastern Pennsylvania, and the rubber situation being what it is, it was decided not to hold school this year. Instead they are putting on a special effort on Junior Christian Endeavor work for the duration of the summer.

The war has also taken some of our boys into the service for their country. Five of our boys have left and a few are serving at home under deferments. These boys expect us to uphold them by our prayers, and may we not lack in that part.

Rev. Andrew R. Shelly, one of our young men, assisted our pastor during the winter months but has now left to serve his own congregation at the Sterling Ave. Mennonite Church, Kitchener, Ontario. We pray God's richest blessings on his efforts.

ZOAR MENNONITE CHURCH

Goultry, Oklahoma

We enjoy reading about our churches in The Mennonite. It keeps us in closer touch with one another. The Lord has blessed us in many ways for which we praise Him. On May 17 and 18 Dr. A. Warkentin gave us inspirational messages. May 22 Rev. P. Voronaeff from Russia showed interesting pictures from his country and spoke on communism and persecutions among Christians.

In our vacation Bible school, held in the town grade school, we had an enrollment of seventy children, with five teachers. Children from different churches took part. On June 7 an interesting program was given by these children in our church.

Our Men's Chorus, directed by our pastor, J. W. Bergen, gave a program May 31 in a Methodist church at Carmen, Oklahoma. Every other Sunday evening (alternating with Christian Endeavor) we have a youth's Bible fellowship. In it different problems are taken up. During that time the children have their services in the basement where Bible stories are given with the aid of the Flannelgraph board. —Mrs. J. W. Bergen, Corr.

ZION MENNONITE CHURCH

Donnelson, Iowa

On May 31 a very interesting musical dramatization of Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress was presented at our church. It was ably directed by our minister, Rev. H. E. Nunemaker. Those participating were members of the adult choir, young people's choir, and junior girls sextette, with Miss Edith Raid as reader.

The Mother-Daughter banquet held in our church basement Friday evening, May 22, was a most enjoyable event and was attended by seventy-eight mothers and daughters. Miss Aganetha Fast, missionary on furlough from China, was the guest speaker. Mrs. H. E. Nunemaker was toast-mistress and also gave a talk, "To Daughters." The response, "To Mothers" was given by Lucille Lowenberg. Mrs. Frank Gaylord and Mrs. Ernest Krehbiel sang a duet, "My Mother's Prayer," and a girls quartet, Misses Genevive and Lucille Lowenberg, Evelyn Nunemaker, and Vera Lowenberg sang, "My Mother's Bible." The banquet closed with a song by the group after which a social evening was enjoyed.

On June 4 the Father-Son banquet was held. Fifty-two fathers and sons enjoyed an evening of fellowship. Mr. Howard Raid was toastmaster. The principle talk of the evening was given by Rev. August E. Bergey of Primrose, who spoke on "God's Generosity." Short talks were also given by Rev. Pennell, Rev. Schneider, and Rev. Hunsinger, other ministers of the community. A talk was also given by Mr. O. C. Krebill, layman of the church. A son's quartet, Vincent, Richard, Keith, and Vernon Lowenberg, and a fathers' quartet, H. A. Lowenberg, H. Fred Krebill, Hugo Lowenberg, and Rev. H. E. Nunemaker, were also on the program. All members attending these events were richly blessed and enjoyed evenings of Christian fellowship. —Mrs. John Loges, Corr.

SALEM MENNONITE CHURCH

Freeman, South Dakota

On May 7 two members of the Salem (South) Church spoke their marriage vows. Miss Verda Preheim, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Preheim, was married to Orlando Schrag of the Salem-Zion Mennonite Church. Mylo Preheim, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob P. Preheim, was married to Dorothy Jensen of Hurley, South Dakota. Mr. and Mrs. Preheim are residing in Yankton, South Dakota. On June 14 Miss Claudia Pankratz was married to Leonard Keck of Carter, South Dakota.

Since the Northern District Conference was in session at our neighboring church, the Salem-Zion Church, the members of the Salem congregation had the privilege of attending the sessions regularly and also of entertaining some of the guests.

A successful two weeks term (full day) of Bible school was concluded with an inspiring program. The three teachers—in addition to the Rev. Willard Claassen who taught the 7-9 grades—were the Misses Wilma Waltner, Melva Ries, and Susanna Lehman. The school had an enrollment of sixty-three children.

The number of boys at the various camps is constantly increasing. There are now eleven boys of the Salem congregation who have been called. They are Henry Lehman, Menno Kaufman, Clifford Waltner, Reinhardt, Melvin, Herbert, and Leonard Preheim, Robert and Harvey Gering, John Schwartz, and Paul Graber.

The Mens' Chorus of the Salem Church rendered a concert in behalf of the C. P. S. camps. Mr. Willard Waltner is the director. The offering taken at the program is to be used especially to furnish musical literature for the C. P. S. camps.

Tuesday evening, June 16, the church was fortunate in having Missionary Ferdinand Isaac of India and Miss Marie Buller of Birney, Montana, speak to the congregation. Due to a heavy downpour of rain the attendance was small. However, the inspiration received from the messages was not dampened.

A new missionary society has been organized by the girls and young women of the church. A name has not yet been selected. Three projects decided upon by the society are the making of the kits for the boys in camp, cutting quilt blocks, and sewing layettes for relief. —Hermie Preheim, Corr.

« « JOTTINGS » »

—A retreat in Philadelphia, Fernheim Colony, Gran Chaco, Paraguay, South America, was the event described in the two home mission articles of June 9 and 16. By oversight the proper introductory statements were ommitted.

—Married—Robert B. Regier, St. Louis, Mo., and Eunice Weaver, Goshen, Indiana, by the groom's father Rev. J. M. Regier. The young man is a research chemist with the Portland Cement Co. of St. Louis.

—Rev. A. S. Bechtel writes from Hanston, Kansas: "We have had an abundance of rain the past weeks. (written around June 24). It is poor harvest weather. Much of the wheat is ready to combine and the farmers are getting a bit anxious to get at it. We had to miss out in our morning service last Sunday. Our road to the church, which everyone must use, gets muddy rather easily in places. . . . I read your "impressions" of Mt. Lake in the last issue with much interest. Your comments on the open door of the new church in Mt. Lake, especially, impressed me. I surely am glad that the congregation has adopted the 'open door' idea . . . Our churches in town do this. I believe it would be appreciated. Anyhow, why should God's house be open only a few hours each week?"

—Married: J. Lorrell Mullett of Nappanee, Indiana, and Mable Ellen Woods of Mishawaka, Indiana, by Rev. E. S. Mullett, father of the groom. Carolyn Euretha Mullett, daughter of L. V. Mullett, Nappanee, Indiana, and Gene Chenoweth of Goshen by the bride's uncle, Rev. E. S. Mullett, in the First Mennonite Church, Nappanee. The latter church observed Children's Day on June 14. On June 21 the pastor preached on "Faith of Our Fathers" as a Father's Day sermon. In the evening the young people gave a vesper service on the church lawn. —Contributed —Newport Mennonite Church, Newport, Wash.: "Thirty-two were enrolled in our vacation Bible school, taught by Mrs. P. D. Unruh, Mrs. William Hiebert, Mrs. E. P. Krehbiel, and Mrs. Henry Hiebert. Six of our members left early Thursday to attend the conference at Colfax. Several more went for the Sunday session. —Corr.

—Goessel Mennonite Church, Goessel, Kansas: Children's Day was observed June 14 with a program presented by the children, followed by a church luncheon. Mr. John Dirksen, instructor in Hesston College, has been asked by the church to assist in ministerial service. Roy Schmidt and Adina Fast were married on June 26.

—Woodland Mennonite Church, Warroad, Minn.: Mother's Day was observed during the morning services with a number by the choir and a duet by Rev. and Mrs. Arthur Ortman. On May 17 a large number from our church attended the Sunday School convention at Spooner, which was sponsored by the American Sunday School Union. Several numbers on the program were given by the Mennonite group. On May 28 Rev. and Mrs. Arthur Ortman and sons left for Munich, North Dakota, to attend a Sunday School convention, young people's rally, and the silver wedding of Rev. and Mrs. Helmut Ortman. From there they went to the Northern District Conference.

One month the offering will be for European Relief and the next Sunday for the Civilian Public Service Camps. . . . Your pastor (Rev. Howard G. Nyce) was again reelected president of the Pre-Millennial Fellowship."

—Bulletin, Bethel Mennonite Church, Mt. Lake, Minnesota: "Bethel Church was well represented at the Northern District Conference. . . . a total of forty-eight from our church registered. . . . The conference speaker was Dr. C. H. Suckau of Berne, Indiana, whose messages were deeply inspired and inspiring. . . . Business sessions introduced numerous problems. Emphasis was given to the need of supporting the C.P.S. camps faithfully. Discussion was given to the problem of the ordaining of ministers in our conference and the training of our young people in our Mennonite schools. . . . Mrs. P. R. Schroeder was elected president of the Women's Mission Societies. . . . Let us keep on praying for our boys in camp. A local candidate for non-combatant service reports that army officials presented him with the choice between testing out new parachutes as a non-combatant or entering combatant service. He was given ten minutes to decide." Later he was released. Certainly our non-combatants in the army as well as our boys in C.P.S. camps need our prayers even though not all face such an experience." . . . Rev. —1600 men are expected in Mennonite C.P.S. camps by mid-July. Very likely this will be the maximum number as boys go to farms, hospitals, etc.

—The Mennonite Brotherhood of the Swamp Charge held its Fifth Anniversary Meeting in the Bethany Church, Quakertown, Pa., on June 2. This organization includes members from Bethany, West Swamp, Flatland, and Springfield churches. Although there are not so many members this body has functioned very successfully, both spiritually, as at every meeting a vital subject was discussed and also financially, having contributed considerably toward the John Boehr fund at Bluffton College for the past four years. It expects to take an active part in the permanent student fund as outlined by the Eastern District Conference Brotherhood. Much of the success has been due to John K. Boorse, the president for the past five years, as well as the originator of the local Brotherhood. Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander also contributed much by taking active part in all the discussions. Harold Rosenberger has been elected president for the coming year. —Corr.

HANDS

As the minister breaks the bread in communion and gives it into the hands of the members, his eyes focus themselves on the hands reaching to receive. How symbolical hands are of the individual's life! They make one think of what he is striving for. Eyes are expressive, but, perhaps, hands are more so, as they tell of accomplishments of the past or of the future. Some are wrinkled, rough, and calloused; they tell of the struggle to provide meat, raiment, and shelter for loved ones. Some that are worn tell of sickness in the family or of the attempt to overcome a great material loss. Others are smooth and firm, telling of the hope and enthusiasm of youth. But each hand that reaches reveals a secret, and yet not a secret. For it is the age-old truth that in each human being there is that which makes him search and strive for something to satisfy. Each hand tells of fond hopes, aspirations, dreams. Each hand declares to the minister how precious every human being is in the sight of God. Some look at hands to tell the future. The minister looks at hands and is told of the infinite worth of each person now and for all time. That and the thought of Christ's pierced hands make his heart tender with love. Hands! How much they tell! —rw.

Back Of Their Paper

Out of a certain church group of fifty thousand people there are twenty-seven thousand subscribers. This paper has a mailing list of 53 per cent of the members where many church papers have only a 1 or 2 per cent record. Thus states a release from the Associated Church Press.

What may be behind the success of this one church paper, which evidently is received by practically every family in this particular church group? May not some of the following factors, perhaps, play a very important role? A church group of which far over half put Christ and his work far before the world and its activities as described in the daily and weekly newspapers. A church group that is supremely conscious of how necessary their church paper is to keep them together in their common loyalty to Christ. A church group whose ministers, practically all, work very hard to put their church paper into every home, and who see to it that personal contact is made by someone with every prospective subscriber. A church group that backs up the editor of its paper with its united prayers. These, as well as others, are undoubtedly some of the factors which make for the high subscription record.

There were 27,895 members of the General Conference in the United States at the beginning of 1941, according to the 1942 Year Book. The subscription lists of The Bundesbote and The Mennonite total less than 6,000. A considerable number of Bundesbote subscribers live in Canada. —rw.

RECLAIMING SATURDAY NIGHT

By Willard Claassen *

I

A typical Saturday night could no longer be described as Robert Burns portrayed it in "THE COTTERS SATURDAY NIGHT."

> "The chearfu' supper done, wi' serious face,
> They, round the ingle, form a circle wide;
> The sire turns o'er, wi, patriarchal grace,
> The bigha'-Bible (family Bible) ance his father's pride.
> His bonnet rev'rently is laid aside,
> His lyart haffets (grey side-locks) wearing thin and bare;
> Those strains that once did sweet in zion glide,
> He wales (selects) a portion with judicious care,
> And "Let us worship God!" he says, with solemn air."

Nowadays, Saturday night is one evening not to choose if you wish to find the family at home. It is the time when many people "go places" and "see things." There is shopping to do; the merchants have prepared for the rush a day in advance, and Saturday night has become the big night! Before the rationing of tires and gasoline there were week-end trips to take; parties, entertainments and amusements are all crowded into Saturday night. It has become for many the "let-it-off", "blow-it-in" night of the week. Conditions such as these truly make it a WEAK-END problem.

* Rev. Willard Claassen is pastor of the Salem Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakota.

Why waste ink trying to prove that Saturday night is competing with the Sunday School and Church Service on Sunday morning when we know it is a general condition? The fault is not so much with what we do as with the time we choose to do it. Many of the customary "doings" of this evening are done with a malicious intent. Some plans for the week-end begin with Saturday afternoon and culminate Monday morning. Other planners, more self-respecting, crowd Saturday night with activity until the morning hours, with this plausible alibi, "To-morrow we can sleep in."

II

What kind of a chance have we given the Sunday School and Church Service if we have been "galavanting around" until the morning hours? Can the Sunday School teacher afford to spend Saturday evening out? If he expects to make honest preparation which he expects God to bless, he will have to shut himself off from some of the duties and activities of Saturday night. Throughout the week he ought to have acquainted himself with the lesson and its problems and on this evening he can crystalize his thought and prepare his outline if he uses one. When we think of the members of the class the problem is greater. How can the Sunday School lesson be interesting if it has not been studied? What can a fully equipped teacher do with a class, few members of which have even turned a hand to do more than look at the lesson? The teacher cannot afford to waste his precious half hour merely trying to work up interest. How could the Church Service be anything but dry and dull if one has not taken the precaution to get the proper rest the night before? What kind of high-powered teaching and preaching shall challenge the attention of the dilly-dallying mind that is full of the frivolities and affairs of the early morning hours? Surely the Sunday School attendant and the church goer bears a great responsibility here. It takes preparation even to listen profitably.

III

What can we do to reclaim Saturday night for Christ and the church? Personally I do not believe a counter attraction is the answer. Adding another meeting to an already too busy week is not a solution. Let's look at the problem on a spiritual basis.

1. We ought to look upon Saturday night, not as the caboose of the week into which we throw all the luggage and left-overs but rather the power end of the week, an evening of preparation for the first day. Dr. Alexander Smellie of Scotland, in a message to Sunday School teachers referred to Saturday night as a kind of "Outer court to the temple of the Sabbath." Naturally the manner in which we spend Saturday evening will condition the blessings we receive on Sunday.

2. We could at least plan to spend the evening at home. It would not merely be beneficial to the Sunday School, it would be a blessing for the family.

3. It should be an evening of rest; physical rest is as essential as anything. A careful rearrangement of our schedule would in most cases provide rest on this evening.

4. Let's read while we rest. Not the newspaper this time—take time for serious reading. There are many good Christian magazines which have timely articles besides commentaries on the Sunday School lesson. It would be a good time to read The Mennonite.

5. Take time to sit down in an easy chair and think. World leadership today does not want the average layman to think too much—because it is dangerous to dictators. We have become too much like the politician who was rushing to address a meeting, who, when he was accosted and asked what he thought about the political situation answered, "Don't bother me now! I've got to talk. This is no time to think!" Saturday night would be a good place to take time out and think.

6. It ought to be an evening that provides time enough for a prayer that is deeper and more personal than "Now I lay me down to sleep." Let's confess it is about all we have time for when we breeze into the house at midnight. Too few of us spend time at prayer. If it is His life, His work, His glory we are going to talk about on the morrow, why not take time to ask HIM to bless that Sunday School class and church service?

CIVILIAN GOVERNMENT BONDS

(By Mennonite Central Committee)

A specially called meeting of the Mennonite Central Committee with about seventy-five representatives from the several MCC constituent groups met at the Mennonite Home Mission, 1907 South Union Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, on June 25, to give consideration to the detailed plans which have been developed for the promotion, purchase, and handling of Civilian Bonds to be made available as outlined in United States Secretary of the Treasury, Henry Morganthau, Jr.'s June 2 letter to Paul C. French. The plan as presented was unanimously endorsed by the official committees representing the several MCC constituent groups. The Mennonite Central Committee was requested by all these groups to serve their interests further in this matter. The Committee then provided for the continuing program. Fuller details will appear in next week's notes, and it is hoped within another ten days to send directly to all our congregations full information as to the operation of the plan.

RETREATS

Many English words have found their way into the Indian's vocabulary and "retreat" is one of them. We have just finished a "retreat" and the workers are on their way to their own villages. This monthly retreat is a simple affair and is for the purpose of special preparation for the men who lead the evening devotions in their villages. Because of the distance to travel and the lack of room at the main station, this month's retreat was held in two sections. The group at this outstation numbered sixteen.

What did we do? Four men had been asked to present the four stories to be used during the coming month. We have not found the Indian people very shy when it comes to speaking, and the tendency was for each to make his presentation long. The main thought for the month was "Decision for God" and was to be brought out by the story of Elijah on Carmel, the story of Ruth's decision, and the parables of the harvest and the final judgement. To me it seems that the chief difficulty is to keep the messages simple enough for the illiterate church members. There were also two Bible studies.

At the end we had a short memorial service. A Mr. Jarry, who had been a missionary of the English Baptist Mission and who had had a great part in the development of the Christian church in this section, had "gone home" from England. To many of these men he had been a friend, and they expressed their sense of loss on hearing of his home-going. They remembered how he had come to their villages when this part of our field still belonged to the Baptist mission, and they rejoiced that God had sent him for the work. Our largest groups of Christians in this section are given over to us by the Baptist people.

We feel that there is no greater service that we can render our people than to encourage them in Bible study and in memorizing God's Word. The entrance of God's Word giveth Light and it is the promised means for increasing faith.

PUNAI GIVES HEART TO CHRIST

By Mrs. Orlando Waltner, Champa, India

Punai, a leper woman of about twenty-five years of age had come several times to the Bethesda Leper Home to ask for admission. Each time she was refused. When she came she lived under the trees outside of the wall with a leaf and mud shelter as her home. Each time she came some of the leper women of the home told her about Christ. Finally she gave her heart to Christ and began to learn the Lord's Prayer, the Ten Commandments, and the Apostle's Creed. Sirwantin Bai, who is a deaconess, and Tijia Bai were her chief teachers. A few weeks ago they came to Pastor Joel Asna, saying that Punai was leaving for her village on the following Monday and wanted to be baptized before she went. Sunday afternoon Mr. Waltner baptized this new happy Christian. Now she has gone to her village —a witness of the love of Christ. Even though she was not admitted into the leper home she has seen that Christ is her Saviour.

SISTER WILHELMINA KUYF ON THE WAY HOME FROM CHINA

Through Secretary J. J. Mickle of the F. M. Conference a list of repatriates has been sent to us with about 250 names, who are coming home from China, having left on June 24th, from Shanghai, on the S. S. "Conte Verde."

In this list is also the name of Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf, one of our missionaries, and that of Miss Agneta Regier of the Bartel Mennonite Mission. We thank the Lord for this beginning of repatriation. May He soon permit also the others to come home.

FIRST GLIMPSES OF THE DISTRICT

It was on a Friday morning when Rev. Theissen and I, on our bicycles, followed our guide as he, on his bicycle, paddled off the Mission-Station Compound and picked his way along narrow foot paths into the jungle. We were off for a week-end trip into the Basna district to visit as many villages as the three days would permit and thus take an oportunity of seeing with our own eyes that great spiritual phenomenon which is called "The Church takes Root in India." Rev. Duerksen, who is in charge of this district and who knows the many hundreds of paths by memory as well as the name of the village to which each of those paths leads, had outlined our trip for us so as to make it possible for us to contact about fifteen villages and call upon the Christian Brethren in each of those villages. As indicated above the trip was a three day trip and we arrived home on Sunday evening just about sundown, somewhat tired physically but greatly refreshed and enlightened spiritually and mentally respectively.

To me the trip was a revelation. On this trip the plans were such as to see only such villages where the number of Christians is very small. (We have some villages in which there are big congregations but many in which there are only very few Christians.) And it is the small groups which we visited. In many places there are only one or two families while in other places we found as high as five families of Christians. As we went along our way I had to think of Acts 8:4 where it speaks of the Christians being scattered abroad and preaching the word everywhere. To a certain extent that is the case with those people. They are certainly scattered abroad and while not very many, if any of them, could do any preaching as we think of preaching, yet they do by their very lives preach the gospel of Christ to their Hindu neighbors. And thus it is, that even in villages to which a preacher comes only once or twice a year at the very most, the Christian religion is slowly but nevertheless surely, making its way, one by one and often times by groups, into the hearts of men.

You may wonder why it is that a preacher gets to these villages so seldom. Well, that is due to the lack of workers. In this one district alone—that is the district for which this station is responsible—there are over eighty villages in which Christians are living. With one missionary to take care of such a large area you can well see that the rounds cannot be made as they ought to be made. Of course, that one missionary has about five ordained evangelists (Indians) who help him, and those evangelists each have a number of unordained helpers. But even so, they just cannot get around to all the villages, especially to the ones where there are so few Christians, because the larger flocks need a lot of shepherding. These people are so new in the Christian faith that they need frequent care lest they slip back into some of their old ways. Thus it is that the smaller groups get less attention but even so they are a light, and even though that light may often times burn very dimly, yet it is burning and the people who happen to come close enough cannot help but see it. And every time they see it, it produces at least one thought in their minds and that is that those people have something which I do not have, and thus they oftentimes become what the missionaries call "inquiries". And so it goes from the first step to the next until they finally open their hearts to Christ and let Him in. So, the process goes on and I actually believe that if all the missionaries in India were very suddenly taken from the scene, the growth of the Christian Church would nevertheless go right on although possibly at a much slower rate than it is going on right now. —Harold Ratzlaff

NOAH: GOD'S COVENANT WITH MANKIND

Gen. 9:1-16 read chaps. 6-9

Topic: OUR RESPONSE TO GOD'S PROMISES

Introduction

Much time elapsed between last week's lesson and today's. Cain's descendants probably developed an urban type of life. They became worldly and wicked. As they multiplied, they became more corrupt and sinful. God saw their wickedness and was deeply grieved (cf. 6:5-7). He decided to destroy all of the human race, excepting righteous Noah and his family (6:8). This severe judgment was preceded by a rapid descent into wilful sin and wickedness. God saw that the earth was filled with violence, wickedness, and corruption (6:12). What must God think of mankind today. God revealed his purpose to Noah (6:13) and commanded him to build an ark as a refuge for himself, his family, and for representatives of every species of living creatures on earth (6:14-21), while He sent a flood upon earth. When all preparations had been made, the judgment fell (7:11). Noah believed God and obeyed all that he was commanded to do (:22, 7:5). He remembered God when he, his family, and all within the ark had come out after the waters had abated. He built an altar and offered sacrifices of the clean animals preserved in the ark (8:20). God approved of this expression of gratitude and devotion.

God Blesses Noah and His Sons vss. 1-7

This marks a new start for the human race. The blessing and command are similar to that given in Eden (Gen. 1:28,29, 2:16,17). God intended this as a new blessing to a new generation and adapted to man's more developed state. Animals are to be in dread of man and under his power of life and death (cf. 1:28). Man, because of his superior intelligence, is able to gain the mastery over them and use them when tamed as his servants. God here permits the killing and eating of such animals as are good for food (vs. 3, cf. 1:29). Animals however, must be properly slaughtered and the blood drained before using them for food. The blood of an animal is regarded as the essence of its life (Lev. 17:10,11,14). The eating of the blood is repeatedly forbidden in the Old Testament. God solemnly proclaims the sacredness of human life (vss. 5,6). The taking of this will be a just cause for the death of the offender. The beast which killed a man was to be killed as a measure of protection to human life. Murder demands the severest punishment. Man is a person, with powers like to those possessed by God, hence his life is a sacred possession. Man's fall marred, but did not obliterate God's image in him.

God Establishes a Covenant vss. 8-16

Our lesson records a covenant which God made with all flesh—not with man only—to the end of time. God made a solemn pledge to Noah and his sons and to all their seed for all time. Noah was now the new head of the human race. The Flood had swept away the old order and now a new covenant—an unconditional covenant—is made, God's solemn pro-

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

TWO VIEWS OF MENNONITES

Sometimes it is good for us to know what other people think of us. The other day I was impressed with the two contrasting views that were expressed regarding the Mennonites. These views were both expressed by non-Mennonites. In case of the one person expressing his opinion he lived in a solidly Mennonite community with Mennonite neighbors all around him. In the case of the second person she lived far away from any settled Mennonite community and had no first hand knowledge or contact with them.

An Unfriendly Neighbor

The one case to which I refer where the individual is a farmer and a neighbor to many Mennonites, there was deep resentment toward Mennonites. The man frankly and bitterly accused his Mennonite neighbors of being cowards for claiming exemption from military service due to conscientious scruples against war. He felt that they were insincere; that they were enjoying the fruits of the land while his sons were in the army ready to give their lives if need be to make this a safe land for them to live. He claimed that many of his neighbors were secretly sympathizing with the Nazis and some were even openly sympathetic. He accused them of buying up land and out-bidding all others with money that should be used to buy Defense Bonds. He could not understand how Mennonite young men who had gone to public school with his boys, played ball, and gone to movies with them, and done everything else, good and bad, that local boys ordinarily do, could now claim exemption on conscientious grounds. He said people were "fed up" on this thing; that they would soon do something about it. He was in favor of deporting every last Mennonite who was unwilling to shoulder a gun in defense of his country.

A Stranger's Impression

Then there was the contrasting view of Mennonites expressed by a check girl in the Waldorf Astoria Hotel in New York City. A certain Mennonite business man was attending a meeting at that place. He happened to have with him Smith's Story of the Mennonites. After the meeting when this man came for his possessions the girl handed him his hat and before handing over his book she wistfully asked, "What are Mennonites?" Then without waiting for a reply continued, "Aren't they those people who won't hurt anybody but always help people?"

The fact is that we are neither as bad as the non-Mennonite farmer believed, nor as good as the girl idealistically thought we were. But both views give us something to think about. The two testimonies would be much more complimentary if they had been reversed. It would be a wonderful thing if those of our neighbors who know us best and have closest relations with us could say out of experience what the New York hat-check girl said as a result of what she heard, read or saw in pictures. Has the Christian testimony of love and non-resistance been thoroughgoing enough in all aspects of life in this Mennonite community? What would one find in other communities if he should inquire from non-Mennonites regarding their Mennonite neighbors? The judgement day for non-resistant Christians is at hand. We shall stand or fall not by what we do or say but by what we have been doing and saying for the past five, fifteen, or fifty years and longer.

mise of world-wide and permanent application. God promises that He will not again destroy men and beasts, all animal life, with a great flood (vs. 11). The welfare of the lower creatures is intimately connected with that of man. The covenant is to endure as long as there are generations of men upon the earth. God at various times gave signs as reminders to strengthen people's faith. The rainbow is to be the divine token, the constant reminder of God's promise. From now on it becomes the sign of His faithfulness. Whenever we see a rainbow we may think of it as a token of God's care for men and of His gracious promise not to smite the earth again with a great flood.

Clouds of affliction, dangers, and troubles come—they are heavy now—but there is a brighter side, something of spiritual value to be derived from them. The rainbow is the product of cloud and sunshine. The dark clouds mean that God is there and His promise is true. He never forgets. The rainbow helps man to realize that God is remembering. His promises call for a hearty response on our part. It is comforting to know that His promises are sure and dependable. We should thank Him and act upon them. Our actions will indicate whether we believe Him.

How do world conditions today compare with Gen. 6:11?

Why does God's promise demand of us to do all we can to make people more worthy to receive His blessings?

Why do we admire a beautiful rainbow?

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By P. H. Unruh, Goessel, Kansas

JULY 19—"Therefore we are always confident, knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord." II Cor. 5:6.

This verse reminds us again of the truth that the life in this body is not forever, but that after this life continues at home with the Lord. We are only pilgrims, strangers here on earth and must not enter into permanent relations with this passing world. In days of sunshine we are cautiously knowing that cloudy days are ahead. Christians therefore are confident of the Lord's guiding presence. We know that these changes are natural here. As the days and years go by we have a strong desire to be at home with the Lord.

"One sweetly solemn thought
Comes to me o'er and O'er;
I'm nearer home today,
Than I have been before."

JULY 20—"For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich." II Cor. 8:9.

We may know about things through study, and we may know things through experience. Much deeper is our knowledge through experience. We have heard and read much of "the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ" and we are happy, but never forgotten is the day when our eyes were opened to see our real condition, poor. wrecked, wounded, bleeding, dying—lost. On that day we heard a voice ask us to look up and we beheld —a cross, on the cross one hanging on nails which pierced his hands, his feet, and crowned with a crown of thorns. While we looked the scene changed—the cross changed to a throne, the crown of thorns to a crown of Kings of Kings and Lord of Lords, his nail-pierced hands held the title to all the wealth of the universe, and we heard him say "come unto me." We came and he made us heirs to all these riches written in his blood of calvary and sealed with the Spirit. Truly "Love lifted me."

JULY 21—"Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified." Gal. 2:16.

It is long ago since Paul wrote these words. Yet today there are well meaning Christians who say: I am a good Christian, I have a good report, I have not stolen, or wronged anyone. No one can speak evil of me. I think I will get to heaven on my good character. For such there is a real surprise coming. They plan to enter by their own door. Christ is the only door and there is no other entrance, and faith in Christ is the key which unlocks this door. Self righteousness is the great, beautifully-decorated stumbling block of many good people. Here then is, no other choice; we must be justified by faith of Christ and receive eternal life as a free gift of grace.

JULY 22—"Having made known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure which he hath purposed in himself." Eph. 1:9.

What a wonderful confidence the Lord has in us. He tells us things unknown in Old Testament times. It is a mystery how Jesus was born of a virgin and is the son of God, but he makes as much of it known to us as our finite mind can hold. The resurrection of the body is a mystery, but he uses the mind and the pen of Paul to make known to us the fact, order, and purpose of it. The second coming of our Lord is a mystery, but he made it known to her, the church, and now she is waiting for him. He has made known even the end. Before him the heavens will pass, all works of men will crumble, nations will bring their glory and lay at it His feet. It is good pleasure to make known to us this before it all comes to pass, that we may prepare to share this glory with him.

JULY 23—"I know whom I have believed." II Tim. 1:12.

The apostle had to sacrifice and suffer much on account of his faith in Jesus Christ. He could have had fame and a leading position among the Jews. As he compares what he had lost when he chose to be a servant of Christ and what he gained in the rich reward which he had committed unto him against that day, never, for a moment did Paul regret his choice. As many as have made the same choice after Paul have had the same experience. They know what the Lord is to them. Even in tribulation they are confident and happy. This the world cannot understand and often causes hate and reproach. No, we, like Paul, made no mistake when we received Him as our Saviour and Lord. Indeed we can say: "I know whom I have believed."

JULY 24—"But ye have an unction from the Holy One, and ye know all things." I John 2:20.

This statement makes us stop and ask what does it mean. It cannot mean that Christians know all details of the future as, dates, changes, political, economic, etc. We must hold our finger on the expression "unction from the Holy One." This points to annointing with oil as Moses did when he, at the command of God, annointed Aron and his sons as priests of the Lord. Thereby they were made wise to the things of God. In this day of grace "the unction from the Holy One" is the gift of the Holy Spirit. It is often strange how wise and well-educated persons are led to false conclusions and actions where a simple child of God annointed with the Holy Spirit has a clear understanding of the situation. For the true Christians "the unction from the Holy One" is indispensible.

JULY 25—"And ye know that he was manifested to take away our sins." I John 3:5.

This knowledge is strangely absent with many Christians today. Some were taught that Jesus came to teach us how to live and not how to get saved. Jesus came to die for our sins. Christians who have accepted Jesus as saviour from sin know why he came. It is not in the end of our life Jesus carried away our sins, but from Bethlehem to Calvary he did it, as John says, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." John 1:29. The tree must first be planted and then we can expect fruit. A man must first be born again and then the Lord expects a Christian life.

CAN CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS WORK IN WAR INDUSTRY

(This article is taken from the Gospel Herald and was submitted to it by the Peace Problems Committee of the "Old Mennonites" per Harold S. Bender. Since the stand of our conference is practically identical to the pronouncement on work in war industry as given in this article, this article is here presented.)

The 1937 General Conference statement on "Peace, War, and Military Service" makes the following brief pronouncement on work in war industry: "We cannot knowingly participate in the manufacture of munitions and weapons of war, either in peace time or in war time." The principle set forth in this statement is clear. It is based on the conviction that as followers of Christ we must abstain from all forms of support of war, and that we cannot aid the war effort in any way. The manufacture of weapons of war and equipment for the armed forces is essential to the prosecution of war. Consequently those who take part in the manufacture of these materials contribute their labor to that which is essential for war.

The importance of war industry has been made strikingly clear in the present conflict. As the conversion of peace-time industries into war production is carried through, with not millions but billions of dollars being expended by the nation for this production, we see clearly the crucial importance of industry in war time. In this present war, as in no previous war, mechanization and motorization have increased the dependence of armed force on the products of industry. For those who believe in war, and in the necessity of carrying this war through to a victorious conclusion, it is clear that they must do their part in industry alongside of the men in the armed forces. This is consistent. For anyone who does not have a conscience against war to refuse his support to the government in labor and thought and skill would be disloyalty.

The conscientious objector is not expected by his fellow citizens and the officials of government to take part in war industry. It is clear to most persons who think that it would be inconsistent for men who cannot use weapons of war themselves to earn their living out of making weapons of war to place in the hands of others. Local boards, when classifying men for military service, frequently point out the inconsistency in applying for IV-E classification while working in a defense plant. One local board chairman in a community where there is a large nonresistant population has several times vigorously expressed his criticism of men who manifest this inconsistency. He is unwilling to grant conscientious objector classification to those who deliberately and knowingly serve in war industry. We can have no quarrel with his position.

Although the basic principle is clear to all, there are some considerable difficulties in applying the principle honestly and sincerely to concrete situations. For instance, if a plant is working part time on war production, and part time on civilian production, should a conscientious objector withdraw from employment in such a plant? He need not do so if he is employed in that part of the operations of the plant devoted to civilian purposes, but the moment it becomes clear to him that his regular and permanent employment contributes in its major part to war production his conscience will no doubt make it impossible for him to stay. Again a man may have been working for many years in a plant which is gradually being converted under the pressure of the time into war production. When must he leave? Not until it is clear that the major contribution in that plant is to war production. Again, if a man is working in a factory producing civilian materials which are also used by the armed forces such as clothes, furniture, food, etc., must he break his connection with such a factory? Certainly not, unless the factory was specifically set up for production for military purposes or its output is contracted for war use for the duration of the war. Temporary or partial commitments to army use would not constitute a clear violation of principle. When principles are clear and conscience is clean, and obedience to the truth and the right is well heeded, a sincere believer will find his way through to a right solution of all problems along this line, provided he is willing to follow the guidance of the Spirit of God. It is impossible to set up in advance a set of rules which will help him to decide every case automatically. What is essential is that a clear witness is maintained against war and that the labor of a man's hands goes primarily into peaceful civilian needs.

As the demand for labor in war industries increases, and fewer industries are occupied in civilian production, it may become more and more difficult for men who desire to be conscientious objectors to find adequate employment but this cannot be the deciding point in a matter of principle. Many Mennonites who have gone to the city to work, will find it advisable to return to the farms, where farm labor is scarce, and where by far the greatest part of production goes into civilian needs. Others may find it necessary to sacrifice a better paying job for a poorer one or to learn new skills. But God will reward those who are true to Him and He will not leave the righteous forsaken. If because of conscience a brother or a sister comes into real need, certainly the Church will be glad to supply that need and share with those who suffer for conscience' sake.

Statements have been made by high government officials regarding the possible freezing of labor in war industries or the drafting of labor for war industries. Thus far such drastic steps have not been taken, and cannot be taken until the final legislation has been passed by Congress. Since there is a distinct possibility, however, that this may be done, there is all the more reason for those who may be involved in war industry to arrange to change their employment in plenty of time and thus maintain their conscientious position.

CPS Camps

(By Mennonite Central Committee)

Brother M. C. Lehman Appointed Assistant General Director

In the near future Brother M. C. Lehman will assume direct responsibilities in the Mennonite C. P. S. program. He has been appointed as Assistant General Director of the Mennonite camps east of the Mississippi River just like Albert Gaeddert is assisting in camps west of the Mississippi. At present there are seven camps which will be within the scope of Brother Lehman's proposed oversight. They are:

Grottoes, Virginia; Medaryville, Indiana;
Washington County (Maryland); Henry Illinois;
Sideling Hill (Wells Tannery, Pa.); Howard, Penn.;
Marietta, Ohio;

CHANGES IN CAMP STAFFS

Fort Collins, Colorado

Brother John F. Schmidt, former director of Camp Marietta in Ohio, has been selected as director of the Fort Collins, Colorado, camp; Brother Emmanuel Hertzler, (former High School teacher in Pittsburg, Pa.) assistant director and educational director; Mrs. Emmanuel Hertzler, (formerly Myrtle Schmell, High School teacher in Orrville, Ohio), camp matron; Sister Ella Saner, Dietician, (Kingman, Kansas); Brother Ray Ramseyer, assignee, business manager, (Normal, Illinois).

Marietta, Ohio

Brother Quintus Leatherman, Souderton, Pennsylvania, (former High School teacher in Philadelphia, Pa.) will assume charge of Camp Marietta, July 1; Sister Leatherman will perform the duties of camp matron; Dale Young, acting director until the Leatherman's arrive; Howard Kauffman, assignee, business manager.

Denison, Iowa

The latest changes at the Denison, Iowa, camp were as follows: Brother Wilbur Nachitagal, campee, succeeds Brother Albert Foote as assistant director and educational director. (Brother Foote has completed his term of C. P. S. service) Brother Russell Nassanari, Business Manager.

"Spike" Camps Formed

Two units, consisting of twelve to fifteen men each, from the Camino (California) camp are on detail duty in the fire-fighting program of the camp. On a job which calls for "spotting" fires in the great California forests, the boys will engage in this type of service during the months of greatest fire hazard—June to November. Each group is under the direction of a leader and in these small units the boys are entrusted with the responsibility of carrying on the life of a small camp unit.

Regional C. P. S. Conference Close

The series of C. P. S. conferences held in New England, Kansas, and Indiana, was closed by the recent conference held in Baltimore, Maryland, on June 20 and 21.

Directors and campee delegations of the various C. P. S. camps met with members of the National Service Board for Religious Objectors and became informed on latest government policies. At all conferences there were discussions on camp life, educational programs, detached service, community relations, and general camp problems.

The conferences resulted in a better understanding of government attitudes and functioning, gave the campees of all camps a wider outlook, and in general helped both campees and staff members to face the future with a better appreciation of the opportunities for witness that are afforded by our government to the conscientious objector.

Religious Distribution of Assignees in Civilian Public Service Camps

As of May 31, 1942, the following is the religious distribution of the 2,972 assignees in C. P. S. Camps:

Historic Peace Churches

WESTERN DISTRICT C. E. CONVENTION

"Things We Believe In" will be the theme of the fiftieth annual Western District C. E. Convention on July 25 and 26.

An outstanding feature of the program will be an address by Dr. C. E. Krehbiel, president of the General Conference. He will sketch for us in his inimitable way the lights and shadows of fifty years of convention activities.

Something new at this year's convention will be discussion groups under the leadership of capable men in their respective fields.

Dr. T. H. McDowell, pastor of the First Presbyterian Chruch, Enid, Oklahoma, and well-known young peoples' speaker, will bring the session to a climax on Sunday evening with an address on the subject "Christian Youth Believe.'

Watch for further announcements in these pages. We hope that each C. E. will make an effort to be represented at this fiftieth annual meeting.

Helen Mueller, Sec.-Treas.

WESTERN DISTRICT RETREAT

The Annual Young People's Retreat of the Western District is to be held July 28 to August 2 at Camp Wood near Elmdale, Kansas. The cost of the retreat this year is to be $6.50 plus tax if registration is made in advance; otherwise $7.00 plus tax. The committee in charge has been seeking to provide a few days of retreat in which young people may draw aside and enter into a period of Christian fellowship with other young people. Prominent leaders such as Rev. J. J. Esau, Rev. Erland Waltner, Rev. L. H. Hostetler and Dr. Winfield Fretz will conduct daily classes. Other leaders are being secured.

The retreat is planned for those who are of high school age and above. Registration blanks and information concerning the retreat have been sent to the pastors. Any one desiring to register should contact their local pastor. We urge the young people of our conference to make their application early. —Y. P. Retreat Committee, Arnold Funk, Chariman, Walter Gering, Secretary.

MOMENTS WITH GOD

"Miss Becker, how many moments do you spend with God every day?" Out of the clear blue sky this question was asked me by one of the sixth grade boys in the released-time Bible class which I was teaching in New York. "How many moments do you spend with God?" My answer, that as a child of God I must try to live so that every moment is spent as He would have me spend it, apparently did not satisfy him. Upon further questioning and discussion he told me his Sunday School teacher had said we spent far more moments with the devil than with God every day.

This afforded a wonderful opportunity for a lesson on what it means to belong to Christ. If we give our hearts to Christ, we no longer belong to ourselves but to Him. And, as I can do what I will with anything that belongs to me, so I tell Christ when I give myself to Him that He can do with me what He will. Therefore, it should not be true of us who love Christ that we spend more time with the devil than with God.

"How many moments do you spend with God every day?" The question still lingers. Often we sing rather glibly:

"Moment by moment I'm kept in His love;
Moment by moment I've life from above;
Looking to Jesus till glory doth shine;
Moment by moment, O Lord, I am thine."

Do we mean it? It is easy to say and to sing it, but do we live it?

The story is told of a young doctor in China who knelt down at night to thank God for guidance during the day. And a voice, as it seemed, said to him, "I've had nothing to do with it. You've guided yourself all day." What about our lives? Do we ask God in the morning to guide us during the day and then go through the day with only occasional thoughts of him?

Many of us who are living defeated Christian lives could live victoriously if we would follow the example of Dr. Frank C. Laubach, a missionary to the Philippines, who is at present in this country, who resolved to fill every minute full of the thought of God. He tells of his experiences in letters written to his father, excerpts of which are published under the title "Letters by a Modern Mystic" (published by the Student Volunteer Movement, 156 Fifth Ave., New York). In one of the first letters, written January 20, 1930, he writes: "Although I have been a minister and a missionary for fifteen years, I have not lived the entire day of every day in minute by minute effort to follow the will of God. Two years ago a profound dissatisfaction led me to begin trying to line up my actions with the will of God about every fifteen minutes or every half hour. Other people to whom I confessed this intention said it was impossible. I judge from what I have heard that few people are really trying even that. But this year I have started out trying to live all my waking moments in conscious listening to the inner voice, asking without ceasing, 'What, Father do you desire said? What, Father, do you desire done this minute?'

"It is clear that this is exactly what Jesus was doing all day every day. But it is not what His followers have been doing in very large numbers."

Are we willing to try it? "How many moments do you spend with God every day?" Oh that this question of that sixth grade boy would be burned into my heart and your heart until our hearts are striving to hold moment by moment fellowship with the Christ whose we are. —Mary Becker

SENIOR DEPARTMENT

Program for July 26, 1942

No. 2 of a series of Three Studies on the "Choice a Lifework"

PLAYING A STRAIGHT GAME: Prov. 4:23-27

I. Worship Period:

(1) Songs: "Strive aright when God doth call Thee," No. 563; "I Would be true," No. 207. (2) Scripture passage, prayer, and leader's remarks. (3) Special music. (4) Offering for foreign missions.

II. Leader's Introduction:

"Only by straight living do we verify our faith. No matter how loudly or piously a person may proclaim his love of God, if his works do not square with his words, we know that he is not speaking the truth.

"Playing a straight game means being honest, dependable, and trustworthy. It means being fair and square in all your dealings with others, taking no unfair advantages over a competitor. It means being sincere and genuine, so that you really are what you appear to be. It means living according to the rules laid down by God.

"Someone has pointed out that we are biologically constituted to be honest."

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

(1) Pressing forward, Phil. 3:13, 14; (2) Trustworthy in adversity, Gen. 28:20, 21; (3) Exemplary conduct, Eph. 4:25-29. (4) He played a losing game, Luke 15:14-16; (5) Self control needed, I Cor. 9: 24, 25.

IV. For Discussion:

(1) How do you play a straight game on the ballground? (2) How do you play a straight game on the field of life?

V. For Study:

Each day comes with its own opportunities, its own calls to duty, its own privileges—holding out hands, offering us radiant gifts. The day passes and never comes again. Other days may come just as bright and full of opportunity, but if we do not take just then the gifts it offers we miss a chance of getting something which was offered to us. Playing a straight game in life also means using opportunities that are offered to us.

"Dare to be right! dare to be true!
You have a work that no other can do;
Do it so bravely, so kindly, so well,
Angels will hasten the story to tell.

Dare to be right! dare to be true!
The failings of others can never save you;
Stand by your conscience, your honor, your faith,
Stand like a hero, and battle till death!!"

VI. Illustration:

Dare to say "No!"

Bob Taylor, when first elected to the state legislature, went to Nashville, leaving his widowed mother on the farm which was heavily mortaged. A certain matter was before the legislature. Bob Taylor received a letter enclosing a check for one thousand dollars, with the words, "We expect you to vote 'Yes' tomorrow." The thousand dollars would go far toward lifting the mortage; the widowed mother would be relieved—all, for simply voting "Yes," when otherwise he would have voted "No."

Bob Taylor sat in the session; the roll was being called; his decision was necessary. Finally his name was called. The young man tore the letter from his pocket, and throwing it and the enclosed check toward the speaker's desk, he cried, "I vote 'No'!"

That night he slept with a sense of duty done and a conscience at ease. Suddenly he was awakened by a crowd surging in the streets below his window. They came calling his name. Hurriedly dressing, he stepped forth on the veranda, and the crowd shouted: "Three cheers for the man who wouldn't sell his vote!"

INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT

Program for July 26, 1942

STORIES OF GREAT MINISTERS

For this meeting the boys should come prepared to act the part of a great minister. Have them give something out of the life of a great minister in the first person, speaking as if they were the ministers. For those found in the Bible it might be interesting to have the members guess whom they are representing. Ask your pastor to help you gather material on great ministers of our own General Conference.

Bible Ministers:

Philip, Acts 8:26-39; James, Jas. 1:1-5; Stephen, Acts 7:51-60; John Acts 3:1-11; Timothy, II Tim. 2:1-3; Peter, Acts 11:1-18.

Stories of Great Ministers: Acts 2:14-36.

Stories of Great General Conference Ministers.
Other Great Ministers:

Dr. Rufus Jones of Society of Friends; Washington Gladden; Graham Taylor; Dr. Francis E. Clark, father of Christian Endeavor; Dr. Daniel A. Poling, present World President of C. E.; Phillips Brooks

Phillips Brooks—Another Chance

The story is told of a young man who failed in the first important sermon he was to preach before many great preachers. He had prepared carefully, but he became frightened and sat down feeling himself a failure. After the service Phillips Brooks, the greatest preacher in America laid his hand upon the young man's shoulder and asked him to preach in his church the next Sunday. He gave him another chance at the most critical moment of his life.

CHRISTIAN HEROES OF TODAY—I Pet. 4:12-16

WHO — WHERE — WHY

Introduction

The days of heroism are not past. Men and women, boys and girls, must be alert today and aware of sin as it is lurking about us. Sometimes it is hard to detect, since it is clothed in false garments, and we recognize it too late, or not until its results have wrought evil in our lives. Temptations present themselves to us in so many ways, that we stumble into its path and it causes our downfall. But with the many opportunities we have to learn the truth through our Sunday Schools, churches, daily vacation Bible schools, and home training, we have the needed equipment to be real heroes and heroines. We need not be in battle to be courageous, but in daily life we are called upon to do brave things.

The Pastor—Every minister of the gospel is a hero if he firmly stands against the evils of his community.

Missionaries—Every minister as they work in lands where there is war, and where their lives are in danger.

Peace Workers—All who labor in the cause of peace are heroes, when it is so popular to stand for war.

Children—A child in the schoolroom who refuses to cheat is a hero.

The Question Bee

Identify the following and give a short history of each. George Miller, George Washington Carver, Kagawa of Japan, Schweitzer of Africa, Livingston and Stanley, Moody, Wesley, Paton, Frances Willard.

The Prayer List

We thank thee God for the church, which is the body of Christ, and which is given to the winning of men and women for Christ. We also thank thee for the privilege of speaking the message of Christ to others in a free land. May we never abuse this right. Make this people of our land more humble and contrite in heart. Amen.

RELIEF

Items of Interest in Paraguay

Dr. John Schmidt reports that during the stay of his brother (Dr. Herbert Schmidt) in the Chaco, 31 major operations were performed, 4 minor ones, and 3 cepto scopic examinations were made. Dr. John Schmidt comments: "For me it was the fulfillment of a great realization."

The Mennonite Central Committee has authorized the sum of $2,500 to be appropriated to building a road and telephone line for the Mennonites in the Chaco. For some time this has been an urgent need.

Distribution of Milk

At Banylus in France Brother Joseph N. Byler and Sister Lois Gunden recently distributed packages of powdered milk to French school children. In return for this the children presented our workers with bouquets of flowers.

Brother Byler observes: "This distribution of milk to the school children of Banylus was a real experience for me. They were very appreciative and all thanked us when we handed it to them. The mayor came and expressed his appreciation and thanked us personally. No doubt the children will long remember the time when two Americans came and gave them milk."

Two Nurses going to England

Sister Elfrieda Klassen and Edna Hunsperger left Akron, Pennsylvania, for New York City on June 12. Their sailing for England was scheduled for about June 15.

Sister Klassen, of Winnipeg, Manitoba, is a graduate nurse of St. Boniface Hospital, St. Boniface, Manitoba, and Sister Hunsperger was graduated by the Kitchener-Waterloo General Hospital.

They will join the present Mennonite workers in England, Bro. John E. Coffman and Bro. Peter Dyck. It is hoped they can give their services at the evacuee homes for children and aged which our Mennonite workers have established at Wickhurst Manor and the Woodlands.

THIS GENERATION PROPOSES:

To smoke its way to health;
To drink its way to posterity;
To destroy its way to food and clothing;
To entertain its way to wisdom;
To sin its way to joy and happiness;
To war its way to peace;
To hate its way to love.

Camps Celebrate First Anniversary

Civilian Public Service Camps throughout the country are marking their first anniversary.

Mennonite Camps that have completed a year of service are: Grottoes, Virginia, opened May 22, 1941; Marietta, Ohio, opened June 3, 1941; Colorado Springs, Colorado, opened June 5, 1941; Bluffton, Indiana, (since moved to Medaryville, Indiana) opened June 24, 1941.

At several of the camps "celebrations" were held, one camp featuring a "commencement exercise for the "graduating class."

Camp Briefs

Brother Jesse Hoover, recently returned from a four-weeks tour of the west during which time he visited the following Mennonite camps: Henry, Ill.; Denison, Iowa; Colorado Springs, Colorado; Camino, California, Brother Hoover spoke on relief work in Europe. He reports a fine spirit among boys in camp. . . .

Brother Esko Loewen, campee from the Henry, Illinois, camp has recently been added to the Akron, Pennsylvania office staff where he will aid in publishing a camp news letter for the Mennonite camps and assist in the general office work. . . .

CORRESPONDENCE

JOHANNESTAL MENNONITE CHURCH

Hillsboro, Kansas

Ministers who visited us during the last three months were: Orlando Wiebe, a student of Bethel College; Rev. P. E. Penner and Dr. Ed. G. Kaufman. Miss Elizabeth Foth of Brooklyn, New York, and Erwin Wedel of Jasper, Alabama, were with us and related experiences and showed pictures. We were also privileged to see pictures of the migrants. Such pictures tell us that there is much to do in bringing physical and spiritual help to people in our land whose souls are precious to the Lord.

On Ascension Day our pastor and Rev. Arnold Funk exchanged pulpits. On Mother's Day we again had consecration of children. On Pentecost nine young people were baptized. Later five others were received by letter. The Lord's Supper was observed with a good attendance. Miss Dora Ewert taught our three-weeks Bible school. It is remarkable how much children can memorize in a sort time.

On Pentecost Monday our Sunday school enjoyed a program and a few hours of fellowship with ice cream and cookies as refreshments. Such meetings seem to be enjoyed by young and old. —Corr.

EBENEZER MENNONITE CHURCH

Gotebo, Oklahoma

Because of much rain this spring, we could not have services on several Sundays. Our C. E. has given programs at the Bergthal Church, Corn, and at Sichar Church at Cordell. In April we received many blessings from the messages which Rev. A. Warkentin brought us. On May 3 the Corn High School presented a religious program. Eighteen enrolled in the catechism class which Rev. Unruh started on May 10. Rev. Unruh and the Methodists plan to conduct a two weeks vacation Bible school after harvest-time.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Beatrice, Nebraska

The Nebraska All-Mennonite S. S. Convention was held in our church on May 10. The Men's Chorus from the Denison, Iowa, C. P. S. camp gave a sacred concert on the evening program. Seven of our young men have gone to the C. P. S. camp at Placerville, California.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin J. Miller, who taught our Bible School for five years, have left us to make their home on a farm near Hanston, Kansas.

Fourteen young people were baptized on Pentecost. Ronald von Riesen was ordained to the ministry by Rev. J. M. Regier. Rev. L. Hostetler delivered the address at this impressive service. The Fellowship male quartet served with several numbers. Miss Elizabeth Foth and Erwin Wedel were in our church and told of their work Helen A. Penner gave a report, to the C. E.. of her trip and relief work in France. —E. H. T. Corr.

SWISS MENNONITE CHURCH

Alsen, North Dakota

We were indeed glad to have Brother Jacob Friesen of Doland, South Dakota, conduct a few services for us when he was in our midst in April. He also served us at communion services, and we were also blessed when Brother Schultz, formerly of Avon, South Dak., brought us a few messages. The Annual Mennonite S. S. Convention was held in our church in May. Brother John Bartel from Delft, Minnesota, was the main speaker for it and also for the Youth Conference which was held June 1 and 2. We speak so much of the sin in the world, but how about the sins in the church? When so many sins have crept into the church can we expect world conditions to be different? In the Word we read much of the fear of the Lord. Where is the fear of the Lord today? Do we read anywhere in the Word of God that the audience roared out in laughter when a message was given to them from God? Let us heed Psalm 1:1 and 2. This week in one of our neighboring church a sermon on Joshua 7 was given. The hidden sin was the accursed thing. At that time it meant defeat for Israel, and today it means defeat for the church. How many hidden sins have we in our churches today? O, that we might see the terribleness of sin whether it is done openly or as a hidden sin.

We again have services regularly since Brother Albert Kleinsasser started in to serve in the middle of May. The Sunday that Brother and Sister Kleinsasser were at the conference, Brother Richard Spenst, a young brother of this church, gave us a message.

Nature has again put on her most beautiful dress. We had a very late and a very wet spring. At present a good shower would be much appreciated. Fields and gardens look very good so far, and our prayer is that God may continue to bless fields and gardens.

ZION MENNONITE CHURCH

Elbing, Kansas

At our annual church meeting held in January our congregation passed a resolution to adopt the 100 per cent church subscription plan. By March 1 this plan was carried out and we are happy to have the papers in the various homes.

In February our Sewing Society baked and sent forty pounds of cookies to two of our C. P. S. camps, namely to Denison, Iowa, and Henry, Illinois. At the present time six of our boys are in camps, Robert Regier in Iowa, J. Herschel Klassen and George Klassen in Texas, Oswald Klassen and Elmer Roberts in California, and Howard Wedel in Nebraska. Robert Regier and J. Herschel Klassen are now home on furlough.

During the year eight members joined the church by letter and on June 7 seven more were admitted through baptism. We have had one death this year. On May 4 Mis Gertrude Dyck, youngest daughter of our pastor, Rev. H. J. Dyck, passed away at Colorado Springs. She will be missed, not only by the family, but by everyone who had learned to know her. She was bedfast for many months, still she always had a smile for everyone who came to her bedside.

In May we were privileged to have with us Rev. W. F. Unruh, a returned missionary from India, now pastor of the West Zion Church in Moundridge, Kansas, who gave a series of inspiring messages.

Again we were privileged to have one month of vacation Bible school. It was held in two districts for the convenience of some of the pupils. The program was combined and given in our church. The teachers were Miss Esther Ratslaff and Miss Agathe Andres. Twenty-two pupils were enrolled. This is indeed a great opportunity for the young children in the community. On June 14 we had child consecration services in the morning, and in the afternoon we had our annual Sunday School picnic on our regular picnic grounds, one-half mile east of Elbing.

Truly the Lord hath blessed us thus far, and we should be grateful unto Him for the many opportunities we still have of worshipping and serving Him.

BERGFELDER MENNONITE CHURCH

Delft, Minnesota

"Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, today and forever." What a comfort we find in these words of divine inspiration! As we look at world conditions, we become fearful as to what the future holds for us, but as we look up to the Almighty God our hearts again become filled with peace.

We are happy to report a growth in the membership of our church. Two members were received into the church by letter, and on Pentecost Sunday eleven young people who had taken a stand for Christ and were instructed in the catechism class were baptized and received into the church. We trust they will be true members in the Church of Jesus Christ also, for that is the only membership that counts. . .

Sunday, June 21, we had a fine surprise. Miss Elizabeth Foth of Brooklyn, New York, related of her experiences as missionary in the Red Hook, and Erwin Wedel, missionary among the negroes in and around Jasper, Alabama, also spoke to us of his experiences. Both showed so much enthusiasm for their work and Saviour that one could not help but feel that we wanted to do more for missions. We were greatly blessed through their messages. June 28 we had a quartet from the Los Angeles Bible Institute in our midst for the morning service. Our Chlidren's Day program and mission festival was held Sunday, July 5. How thankful we feel that we are still privileged to worship in peace and quietness.

WALTON MENNONITE CHURCH

Walton, Kansas

On June 7, 1942, a Christian fellowship located near Walton, Kansas organized themselves officially into the Walton Mennonite Church.

Within the past five years there have settled in the neighborhood of Walton, a group of Mennonite families from various communities seeking to establish permanent homes. About three years ago this group felt the need of a closer fellowship in worship and in Christian service. Through the help of the Home Mission Committee of the Western District Conference, there were started Sunday morning services in the Community Building of Walton. As time went on, and the attendance increased to an average of seventy-five for the year, a closer fellowship was desired on the part of the group so that they discussed the possibility of organizing into a full fleged church. There were, however, numerous problems to be solved before this could be carried out satisfactorily. There was the problem of a church building. Since there was no old church building available they arranged to rent the Walton Community Building, which proved quite satisfactory and has been used ever since. There was also the problem of financial stability in supporting a church budget. During the last three years one of the Senior students of Bethel College had been serving them with the help of the Home Mission Committee.

During the last year catechetical class was begun for the young people who were desiring baptism. The problem again arose as to the possibility of organizing. The attendance was increasing to about ninety and the group felt more than ever the need of an organized church. They then met with the Home Mission Committee, and they offered to lend their support to this new enterprize. The church committee then took definite steps in bringing about this organization. First a constitution was drawn up and discussed by the people and then adopted on April 16, 1942. It was further decided that on June 7, 1942, there was to be an opening day at which time they would sign the charter, and also hold the baptismal service.

On June 7, 1942, the Walton Mennonite Church was officially organized by the signing of the charter. Forty-seven people signed their names to the charter. Dr. Abr. Warkentin delivered the address for the occasion. This service was then followed by a baptismal service at which time six young people gave their lives to Christ and were baptized by Rev. Gerhard Friesen, and were accepted into the church.

In the afternoon Rev. Ronald Von Riesen was installed as pastor of the new church. Rev. J. M. Regier was in charge of the rite of installation. Rev. P. H. Richert and Rev. L. Hostetler gave short messages.

The evening service was devoted to missions at which time Rev. W. C. Voth told of his interesting experiences while traveling in Canada. The Girls' Choir of the Tabor Mennonite Church sang several numbers. Some 850 people attended the services for the day.

Rev. Von Riesen will resume his duties at the church August 1st. At present he is attending Garrett Biblical Seminary at Chicago.

KANSAS MENNONITE S. S. CONVENTION

The Kansas Mennonite Sunday School Convention which was held in the Buhler High School auditorium was very well attended and each number on the program was rendered. "Sharing Christ in the Crisis" was the theme.

The following topics were discussed: "The Individual Sharing Christ in Everyday Life" by Miss Elizabeth Hirschler; "The Opportunity of the Home in Directing Youth into the Right Channels" by Frank Richard, chaplin of the State Reformatory of Hutchinson; "Sharing Christ with the Sunday School Pupil" by Mrs. Walter Classen; "Sunday School Relation to Conference Activities" by Dr. C. E. Krehbiel.

The present president, Rev. C. H. Dirks and the secretary of treasurer, Mrs. Ferdinand Regier, were reelected. Albert Graber of Pretty Prairie was elected vice president. A motion was made and passed that the Western District C. E. Convention take over the Western District retreat work.

The Sunday School Committee of the First Mennonite Church of Newton sent an official invitation to hold the 1943 session in their church.

The speaker of the evening, Dr. S. J. England, Dean of Bible at Phillips University, Enid, Oklahoma, spoke on "Consecrating Ourselves to Christ in This Crisis."

WOMEN'S MEETING OF PACIFIC DISTRICT

The Women's Missionary Societies of the Pacific District held their annual business meeting during the conference session, Friday afternoon, June 19. The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. D. J. Unruh, Pratum, Oregon; Vice-President, Mrs. Homer Leisy, Dallas, Oregon; Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. Elmer Widmer, Albany, Oregon; District Advisor, Mrs. A. J. Richert, Los Angeles, California.

Last year these societies undertook to raise the money to furnish or equip a maternity ward in the hospital at Basna, India. This project proved successful and this year another was undertaken. It was decided to support one compounder at the hospital in Basna, India, for a year.

Several special musical numbers were given in the evening program and Mrs. Frank Manning, missionary from Africa, and Mrs. Chris Ummel, engaged in work with the migrants at Shafter, California, gave interesting missionary messages. The offering of $86.85 was divided equally between home and foreign missions.

CIVILIAN BONDS

"Civilian government bonds have been approved by Henry Morgenthau. The lowest denomination will be $50. They will be registered bonds with approximately the same rate of interest and maturity date as the war bonds. They will be marketable, but not redeemable before maturity date. If you work on the payroll plan, you will have to tell your office girl about these bonds. She will accumulate your money and then send it to the Provident Trust Co. of Philadelphia, Pa., and you will be sent a bond within thirty to sixty days. The moment your deposit reaches the bank, you will be sent a postal receipt. You pay the face value when you buy, but then you wll get your interest semi-annually. The bank must have a flat rate of $1.50 for each deposit, no matter whether for $50, $100 or up."—Eighth Street Mennonite Church, Goshen, Indiana, bulletin. THE CIVILIAN BOND PURCHASE PLAN

I. What it is

A concern for some such plan as first noted and discussed by the National Service Board for Religious Objectors in early 1941, at which time a Committee was appointed to study possibilities. For many months all contacts with Treasury Department officials seemed fruitless. Early in May 1942, it was agreed that those groups most concerned should address their petitions in writing to secretary of the Treasury Henry Morganthau, and that Paul Comly French of the Committee would then present these letters in person. Among these was the following May 18 letter prepared under the direction of the Mennonite Central Committee:

The Honorable Mr. Henry Morgenthau
Secretary of the Treasury
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Morgenthau:

"In the attached statement of the position of the Mennonite Church on "Peace, War, and Military Service," adopted at its General Conference at Turner, Oregon, in August, 1937, you will note on page 3, item 3, the following: "We can have no part in the financing of war operations through the purchase of war bonds in any form or through voluntary contributions to any of the organizations or activities falling under the category described immediately above, unless such contributions are used for civilian relief or similar purposes." In other portions of this same statement can be noted the implications of our position and the Biblical basis for it as it relates to military service. All of the Mennonite bodies cooperating through the agency of this Committee hold substantially this position. As a religious group we appreciate most sincerely the respect granted us in this position at the present time and the provision which has been made for our conscripted young men to render their service to this country through Civilian Public Service as provided for in "The Selective Training and Service Act of 1940" and the subsequent regulations by the Selective Administration. Current contributions from the Committee's membership constituency to the cost of carrying forward the Committee's administrative share of this program are running between Thirty and Forty Thousand Dollars monthly.

"In the numerous other relationships which the members of our groups have in this country at the present time, we are endeavoring to consistently apply our ideals and purposes outlined not only in this statement but also in other similar statements of position made during our past four centuries of history. The purpose of this letter, however, is to bring to your attention the quotation noted above with the request that your office give consideration to some technique by which our members could consistently aid their government with the loan of financial means at their disposal without violating conscience.

"In this connection and through the agency of the National Service Board for Religious Objectors, 1751 N. Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., Paul Comly French, Executive Secretary, we have on a number of occasions during the past months contacted individuals in your department—among these, Mr. Graves, Mr. Houghtling, and Mr. Kuhns—and have also explained our concern to Wayne Coy, Senator Robert A. Taft, and others. Inasmuch as our constituents in Canada were faced with a similar situation earlier than we, and since the Canadian government arranged to make available to them two special types of investments (a Series B, non-interest-bearing, non-negotiable certificate whose proceeds were designated for reconstruction and relief work; and special stickers for the regular Victory Bond Series, which served to designate such funds for the same purpose), it was our earlier assumption that perhaps similar offerings might be made available to our members in the United States. Through Mr. French, however, we now learn that your Department has investigated this Canadian provision and has stated that such provisions would be too expensive from the standpoint of administrative cost. Representatives of the Treasury Department in Ottawa have advised our own leaders in Canada of their satisfaction with the arrangement and of their appreciation of the subscriptions to date. From the angle of our own position such an arrangement as is provided in Canada would be entirely satisfactory. In the matter of the cost of administration to the government in making such or similar offerings available to our people here, we believe also that a plan could be worked out to cover this administrative cost by and within our own group.

"We have also been advised by Treasury Department representatives that the type of certificate, bond, or evidence of indebtedness which would meet these purposes is not available in the United States and could not be made available except by an act of Congress. On this point, we of course, recognize that you yourself would be in the best position to know what might be best or could be arranged. It has occurred to us, however,—inasmuch as our Government does continue to have financial needs along a number of civilian lines as heretofore—that perhaps some form of special, long-term, low-interest-bearing,non-negotiable Treasury Note might be made available in units of One Hundred Thousand Dollars or more bearing a statement on its face to the effect that the amount of money in question represents aid to the Government in certain of its continuing civilian interests. We think, for instance, of the budget requirements allowed to Selective Service—Camp Operations Division—by which funds are provided for the "Work of National Importance" technical agencies cooperating with our present Civilian Public Service program. We do not know what this amounts to annually but assume that the total is at least several millions of dollars. We would be happy to have the proceeds of loans made by our people so indicated on the face of the aforementioned Treasury Note.

"The provision of such an arrangement as outlined in the foregoing paragraph would also imply that the Treasury would recognize local subscriptions to these on the part of our members as acceptable in lieu of subscriptions to the regularly offered Defense Bond Series; in fact, it would be entirely satisfactory to us to have such subscriptions channeled through the regular local soliciting agencies as is being done in Canada.

"The membership of Mennonite and cooperating groups in the United States totals in round numbers, 125,000—our total constituency, including children, is perhaps something under 200,000. We believe that the average wealth and income of Mennonites is about the same as that of the average of other American citizens, and we are certain that if a Treasury offering were made available to us consistent with our group's historic position on this question our members throughout the country would subscribe their full share and more. We will be glad to give you further full assurance of this, and also as noted before, we will be happy to arrange to carry the additional administrative costs for making available and handling such offerings received through one of our group agencies. Because of the large number of inquiries received at this office on this point we have made available some months ago to our members a printed statement of "Readiness to Purchase Civilian Government Bonds" as per attached copy. The large quantity of these that have been ordered from our office and the continued large number of letters received by us convince us of the growing concern of our members throughout the country that if all possible something consistent with the position we hold might be arranged.

"We will be glad to meet with you or anyone in the Treasury Department whom you designate to discuss this matter further at any time and place that you suggest. We do hope for your favorable consideration of this petition and request at any early date."

Very sincerely,
MENNONITE CENTRAL COMMITTEE
Orie O. Miller
Executive Secretary

Subsequent to this presentation and discussion of same in the office of Under-Secretary of the Treasury Daniel W. Bell there was the following further exchange of correspondence between Paul Comly French and the Treasury:

Mr. Henry Morganthau, J,. June 1, 1942
Secretary of the State
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Morganthau:

"This will confirm our conversation regarding the problem confronting the members of the religious groups represented by the National Service Board for Religious Objectors who feel conscientiously unable to purchase Defense Bonds. They understand that there are continuing expenses for the regular functions of the Government, totalling some six billion dollars annually. Would it be possible for us to purchase regular issues of Treasury bonds and notes and then redistribute them to our people in smaller denominations through a non-profit corporation we are organizing?

"Any rate of interest established by the Treasury is agreeable to us, but we would prefer a rate lower than that paid on Defense Bonds. We are willing to accept notes with any maturity date which seems right to you. We would handle all subscriptions, and the Treasury would not be required to assume any additional clerical burden on our behalf.

"If this plan is satisfactory to you, would it be possible for us to explain to our neighbors that we are aiding in the financing of the Government in ways that our consciences permit and that the United States Treasury has approved our plan?"

Cordially yours,
Paul Comly French
June 2, 1942

Dear Mr. French:

"This will acknowledge your letter of June 1, 1942.

"In line with our recent conversation, I think you understand that the Treasury needs some six billion dollars annually to maintain civilian services of the Government which are essential to the basic needs of human life, to conserve our national resources, and to keep in repair our national plant. The Treasury would be willing to have the funds to be subscribed by your people invested in Treasury bills, treasury certificates of indebtedness, Treasury notes, and Treasury bonds which the Treasury offers publicly to the people of the United States from time to time, and which are not designated by their terms as "war issues". I shall be glad to see that you are notified each time an offering of this kind is made.

"It is our understanding that you will buy such securities as are issued, in amounts in line with the financial resources of your people, and then distribute certificates of participation in smaller denominations through a non-profit corporation you are organizing. This plan is agreeable to us and will, we believe, satisfy the American people that the groups you represent are contributing to the support of the Government in ways their consciences will permit.

"We understand that the groups you represent are making contributions to the support of the Civilian Public Service Camps for conscientious objectors authorized by the Congress and the Selective Service System which would otherwise have been a charge on the Treasury of the United States.

"We are all seeking the same objectives and are glad that our American democracy is able to recognize the conscientious convictions of a minority of our citizens."

Sincerely yours,
H. Morganthau, Jr.
Secretary of the Treasury

Mr. Paul Comly French
Executive Secretary 6
National Service Board of Religious Objectors
Washington, D. C.

After receiving the June 2 letter from Mr. Morganthau's office, a meeting of representatives of interested groups was called together in Philadelphia for discussion of further procedure. It was there concluded that as intermediary between the subscribers and the government for these bonds and as agent for these subscribers and the groups they represent, an established, well-known, financial institution would be preferable to any other plan that might be devised. Provident Trust Company of Philadelphia was suggested. Contact was immediately made through one of Provident Trust Company's Vice-Presidents and the group was assured that this institution would endeavor to serve in this capacity. A series of conferences with officials of Provident Trust Company and a further conference with Under-Secretary Daniel W. Bell ironed out and developed further details necessary before the plan could be presented to the groups concerned. By June 22, however, it was felt that the plan was ready for such presentation.

A special meeting of representatives of cooperating Mennonite and associated groups was, therefore, called to meet with the M. C. C. at the Mennonite Home Mission, 1907 South Union, Chicago, Illinois, on Thursday, June 25th. The Secretary of the Mennonite Central Committee presented to this gathering this provision for purchase of Civilian Bonds for those who can not conscientiously purchase War Bonds and gave at the same time a review of the work which had been done in this matter by the representatives of the Committee and of the National Service Board. He stated: (a) that Provident Trust Company will serve as agent for the purchase of Civilian Government Bonds to be distributed to individuals. (b) That a representative of the Mennonite Central Committee with representatives of the Brethren Service Committee and the American Friends Service Committee would constitute a Civilian Bond Committee to supervise the plan and to aprove specific Government Bond purchases. (c) That a charge of $1.50 for each bond purchased by subscriber would cover all costs of the service.

A letter from Provident Trust Company to the M. C. C. tentatively outlining the arrangement for their services as agent was read. Further explanation was also made to the gathering concerning the method of promoting the sale of these bonds and of explaining the plan to our people. After clarification of specific points in the plan, the gathering gave consideration to it and what attitudes our several groups would want to take toward same in separate M. C. C. constituent group meetings. Following this, the gathering reassembled for receiving the reports from the several groups. Inasmuch as these were practically unanimous in favoring the plan, the following resolution was then moved and seconded as the evident mind of the meeting and passed by unanimous vote:

> "That we approve the Civilian Bond plan submitted by Orie O. Miller, Executive Secretary of the Mennonite Central Committee and charge the Mennonite Central Committee with the responsibility of representing the cooperating Mennonite and associated groups in the administration and promotion of the plan, and in any further needed representation to the government or private agencies."

At this point the Mennonite Central Committee membership then took over further action as noted in the following minutes:

> "That the Mennonite Central Committee accept the charge assigned to it in the matter of the Civilian Bond Plan by the cooperating Mennonite and associated groups and proceed to set up the organization and policies necessary to carry out the plan."
> "Moved and passed that the promotion of the Civilian Bond program in the churches be made the responsibility of the Peace Section, together with the responsibility for raising the finances necesary for this work."
> "Moved and passed that Orie O. Miller be appointed as the M. C. C. representative on the Civilian Bond Committee."
> "Moved and passed that the Executive Committee appoint an advisory committee to assist O. O. Miller in his work as Mennonite representative on the Civilian Bond Committee."

The Brethren Service Committee has similarly approved for its constituency the program as outlined and has designated its representative on the Civilian Bond Committee. The American Friends Service Committee still has the plan under advisement with indications that this constituency will also cooperate. A publicity folder approved by Provident Trust Company and the Civilian Bond Committee, has been prepared and is in printers' hands now. A packet of these with accompanying explanatory letter will be mailed to all M. C. C. constituent group pastors just as soon as these are available from the printer, from which time the plan then becomes operative.

Orie O. Miller
Secretary of M. C. C.

II. How use it.

Many anxious inquiries have come to us during the past few months, asking whether we had a solution to offer to the growing pressure to buy Defense or War Bonds. It was necessary for us to repeatedly inform you that nothing was yet developed, but that we were diligently and hopefully employed in an attempt to meet your requirements. Our hopes, prayers, and labors have at last borne fruit. We can now offer our people subscriptions to Government Bonds that are not for war purposes. Provision also is made for the recognition of such subscriptions to alternative bonds, both by church groups as well as by county quota. This opens up an avenue of service for which many of our people have long been hoping.

In the Chicago meeting of June 25 after explanation had been made by the Secretary of the Mennonite Central Committee, it was practically unanimously agreed by all groups represented that we should go ahead with the proposed plan as submitted. It was further agreed that the M. C. C. should be the implementing agency for the Mennonites and their affiliates. The further promotion and publicising of the program was given into the hands of the Peace Section.

The circular which has been prepared will outline in detail the operation of the plan. These descriptive circulars are being mailed to each minister or pastor on the available mailing list, as furnished us by the various conferences represented in the M. C. C. If for any reason your pastor does not receive the circulars and application blanks within a few days, we invite you to get in touch with the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania.

The Provident Trust Company will receive funds in denominations of $50.00, $100.00, $500.00, or $1000.00 to be held by them until Civilian Bond Committee approves their subscription to a specified Government Bond issue. When such subscription has been completed and the Treasury Department has made proper registration of the bond, the bond will be returned to the Provident Trust Company, which will in turn forward the bonds to the subscriber or to the person or institution for whom the subscriber ordered it registered.

Anyone so desiring may subscribe to a bond in the name of a charitable institution. The subscriber may designate a church institution; for example, as the one for whom the bond is to be registered. Receipt for such subscription would be forwarded to the subscriber. Such receipt would provide him with evidence of his subscription to government obligations and he would receive credit in the community quota. Such receipt would also be evidence for income tax deductions. The bond would be mailed to the institution for which it was subscribed and registered. The institution would be recipient of the proceeds of the bond at its maturity.

The question of pay-roll allottment plans of certain industrial organizations is also provided for. The employee concerned may instruct the proper officials of the industrial organization to reserve that part of his pay-roll which they ordinarily deduct until sufficient has been accumulated for the purchase of at least a minimum $50.00 bond. The industrial organization should be instructed to forward such funds with the subscription order form to the Provident Trust Company. The Provident Trust Company will subscribe the designated funds in the next available issue of bonds as authorized by the Civilian Bond Committee.

If you prefer, you may subscribe through the Defense Bond solicitor in your local community. In case you use this method, proper precaution should be used to insure the funds invested through the channels outlined above. If satisfactory arrangements can be agreed upon with the solicitor, it would probably be helpful in more directly meeting the pressure by local groups for Defense or War Bond purchases.

The Provident Trust Company is not prepared to receive funds in denominations smaller than $50.00. In cases where individuals are not prepared to subscribe for at least a minimum $50.00 bond but where they desire to have evidence of smaller subscriptions which are possible for them to make, it might be helpful to set up a plan in the local church congregation to put these smaller amounts into a common congregational bond or to be held in trust by the congregation with proper individual receipts. The specific application of such suggestion would necessarily vary widely with local conditions. If there are difficulties in the administration of a plan in your local community or if there are points which are not clear, please address all inquiries to the Mennonite Central Committee.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

HE DENIED HIMSELF——

Let us go to a Christian para (group of homes in a village) for a Christmas dinner. We arrive in Phalsahbari, which is by road eighteen miles from Basna mission station. The road is terrible—ruts, cuts, ditches, boulders, and mud holes. The brethren meet us with a din of drumming that ones' ears almost crack. They sing or rather scream a song in such a shrill and high tone that ones' ears tingle. At the first instant we feel like corking up our ears and running away. But no, my Saviour denied Himself celestial joy and appreciated the company of men, and so must I. And by the grace of God, I can. Yes, I can enjoy their drumming and screaming because they enjoy it, and I am their Christian brother.

Behind a mud wall, in earthen vessels, the Christmas rice meal is being cooked. There will be at least fifty eaters; so the rice has to be cooked in several shifts. The first boiled rice is put on a bamboo mat which lies on the earthen floor. The sisters of the church came to sweep the place around the cooked rice, so that all may sit down to eat. The dust flies thick in every direction and settles on the boiled rice so that it becomes a bit gray. Green leaves, artfully knitted together, are spread for plates. Big piles of rice are put on these leaves; and curry (sauce) heavily mixed with red peppers, is poured on the rice. About 150 men, women, and children sit down behind these plates. Prayer and thanksgiving is being offered for the food; and for the friends in America who sent the gift that makes this love feast possible. Then all go after the food with gusto. You and I sit down behind a leaf plate too and start to eat. At first the fiery hot stuff does not want to go down because you see all the dust etc. on it. But you look away from your plate and see the brethren enjoying it, and you keep on putting food into your mouth without looking what you eat.

SEEDS AND STREAMS

Seeds of weeds and fragrant flow'rs
Float down the stream together,
Both to be planted somewhere
And grow in Spring's fair weather.

Sentence Sermon: "If we had more tears in the church today there would be fewer sneers in the world; if we had more prayers we would have fewer cares."

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

LIMITATIONS OF RURAL COMMUNITIES

While there is very much to be said in favor of rural life one should not make the mistake of thinking that all the advantages are on the side of rural communities and all the disadvantages on the side of city life and urban communities. The virtues and values of life are not as unequally distributed as all that. On the whole it seems that rural communities by their very nature offer the possibility for a rich and satisfying kind of Christian life but there are many rural communities that do not develop this possibility. And in fairness to facts it is necessary to say that Mennonite communities must frequently be said to be guilty of this short-coming.

The criticism is sometimes made that Mennonite communities are basically selfish because they are primarily concerned with their own salvation and indifferent to the salvation of the larger society. One critic recently pointed out to me that the Mennonites were similar to the Eskimos in one respect, namely, that they had been living in society for hundreds of years but never had significantly affected the life of society as a whole. He felt that the Mennonites had developed the "good life" within their own communities but had failed to transmit it out beyond themselves. This criticism cannot be accepted at face value in view of the facts of history which reveal that Mennonites have had significant influences on the larger society, nevertheless, it is well to take heed and consider the seriousness of the criticism.

Mennonite Short-Comings

Mennonite communities are frequently guilty of extreme self-centeredness. The people become so concerned about preserving particular traditions and customs that they sometimes neglect greater universal religious principles. If these greater truths are not altogether neglected they are at least given secondary consideration. To the extent that a community confines its virtues strictly to its own members and does not keep the channels open for new members and new ideas to come in and worthwhile ideas and needed assistance taken out of the group, it becomes selfish, and thus definitely limits the opportunities for good that it may do. In this connection the observation of Lily Dougall, in a book entitled The Spirit, are worth quoting. She says:

> "The small community of select souls, exceedingly valuable as it is, is not an end in itself. The truth learned in such fellowship must be made explicable to the world. The outer world must constantly be drawn into the fellowship, or else the members, having no universal aim, will be satisfied with only the partial expression necessary for their mutual understanding. The individual remains dwarfed except as a member of a 'beloved community,' and the loving community degenerates except when it seeks to save the world."

The essence of this admonition is that a community or a group, just as an individual, must lose itself in the larger good if it is to find itself. Our rural communities from time to time have been in grave danger of being satisfied with only a partial expression and demonstration of the Christian message; they have seemed to look upon their communities as ends in themselves. This should never be.

BOYS IN MENNONITE CAMPS

Latest figures on boys in Mennonite camps are as follows:

NO SALE

I've heard of a preacher who had on his desk a special notebook, labeled, "Complaints of members against other members." When one of his people called to tell him the faults of another he would say, "Well, here's my complaint book. I'll write down what you say, and you can sign it. Then when I have to take the matter up officially I shall know what I may expect you to testify to."

The sight of the open book and the ready pen had its effect. "Oh, no, I could not sign anything like that!" And no entry was made.

The preacher says he kept the book for forty years, opened it probably a thousand times, and never wrote a line in it. —The Ginger Bean

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By P. H. Unruh, Goessel, Kansas

JULY 26—"We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." I John 3:14.

This is a very outstanding statement. Without reservation John writes "we passed from death unto life." Indeed a great change. Some say it is something we cannot know. John is not concerned what others say. He gives a sign by which we can prove the truth of the change in a brother's life and our own life. Faith in Jesus saves, and love of the brethren is evidence of this grace. In the early Christian Church love of the brethren was outstanding and even heathens marveled at it. The first rebuke of the Church by her Lord is that she had lost the first love. The great falling away in the church in the closing days of this dispensation is that "the Love in many will wax cold." This is also the standard by which we should measure our own standing.

JULY 27—"And if we know that he hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of him." I John 5:15.

Here again we face the stern fact that believers know their prayers are heard and granted. There are many who pray but are not certain that they even have been heard. Remember our prayer must be in His will and we will be heard. As His own there is no other prayer possible, for our will is fully subject to his will. Remember how mighty men of God prayed and were heard. Elija prayed and it rained not, he prayed again and the rain came. Elija was a man like we are, but had an unshaken faith in the word of God. Upon these promises he asked and God answered. Let us ask in his will and he will answer.

JULY 28—"We know that we are of God, and the whole world lieth in wickedness." I John 5:19.

The children of God must often take the accusation that they are proud people and think themselves better than others. Is that true? They are not proud, but they are different. It is impossible that children of God and children of the wicked one are the same. There is and must be a sharp line dividing the one from the other. For the children of God it is very precious to be counted blessed as children of the most High. The world, however, in which we are is fast nearing its judgment. It is therefore the desire of the children of God that as many as possible be saved from death and be brought to life. Therefore let us work while yet it is day for the night cometh when man's work is done.

JULY 29—"And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we may know him that he is true, even his Son Jesus Christ." I John 5:20.

Ordinarily we are told that we have five senses. We can see, hear, taste, smell, and feel. The Christian has a sixth sense, the Spiritual sense of knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ that he is the Son of God. Children of this world do not see this. That is the reason why they do not understand the children of God. Natural man does not understand spiritual things. But we, let us not be proud of this knowledge, but thank God in word and service, He our Lord is most precious. Now let us make use of this grace and truly live in him.

JULY 30—"And that from child thou hast known the holy scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus." II Tim. 3:15.

It is indeed a good report Paul makes here of Timothy. Early in life he was taught the scriptures. This knowledge made him wise unto salvation through faith in Christ Jesus. Our fathers fully knew the importance of the knowledge of the scriptures, and they sacrificed much to make it available. Parents be not indifferent when you plan the training of your children for the future. Put first things first. Eternal welfare is above all other things. Salvation settles that question. Then give them the best secular training which is the tool to make them useful citizens living each passing day in service of love to the honor of the Saviour.

JULY 31—"Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. I John 3:2.

We now close our meditations for this month on what we believers know. With this last one we are forgetting all our task small and great. We are in spirit on that great day in the sky "when the saints go marching in." Gone forever are all earthly troubles, the dust from our feet is washed away, the deep wrinkles in our face caused by facing life's sorrows are faded out, the tears in our eyes are wiped away by the hand of our loving Saviour—Jesus. There we stand face to face before him and behold him in all his glory and beauty—and we are like him. I am amazed, I am a sinner, saved by grace—can it be! Amen.

GREAT FORTUNE

To be reconciled unto God, to possess God's favor and friendship, to be at peace with God, is the greatest fortune, bliss and happiness a human being can find on earth.

MENNONITES IN PARAGUAY

Vernon H. Schmidt

A few weeks ago I wrote an article about our Mennonite Central Committee work down here. Now, I thought it would be interesting to hear a little about the social, religious, and home life of the Mennonites here. Since we know there are various Mennonite churches and customs in the U. S., we can also understand that the same exists here for these people came from various parts of Russia—many being entire strangers to all the others when leaving Russia; but what I have to say will, I think, give a fair picture of conditions here, although I have not been here long enough to visit all places.

Church services where I attended most of the time started at 8:30 a. m. with many songs—some by the entire congregation and some by the choir alone. Usually there were two sermons in the morning with services ending soon after 10:00. After this the children had their Sunday School—many do not attend the church services, and the parents usually go home after church—not staying for Sunday School. But in another church I know of, the children's Sunday School is held first, early in the morning, and also there usually is only one sermon. Sunday evening is Bible Study with group discussion of a portion of scripture —mostly impromptu, not with special speakers as is often the case in our churches in U. S. Many of their songs are the same as we sing, only with the same meaning in the German language, and they also have the same tunes.

Saturday evening is a prayer meeting, both of thanksgiving, and praise, and of requests. Another church has this meeting on Wednesday evening instead.

The young folks have impromptu gatherings quite often—evenings as well as on Sunday afternoons. Usually one evening is devoted to singing or choir practice, and these young folks are excellent singers! Often on Sunday afternoons a large group gathers in some home, outside when the weather is nice, and spend the time in singing and in instrumental music, for a large percentage play a guitar, mandolin, or some other string instrument or harmonics. At their work in the fields, along the roads, or in the homes, these young people send forth almost continual melodies!

On Sunday, as during the week, most people keep the "siesta hour"—about two hours of sleep or rest after dinner. It is really too hot to do much then, anyway. But by about 3:00 on Sunday P. M. most people can be found gathered together, the young folks as mentioned before, the older ones spending the time more in conversation. Unlike America, the roads are not full of fleeting autos—there are none. Occasionally there is a wagon or a horseman, but the usual method of travel is to walk. This is not so odd though for most of the people live in villages—as many as thirty or thirty-five families close together with their farms scattered around the village. So unless one travels from village to village the walk is not long. But in these colonies even the villages are not many miles apart—the most of them in a relatively small community.

These people are genuinely friendly and hospitable. They have endured many hardships in Russia and in the journey here as well as in the years they have spent in trying to build their homes and community here in Paraguay. Thus, they readily sympathize with others and gladly share their homes and food with both friend and stranger who happens to contact them. But their provisions that they are able to share are usually scarce—what they can raise on their land, with the exception of very dry years, is usually plentiful. What has to be bought, such as sugar, salt, coffee, clothing, bedding, etc., is scarce, for markets are poor and transportation soon eats up most of the profits of the products sold; so income is scanty. This makes two needs obvious—better transportation to available markets, and some minor factories in which these people can convert some of the products into supplies that they must buy at present, or which can be sold more profitably than the present raw materials.

There are many cattle raised in our colonies, both for beef and for dairy; both butter and cheese are made for sale. Cotton, beans, peanuts (from which oil is extracted) and a few other crops are raised for markets. But with all of these the freight costs of shipping these to markets are so high that the net income is not very high. For a number of years the average family income per year has not been much over the equivalent of $100.00, from which must be paid the cost of the land, clothing, implements, and all eatables which can not be raised. Because of some plant disease or insect, wheat does not produce grain here, so all flour must be brought. All medical needs must be met from this income, also. And although the people are not actually going hungry, some deficiencies in food cause some types of sicknesses to be more common than might be the case otherwise.

For some reason there is more hired labor in the vicinity of the colony in East Paraguay, Friesland. This brings in more cash to the colony there for the Mennonite labor is in demand—they do more work than the natives. Also, this same colony has started a project of raising winter vegetables for shipment to Montevideo, Urugay, during the season when none are grown there. If this proves successful (the plants have just been planted for the first season's trial), this will make a substantial increase in the income for this colony. But no such conditions exist for the colonists in the Chaco.

There are both advantages and disadvantages to both colonies, for some products one colony is better than the other. The Chaco colony is drier (this year was exceptionally dry) and had dust storms, but it has other advantages. The Friesland colony, moreover, has some characteristic sicknesses that are not found in Fernheim, and it has the advantage of more agreeable weather—at least in the opinion of most people—and is a little nearer to markets. Friesland has some political disadvantages—fewer privileges that had first been granted to Fernheim, and more difficulties in dealing with the natives. For instance, in legal controversies very often the decision seems to be "The native is always right."

Building material is not much of a problem—wood for framework is available. Walls are of mud bricks which only takes time to make. Roof is of grass from the plains, to be had only for the cutting. Nails for the wood and lime for plastering are about the only items to be bought. Livestock needs no shelter or barn—it does not get too cold to be outside. Grass is available the year around, so no hay needs to be stored in barns. Only a house, a shed for a wagon, and a few implements, and a storeroom for grains and cotton harvested are the only buildings needed. In some places water is a problem. Almost anywhere water can be found, but often it is salty or otherwise unfit for drink. One interesting thing—wherever a certain tree, the Paratodo tree, is found, which is rather common in the Chaco, good water can always be found.

With regard to technical help our colonists are pretty well supplied, for they had excellent farmers, blacksmith, carpenters, millers, tinsmiths, watchmaker, shoemaker, musician, tailor, baker, banker, schoolteacher, merchant, mechanic—almost any profession except doctors! In that line they are unprovided for among themselves.

These people have had hardships and trials that would break the backs of most people—in Russia before they were permitted to leave, and in the journey here, and in starting their homes and communities here, and some of their families and relatives and friends that were not permitted to leave Russia have suffered even worse physical violence. But they prefer to forget the past and in live in the future, planning to live their lives as nearly as they can in the manner God intended. They are suffering the hardships of any pioneer group—founding homes in new, undeveloped countries. But also, they have the possibility of making in this new land a community which should stand out as a Christian community, founded on love, integrity, honesty, purity—for which the Mennonites stand.

In closing, I wish again to emphasize that these Mennonites are seriously trying to create homes and profitable enterprises in this land of difficulties, and have made good progress so far. The difficulties, though great, are not unconquerable, and eventually perseverance will win!

PEACE COMMITTEE NEWS

—Number of Men in Our C.P.S. Camps: The number of men in our Mennonite camps will be approximately 1,600 men by July 15. The number of men in our camps will possibly not exceed 1,600 to 1,700 men. This will be because of the fact that men will be moved out of the camps to detached service in hospital work, health projects, and agricultural work, thus keeping our camp population more constant.

—The Quota Per Member After August 1, 1942: This increased number of men, which also has meant an increase in the staff of workers in the administration of the camps, will mean a $2 per member quota for the six months after August 1. This will be possibly the maximum load we need to carry.

—Have You Appointed a Person to Handle Certificates and Stamps? We can not stress too much as a Peace Committee that each church appoint a person in the local church who will be responsible for the handling of the Peace Certificates and Stamps. It is very important that one person do this in each church and make the reports to the district representative of the proceeds as to how much was given for C.P.S. Camps and how much for relief. Send your money for C.P.S. Camps to L. J. Horsch, 529 East J. St., Ontario, California, and your relief money to P. H. Unruh, Goessel, Kansas, as heretofore.

NAMES AND ADDRESSES OF THE DISTRICT REPRESENTATIVES

There has been a slight change in the persons who handle the stamps and certificates in each district. They are now as follows:

Pacific District: Mr. J. C. Jantz, Odessa, Wash.
Northern District: Mr. Edwin P. Graber, Freeman, South Dakota.
Western District: Rev. Walter H. Dyck, 1408 N. 9th Street, Beatrice, Nebraska.
Middle District: Dr. C. Henry Smith, Bluffton, Ohio
Eastern District: Henry S. Detwiler, 228 Summit Street, Souderton, Pa.

SENIOR DEPARTMENT

No. 3 of Studies on the Choice of a Lifework
SERVING IN A FIELD OF NEED

Matt. 9:36-10:1; 14:13-16

I. Worship Service:

(1) Songs: "To the work, to the work," "When we walk with the Lord." (2) Reading of leading topic, prayer, and leader's remarks. (3) Dramatization: (choose one) "Garib"—14 characters at 15 cents; "Light Dawns"—6 women, 10 cents; "At the City Gates"—10 characters, 5 cents; "The Lost Sheep" 2 women, 3 cents. These may be ordered from Mrs. A. J. Neuenschwaneder, Quakertown, Pa., or from Mrs. A. E. Kreider, North Newton, Kansas.

II. Leader's Introduction:

Someone has said, "It is the business of the church to make Christians." We might also say, "It is the business of the church to produce missionaries." Missions have always had a fascination for some of the ablest and noblest men and women. Its insistant call has knocked at the heart doors of young people in the prime of their strength and youth. They, too, have felt something of the urgency of this work among those who need the gospel that Christ expressed when He said, "I must do the work of my Father— it is my meat to do my Father's will. . . . I must work while yet it is day." The need of the field with all its opportunities of ministering to the souls and the bodies of Christ's "other sheep" with its hazards and dangers, but also with its privileges and joys in serving is still calling and is being answered. Let the youth of today when deciding upon a lifework take a long look at the fields of foreign and home missions, at the deaconess work and at the ministry and be willing if the Lord is calling them to these fields of work to say, "Here am I, send me."

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

(1) Called to be an apostle, Gal. 1:1; (2) Filled with power for the work, Acts 2:1-8, 17, 18; (3) Courageous to work, Acts 4:1:21. (4) The touchstone of successful work, I Cor. 13:1-13. (5) Looking for the increase. 1 Cor. 3:1-9.

IV. For Discussion:

(1) What qualifications are necessary to make a missionary? (2) How much should Christians at home know about the mission fields?

V. Facts for Study:

It is a rather strange fact that missionary interest seems to run in families. Quite often, too, even as many as four children of the same family work in the mission field. Missionary giving also seems to run in families. Why is this so? Has some father or mother instilled love for mission work into the hearts of the children while they were still young and plastic? Has the home of such a family been open, perhaps almost a haven for visiting missionaries? What kind of a man is the minister of the church from which the missionaries come? Is he doing more to foster mission interest than the leaders of other churches? Why does a small group like the Moravians have so many missionaries? Should our church schools and colleges be more mission-minded? The so-called "hay-stack" group met for prayer and turned out some of the best mission workers. Andrew Carey, a poor, unlearnt cobbler hung up a map of the world in his shop and found out all he could about the needs of the "heathen" living in these parts, and became so vitally interested that he could not rest till he was sent as a missionary.

VI. Illustration:

A young Salvation Army lad, in a slum district in one of our cities, was set upon by a gang of hoodlums and so roughly handled that he became unconscious from his hurts, and when he regained consciousness he found himself in the hospital. "Did any of them come to Christ?" he questioned the doctor who dressed his wounds. "They were mad at the preaching, but some of them might have given in afterwards-"

It was this spirit that led Paul, manacled and in peril of his life, to beg the privileges of one last word for Christ to those who were "mad at his preaching." It is the spirit that leads the sons of martyred missionaries to take up their mantle and carry on their wark. It is the true spirit of Christian devotion which leads men in countless instances to ignore hardships and dangers and injuries, with an eye single to the work of evangelization which is their chief concern.

"Difficulties in the way do not signify that God does not want to walk in it."

UNDER THE STARS

Hymn: "Day is Dying in the West"

Call to Worship: The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handiwork. (Ps. 19:1)

Hymn: "O Worship the King"

Responsive Reading: Psalm 24

Prayer Hymn: "Fairest Lord Jesus"

Prayer Poem: "The Camel"

"The camel, at the close of day,
    Kneels down upon the sandy plain,
To have its burden lifted off
    And rest again.

"My soul, thou should'st also kneel
    When daylight draweth to a close,
And let thy master lift thy load
    And grant repose.

"The camel kneels at break of day
To have his guide replace the load,
Then rises up anew to take
The desert road.

"So, thou should'st kneel at morning's dawn,
That God may give thee daily care,
Assured that He no load too great
Will make thee bear."

HOW TO BECOME A CHRISTIAN HERO

I John 3:15-18

"A Summary Meeting"

We will finish with this evening's meeting a series of "hero" topics. This last meeting will largely be a summary of the others and a putting together of the many qualities described before.

Ambition—Seek the good in others, never be selfish in gain.

Preparation—Our choice of vocation requires much time to acquaint ourselves with the tasks we choose.

Faithfulness—"I would be true," is a safe motto in every undertaking.

Service to God—The highest and noblest work is one done in the name of the Master. Christian heroes have a way of doing all their work, even the smallest tasks, as a service to God.

The Question Bee

(1) Why is the busy person, the one who is sought first? (2) What should decide our choice of hero? (3) When is "hero-worship" wrong?

The Prayer List

We ask Thee God to forgive us our sins of omission. We ask Thee to use us to show the world the fact of divine love for all people. Lead us to know Christ better each day through the study of the Scriptures. Amen.

Something to Do

Make a list of the customary objections people give for not becoming a Christian.

List the reasons why you want to become a hero for Christ.

I Would be True

I would be true for there are those who trust me;
I would be pure, for there are those who care;
I would be strong, for there is much to suffer;
I would be brave, for there is much to dare.

EMMANUEL MENNONITE CHURCH

"And now Israel, what doth the Lord thy God require of thee? This is also our challenge. The answer is to fear the Lord, to walk in all his ways, to love and serve him. God expects this for our good.

On May 24 we had the privilege of witnessing the ordination of one of our young men, Brother Garmen Wedel, to the ministry. It was a solemn occasion. Rev. J. J. Ratzlaff from Newton led in the introduction and prayer. Rev. A. E. Kreider from Bethel College spoke on the duties and privileges of the minister in the field of service. Rev. W. C. Voth, our supply pastor, had charge of the ordination. A double octet rendered two numbers.

Since the illness and departure of our beloved pastor, Rev. G. A. Linscheid, the need for a standing minister grew more tense. Some time ago after looking to God in prayer and faith for guidance, a special meeting was called with the result that a unanimous vote was cast for Rev. W. C. Voth to be our pastor. We are glad that he has accepted the call. Together with our pastor we believe it to be the will of God. So arrangements were for an installation service which took place on June 7. Rev. W. F. Unruh was in charge. Rev. Garman Wedel led in the introduction and prayer. Then Rev. W. F. Unruh spoke on the dignity of the pastor and the church. Rev. P. H. Unruh from Gossel officiated in the installation. The pastor was reminded of his responsibility, while the congregation was brought face to face with its duties.

The following Sunday we were permitted to dedicate our new church for which we had hoped, worked, and prayed. The Lord gave us a beautiful day, although a shower came in the evening. It was a joyous day rich in blessing with the holy presence of God. We appreciated the presence of relatives and friends who came from quite a distance. We appreciated having with the following outside speakers, Dr. P. H. Richert, F. F. Wedel, who was represented by a splendid letter, Rev. P. H. Unruh, Rev. J. J. Ratzlaff, Mrs. G. A. Linscheid, Dr. C. E. Krehbiel, Rev. E. J. Neuenschwander, and Rev. A. J. Dyck. Rev. W. C. Voth gave the dedicatory sermon. Free noon and evening meals were served.

ABRAM; A PIONEER IN FAITH

Gen. 12:1-9, Heb. 11:8-12

Topic: ADVENTUROUS FAITH

In Genesis 11:10 to 25:10 we have the whole history of Abraham, the friend of God. It is interesting to note that he lived midway between Adam and Jesus. He is easily the most important and the most interesting person of his time. His faith was similar to Noah's in that it was strong and was expressed in a definite course of action on his part. It involved a long journey to a strange land and also a belief in God's promises, some of which were impossible of fulfillment, from a human viewpoint... "Abram believed God," and God accepted him and rewarded him.

Faith Responds to God's Call Gen. 12:1-9

Verse 1 seems to refer to a previous call which Abram had only partly obeyed. Gen. 15:7 indicates that this call had come to him while he was still in Ur of the Chaldees. The context indicates that a second call came to him while he was in Haran, and after the death of his father, Terah. Abram, now seventy-five years old, was commanded to make a new start in life, and in an altogether new land

God promised unusual blessings in return for Abram's faithful obedience. There were seven parts to the promises (vss. 2, 3, 7). "I will make of thee a great nation." Abram was given a natural and also a spiritual posterity. (2) "I will bless thee"—Abram was blessed with great temporal prosperity, and spiritually he became the "father of the faithful." (3) "Make thy name great"—Jews, Christians, and Mohammedons call him father. (4) "Thou shalt be a blessing" (cf. Gal. 3:13, 14). (5) "I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee"—a promise remarkably fulfilled in Jewish history. (6) "In thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Through the Jews, the Bible, and Christ, the Savior, were given to the world. (7) "Unto thy seed will I give this land." Not to Abram as an inheritance but unto his children, the Jews—is the land given—God's definite promise. Palestine began to prosper as soon as the Jews began to return to it.

Abram left Haran for good. He took all of his household and all of his possessions with him on the journey to Canaan, and there was no stopping on the way. He had his eye set on the goal, God's promised land. The direction one takes in life is everything. God appeared to Abram with a definite promise which strongly tested his faith. He responded by establishing a place and means of worship. He built the altar where God appeared to him. Again he moved farther on to the place afterward called Bethel. Here he pitched his tent and built an altar. Wherever he had a tent there God must have an altar. Do you have an altar in your house?

Faith Rewarded Heb. 11:8-12

Abram's faith was exceeding great. He was content to let God direct him to the land of His choosing. "The promised land was an emblem of the better country towards which his spirit with its new found faith was traveling." He was a sojourner in Canaan. He never owned any land there except the cave of Machphelha, which he bought as a family sepulcher. He dwelt in tents and moved here and there with his flocks. God took Abram into his confidence. He knew something of God's plans. He looked forward to a city, not an earthly, but a more permanent abode, an eternal city of God. Faith when linked with God's promise, can have a great result (vss. 11, 12). So great is the power of faith that from a single individual had sprung an innumerable posterity (Gen. 22:17). In the birth of Isaac Abram saw the beginning of the great nation which God had promised. His spiritual blessings are summed up in Gen. 15:6, "And he believed in the Lord, and He counted it to him for righteousness." Aside from Christ himself, no name has become greater than that of Abraham, in the history of mankind. The Hebrews have given to the world the knowledge of and the worship of the one true God.

Adventurous faith has courage to undertake things for God which involve risk from a human view-point. Some probably ridiculed Abram. He heard the call from God and "faith is sure of its destination." He was confident that God knew why He called him. Faith in God brings rich rewards still. It will grow in the normal Christian's life. It is necessary to satisfactory religious experience. It contributes to peace of mind and to bodily health. It leads to spiritual conquests.

How does God speak to us today? What has faith to do with our hearing?

Why is the family altar important today? Why is it so much omitted?

How does faith differ from belief?

IN MEMORIAM

CHRIS H. KLIEWER, Feb. 28, 1888, to June 17, 1942. Son of Henry and Maria Kliewer. Born on an Indian mission station at Cantonment, Oklahoma. At an early age become a member of Shelly, Oklahoma, Mennonite Church. Married Arpa Schmidt. Died at St. Rose Hospital, Great Bend, Kansas. Oldest daughter, Melba, preceeded him to the Great Beyond. I Believe In Eternal Security

By Neal C. Dirkse

Any provision of God's grace puts emphasis upon the co-operating effort of man. God cannot save a sinner unless he co-operates by repentance and faith. God cannot sanctify a believer unless he co-operates by consecration and faith, and He cannot keep the saint unless he co-operates by obedience and faith.

The present day teaching of eternal security places too much responsibility upon God and too little upon man. While it is all of grace, it is still as men co-operate with God that they receive the bounties of His blessings.

Peter definitely states the scriptural method of eternal security: "Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall" (II Peter 1:10).

Give Diligence

The word "diligence" means an active, assiduous application; to be forward to do. The easy, average professing Christianity of today has little in common with that to which Peter referred; and he was not found wanting in setting the example of his words either! Look at Peter at Pentecost; watch him as he rejoices at the privilege of imprisonment for preaching Christ; note him in his hour of martyrdom! That kind of diligence is bound to bend all of heaven's efforts in his direction. This kind of effort implies man's direct co-operation.

If Ye Do These Things

Once again Peter emphaises man's side of keeping eternally secure. The "things" to which he referred may be found throughout the first and second epistles. In verse three he declares that there must be an increase of "the knowledge of him." That does not come unless assiduous application is evidenced. Even Paul told the Ephesians—saints that they were—that his one prayer for them was that they might know Him and His love better. And, in writing to the Philippians, Paul stated that even he had only one consuming desire—"that I may know him."

Peter refers to something else that we must do in order to keep secure, and that is to appropriate the promises (II Peter 1:4). God has given these promises—every one of them with a human condition stated or implied—for the one purpose that we might "be partakers of the divine nature"—that we might become more and more mature in our Christ-conformity.

Then Peter gives us a course in spiritual mathematics—that of adding. Verses five to seven indicate the path that our greater knowledge of Him will take: adding virtue to faith, knowledge to virtue, temperance to knowledge, patience to temperance, godliness to patience, kindness to godliness, and divine love to brotherly kindness. To abound in this kind of Christlikeness and growth in grace, is to beget an assurance of Him that we shall remain eternally secure.

Ye Shall Never Fall

These are his exact words, and remember, it was the inspiration of the Holy Ghost that dictated those words: "Ye shall never fall." Eternal security? Yes, I believe in it, but on the basis that Peter tells us here. Complying with these conditions we can unhesitatingly quote all the promises: "For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord" (Rom. 8:38, 39). Also, "And I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand. My Father, which gave them me, is greater than all; and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand" (John 10:28, 29). The only folks who can find comfort in these promises are those who have been diligent and assiduous in the development of Christlike character. Peter himself said: "For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." That "so" makes the difference.

Perhaps Peter anticipated something of that kind of misappropriated and misapplied bungling of scripture evidenced by our current teachings on eternal security, and therefore made one parting statement: "...you always in remembrance of these things." That is, do not forget, but bear in mind, even after I am dead and gone, that there is only one way to be eternally secure in the grace of God, and that is by the means herein given (note II Peter 1:12, 15).

Man's diligence will bring about God's faithfulness. It is ours to be more concerned with the human side of the promise, and less with the divine side; for there is far less possibility of failure on the divine side than on the human side.

TEMPER

When I have lost my temper
I have lost my reason too.
I'm never proud of anything
Which angrily I do.
When I have talked in anger
And my cheeks were flaming red
I have always uttered something
Which I wish I had not said.
In anger I have never Done a kindly deed or wise,
But many things for which I felt
I should apologize.
In looking back across my life,
And all I've lost or made,
I can't recall a single time
When fury ever paid.
So I struggle to be patient,
For I've reached a wiser age;
I do not want to do a thing
Or speak a word in rage.
I have learned by sad experience
That when my temper flies
I never do a worthy deed,
A decent deed or wise.

BEATITUDES FOR PASTORS

Blessed is the pastor who is not swayed by the gossip of the weekday to the extent that he allows it to enter into his Sunday message. He shall have a message from God.

Blessed is the pastor who is not offended when his predecessor is highly spoken of, and who keeps his tongue from discrediting things about him. He shall be liked by all.

Blessed is the pastor who does not become familiar with the opposite sex. He shall continue long in God's work.

Blessed is the pastor whose home is under control, and whose mate conducts herself, dresses and speaks properly. He shall have blessings untold.

Blessed is the pastor who does not blame everyone else for his mistakes and failures. He will be a great leader.

Blessed is the pastor who is not neglectful of himself, his family, or the building in which he preaches. He shall be respected by all.

Blessed is the pastor who has a vision; who with his eyes open grasps every opportunity afforded for the advancement of the kingdom of God. He shall be desired by all people.

Blessed is the pastor who is sanctified wholly. He shall be happy. —O. N. Robinson.

—Recently all men in C.P.S. camps were asked to vote on whether or not they would like to serve in government operated camps. A writer in the Deep River Echoes, Henry, Illinois, writes, "Though we do not know the results of the voting (the votes were sent direct to Washington) it is certain that the men here voted almost unanimously against serving in government operated camps. We voted against government camps because men in these camps would most likely be put to work on 'defense' projects; the directors of the camps would not be c.o's and hence not very sympathetic; asking Congress now for funds might cause such an uproar that all C.P.S might be eliminated. Moreover, we feel that the fact that c.o's are now paying for the C.P.S. program is the most important evidence the public has of our sincerity; also we are interested in detached service which would not be available in government camps." Speaking of the forest fire fighting course introduced by the Soil Conservation Service at this camp, the paper says, "The course is a part of the educational program of all camps doing soil conservation service and is a required educational feature."

Certainly this is a splendid way of sharing the burden and keeping the cost of operation of the camps at the lowest possible figure. . . .' Dr. Langenwalter has sent word that he is enjoying his period of rest and relaxation very much. He says, '. . . that already the cool climate is giving him new strength and vitality. His address at the present time is c-o Whitworth College, Spokane, Washington.' "

—Bulletin, Zion Mennonite Church, Donnellson, Iowa: Dr. J. E. Hartzler will speak at the union evening service on July 26. . . . "It is a recognized fact that the summer season brings with it its own peculiar temptations. The rigorous duties of life and the heat of the summer wear down the strength of even the strongest. Saturday night is a welcome release. Sunday morning comes clear and warm and brings an irresistable desire for a little more 'folding of the hands to sleep.' This is not sinful if one does not thereby neglect the worship of God."

—Whispering Pines, Marietta, Ohio, C.P.S. —Bulletin, Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, Pa.: This church has Bible study for children and adults on summer Sunday evenings. Enough money has been collected for the purchase of the new Mennonite Hymnaries. Rev. E. J. Bohn, the pastor, says, "This is the time of the year when retreats for young people all over the United States are getting under way. They furnish a time of fine, clean recreation and spiritual inspiration to our young people that is very helpful." The same bulletin reports that "On May 26, the day following commencement, twenty-eight women from the First Mennonite and Defenseless Mennonite churches of Bluffton and the Grace and St. John Mennonite churches of Pandora gave Ropp Hall, the women's dormitory (Bluffton College) a thorough cleaning. This was a great help to the college. Women from the community also helped in seeding cherries early in June. More than 250 quarts of cherries which were secured from the college orchard were canned in this way. Some of the Mennonite churches in the community of Bluffton have also accepted barrels of empty cans from the college which they expect to fill during the summer and donate to the college."

—"There are still a good many local communities, industrial plants, etc., that are willing to exempt from pressure pacifists who quietly point out that they are contributing to Civilian Public Service, local hospitals, social agencies, etc. It should be borne in mind that legally the purchase of war bonds is entirely voluntary." —Fellowship

—Henry Morgenthau Jr. recently wrote, "We understand that the groups you represent (National Service Board) are making contributions to the support of the Civilian Public Service camps for conscientious objectors authorized by the Congress and the Selective Service System which would otherwise have been a charge on the Treasury of the United States . . . . We are all seeking the same objectives and are glad that our American democracy is able to recognize the conscientious convictions of a minority of our citizens."—The American Friend. This paper goes on to say, "Friends to whom the use of their money is as much a matter of conscience as the use of their hands, should act immediately . . . so that this opportunity (Civilian Bonds) now opening to us as Friends is met with an enthusiasm which clearly indicates that we are worthy of the rights granted to us as a very small minority in American life."

—From May 29 to June 1 sixteen girls were admitted to the school of nursing of the Bethel Deaconess Home and Hospital, Newton, Kansas. All but one seem to be connected with some branch of the Mennonite Church. The June issue of In the Service of the King also states, "During the last twelve months period, there were 107,875 meals served from our kitchen. These are the amounts of some of the food used during this time: 20,000 quarts of milk; 12,000 pounds of meat; 200 bushels of potatoes; 1,200 pounds of coffee; 1,600 pounds of butter; 5,000 pounds of sugar; 40,000 eggs."

—Lorraine Avenue Mennonite Church, Wichita, Kansas: The choir, with Sam Barkman as director and Mrs. Ed. Schmidt as accompanist, worked very hard to prepare an inspiring program of sacred music. This was rendered on July 12. Numbers from the Mennonite Hymnary which were sung were: "Now, on Land and Sea Descending," "Now Thank We All Our God," and "Ich bete an die Macht der Liebe." Our church is enjoying a very active summer with many enriching services. On June 7 Brother Ted Claassen told of his experiences as relief worker in Europe. On June 11 the Ladies' Friendship Circle had its annual family picnic supper at the home of John Mullers. There was a large attendance. On the following evening we had an ice cream social and a program by the Pioneer Quartet intead of the monthly fellowship supper. Children's Day was observed with a program and a basket dinner. In the evening the K.M.B. Men's Quartet from Hillsboro gave us a program. On June 28 Miss Sarah Buller spoke three times and showed pictures of her mission work in Africa. On the evening of July 19 Mr. Cecil Hinshaw of Friends University spoke to us. —Corr.

IS THE GENERAL CONFERENCE LOSING ITS PEACE TESTIMONY?

By C. Henry Smith

I was very much interested in a recent statement made by Winfield Fretz in The Mennonite to the effect that it is much easier to preserve the fundamental and distinctive principles of the Mennonite church, especially her peace doctrines, in the country than in the city.

This of course is largely true, and the reasons are evident. The social pressure on the farmer is much less insistent and pressing than on the professional and business man in the city, or upon the school teacher and those whose livelihood depends more or less on the favor of the public. The farmer's prices are not determined by his religious views; and the growth of his crops is not dependent on the good will of his non-Mennonite neighbors. It is easier for him to follow his conscience. A pastor from a village church in an industrial center recently wrote, "Mennonites simply won't stay Mennonites in cities and industrial centers."

But this does not tell the whole story. Not only the city churches but also a number of purely rural congregations, too, in the General Conference are woefully negligent and indifferent to the traditional peace doctrines of the Mennonite church as a whole. The recent report sent out with The Mennonite and the Bundesbote indicates a disappointing situation in many of our congregations, both city and rural. Judging from this report a number of congregations evidently have paid practically nothing toward the support of the Civilian Public Service camps, and have few if any conscientious objectors in camp. Nearly all are far behind their quotas suggested by the Mennonite Central Committee.

Naturally we ask ourselves, why this situation? The reasons are various. In some cases the fault lies with the ministers, ministers who themselves are lukewarm toward this item in their Mennonite faith, and consequently not anxious in stressing it among their members. The Mennonite ministry unfortunately is not a united ministry. Some of the ministers received their training in schools and seminaries that are indifferent to, if not actually antagonistic toward the peace doctrines of the Mennonite church, with the result that products of such schools have already been largely weaned away from their earlier faith. The great need of the Mennonite church today is a training school for its ministry which includes in its curriculum the whole gospel; which holds that belief in non-resistance is as essential a part of the teaching of Jesus as any other fundamental doctrine, and as essential to salvation! It must be a doctrine, not only a desirable practise. For some years now we have played around with the idea of a Mennonite seminary but as yet have had neither the foresight nor the courage to take the simple step necessary for its establishment. In the meantime, borrowing a well known classical adage, "While Nero fiddles, Rome burns."

The minister is not always to blame. In many cases the laity is at fault. Most ministers would be glad to stress this article of faith if they had the proper support from their membership; and many ministers are earnestly doing so against considerable pressure from certain sections of their membership. In many congregations there is often a sizable group, more or less influential, which for some reason or another, is lukewarm if not actually aggressively antagonistic toward the peace testimony, and prefers to have their minister remain silent on the question.

The doctrine of non-resistance, like the doctrine of the atonement, or the Virgin birth, is acquired and preserved through the process of teaching, not by intuition. Jesus spent most of his three years of ministry in teaching. When I joined the church as a boy many years ago I had to familiarize myself with the confession of faith as taught by the Mennonite church, including the article on non-resistance, with the result that when I became a member I knew what the Mennonite church taught and believed, I knew what I was joining.

This is no longer the case today. Evangelists, missionaries, and ministers in their evangelistic efforts are too often inclined to stress only a few of the fundamentals of salvation, and are prone to leave such distinctive Mennonite doctrines, which of course are also strictly scriptural, as non-resistance and opposition to the oath, to chance or take them for granted as of little consequence. The result is that young people entering the church know nothing about the fundamentals of Mennonitism. Likewise in accepting members by letter from other denominations, to whom our traditional beliefs are unknown, no mention is made at the time of these teachngs. Contrary to a widely held view in certain circles, conversion has an intellectual content. It involves the head as well as the heart. God has given us both and He expects ue to use both. The convert must not only be willing to do the Will of God, he must know what that Will is, and that is a matter of the intellect. He must be taught. No one knows this better than the missionary.

As a result of this neglect there is growing up within many of our congregations, both among our young people and new acquisitions from other churches, groups of church members who are utter strangers to the distinctive doctrines of Mennonitism. In some sections of the General Conference, and especially east of the Mississippi River, the peace doctrine, unfortunately, judging from present trends, seems to be definitely on the way out. This is nothing less than tragic, especially just now for the first time in Mennonite history the long and costly struggle for religious freedom on this matter has finally been won; when for the first time our own government has specifically recognized the rights of religious conscience in the recent generous Selective Service Act, and has given the conscientious objector a legal status, making it possible for him now to be loyal to both his God and his government at the same time. And just now, too, when many of the larger Christian denominations are beginning to see the light and are becoming more and more interested in the peace cause as an essential part of the Christian faith; and seemingly are willing to take up the torch from the hands of the Mennonites who show signs of weariness after a faithful record of conscientious regard for the sacredness of human life stretching through four hundred years of suffering and martyrdom.

What we need is more teaching in the home, the Sunday School, from the pulpit, through the press, and in the college. Our church papers and colleges have done a better job thus far in this task than our other educational agencies.

Are the following suggestions worthy of consideration?

1. The great need of the Mennonite church is a training school for the ministry where the whole gospel is taught, including the gospel of peace.

2. At least two issues each year of the Sunday School Quarterly should be devoted to a peace lesson.

3. Young people joining the church should be taught the fundamental principles of the Mennonite church.

4. Members admitted by letter from other churches should be instructed in the distinctive teachings of the Mennonite church before admission.

5. There should be more teaching of the peace doctrine and other fundamental Christian principles, as taught by the Mennonite church, from the pulpit.

6. Classes among our young people for the study of Mennonite history should be encouraged. The Mennonite Central Committee has prepared an excellent series of manuals to be used in the Civilian Public Service camps. These could be used equally well in the home churches. If the Mennonite church is worth preserving, it is also worth knowing.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION TO MENNONITES

There are many of our Mennonite people who cannot consistently purchase war bonds because of their religious convictions concerning war. An alternative bond issue has now been approved in an exchange of letters between Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of the Treasurer, and the National Service Board for Religious Objectors.

The most feasible plan to secure subscriptions and the purchase of bonds has been found to use a trust company as fiscal agent for the Civilian Bond Committee. The Provident Trust Company of Philadelphia has agreed to act as agent of the company to accept deposits from persons desiring to purchase such bonds. The company will send a postal receipt for funds deposited, purchase bonds in the amount of the deposit at the next regular issue of the Treasurery, and then mail the bonds to the subscriber.

Persons desiring to buy these bonds will be charged a flat rate fee of $1.50 for each deposit. For example, if a subscription is for a $50.00 bond the subscriber will send $51.50 to the Civilian Bond Committee, care of the Provident Trust Company, 17th and Chestnut Streets, Philadelphia, Pa. They will then receive a receipt, and the bond will be mailed as soon as it is available, which may be from thirty to sixty days from the date of forwarding the deposit to the trust company.

Bonds will be available in denominations of $50, $100, $500, and $1000. Bonds will be registered in the name of the purchaser and interest will be mailed to each individual directly by the Government. Interest rate will vary in line with the prevailing rate at the time of issue, and the maturity date of the bonds may vary with each issue.

The Civilian Bond Committee, on which there will be at least one Mennonite, one Friend, and one Brethren, in conjunction with the officials of the provident Trust Company, will attempt to purchase bonds which will be as close in terms of maturity and interest as possible.

Further details of the mechanics of the plan, giving a fuller explanation, have been sent out to each pastor.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

SAFE AT HOME

Three of our missionaries from India have arrived safely in New York on July 13th, namely Dr. and Mrs. H. R. Bauman and children, sister Augusta Schmidt, and with them came also sister Clara Kuehney, who served formerly also in our mission.

We thank the Lord for the protection on the way. The S. S. "Brazil," on which they came, will very likely be the last ship on which missionaries can come home for a long while.

Our missionaries came, because their time for furlough had come. —P. H. Richert, Secr.

GOOD PROGRESS IN INDIA

By P. W. Penner

Looking forward to the work and the time in which we live, one needs the assurance of a firm foundation reliable under all conditions. This we know is Jesus Christ. The following lines make up the report for the first quarter of Champa and Mauhadei.

The last quarter of 1941 found us busy with the after-monsoon activities. Early in October the annual Missionary Conference met in Champa. Various searching problems kept us seeking the Spirit's guidance. Almost immediately thereafter Mrs. Penner with the group of Bible women camped over a week in Baraduar some ten miles east and close to the railroad. From there she moved ten miles south to the village Bominidi for November and December. For years both places have frequently been served with the gospel. They have opened the doors wide for messengers. The people came to the camps willingly for interviews. The latter village has a two-days bazaar every week. This draws very many people from near and far. The Champa mission hospital sends some of its staff to do medical and evangelistic work. This year especially many came to the camp. A friendly shopkeeper furnished a gas lamp free of charge for the large evening gospel meetings. It was astonishing to see how the listeners tarried for hours to take in the gospel truths presented so emphatically by the Indian workers. One Sunday morning a man came to be baptized even though the people in his village ten miles away watched diligently to keep him from doing so. He had slipped away quietly. He re-affirmed his faith in Jesus Christ before a large audience and was baptized. His wife had been left behind so as not to arouse suspicion. She also came some weeks later. The couple went back to the village, faced the mad crowd, and now live and work there for their livlihood. To bear the fierce onslaughts requires a staunch faith in the Lord!

Mrs. Penner governed both camps efficiently. In the office at home I was busy adjusting the secretary-treasurer work and transferring the Bethesda Home Superintendency to Brother Waltner. Furthermore, I had to assume responsibility for the Mauhadei station and its area, because the Isaacs were planning on going to America. No family was left to be stationed at Mauhadei which is twenty-five miles from Champa.

After Christmas the missionaries and a large number (200) of Indian Christians assembled in Mauhadei for a retreat in commemoration of the fortieth anniversary of the mission. This lasted until January 4. The retreat produced sanctifying effects for weeks and months. It had farreaching results.

In the cool months ahead we lined up for district work. We took charge of Mauhadei, the Waltners of the Leper Home with the Untainted Children Boardings, and the Champa evangelistic work was delegated to Dr. Bauman. The balance of the Champa work was still ours, but we could leave for the time being. We turned to Mauhadei. The Bible School students, under the supervision of Sister M. R. Burkhalter, came to our assistance by going with the Mauhadei workers to four different strategic villages. The work radiated from these.

Soon inquiries came to the workers in the various camps. A totally illiterate couple requested baptism. An appointed day was set. Then before a large audience, after they had been examined as to the principles of faith, they re-affirmed their faith with a loud voice. Witnesses from their own and other villages listened quietly. This was a solemn occasion. The Spirit of God took complete possession of these new plants in the vineyard of the Lord!

While travelling to camp in January I fell with my bicycle into an eight-foot deep ditch. The Lord kept me from falling on my head. I landed on my feet and buttock on the hard sand bank below. The bicycle fell on top of me. The handlebar hit the right arm pit and fractured the two upper ribs. This occurred a half mile north of the Mauhadei bungalow. Being notified by telephone Dr. Bauman and Brother Waltner came in the evening and took me by car to the Champa Hospital, where under the clever care of Sister Eva Pauls I recuperated hastily. In nineteen days I left the hospital, and ten days later I could resume full responsibilities. The Lord displayed wonderful grace.

Forty miles east of Champa, in the Mauhadei area, touring continued until late March when unprecedented early heat drove us in. Tent-life became almost unbearable. Mrs. Penner, with the exception of two and one half days spent at my bedside and a few days spent in attending the Jagdishphur Indian Church Conference, remained out in the district uninterrupted. During this time the camp was at three different places. Some fifty villages were worked. From these came eighty inquirers who were instructed on their faith. All of these live among their relatives, neighbors, religious teachers, etc., who continually try to frustrate their new conceptions. They are actually surrounded by Satan's helpers. What hard toil to begin with. The Spirit must draw and convict them, otherwise no progress would be detectable. The saints must be teachers and leaders to break the path. O, how we are in need of more faithfulness and also of a larger band of truly sanctified workers who would be continually engaged in follow-up work. The latter is absolutely necessary.

The southeastern part of the Mauhadei area is experiencing an awakening. It seems that the formation of small village churches is imminent. One day one entire village came out with the desire to become Christians. Where shall the leader be found to shepherd such a flock? Staunch Christians, especially leaders, are needed the world over. The words of the Master ring out clear and true, "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that He will send forth laborers into His harvest!" Earnest prayer for this is absolutely urgent.

To follow up these enlightening and uplifting experiences we resorted to Mauhadei. There throughout Passion Week we conducted a half-hour prayer meeting every morning at 5:45 in the open. Then each one went to his work of the day. At 5 p.m. all assembled in the church for another service. Immediately after the services each evening all went through the nearby village to sing evangelistic songs and to give short addresses. This took about one half hour. On Good Friday we baptized a couple and took then into the church. On that afternoon many attended the communion service. The nearness of the Lord could be felt perceptibly. Another young man was baptized on Easter morning. We also had children blessing. Several members of other churches were received by letter. In spite of hindrances of various kinds, the Church pushes ahead into the different villages and areas. We covet more prayers.

(Unless deterred by additional postage etc., could all mission workers and others double-space the typewritten reports which are submitted for publication. The lino-typist and the proof-reader can do much better and faster work on double-spaced material. —Editor)

"OUR HERITAGE"

By H. D. Burkholder

Text: "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to His abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptable, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you." (I Pet. 1:3, 4)

Introduction

Through this article it is the writer's desire to bring before you the heritage which is ours through our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Too often, we as born again children of God, fail to fathom the length, breadth, height and depth of that heritage.

The Apostle Peter, in touching on this precious subject, brings three thoughts before us: 1. The character of our heritage. 2. The attributes of that heritage and 3. Our title to the heritage.

I. The Character of our heritage

In speaking of its character we might say it is our completed salvation in Christ; that time when we who have enjoyed the blessings of salvation in this life are finally gathered home into the presence of the Lord; or we could speak of it as the Old Testament prophets did, as the City of God; a vision of which made them satisfied to dwell merely in tents; or we might speak of this heritage as being heaven itself. Although all the above mentioned terms give us some conception of our heritage, yet they do not go far enough, for this heritage includes God Himself. That is what Paul meant when he said, "If children, then heirs, heirs of God, etc. Yes, our heritage is God Himself. Listen to the word of the Lord to Aaron the Priest, "Thou shalt have no inheritance in their land, neither shalt thou have any part among them. I am thy part, and thy inheritance." (Num. 18:20) The Psalmist had a vision of that same truth for he tells us in Ps. 16:56, "The Lord is the portion of mine inheritance and of my cup: Thou maintainest my lot. The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places: yea I have a goodly heritage." Also in Ps. 73:25 he cried out, "Whom have I in heaven but Thee?" Our heritage is not merely the golden harps. Not the streets of gold. Not rest from pain and sorrow. For with all these, apart from God, we would at last turn away dissatisfied. To know Him, to live in His fullness, to see His glory, and to be changed into His likeness—ALL THIS IS THE INHERITANCE OF THE SAINTS IN LIGHT.

Beloved, let us be up and doing. Let us study the chart of God's Word and inquire into OUR HERITAGE. In Rom. 8:17 we read that we are "heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ." Knowing therefore that the "Cattle on a thousand hills are

By J. Winfield Fretz

INFERIORITY COMPLEXES

Several years ago one heard a great deal about inferiority and superiority complexes. While the terms are not as frequently used today I suppose there is just as much suffering from one or the other complex as ever. Communities suffer from these feelings of superiority and inferiority just as individuals do. For some reason or other rural communities have always suffered an inferiority complex when compared with their urban cousin communities, the cities. Rural people have allowed themselves to think that what city people did and said was "right." They have looked to city people to establish the patterns, to set the styles, to determine what is good and bad taste and to declare what was right and proper on all occasions. Rural people have been called "hayseed," "yokel," and "rube," by their city cousins and have accepted it as though there might actually be justification for it. They have done this so long that they have come to believe all of a nation's culture is found in the cities. All of these things have added to a general sense of inferiority feeling on the part of rural communities in contrast with the superiority attitude of urban communities.

Mennonite Inferiority

Many Mennonites suffer from a double feeling of inferiority. They feel inferior for being rural and on top of that they feel inferior for being Mennonites. Not only does one find Mennonites feeling inwardly inferior to city people and non-Mennonites, but one quite frequently finds them openly ashamed of being Mennonites. This is especially true of young people who crave popularity above everything else. I have been in the company of those who tried to hide their religious identity but when that was no longer possible or expedient they quickly proceeded to explain that while they were Mennonites they did not belong to that peculiar branch which wore plain clothes and beards and didn't believe in the modern way of life, but that the branch of Mennonites to which they belonged was just like most other Protestant Church members in the way they believed, dressed and acted.

Any person giving such a testimony for the Mennonite Church has lost the essential meaning of Christianity. He has forgotten the Pauline admonition to be "not conformed to this world, but to be transformed by the renewing of your minds, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable, and perfect will of God." No wonder such a person has a feeling of shame and inferiority about the Mennonite Church. He is not able to give a reason for the faith that is in him. He is ashamed because he is ignorant of the heritage that is his. If he knew the riches of his faith he could say with the Psalmist, "Yea, I have a goodly heritage."

Our brothers in the church who live and dress more simply than we do are not to be ridiculed, scoffed at or apologized for, but rather they are to be thanked for preserving the valuable principles of our faith which we might have allowed to be choked out because of our desire to be popular and respectable.

The principles of religious toleration, of separation of church and state, of adult baptism, and of congregational or democratic church government are all a part of our heritage as Mennonites. But they are not ours alone, they are our contribution to America. Today they are widely adopted and loudly acclaimed by every American citizen. But these principles were bought with a price. Our forefathers, like their Master, bled and suffered and died for them. They were tortured and killed by people who did not understand but they in turn did no man violence. Inferiority feeling? No Mennonite will have it when he knows the facts.

Inspiring Song Festival

July 5 was a very outstanding day for the Mennonite churches in the Lustre, Volt, and Larslen communities, as they met in the Bruderthaler church at Lustre for their annual song festival. It is not merely an annual affair, or habit, or ceremony. We look forward to it as a day of real spiritual blessing and an uplift in our Christian life.

The church was filled with an audience which knows where to go to hear good gospel singing. Some came from as far as one hundred miles. Business men from various towns came to enjoy it.

We had the privilege of having with us a quartet from the Los Angeles Bible Institute. They added much to make the day a blessing. Two outside speakers gave fifteen-minute messages. Rev. J. R. Barkman, general manager of the Grace Children's Home, Henderson, Nebraska, and field superintendent of the Oklahoma Bible Academy, spoke on the eighth verse of I Cor. 13. Then Rev. Pankratz, an M. B. Conference missionary from India, brought a message on the words of the Psalmist, "I will praise the Lord with my whole heart."

Choirs, men's choruses, and quartets from the various churches sang. There were duets and ladies' choruses, and then the united choirs sang. Every number carried a gospel message. The singers were not concerned about bringing high classical singing as we find in many places, but rather they sought to bring songs which had a message of salvation in them. Certainly, if there were any unsaved present they heard the way of salvation in song.

Rev. A. A. Dick, minister of the M. B. Church at

His," and that "the silver and the gold are His," are we not exceedingly rich? Thank God for the Lord Jesus Christ who 'though He was rich, became poor, that we through His poverty might be made rich." Ours is a great and rich heritage. We are living on a large estate. Let us not become discouraged if our earthly heritage withers and fades. Let us continue trusting the Lord, knowing that there is an inheritance "reserved in heaven for you." The story is told of a young student in Barcelona, Spain, who while doing some research work in the University library, came across a yellow slip of paper within its aged pages. It was found to contain the "will" of the author, and was made out to the first one who would be interested enough in his book to read it. The Spanish courts found the will legal, and the student fell heir to $250,000. Perhaps some of us have an ancient dust covered book in our home, bearing the title "HOLY BIBLE." You may not realize it, but by reading and simply believing its message, you will fall heir to more than $250,000.

II. The Attributes of Our Heritage

Peter speaks of three things; "it is incorruptable, undefiled, and fadeth not away."

(1) INCORRUPTABLE, that is, it will not decay and waste away, as that which we inherit in this world. It is imperishable and will endure forever. Our earthly heritage soon slips from our grasp, but over there it will be eternal.

(2) UNDEFILED, therefore pure. It cannot be obtained by dishonesty, nor will it be held by fraud, neither will it corrupt the soul. All this is often true with earthly inheritances, but not so with OUR HERITAGE in Christ. It is only the pure in heart who shall see God. It is also true that only the pure in heart— made pure by the blood of Christ—shall have any part in this pure, undefiled heritage.

(3) UNFADING, therefore maintaining perpetual brilliance and splendor. The crown of glory will never tarnish though worn for millions of years. The golden streets will not lose their lustre. Thank God for an UNFADING, non-shrinking heritage. Four Broadway girls were recently disappointed over a million dollar inheritance left them by a friend. The reason for disappointment came when the lawyer finally informed them that with all expenses deducted it might amount to $8,000. What a difference between $8,000 and $1,000,000. The lawyer could not explain why the inheritance had shrunk so much (they usually can't). What a contrast this shrinking

By Clyde H. Dirks, Hutchinson, Kansas

AUGUST 1—"Ye are complete in Him." Col. 2:10.

A complete Christ makes His people complete. In Him we find the whole fulness of God brought within our reach. When we are in Him we need not resort elsewhere to supply our spiritual needs. Phil. 4:19. This completeness includes all that is required for man's personal salvation. In Him our sin was nailed to the Cross. Suppose I am riding in a train from Chicago to Hutchinson. By virtue of my identification with that train I am not only in it, but I am in possession and enjoyment of its comfort, heat, restfulness, strength, safety, speed and its name. Finally its destination is mine. So to be in Christ, in the eyes of God, all that Christ is has been made over to me because I am in Him. In Him we have life. I John 5:11. In Him we are chosen. Eph. 1:4. "In Him we live, move, and have our being." Jesus said, "I in you and ye in Me."

AUGUST 2—"Pray without Ceasing." I Thess. 5:17.

To pray is the greatest thing we can do; and to do it well, there must be calmness, time, and deliberation. Neglect prayer and you are like a building in which all the necessary wiring has been done; the fittings are in place; the switches are in order, but there is no light, no heat, no power. Prayer connects your life to God who is the source of all power. It would be as reasonable for a blind man to say there was no rainbow, or a deaf man to say there was no thunder, or a man with no sense of smell to say there was no fragrance, as for a Christian to say there is no power in prayer. "Prayer" as an old Scotch lady said, "is keeping the gates open." The church was born in a prayer meeting and her life is sustained only in that atmosphere. The early saints declared that they would give themselves to "prayer, and to the ministry of the word." Have we reversed that order? We have emphasized activity and have crippled our influence by lack of prayer.

"Tell Him about your heartache, Tell Him your longings, too;
Tell Him your baffled purpose, When you scarcely know what to do,
Then, leaving all your weakness with the one, divinely strong,
Forget that you had a burden, And carry away a Song."

AUGUST 3—"Be filled with the Spirit." Eph. 5:18.

A number of times I have stood upon the seashore when the tide has been out. I have walked in caves; I have examined the inlets and indentations in the rocky shore; I have seen little individual water holes left among the rocks when the water was high. It gives one the impression of something that has been. But wait upon that seashore until the tide rolls in majestically. The whole shore is completely submerged. It has filled every inlet and indentation. The individual pools have now become a part of the great ocean. That is a picture of what God will do for you if you allow Him. He will fill every void. He will turn your inability to ability, your incapacity to capacity, your weakness into strength. The command of the text implies the possibilitiy of having the spirit and not be filled with the spirit. A tree in winter has life, but in the springtime it is filled with life. A man languishing on a bed in the hospital has life, but a man that is well and at work is filled with life. May our prayer be—

Spirit of the living God, fall afresh on me
Melt me, mold me, fill me, use me—
Spirit of the living God, fall afresh on Me.

AUGUST 4—"By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one for another." John 13:35.

Love, according to our Lord, is the mark by which we are known as Christians among men. When Christians live in love, the world will be obliged to confess that Christianity is genuine, and from above. Real Christianity must be rooted and grounded in brotherly love, for "He that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen." Chrysostom said, "Have only one enemy, the devil, and with him never be reconciled, but with thy brother never fall out." Love is not a thing manufactured; it is a fruit. It is not born of certain works; it springs out of certain relationships. It does not come from doing something; it comes from living with Somebody. "Love is of God because God is love." A successful worker in the slums was asked the secret of winning so many souls to Christ and she said, "Oh, it's love. You let it come in feel it." Napoleon said, "I win only battles; others win the hearts of men." Nothing wins like love.

AUGUST 5—"Not everyone that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." Matt. 7:21.

When the Christian church at Constantinople was captured by the hosts of Islam the great mosiac figure of Christ was blotted out with paint, but as the years went by the paint wore away, and the calm face of Christ once more looked down upon those bowed in worship. That is the burden of praying Christians today, that Christ whose image has largely been blotted out by war and hate, greed and pleasure, selfishness and sin, may once again be seen. This is a scientific age. Few are interested in pure science. They want practical science. They want that which comes out of the laboratory and demonstrates itself in application to life. The world is not interested in what people say, but do. It wants something it can point to, like Edison pointed to his invention, and say "It works."

If the world is skeptical about Christianity, it is because it has not witnessed enough Christian living. Many have treated their Christianity like produce at a fair, merely as a thing to be exhibited. Life to them has been like an empty envelope, properly addressed and correctly stamped but carrying no message on the inside. We sometimes pray "Lord use me." Should we not rather pray, "Lord make me usable?" By emptying, cleansing, humbling, filling.

It is not what we take, But what we give,
Not as we say, but as we live.

AUGUST 6—"Ye are witnesses of these things." Luke 24:48.

A witness is one who has personal knowledge of a thing, or one who appears as an evidence. Thus a Christian should himself be an evidence of that which he proclaims. Referring to the Christian life many do not like the word confession for it suggests wrong doing. We confess an error, or a fault. A crimnal is induced to make a confession. The word profession smacks of pretense. It sounds hollow and superficial. But the word witness is suggestive. The Hebrew poet said in a Psalm, "Let the redeemed of the Lord say so." John the Baptist came "to give testimony to the light." Jesus said, "We speak that which we do know and testify to that which we have seen." John 3:11. John spoke of "that which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon and our hands have handled of the word of life. In each case it was a personal experience. Life like a tree, must grow both ways. Godward in our devotional life. Manward in our service. He serves Christ best who sits at His feet and then goes out to witness and becomes "a living echo" of His voice. We are eager to introduce our friends. Why not introduce Christ, the best Friend of all?"

AUGUST 7—"Think on these things." Phil. 4:8.

The secret of weakness in our lives, more times than we believe, is in those unhallowed pictures of the imagination which we permit ourselves to dwell upon. Our relationships in relaxation and pleasure, work and money, family and society, are touched and colored, modified and controlled, by the things upon which we think. The apostle lists the basic principles of conduct such as being honest, just, pure, lovely of good report, virtuous and thankful, and then says, "Think on these things," or as the R. V. m. has it "take account of." Let these be the considerations which guide your thought and direct your conduct. If thoughts are ordered well, outward life will follow. For "as a man thinks in his heart, so is he." Emerson said, "The ancestor of every action is thought." Thought is like a rubber ball. Throw it upon a clean surface and it will come back clean into your hand. Throw it upon a dirty, sooty surface, it will come back bringing the filth with it. We become like that upon which we think. Think Christ and "we behold the glory of God and changed into the same image."

AUGUST 8—"One Lord, one faith, one Baptism." Eph. 4:5

The question has often been asked, "can Christians get together?" Is there a common platform upon which all Christians may meet?" The Bible answer is—"Christ" Eph. 2:4 says, "He is our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us." Not too long ago I had a ride in an airplane. It was not only a pleasure, but it became a parable of life. Flying near the ground we could see the fences which divided the fields and seemed to say, "This is mine" "That is yours." But the higher we rose into the blue sky above, the smaller became the dividing lines, and soon we could see no fences at all, but only a vast and beautiful landscape of fields and forest, lakes and rivers.

Recently I listened to two radio preachers. Their discourses were radically different, until they both quoted, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me." On this they were in agreement. They agreed also on this, "The blood of Jesus Christ, His Son, cleanseth us from all sin." It sets one thinking. A common discipleship to Jesus, a thorough cleansing of the life from sin by the blood of Christ, and a purpose to please and serve Him as the master motive, makes one out of the many.

"The hand that rocked the cradle now walks the dog."

"The Way to Heaven: take the first turn to the right and then go straight ahead."

"No joy is complete until it is shared."

"Honesty leaves off where misrepresentation begins."

ALL-MENNONITE YOUNG PEOPLE'S RETREAT

Camp Alexander Mack at Milford, Indiana, is to be the site of the annual All-Mennonite Young People's Retreat. It will be held from August 3-9, with the Ohio-Indiana Young People's C. E. Conference joining on the 8th and 9th.

The committee has tried to adjust its program to take full advantage of the "newness" of the situation: NEW camp sight—easily the best camp in Indiana; NEW fellowship with the Ohio-Indiana C. E. Conference; NEW situation in which Mennonite Young people find themselves today; NEW phases of the program which can be added because of the splendid equipment of this camp; NEW opportunities to strengthen the fellowship of Mennonite groups.

The faculty and courses offered are: Rev. W. B. Weaver, Danvers, Illinois, will teach the Bible Course. Rev. Forest Musser, Pandora, Ohio, will have charge of the morning quiet hour and the sunset services. Dr. L. L. Ramseyer, Bluffton, Ohio, will teach a course on "My Expression and Contribution as a Christian in a Changing World." Rev. Wilmer Schelly, Topeka, Indiana, will present a course entitled, "Youth in the Program of the Church." Miss Mary Eliabeth Lantz, Chicago, Illinois, will be in charge of music and give a short course in recreation. Miss Elva May Schrock, Nappanee, Indiana, will serve as dean of women and be in charge of the devotional committee. Mr Herbert Fretz, Middlebury, Indiana, will act as dean of men and be in charge of the camp paper staff and organize general recreation. Rev. G. S. Stoneback has planned the evening programs.

These courses are to be given for two age groups—those of high school age and older young people—believing that in this way more effective work can be done. In addition to Bible instruction the courses are designed to help youth serve Christ better by understanding itself and its opportunities for service. A fine addition to the curriculum is the afternoon course—art, hobbies, choir, camp paper, devotional committee, etc. These are planned to help the retreaters work together in the field of their choice. There are many opportunities for organized recreation.

Feeling the need for a closer walk with God, many opportunities have been provided to develop the devotional life of camp. The morning quiet hour, chapel, sunset services, cabin devotions should all give a wealth of spiritual help to both individual and the group.

The fundamental study courses are so selected that after a week any youth who comes with the right attitude of mind will be bound to go home better equipped to practice the motto, "I Serve Christ," in home, church and community.

For any further information communicate with Rev. Harry Yoder, Carlock, Illinois, who is retreat chairman.

Am I A Soldier Of The Cross?

By Marcella Franz *

Every thinking person will agree with the statement that the world is in a tumult. Nations are trying to destroy other nations, each firm in the belief that its cause is the right one. Also, within the nations the law makers and enforcers are waging a constant battle against the powerful forces of evil.

Crime and strife between the various factions of business, government, and society all make it evident that there are battles raging throughout the world.

The Church, and especially our denomination and a few similar ones, believes that there is another battle which is far more worthy of our partictpation than the battle between nations. This battle of the Christians is a tremendous battle. Paul says, "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."

In every army there must be absolute obedience to the leader's commands by each soldier if the army is to be successful. The Christian army is not an exception to this rule. All of the soldiers of the cross should do as they are commanded by God, the Supreme Ruler of the universe. God tells us of His will for us through the Holy Spirit, either directly to us, through the Bible, or through the ministers and other Christians. Disobeying the orders of our Commander is truly a serious offense, for it may be that one of our fellow men may be taken prisoner by Satan because of our failure to obey orders. However, if we sincerely repent, Jesus Christ, our Mediator, will plead our cause before God and obtain our full and complete pardon.

* Marcella Franz graduated from the Mountain Lake, Minnesota, High School this spring. She was chosen as the best all-around student and ranked third highest in scholarship in the senior class. She is a member of the Bethel Mennonite Church. Next year she will attend the Mountain Lake Bible School.

Naturally, if we are to fight, we must have weapons, or we are helpless. God has supplied very powerful weapons which will not fail us in any circumstance, of we but use them. This whole armour of God, according to Paul, includes: the shield of faith, breastplate of righteousness, girdle of truth, gospel of peace, helmet of salvation, sword of the Spirit, and prayer Our foe is indeed clever and strong, but with these weapons and with God ordering the battle and leading us on, we need not be afraid.

This battle has been going on for centuries, but it is not nearly over. There is still much for us to conquer, for we have been commanded to fight until Christ comes to claim his army of followers and reward them for their faithfulness by taking them to Heaven, where there is everlasting peace. In the meantime we must not give up nor grow doubtful of the final outcome, for our Commander has never lost a battle.

Our Commander does not use conscription to get soldiers for His army. He lets us decide for ourselves whether we want to fight for, or against Him. No one who wishes to join this crusade is rejected because of physical defects or any other imperfection. He is willing and eager that every young person should volunteer a life time of service as a soldier of the cross.

> "A call for loyal soldiers comes to one and all;
> Soldiers for the conflict, Will you heed the call?
> Will you answer quickly, with a ready cheer?
> Yes, Jesus calls for soldiers who are filled with power,
> Soldiers who will serve Him ev'ry day and hour;
> He will not forsake you, He is ever near.
> And when the war is over, and the vict'ry won,
> When the true and faithful gather one by one, . .
> He will crown with glory all who there appear."

Will you be listed as a volunteer?

SENIOR DEPARTMENT

Program for August 16, 1942

Series for August; Evangelism

YOUTH AND ADULTS—Acts 15:36-41

I. Worship Service:

1. Songs: "Give of Your Best to the Master," No. 400; "Father in Heaven, Who Lovest All," No. 401.
2. Reading of scripture passage, prayer and leader's remarks.
3. Roll call answered by the opening verse of a favorite hymn.
4. Offering for C. E. projects.

II. Leader's Introduction:

"In the home, in the church, at school, at work, and often in their leisure-time activities, young people associate with older people. Indeed, some of the most important relationships in life are those which young people have with their elders,—children with parents, pupils with teachers, members of youth groups with their pastors and counselors.

"Adults are made of the same essential human stuff as young people. They have likes and dislikes, dreams and despairs, hopes and fears, strengths and weaknesses, which are not greatly different from those of young people.

"Habits are more deeply established; individual differences are more marked; more experience is at their disposal in meeting various life situations; maturity has given them a new perspective, a new outlook on life. They bear the stamp of an historical and cultural period quite different from the present."

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

1. Age and youth exhorted.	Tit. 2:1-6.
2. David and Samuel.	I Samuel 16:12, 13.
3. Paul and Onesimus.	Philemon 10-12.
4. A maid and Peter.	Mark 14:66-68.
5. Parents and children.	Ephesians 6:1-4.

IV. For Discussion:

1. In what ways can a father or a mother be the best friend to a son or daughter?
2. When can older people rely on the energy and enthusiasm of young people?

V. Facts for Study:

Youth is the main concern of parents, schools, and churches. Their welfare and training are major interests with them. In their desire to serve them, they sometimes dominate them and quench their aspirations. Only love and definite efforts from both sides to understand each other will solve some of the problems. A common aim and a common interest in things that are essential and abiding will do much to make the bond between older and younger people an intimate one. They will both work toward achieving the same goal, each in his own way, according to his own insight and ability. Young Christians sometimes fail to realize that their parents and older friends glory in their achievements, that it holds true what Paul said of the Christians of Philippi, "My joy and my crown." Older people need to learn to look at the motives of the young who may be sincerely striving to foster the coming of the Kingdom in other than the customary and time-honored ways.

VI. Illustration:

A Methodist minister tells of his little girl who wishing to speak to him one day when he was in his study, came up the stairs and finding the door closed put her small hand on the doorknob. The child's hand was too tiny to grasp the handle firmly enough to turn it. To her delight, however, the handle turned, the door opened, and she ran into the study exclaiming: "Oh, daddy, I have opened the door all by myself!" She was all unaware that her father, hearing her trying to open the door, had quietly gotten up from his chair and turned the handle from the inside.

VII. Thought:

"Child shows the man as morning shows the day."

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT

EXPLORING OUR COMMUNITY—Acts 17:15-21

A "Discovery Meeting"

Memory Verse—"Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had compassion on thee." Mark 5:19.

You might ask, "What can Juniors do with a topic like this? We are too young and grown-ups don't listen to us." The purpose of this meeting is to acquaint the Juniors with some nearby points of interest and activity which they may not know about. It might be discovering schools, churches, old buildings, historical centers, museums, flower gardens, lakes and ponds, resorts, etc., and pointing out the way some of them will enter into the later meetings of this series. The religious emphasis may come in the lesson of how all these things affect the lives of the people who live in that community or those who come to visit it. Also that some of God's nature wonders may be used to help turn people toward God.

Many Biblical stories occurred at interesting places where our Lord walked in his community, as such—The Pool—at Bethesda at Jerusalem; The River—the Jordon where Jesus was baptized; The Sea—Sea of Galilee where Jesus stilled the storm; The Mountains—where Jesus was wont to go to pray. The Sermon on the Mount. The transfiguration.

The Question Bee

1. What interesting places do you know in your community? Which are man-made and which are God-made? 2. Have you invited your neighbor and friend to go to church with you, if he does not attend anywhere? 3. Is your community ideal, or is there room for improvement? 4. Are there questionable amusements in your town and community? 5. How does the beauty in Nature teach us that there is a God?

The Prayer List

Thank God—for schools, churches, parks, museums, Christian retreat grounds, libraries, and social centers.

Ask God for: a real desire to know God better, to be able to take God with us in our social life, to help us not to neglect our everyday duties to our fellow man.

IN MEMORIAM

HERMAN BERGMAN, Jan. 29, 1875 to May 24, 1942. Came to America at sixteen and lived near Halstead all his life. Baptized by Rev. Christian Krehbiel and joined the Halstead Mennonite Church. Mourned by a half-brother, Henry Janzen of Newton, and two sisters in Germany, and also by many nephews, nieces, and friends. Rev. David Wedel conducted the funeral services.

ABRAHAM'S INTERCESSORY PRAYER

Genesis 18:23-33 Read chap. 18

Topic: UNSELFISH PRAYING

Five chapters concerning Abraham intervene between our last lesson and today's. Two outstanding episodes are recorded which reveal his generosity and his courage. He would not quarrel. When his herdsmen strove with those of Lot about pasture, Abraham generously suggested that Lot should choose the portion of the land he desired, and that he would take what was left. Later when the kings of the East plundered Sodom and carried off Lot with the other captives (chaps. 13, 14), Abraham pursued with his servants and rescued the captives and recovered the spoil. He refused to take any of it for himself.

Abraham Pleads for Sodom

Abraham had been entertaining three angels who had appeared to him in human form (vss. 1-22). He recognized one of these as Jehovah. The angels had said that the sin of Sodom was very great. God revealed his purpose to destroy the city because of its wickedness. The two angels proceeded on their way to Sodom. Lot and his family lived in the city. Abraham appeals to God's sense of justice which would distinguish the righteous from the wicked. His sense of justice recoils at the thought of the innocent perishing with the guilty. His plea is an example of "the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man," humble, yet very earnest. One condition of acceptable prayer is a deep concern about the welfare of those for whom we pray.

In all of his petitions, Abraham is pleading for the whole City of Sodom—note each of the six pleas. He is pleading from a purely human standpoint. He is appealing to the righteousness of the Judge. He regards Jehovah as God of all the earth, to whom all people are responsible. He speaks with great humility and deference. One scarcely knows whether to admire most the greatness of Abraham's love, or the grandeur of his faith. He realized how bold he was in his repeated pleas with Jehovah and even feared that He might be angry with him. God is God, not a man, and is not angry with the persistent prayers of the upright (Ps. 80:4). He is pleased with them (Prov. 15:8). In answer to each plea, Jehovah declares his willingness to spare the city for the sake of the righteous, even if there were but ten such found there. Alas, not even so few were in the city. How little "salt of the earth," would have saved the city from destruction. Enemies of the Gospel do not realize how blessed they are because of God's people who live among them. A few sincere Christians can change the atmosphere of a whole community. Abraham doubtless felt sure that there were ten righteous persons in the city. He stopped asking; God did not stop giving.

Abraham was the "friend of God," and had power with God. Marvelous indeed are the possibilities of intercession. God and Abraham talked with one another. Abraham prayed unselfishly, making no request for anything for himself. It was wholly in behalf of others and was offered persuasively, boldly, and yet in humility. He prayed with increasing earnestness and largeness of his requests, and in deep faith. He was very definite in his interceding. Such praying avails most with God.

God desires that we have fellowship with Him, and that is pre-eminently expressed through prayer. God wishes us to come boldly to the throne of grace and whoever is wise will do so. We begin to pray truly, when we pray because we desire to, want to pray. True intercession must have a higher motive than merely duty. Love is a heaven-inspired motive.

Why did Abraham not simply ask God to save Lot and his family?

Why is intercession in prayer so important?

How much of—or how little of, our praying it truly unselfish?

RELIEF

Nurses Reach England

A July 2 cable from an unnamed source in England reads:

ARRIVED SAFELY EDNA HUNSPERGER. The cable was forwarded to the Akron, Pa. office through Mrs. Cecil Gingerich, Kitchener, Ontario.

It is with gratitude that the churches learn of the safe arrival of Sister Hunsperger and Sister Elfrieda Klassen. May God bless their ministry to those unfortunate children and aged people whom our Mennonite workers are seeking to help.

Clothing Reaches England

During June a shipment of twenty-five bales and cases of clothing was sent to England. The total weight of clothing was 3,182 lbs., and its value was placed at $3,699.65. In all there were over six thousand pieces of clothing of all sizes and descriptions. Several cases were filled entirely with children's and babies' clothing.

This shipment, like the February shipment, was sent to Brother John E. Coffman 20 Gordon Square, London, W. C. I., England.

Clothing Donations Continue

With visions of another hard winter ahead for war sufferers, the Mennonite Central Committee plans to meet as many needs as it possibly can. By no means the least of these needs is that of clothing of all kinds. During these summer weeks the amounts of clothing, fortunately, continue to arrive at the Akron, Pa. clothing depot. This enables sorting and packing to take place before the needs of winter come.

Progress Reported on Hospital in Paraguay

"At last the building of the hospital is progressing!" This is the opening sentence in a letter from Vernon Schmidt, written on June 13, 1942. Brother Schmidt continues, "We now have nearly half the batting on the roof, ready for the grass, and a few more rafters ahead of the batting. They only have about on-fourth enough grass out, and less than half the bricks made, so it will be a long time before the outside of the building is done, but they may get it done before August 1."

Another excerpt from the same letter: "The Mennonites sent off last week their first shipment of vegetables. In another week they expect to have tomatoes to send too. They seem quite pleased with the outlook for this project, and I feel sure that if only the vegetables grow as expected, they have an excellent project here!"

"Thank You(s)" From Paraguay

"The clothing sent by you is here and has been distributed. How much need could be relieved by this help! It helped us more than we had even dared to hope. To all the brethren on the committee as well as the many brethren in America who contributed to this we and all the colonists extend our heartiest thanks for this love you have shown us. May God reward you. We have again passed through a difficult year here. We doubt whether our harvest will enable us to cover all the debts we must meet. Cotton was a fair crop. Our new vegetable-growing project makes us much work."

—Oberschulz K. Kroeker, Friesland Colony, June 8, 1942

"Our Fernheim Colony is most fortunate in having had in our midst for almost a year our dear and good Dr. John Schmidt. His services among during that time, combined with the many operations that could be performed by both Brethren Schmidt, helped tremendously in lifting the morale of the colonists. It was most fortunate that the M. C. C. could help us out in this way. The large sending of clothing from our North American brethren also helped in meeting a large part of our present need. May the Lord richly reward all who gave to this. We are now concerned as to how long Brother John Schmidt can remain with us and trust the committee will not lose sight of our medical needs."

THE VAN DER SMISSENS

(We are happy to present a picture and short biographies of a Brother and Sister who have served faithfully and long in God's Kingdom.)

Sister Hillegonda Cornelia van der Smissen was born on June 30, 1848, in Friedrichstadt, Schleswig-Holstein, as daughter of Pastor Carl Justus and Sarah Cornelia née van der Smissen. Brought up by loving, pious parents she enjoyed her childhood and youth and was baptized by her dear father.

Her father got a call as theological teacher in Wadsworth, Ohio. He considered it God's will, so in December, 1868, the parents and two daughters came to America.

The school after the war commenced with debts. All worked hard. God blessed the work in the school and through the school in the congregations, but after ten years the school had to be closed on account of the debts.

Her brother, after finishing his studies, come to America in 1874, was ordained and served a small congregation in Ashland County, Ohio. The parents moved to Hayesville, Ohio. When the brother got a call from Pennsylvania, the father attended to the work in the congregation until he died in 1890. Before father died the son and family came. They were on the way to Summerfield, Illinois, to where he had been called. About a year later the mother and Hillegonda also moved to Summerfield. The mother lived ten years longer than the father. Both parents had a very pleasant old age and a glorious departure.

In 1908 the Bethel Deaconess Hospital in Newton, Kansas, was opened. Three dear Sisters commenced the work. They asked Sister Hillegonda to come and support them by leading the household, and she would also find occcasion to do spiritual work. Sister Hillegonda commenced her work on February 1, 1909. She felt called to consecrate herself entirely to the work of the Lord, and in fall she was ordained as deaconess. She worked many years with full power, later she twice broke her hip. She is glad to spend the evening of her life with the dear Sisters. Her brother now ninety years old is in the Home for Aged nearby. God has been very kind to her and she is full of praise and thanksgiving toward our gracious heavenly Father.

Carl Heinrich Anton van der Smissen, son of Pastor Carl Justus van der Smissen and Sarah Cornelia née van der Smissen, was born December 4, 1851, in Friedrichstadt, Schleswig-Holstein. His pious parents led him early to Christ. In 1867 he was baptized by his dear Father and became a member of the Baptistminded (Mennonite) congregation, to which he still belongs.

In 1868 his dear parents and two sisters emigrated to America. He remained in Germany and studied at two Gymnasiums (colleges) and three universities, Basel, Tuebingen, and Halle. In 1874 he went to America. October 15 he was ordained by his dear father and Rev. E. Hunsberger. He served thirty-seven years as pastor in Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Illinois. In 1911 he was elected as editor of the denominational papers. He edited the Bundesbote nineteen years, the Mennonite three years, the Kinderbote twenty-five years and the German Sunday School Quarterly twenty-one years. He served three years in the Publication Board (Gesangbuch mit Noten), fifteen years in the Mission Board and six years as Secretary of the General Conference.

He was married twice. With his first wife, Mary Elizabeth née Knight, he lived over ten years. With his second wife, née Elizabeth Bertha Ruth, he lived over forty years. God gave them nine children, three sons and six daughters.

Now he is in the Bethel Home for Aged and is a member of the First Mennonite congregation and a teacher in the Sunday School. In the forenoon he reads a chapter of the Bible to his old Quaker friend who is eighty-eight years old. Then he goes to his dear sister, now ninety-four years old. They exchange their letters and experiences He usually goes to the city (He is the messenger boy for some old inmates). In the afternoon or evening he takes his dear sister walking about six blocks, as the picture shows them.

God has been very gracious to us. He has led us wonderful ways and has blessed us in many ways. We thank God for it.

inheritance is to one "that fadeth," and shrinketh not away, "reserved in heaven for us," "where neither moth nor rust will corrupt, nor thieves break through and steal." We will never be disappointed, over there, by a shrinking heritage, for ours is incorruptable, undefiled, and unfading.

III. Our Title to This Heritage

Peter said in vs. 2, "Who according to His abundant mercy hath Begotten us again unto a living hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. What is our title Peter said, "We have been Begotten again." Or as Jesus put it to Nicodemus, "Ye must be born again." This heritage comes not by merit; or conquest; or by natural birth. Just because our parents, who were saved, are now with Christ does not assure us of that same place. In John 1:12 we read, "But as many as received Him to them gave He power to become the children of God." Rom. 8:32 says, "and if children, then heirs, heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ." There we have the indispensable order. If children then heirs. In Gal. 4:7 we also read, "If a son then an heir of God through Jesus Christ." One would have to be a son of Rockefeller, or any other rich "feller," if he was to become heir to their wealth. We must also become children of God before we can become heirs of God. We are not all children of God, as some men would have us believe. We are only "children of God through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ." (Gal. 3:26) The Universal Fatherhood of God and Brotherhood of man is a doctrine from the pits of hell, propagated by men who are still "children of the devil." (John 8:44) To become an "heir of God," we must change father's. We must be "born again," "begotten again," into the family of God. Only then do I become a child, and thus an "Heir of God and a Joint-heir with Christ."

We dare not fail to recognize at this point that the basis on which God assures us this heritage is on the "resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead." For "if Christ be not risen then is our preaching vain —our faith vain—and we are of all men most miserable." (I Cor. 15:14-19)

On the basis of the bodily resurrection of Christ, God assures us of our own resurrection and therefore our final entrance into our ETERNAL HERITAGE, which through Christ the risen, living Saviour is indeed a LIVING HOPE. Not only is our HERITAGE dependent on Christ's resurrection, but so is our very salvation. "For if thou shalt confess with your mouth the Lord Jesus and believe in thy heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. Not to believe in the bodily resurrection of Christ is to remain in our sins, and thus lost without this rich HERITAGE in Christ.

Are you "begotten again?" Have you believed with thy heart that God hath raised the Lord Jesus from the dead? If so, then we ought to turn to Him, and in the opening words of our text praise God saying, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ." WHY SHOULD THIS BE DONE? "for according to His mercy He hath begotten us again unto a lively hope, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance, incorruptable, undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you," PRAISE THE LORD FOR THIS MARVELOUS HERITAGE IN CHRIST JESUS. Let us continue laboring for Him, even now enjoying OUR HERITAGE, but looking for that "Blessed Hope" and soon appearing of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

CORRESPONDENCE

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Upland, California

Rev. Salzman and family traveled by auto to the Pacific District Conference at Colfax, Washington. There were deeply impressed with the fine spirit of openheartedness and sinuerity which prevailed. The Colfax Church was very solicitous about the comfort of the delegates and left nothing undone. L. J. Horsch was also a delegate from the Upland Church.

On the evening of July 1 we observed church night. After the fellowship supper the Salzman family gave interesting reports of their trip to and from the conference. The conference reports were given on Sunday evening of July 12.

The young people gave a booster program for the coming retreat to be held at Lake Sequoia. While our pastor attended an E. Stanley Jones ashram, Mrs. Salzman brought a message on "Modern Saints," based on Rom. 1:1-17. On that Sunday evening Rev. Albert Claassen, who was visiting in the community in the interest of Freeman Junior College, gave a splendid heart to heart message. It was good to see him and hear him in our midst. —Lydia M. Horsch

Halstead, Kansas

During the past four months we have been blessed spiritually as well as materially. At the beginning of the Lenton season W. F. Unruh of Moundridge conducted a series of meetings. Rev. David Wedel directed the Easter Cantata. Nine children were dedicated to the Lord this year during child consecration. Ted Claassen gave an interesting report of his experiences. The Brotherhood was responsible for his coming, and we turned out well.

This year's forty-five graduates of the local high school constituted the largest class in the history of the school. Eleven of these were members of our church. Due to Rev. Wedel's absence we had no baptism last summer, but this year fifteen were baptized on Pentecost. On June 14 the children conducted the service with verses and songs. This was followed by a sermonette by Rev. Wedel.

A few of our members have been hailed out completely. Others have greater harvests than usual. We must say, "Count your many blessings."

BETHEL MENNONITE CHURCH

Winton, California

"Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord and whose hope the Lord is." That is what we are trying to do day by day, because we have experienced that by trusting him we are never disappointed.

Our work here at Winton is going on as usual. Last Sunday morning we had our services near the river. We had Sunday School, then an inspiring program, and after that the eats.

On June 21 a returned missionary from China gave a very inspiring message and also showed slides of the field there. We expect to have Rev. P. A. Penner with us on July 29 and 30. We look forward to a blessing.

I had the privilege of attending the Pacific District Conference. It was a very good conference. This was the feeling of many. The people of Colfax were very hospitable. May the Lord reward them for it.

After the conference Rev. F. F. Janzen of Paso Robles and I visited Deer Park where Rev. A. Wiens is pastor. The small group here is going right on. We also visited Newport where Rev. P. Unruh is pastor. This a larger group. They have completed a beautiful meeting house, which would be a credit to any Mennonite community. Since we have visited these churches we can better pray for one another. We invite pastors or others going through here to pay us a visit. Usually the small churches are overlooked.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH OF CHRISTIAN

Moundridge, Kansas

We were privileged to have Missionary Isaacs with us on April 26. Brother Isaac brought the morning message, and Sister Isaac spoke to the Sunday School. In the evening Rev. David Wedel, former director of the Marietta, Ohio, C. P. S. camp, was the guest speaker for our C. E. program. He showed slides and moving pictures of this camp.

Our C. E. officers are : Richard Graber, president; Robert Goering, vice-president; Melva Schrag, secretary; Orlando Unruh, treasurer, and Wilma Wedel, program committee chairman. Our C. E. meets every Sunday evening. Occasionally special speakers are invited to provide a variety in the programs that will stimulate and sustain our interest in C. E. activities.

This year the ladies of our church served the dinner at the annual high school alumni banquet. The net proceeds of the banquet were applied to the Church Basement Fund which was started a number of years ago by the Sewing Society.

Ten young people were baptized on Pentecost. The children gave an appropriate and impressive program on Children's Day. A mission offering was received during the program. This summer our church is again participating in the union worship services that are being held in the city park every Sunday evening during the months of July and August.

There Is Power In The Blood

The blood of Christ is the only all-sufficient force in the universe to free man from the power and punishment of sin. The early Israelites lived largely in the fear of God and little in the love of God. No wonder that without the love that is instilled into the human heart by Christ's shed blood, they went astray so often. The Pharisees had the law and the prophets. They had much to live up to. They knew rather well what God expected. How miserably they failed because they were not cleansed of self-will and self-love by the blood of Christ. The Greeks knew much, but sin held them prisoners. Without the blood of Christ they could not be free. During the Middle Ages there were mass baptisms of thousands. But men delved deeper and deeper into the darkness of sin. Their hearts had not been touched by the blood of Christ. Today many know better than they do. They have the power of knowledge.

But they also need heart power. Their will and their emotions must be Christ-controlled. This cannot happen until the individual stands beneath the cross and there lets himself be changed by the divine power of the blood of Christ. O the love, which caused that blood to flow! That love is the mightiest power in the world. That love as expressed in the shed blood of Christ will change one's heart, one's life, when all else has failed.

To neglect so great a salvation means to stand condemned in one's sins. When one neglects the blood of Christ, one neglects the one and only means of salvation. The power of God burst upon the earth in its fullest measure when the blood of Christ trickled to the measure when the blood of Christ trickled to the earth. May you and I never forget or neglect the power of the blood.

Christians can only bear much fruit through the power of the blood of Christ. May not this be the reason for Christ's words, "This do in remembrance of me." When men and women ignore what happened on Calvary, then spiritual death and decay threaten.

However, when men and women are overcome by the divine love expressed in Christ's shed blood, then their lives are lived as they ought to be lived, then quarrels and harsh judgments vanish, then the world loses its power, then the teachings of Christ are not disregarded but lived, then lives go in the opposite direction from that in which the majority of mankind goes, then their is practice instead of mere pious expression, then love hallows all thoughts, all feelings, all acts, then the coming of Christ in the glory of his kingdom is greatly desired, and then Christians pray for one another, forgive one another, edify one another, and love one another as Christ loves us.

"There's wonderful pow'r in the blood. There is pow'r, wonder-working pow'r, in the blood of the Lamb."

Time For What

Undoubtedly, there were people in the time of Jesus who never had time to go and hear him. They missed out on the words of life, spoken as man never spake before. With their minds on a multitude of worries and driving their bodies to provide material security, their time was fully occupied, and they missed out on the words which are timeless and which will never perish but ever nourish the inner man.

We all have time. All of us use it for something. The question is what do we use it for? Jesus still speaks today through His written words. Do we have time to hear him?

One young man, whom I know, has read the Old Testament through three times and the New Testament five times. This young man works six days a week and is a faithful church goer on Sunday. He gives work, home, and church abundant time. But in addition he has had time to read religious papers, including The Mennonite. He read Smith's Story of the Mennonites in a comparatively short time. He attends the mid-week church meeting. He sings in church music groups. He has had time for it all.

Time for what? May the answer glorify God.—rw.

WE OWE

We as a General Conference owe money for the support of the C. P. S. camps. By August 1 we were $20,000 in arrears. Brother L. J. Horsch wrote on July 18, "We are requested to make up, rather to send in this amount by the first of August. I know that this can not be accomplished in that brief space, but we must do all that we can to raise it as soon as possible."

We know that with the help of God we can pay what we owe for arrears and current expenses. Just what does this mean for the individual and for the church?

According to available figures each member of a General Conference Church should have paid by August 1, 1942, the amount of $2.75 cents for the support of the C. P. S. program. According to available figures the assessments from the beginning have run as follows:

March 1, 1941 to September 1, 1941, ----	$0.50
September 1, 1941 to March 1, 1942, ------	1.00
March 1, 1942 to August 1, 1942, ------	1.25

Each individual member can ascertain what he has given and then compare it with the sum of $2.75. Then he will know whether he has done his part. Of course, some individuals are able to give more than this amount and should do so. Each member of a family can ascertain by means of this figure as to whether his family has done its share. Each pastor can readily figure out what his congregation should have given to date. Undoubtedly there are individuals and whole churches who are in arrears and who will want to make up all or part of what they are in arrears.

If the amount which we owed on August 1 is spread over the conference it makes about $0.72 per member. If every church member does his part this sum of $20,000 can be raised. Let us reach our quota.

For the half year which began on August 1, 1942, the quota per member will very likely be $2.00. That means a dollar every quarter. Every quarter a church should send in to the peace committee treasurer as many dollars as it has members. This is easy figuring. The giving? It can be done if we are all faithful stewards of what God has entrusted to us. This article was written at the request of L. J. Horsch, Treasurer of the Peace Committee of the General Conference. His address is 529 East J Street, Ontario, California.

Good Medicine Poems

The other day I found in my mail a little booklet entitled, "Good Medicine Poems." Amanda Friesen of Doland, South Dakota, is the composer of them. On the front cover is this phrase from the Bible, "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine." The foreword reads thus, "These poems have been written by one who is herself a shut-in. May they react as good medicine to each one who reads them." The dedication says, "This book is dedicated to Rev. J. J. Esau, a blind evangelist whose joyful testimony bears ample proof that 'All things work together for good to them that love the Lord, who are the called according to His purpose.' Sister Friesen's poem, "Prelude To Beauty," a poem about a common thistle, appeared in The Mennonite last year. Below we present the first poem in her new little booklet.

An Invalid's Complaints

It irritates... I don't know why
And often causes me to sigh
When dust lies on the rungs of chairs
And in the corners of the stairs.

It irritates... and strange it seems
When spider-web in sunlight gleams
And waves with every passing breeze
While Bridget swings her silk-clad knees.

It irritates me, day by day,
When I behold upon my tray
A piece of blackened toast... and cool,
With no "excuse me" as a rule.

It irritates me more and more
When pillows fall upon the floor
And turn from snowy white to gray
While Bridget rushes to a play.

It irritates... I try to pray
To drive the Devil far away,
But when my crutches contact sand
Beside my bed... I clench my hand.

It irritates me for an hour
When I find dish cloths smelling sour.
Their dingy color, almost blue
Just irritates me through and through.

It irritates me... yes, it does,
When I hear filthy insects buzz
When swatter lies upon the floor;
"Why don't you use it?" I implore.

I pull myself in bed to weep.
My bitter thoughts, I won't repeat.
Self Pity sits enthroned... and then
I blow my swollen nose again.

My loving Savior speaks to me:
"Thy grief indeed seems real to thee.
Perfection is not found in man
Though he may do the best he can.

At best the works you bring to Me
Are far from perfect... yet I see
Your earnest heart in all you do,
And I am patient, Child, with you."

My indignation melts away.
"Give me such patience, Lord," I pray,
"And though disorder I do shun Within my heart, may there be none."

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

LETTER FROM FRED JOHNSON

(Written to the Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas, on July 5.)

I am enclosing one dollar and a half for my subscription to The Mennonite. My address is the same. I enjoy so much of your good paper in my work and service for the Lord. We are in the midst of real hot weather in Arizona. The Lord willing, we shall open our daily vacation Bible school for our Moencopi children from July 13 to 17. I am expecting Rev. and Mrs. J. P. Suderman, our white workers from Oraibi, to be here to help in that work. I am also happy to report that the Lord is working in the hearts of some of our Indian people. Sometimes it takes hard trials to bring people to the Lord. We had one such case this month. It is a woman who lost her daughter in death some time ago, and she has been seeking for some comfort over the loss. In our last prayer meeting she confessed that she needs the Lord Jesus as a Saviour and that she wants to follow the Lord hereafter. She and her daughter are now both become Christians and are to be received into our Christian fellowship as soon as we can make this public. Pray that more of our Indians may realize for these days their need of the Lord Jesus as their saviour from sin. The world is growing darker and more wicked these days. Our only hope is in God our Father and in the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour.

WITH CHRIST ON THE EDGE OF THE JUNGLES, S. T. Moyer, Mennonite Book Concern, 1941. 148 pages. Price $1.00. Availible at Mennonite Publishing House.

Here is the record of another sector of missionary life in India. It is more than another book; it represents a triumphant struggle among lost souls. The author himself says, "it is a story of a series of experiences, of a series of experiments with truth, as embodied in the call of Jesus Christ to make disciples among the outcasts of India."

The book is an account of soul struggles, personal hazards, and the trying resistance of heathen opposition to the Gospel. It is an autobiographical testimony of the marvelous grace of God as experienced by the Moyers in their pioneer labors among the people along the jungles in Mid-India. The reader will long remember the scenes associated with travel on an oxcart, with camping along the wilds of the jungle, and with preaching among the curious and suspicious villagers.

While the reader is introduced to the jungles of trees, ant hills, stumps, and wild nature in India, he feels the author's greater concern to have us understand "the jungle of man-soul with its obsessions of fears, hates, envies, suppression, and oppressions, cleavage between man and man and man and God." The book definitely reflects the missionaries' confidence in the Word of God as the means which the Holy Spirit has used to bring deliverance to the lost among the jungles of sin. —John R. Mumaw

"CHRIST IS ALL IN ALL" OR, "JESUS ONLY"

By J. B. Epp

The above is true in all the universe: for "all things consist in Him." But it must be especially emphasized in connection with things pertaining to Eternal Life. This cannot be over-emphasized. The entire Bible teaches it. Not to see this is certainly "missing the mark."

There may be many gospels, i. e. all kinds of good news that may gladen the hearts of men, but for Eternal Life there is but One "Gospel!"

Let us briefly look at I Cor. 15:1-4. In vs. 1 we read of "The Gospel," which, first of all, must be "preached," then "received." Then believers must "stand" (remain) in it. Then, it is plainly stated, that by this we "are saved;" all else is "believing in vain."

There are "other gospels," and vs. 3 implies that these are gospels coming from man, "perverted and trouble-making" gospels, according to Gal. 1:6-9. But reading on, in vs. 3, the True Gospel, the only Gospel, is given: 1. "That Christ died for our ("my"!) sins." And this Gospel is "according to the Scriptures." 2. (vs. 4) "that He was buried," and 3. "that He arose again the third day according to the Scriptures."

From this we must conclude, that these three things: His substitutionary (vicarious) death; His being buried (really dead); and His resurrection, must constitute the foundation of all real "preaching of The Gospel." Paul says it in one word: "But we preach Christ and Him crucified." This then is the Gospel that saves! There may be much good news; but nothing else can save! In all our Gospel preaching "Christ must be ALL!"

There may also be nice, inspiring talks, from the Bible, instructive as to Christian living, etc, etc., but this cannot be called "Preaching Christ and Him crucified," unto salvation. In all Gospel preaching, "Christ" must be the central thought; and then, in connection with this the entire Bible may be preached —and should be preached, but not apart from "Christ and Him crucified!"

NOT UNTIL

By H. T. Unruh

Just recently I attended a meeting of ministers at Lima, Ohio. I was pleasantly surprised as these ministers with few exceptions agreed that the Gospel of Jesus Christ and war cannot be harmonized. How different from the last World War when the majority of ministers blessed war and used their pulpits to justify it. Throughout human history, over and over again it has been in times of darkness, calamity, and evil that new light and new revelation of truth have broken through from God to men. The prophets, Isaiah, and even Jesus spoke out of such times and showed new ways of light and love and goodness and peace for mankind. The present world situation is but like previous dark times have been. It differs only in scope—it is worldwide. But this vastness makes it possible for the new light and truth to be reaching worldwide too. Thus, the entire human race is open to this new truth and light and life. What a challenge to the Christian church? In the past men who proclaimed new light and life were men who refused to allow their thinking to be altered or dimmed by circumstances in which they lived. When I think of the darkness of these war days it seems to me, we too, must keep undimmed certain great principles of life and living which our Lord and Master laid down for us as guides by which to live as followers of his. I think especially of three such underlying rules which a true Christian must uphold.

1. That of a Christlike attitude toward all men. This attitude is summarized in "Love one another." Love even your enemies—pray for them. Never let vengance determine your behavior.

2. Overcome evil with good. Satan cannot and will not cast out Satan. No eye for an eye or tooth for tooth as was said in olden times. Evil cannot be overcome with another evil.

3. Goodness and Godliness have an eternal value. To do good to them that hate you—to give the cup of cold water—to clothe the naked—to feed the hungry and visit the sick and afflicted—such is a way of life that has an abiding value.

Now such guiding principles of life for the true Christian cannot be harmonized with war. They are as contrary to war as day is to night. Let us continue to witness to such light. I do believe that the day is dawning when greater and greater masses "shall behold the salvation God has prepared for all people" but "NOT UNTIL" we will take Christ seriously. (In behalf of General Conference Peace Committee)

Mexico, is looking forward to baptizing a group of candidates. Being without a pastor it has asked a minister from the United States to come.

LIVING ON THE LAND

"The Mennonite people have through centuries chosen the land so very largely, not merely because it offered a living, but a way of life. The very names of places. . . speak of a deep attachment to field and woods and garden. It is the dweller on the land who in the most real sense has a home. The acres he owns furnish his life with experiences, memories, and hopes; they provide a background and a stability which is extremely difficult to find in our mobile life. The tiller of the soil is dependent on the forces of heaven and earth—the rain, the wind, the sunshine, the fertility of the soil. He literally walks and works with God. It is in the broad silences and the solitude of the open spaces that man can listen best to the Still Small Voice. The seclusion and quiet of the farm hold a large advantage for the cultivation of family ties and religious life over the roaring, reeling tempo of the city. —J. John Friesen in an unpublished manuscript entitled "An Outline of Mennonite History."

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. ELIZABETH SUTER, May 11, 1859 to June 6, 1942. Daughter of Isaac and Marie S. Neuenschwander. Born in Richland Township, Allen County, Ohio. Married David Suter in 1923. Life long member of the Mennonite Church. Joined the Grace Mennonite Church of Pandora, Ohio in 1904.

JOHN FREDERICK BASINGER, infant son of Franklin and Margaret B. Basinger, died July 15, 1942.

ADINA A. GOERING, Sept. 1, 1903 to June 22, 1942. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Goering of near Moundridge, Kansas. Education: Attended Moundridge High School, Bethel College, McPherson College, University of Boulder, Boulder, Colorado, (A. B. degree in May, 1924) Kansas State Agricultural College, Manhattan, Kansas, (B. M. degree in 1928) and later University of Chicago, Chicago Theological Seminary, and Northwestern University, which awarded her the degree of Master of Music. Taught at Attica, Partridge, Moundridge, Burden, Sharon, and Smolan, Kansas. For the past four years she was Music Supervisor for the Portage and Richland Training Schools of Western Michigan College in Kalamazoo. Member of the Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas. Traveled in Europe, Africa, and Palestine. Two tumors and appendix were removed in the first operation. Complications set in and she was operated on again. This greatly weakened her, and she never regained her physical strength.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

BEAUTY IN THE COUNTRY

When art galleries are mentioned one's thoughts are immediately turned to some beautiful large granite building in the heart of a great city. But a visit to one of these art galleries will impress one with the large number of paintings that have a rural setting. There are scenes of nature such as colorful sunsets, a wooded hill or mountainside turning color in autumn, a winding stream, or a field of waving grain; there are pictures of herds of cattle on the hillside, a pair of beautiful spirited draft horses and many pictures of farmers performing the various tasks on the farm. Many of these artists are city people who once lived in the country or who have come to appreciate the beauties of the country from a distance.

Painting Rural Subjects

I believe that the majority of rural people appreciate the beauties of nature and of life that surrounds them but comparatively few express this appreciation in any visible form such as a painting, a drawing, or a poem. Too many rural people have the feeling that they haven't the ability to become good artists, or they feel that there is no scene or subject near them that is particularly worthy of days and months of time and energy. Too many rural people feel the way Grant Wood, the now world famous artist, did about his home community. He told us how he had great aspirations of becoming a famous artist, but he was convinced that there was no future in his little home community Iowa. He felt that the only place to become famous was in New York or Paris; so he went there, spent all his money, and returned home a dismal failure. He began painting pictures of his mother, of Iowa corn fields and of typical scenes in the local community, and he became famous almost over night.

It is always a great thrill to come into a country home and find on the walls of the living room a hand painted picture of a nearby scene done by an artistically inclined son or daughter, mother or father. Such efforts could very profitably be encouraged by the local schools, clubs, and even week day activities of church groups.

God Loves Beauty

The farmers have a right to the beautiful. They and their sons and daughters should give expression to the beautiful around them. One of the characteristics of God's creation is beauty. Why should not man understand this beauty, appreciate it, and give expression to it as best he can? The history of the Christian and Hebrew religions are filled with illustrations of ways in which God's people expressed the beauties of their world.

Mennonite Art

Among American Mennonites no one has done such a magnificient job in expressing rural life and our Christian principles of simplicity, devotion to conscience, adherence to peace, and piety as has Professor John P. Klassen at Bluffton College. By means of masterful sculpturing, painting, and modeling he has depicted some of our most significant Mennonite principles and the most characteristic customs of our way of life. He has inspired his students to take up his challenge, but there have been too few of them. A trip to Professor Klassen's studio is an inspirational experience not to be forgotten. A personal visit with him might help ministers and laymen alike catch his vision. He believes in starting at home, taking those scenes and experiences nearest and dearest to you and expressing them in art. He has seen and expressed beauty in the Mennonite family. The First Mennonite Church at Germantown, Pennsylvania, the farmer plowing with a four horse team, the Russian Mennonite who is about to be shot for his religious beliefs, the Mennonite mother in Russia with a starving child during famine years, the mother of Jesus looking at her son on the cross. Whether we have five, three or one talent let us use them to express beauty to the glory of God.

EXTREMES

We ought to witness also by commending the right approvingly and denouncing evil. Sometimes we fall short there. We ought to approve those who stand for the right, but I think it just as important, when people are not taking the right stand, to let them know where we stand. We must watch for extremes either way. Sometimes we Mennonites get so nonresistant we won't fight the devil. I do not think that being nonresistant means to let sin go on in your church, in your school, and do nothing about it. We need to rise against things that are wrong. I am of the conviction that our testimony for Christ ought to include that. "Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good." —Milo Kauffman

REPORT OF CLOTHING DISTRIBUTION IN PARAGUAY

Vernon H. Schmidt

Some time in January 127 bales of clothing were shipped from New York for our colonies in Paraguay. On March 31, 126 bales arrived in Asuncion. One bale listed as containing eight comforters failed to arrive. With the help of Mr. Legiehn and Mr. Heinrichs we got the goods through customs and divided it, shipping part to Friesland and the rest to Fernheim.

From April 11-15 we distributed most of the clothing designated for Friesland's needs, giving out 4,156 pieces to 879 people from 175 families.

From April 30-May 8 we distributed clothing in Fernheim—5,138 pieces to 1,197 people from 266 families. Here also we had two bundles for special families, sent and designated by friends in U. S. or Canada. Also, we gave some bed sheets, pillow cases, blankets, bandage material, and baby clothing to the hospital. Then there were some remnants of goods, needles, thread, buttons, etc., that we left in charge of the women's sewing circle, (yes, they have one here too!) here who look after the needs of their families, and these will be used or distributed later.

There were quite a few pieces left over, especially of women's coats, so we decided that since this year was hard on the Menno colony also, we could offer them some of this "extra" clothing, and it was gratefully accepted. Their church deacon will see to its distribution there since he knows their most needy people better than anyone else. There are some over a hundred pieces in all that went to this colony.

There are yet a few last pieces to be given out to the colonies, but the work is nearly over. A summary shows that so far we have given 9,294 articles to 2,073 people from 443 families, or about 30 articles per family, or 4½ per person. This number may be quite different from the count made at Akron for we did not keep close count on articles such as hankies, scarfs, and other small items. Maybe there was a difference in number concerning "pairs" of shoes—is a "pair" one, or two pieces? Then, besides this, some items are yet to be distributed. Some went to Menno colony, some to these two families, and some to the hospital and Sewing Circle.

I am convinced that there was a real need here for clothing. For some time there has been little income here, and naturally food comes before clothing; so the latter was very scarce. If you could have seen the tears of gratitude and heard the words of thanks of some of these people, you would be fully rewarded for your donations in time or material for this gift. The value in dollars might be determined, but the value in good-will, restoration of faith in God and friends, and timely assistance can not be evaluated.

The clothing filled a real need—almost every article filled some definite need. But just to give you a more definite of the requirements, I'd like to state that the shipment lacked a few items or sufficient of these items for there were a few. Shoes and stockings for school children were very few. Also, warm coats or jackets for both boys and girls from about six to twelve years were few. Bedding was excellent, overcoats for men were almost sufficient, and for women an abundance. Dresses for women were plentiful, and clothing for children under school age was numerous. But if this spell of poor crops should continue longer and there be need for future shipments, I'd like to suggest more of these items for school children. But maybe this type of clothing was more needed in Europe and England. At least we as workers and the Mennonites also send our heartfelt thanks for the excellent amount of clothing we have received.

TIME FOR GOD'S WORD?

Some people excuse themselves from Bible study on the ground of lack of time. That is rarely, if ever, true. They take time to feed the body and would also for the soul if they but realized it to be equally important. Many five, ten, twenty minutes are spent in useless conversation, or unnecessary waiting upon self, that could be employed in gleaning precious grain from God's Word if the desire was as strong in that direction as it is to know the current news of the day, or to appear well in the eyes of men.

KITCHEN SERVICE

Lord of all the pots and pans and things, since I've no time to be
A saint by doing lovely things, or watching late with Thee,
Or dreaming in the dawn light, or storming heaven's gates,
Make me a saint by getting meals and washing up the plates.
Although I must have Martha's hands, I have a Mary mind,
And when I black the boots and shoes, Thy sandals, Lord, I find.
I think of how they trod the earth, what time I scrub the floor—
Accept this meditation, Lord, I haven't time for more.
Warm all the kitchen with Thy love and light it with Thy peace.
Forgive me all my worrying and make all grumbling cease.
Thou who didst love to give men food, in room or by the sea,
Accept this service that I do—I do it unto Thee.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Clyde H. Dirks, Hutchinson, Kansas

AUGUST 9—"God is Spirit: and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth." John 4:24

Only the one whose spiritual nature has been quickened in the new birth is capable of true worship. John 3:3; Eph. 2:1. Worship is central in a Christian's life. All other phases of life no matter how important, good will, great activity, personal improvement, will be cold formalism and ineffective if they are not related to worship. All else stands in the same relation to a personal experience of God as spokes to the hub of a wheel, or as fingers to the to the palm of the hand. Detached from this the everyday factors of life lose their power and effectiveness. Webster defines worship as "an act in which we pay honor to God." Another has said, worship is an act of rising to a personal, experimental consciousness of God which floods the soul and refreshes the inner streams of life." To really worship we must pay the price. There is no finding without losing, no getting without giving, no living without dying. A few dollars will get us a book on worship. A few more dollars will secure for us a speaker on the subject, but God is made real to us only through a personal experience.

AUGUST 10—"I, even I, am the Lord; and beside Me there is no Saviour." Isa. 43:11

Christ is the one and only hope of our sin-cursed and distracted world. He only can forgive our sins, remove our guilt, and give us the power of an overcoming life. It is from sin that Christ came to save. "Thou shalt call His name Jesus for He shall save His people from their sins." Matt. 1:21. In I John 5:17 we are told "All unrighteousness is sin." "Sin," someone has said, "is man's no to the highest he knows." Sin has it's own punishment. "The wages of sin is death," but from this there is deliverance, for "The Gift of God is eternal Life through Christ Jesus." Christ saves from the guilt of sin by washing life in His atoning blood." "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin." He saves from the Power of sin by putting into the heart His sanctifying Spirit. He will save from the presence of sin when He comes to receive us to Himself. Scrap all your substitutes for salvation and come to the cross, pleading only your urgent need and He will not fail you.

My soul is night my heart is steel,
I cannot see, I cannot feel;
For light, for life, I must appeal
In simple faith to Jesus.

AUGUST 11—"If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." I John 1:9

To confess means to "speak the same language" or "to say the same thing." It has the thought of agreeing, and because we agree we acknowledge. When we agree with what a person is, does, and says we should be ready to acknowledge that agreement. Two young people enter upon matrimony by saying the same thing. They agree and "confess" that agreement. Their confession in words leads to a confession in life. A living out in actual life the confession made in words. Confession means not only that I confess my sin in shame, but that I hand it over to God, trusting Him to take it away. Prov. 4:23 says "Out of the heart proceed the issues of life." God gets at the heart of our trouble. No use filtering water with the most improved methods so long as the reservoir is unclean. No use putting on new garments if the body is dirty. No use trying the best Captain if your ship is worm eaten. You may have the best plan for a building, but if the material is rotten it will fall to pieces. If we confess—He will cleanse.

AUGUST 12—"Abide in Me and I in you." John 15:4

There are two ways of traveling. In the first, you do everything for yourself. You obtain your ticket, look after your luggage, get your seat, ask about three porters whether you are right; and if you have an imperfect knowledge of the language, you have an uneasy sense that perhaps you are on the wrong train. There is another method of foreign travel. You employ a Tourist Agency, which obtains your ticket, sees to your comfort, gives you definite directions, provides you, where necessary, with a guide, and at every turn waits to greet you. Thus you are at rest and at ease. You too, in traveling life's rugged way, can be at rest by abiding in Christ. To abide does not mean to do nothing yourself. To abide is to stay in the same place. In fellowship with Christ. Remaining in the same attitude; to relax strain; to cease self effort; to be controlled by Him. Did you ever read a weather report like this, "Ten minutes sunshine out of a possible twelve hours?" Is that like our experience of abiding in Christ? It is broken at best, and imperfect at the completest, and shallow at the deepest. Abide, and keep on abiding.

AUGUST 13—"The Lord knoweth how to deliver the Godly out of temptation." II Pet. 2:9

Every saved soul has a spiritual conflict. The tempted one should not be discouraged over temptation, for it is evidence that God has begun a new work in him. "For the flesh lusteth against the spirit and the spirit against the flesh." Gal. 5:17; The Christian life is not a state of tranquility but of war. It's symbol is not a palm branch, but a sword. To enter the Christian life is not to drop anchor in a calm haven, but to engage in conflict. Eph. 6:11 urges us to "Put on the whole armour of God that ye may be able to stand." There is no danger that the sincere Christian will ever weep like Alexander because there are no more worlds to conquer. He will sing the songs of triumph, but he will oft sound the battle-cry. Temptations, if resisted, are conducive to strength. James 1:2-4. A mushroom may be raised in a hot-house but not so an oak. Through temptation and deliverance we grow. Rom. 5:1-5. Remember that God knoweth "how to deliver."

AUGUST 14—"For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding weight of glory." II Cor. 4:17

A cemetery bears above it's marble gateway the inscription, "Any thing so universal as death must be a blessing." The same can be said of trial. The Scriptures view affliction as something that "worketh for us." It is good to know that there is a limit to affliction. It has it's appointed period, and is but for a moment. God weighs and measures, bounds and defines, my sorrows. Affliction is to serve us; it works on our behalf. It is the prelude to glory. Now it seems grievous, but a coronation day is coming. It is needed to prove us, to purify us, to strengthen us, and often to recall us from straying. Two children were walking with their parents in the woods. They began playing and got lost from their parents. The mother became anxious, but the father calmly said, "Do not worry the darkness will drive them home." So the darkness of affliction often drives us home to God. We could never discover the grace of the Father, the sympathy of the Son, and the comfort of the Spirit if it were not for our trials.

AUGUST 15—"By their fruits ye shall know them." Matt. 7:20

Of Himself Jesus said, "I am among you as He who serveth." To His disciples He said, "Whosoever would become great among you let him be your servant." We must never forget that it is to man that we pay our debt to God. It is through man that we publish to the world our real selves. Service, like music, is a language all can understand. There is no service so low but what can be a gateway into the larger life. Our hearts determine our usefulness, not our lips. Some witty person once said, "There are three kinds of givers, the flint, the sponge, and the honey-comb." To get anything out of a flint you must hammer it. To get water out of a sponge you must squeeze it, the more you squeeze the more you get. But the honey-comb just overflows with it's own sweetness. Let us test the motive of our service and ask, "Would I rather have men forget my message and remember me; or forget me and remember my message?"

AUGUST 16—"Satisfy us early with Thy mercy; that we may rejoice and be glad all our days." Psa. 90:14

David created a sensation by slaying Goliath, by winning battles, by becoming a king and establishing a nation, but his greatest influence in history arose from the song he sang when a shepherd boy on the hills of Palistine. The Shepherd Psalm has meant more to mankind than all of David's kingliness. Strange are the uses of our yesterday's. Many a person has learned too late that his real power lay in his unheeded yesterdays. The Prodigal son, with his money and life wasted, thought of what he "might have been" and his heart was filled with sorrow. Esau, at the time of the blessing, saw what he "might have been" and he was filled with sorrow, tears, and anguish. A man who started well in the Christian life became intoxicated, and " went bad." He came at last to this confession, "when I think how I have treated God and wasted my life it hurts me." It is the "might have been" that haunts us all and brings to us our greatest dissatisfactions. Therefore let God satisfy us early with His mercy.

Camp Briefs

During June, 1942, a total of 214 boys arrived at Mennonite camps....

Hospital Service is now an actuality for C. P. S. men. The Alexian Brothers Hospital in Chicago and a state hospital at Williamsburg, Va. have on their staffs continguents of men from a Catholic and Quaker camp respectively. As yet, procedures have not been completed for any of the Mennonite camps to send units of men to hospitals....

The Washington County farm units (Hagerstown, Md.) have organized farm management committees among the boys. Together with the farm manager who is also director of the unit the committee will seek to work a plan for operating the farms in such a way as to furnish the maxium food subsistence for the boys in camp....

An indication of the interest and the sacrifical attitude of the boys in camp can be seen in the fact that a number of the camps have sent generous donations of money (Sunday School offerings) to the Mennonite Central Committee for war sufferers' relief....

A summary of C. P. S. boys according to states from which the boys come indicates the following totals for the four leading states: Ohio, 239, Kansas, 236, Pennsylvania, 168; Indiana, 134.

Children Who Need Kindness

On my front porch there plays a little boy about four years old. He is in our yard a good part of the day. When his older brother of eight years is home from school he too is in our yard, playing ball or sitting on a swing. Sometimes we get rather tired of having these and other children in the yard. Then we remember again that their mother is dead and that their father drinks a lot and has not properly taken care of his children. They are not lacking food and clothing because their aunt takes care of them, but they lack the tender care of their mother and the friendship of a father.

When we get such letters as the one from Rev. Neunschwander stating that young people from far off Pennsylvania are interested enough in the people of this city to help support a city missionary, then we feel anew our duty and responsibility. We feel as though you would want us to show real love to these boys and girls and do it on your behalf and in the name of our Christ.

On a Sunday morning when our own little boy was in front of our church he met a little lad who said he was going to the tavern to see if his parents were there. He said they had not come home for the night. Two days ago while meeting my own daughter at the street car I met a little five year old boy on the street corner. It was after ten and I asked him why he was not at home. He said there was no one at home and he could not turn on the light himself. He had to wait till his sister came home. Now when I received the letter telling of your contribution, then I thought that these boys and girls from the eastern part of our country will certainly want us to show all kindness to these other boys and girls.

In the territory covered by the work of our little mission there are fifty places selling liquor, but only one Sunday School. This summer as we again have our Vacation Bible School I shall often think of the splendid contribution of the Intermediate C. E. Society, and I and the others with me shall feel especially that we are the representatives of the Church of Jesus Christ and that we must do our best.

The hymn, "Where Cross the Crowded Ways of Life," is found in the Mennonite Hymnary. It is No. 222. May I suggest that you plan to have all the societies of your group sing or read this hymn on a certain Sunday, and then offer prayers for the work of the mission here of which you have become a part through your offerings. And thank you very much and may the Lord bless you for your interest.

—John T. Neufeld, pastor

(The above letter was written by the pastor of the Mennonite Bible Mission in Chicago, to which the Intermediate C. E. Union of the Eastern District had sent $50 as their mission project. The letter first appeared in the C. E. Witness, the young people's paper of the Eastern District).

SUPPLY AND DEMAND

With each issue of The Mennonite Junior, Intermediate, and Senior C. E. societies are supplied with a program outline. Thus, there is a program outline for each Sunday. Some very good material has appeared in this section. Writers have worked hard. The material takes up space which is valuable.

Now this is what we would like to know? Is there any society anywhere in our conference which meets every Sunday night of the month and on each such night uses material from The Mennonite C. E. section? If there is any such society, won't a member of it, please, sit down immediately and write the editor (500 Bell Street, Beatrice, Nebraska) telling him so. Furthermore, if there is any society which makes use of the material three Sundays a month, would a member of it likewise write.

Perhaps, two program outlines a month would be sufficient if there aren't any societies which meet three or four times a month. Express yourself C. E. leaders and workers and let us know what your desires are. Give us some light, so that we need not grope in the dark. Write now. —rw.

The Relation of Our Peace Testimony to Our Relief Work

By Helen A. Penner

Relief work is one of the channels for presenting our peace testimony to the world. People "over there" would say to us, "We believe your stand is too idealistic and we don't see how you'd handle Hitler, but—we're certainly glad that there are people like you in the world who care enough about others to help us in our time of need; what would we do without you?"

Many times those who take the peace stand are looked upon as cowards, or people think that the peace position is an easy way out, a Pharisaic cloak to hide fear and lack of patriotism. They do not always realize that it takes courage to stand with the minority. In our relief work we are carrying on constructive projects voluntarily and, by no means, without risk and cost. It is sacrificial work not only for the delegates but for those who are furnishing the means to do the work. By being constructive such work stands out in contrast to war which is so very destructive.

In relief work we relieve need regardless of the recipient's race, color, or political sympathy. We are proclaiming our belief in the worth of human life and in the equality of man in the sight of God.

If you love me but never say so nor show me that you do how am I to know it? How can others know of our peace stand, or how can we prove that we really believe in such a thing unless we carry it out in action? If we do not practice it we are going to lose it. "To develop, men need action; to act men need faith; to keep faith men need reason; to direct all three, men need a vision of excellence; and all this is empty unless it is pervaded by love; and love is action and outgoing."

Too many times we think of our stand negatively. It is not doing something instead of doing something. It should be an "offensive" of good-will showing our desire to lend a hand. The angels not only sang, "—peace on earth among men of good will," but God sent His only Son to help bring about such a condition. God not only is; He does. It is not enough to "live and let live;" we must "live and help live!"

SENIOR DEPARTMENT

Series for August; Evangelism

THE NEED FOR EVANGELISM—John 10:16

I. Worship Service:

1. Songs: "Nearer My God to Thee," No. 202; "O Scatter Seeds of Loving Deeds," No. 498.
2. Reading of scripture passage, prayer and leader's remarks.
3. Period of prayer.
4. Offering for Peace Work.

II. Leader's Introduction:

Evangelism, in its original sense, means the proclamation of the "evangel" or the "good news" of the gospel. It is to lead men to accept Christ and commit their lives to Him. It brings the message to men which was put by Christ in the words, "Ye must be born again." It directs its appeal to the end that a decision be made by men to follow the Christ. It emphasizes Christ's invitation, "Come unto me . . . and I will give you rest." It proclaims Christ mighty and able to save, heralds Him as the Light of the World, the good Shepherd, the Way, the Truth, the Life. It invites men to become children of God, members of the Kingdom of God. It speaks of the need of repentance and of regeneration, of the meaning of discipleship, of Christ, the Saviour and Redeemer of men.

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

For these topics read "Other Sheep I Have," a handbook on Church Evangelism published under the auspice of the Home Mission Board of the General Conference. To be had from Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas.

1. Evangelism: what is it? 2. Evangelism and Christian Education. 3. Groundwork for a Spiritual Awakening. 4. Our Church Witnessing in our Community. 5. The Emotional Element in Preaching. 6. Conserving Church Membership. 7. How to make Evangelism more effective in our Conference.

IV. For Discussion:

1. What effort is your church making to win the unsaved for Christ. 2. What reasons do the people who have not attended church in your community give for not doing so?

V. Facts for Study:

The Evangelism Committee of the General Conference reports that "There is a wide difference of opinion in Mennonite Groups as to what methods of evangelism are legitimate and effective." This calls for tolerance in the use of various methods. Personal Work, the Catechism Class, and Mass Meetings rank high both in favor and effectiveness.

It lists the following observations: 1. Too many churches depend upon special services for evangelism and do not utilize lay members to carry on a year-round program of evangelism. 2. The assertion of some ministers that there are no Mennonite leaders available for evangelistic work must be modified since at least forty-one churches have used Mennonite leaders. 3. There is great need for the development of evangelism in Sunday Schools and of a proper understanding of the relation of religious education and evangelism."

VI Illustration:

General William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, was devoted to his mission. He could say, "This one thing I do." During an interview with King Edward, the monarch asked General Booth what his recreations were. Booth replied, "Sir, some men have a passion for art; others have a passion for riches; I have a passion for souls."

SUMMER ADVENTURES IN OUR OWN COMMUNITY

Careful Conduct Psalm 1:1-6

Conduct is the great profession. Behavior is the perpetual revealing of us. What a man does, tells us what he is. —F. D. Huntingdon

In all the affairs of life let it be your great care, not to hurt your mind, or offend your judgment. And this rule, if observed carefully in all your deportment, will be a mighty security to you in your undertakings. —Epictetus

Pause today to meditate how much you observe and are influenced by the actions of others. Is it not evident then that others observe your actions just as much? Let us resolve, therefore, to be more careful so that we may influence only for the good.

God in the Night Psalm 8:3-9

"Have you ever looked up at the stars at night, and remembering what you have been told about the vast distances of the stars, and that worlds like ours are moving through space as fast as cannon balls, have you never had the feeling of wonder, of how great the universe is, and you but a tiny mite in it all?

"It is God who rules the stars in the heavens, who lifts the sun in the morning and guides the moon at night, who causes the crops to grow, who brings the birds back from the South in the spring. Wherever you find life, and beauty and goodness, there you will find God.

Hills Strengthen Faith Psalm 121:1-8

"The Bible says: 'For the mountains may depart and the hills be removed; but my lovingkindness shall not depart from thee.' Mountains are the most permanent features of a landscape. Rivers are continually changing their courses; trees are blown down by storms; house and fields look different almost every time you pass. Since none of us has ever seen a mountain change its place, we think of it as something unchanging. So when we look at mountains we can remember that even after such permanent objects as mountains disappear, God will still be caring for us. His mercy will last throughout eternity." —N. M. W.

Walking in the Country Luke 24:13

Consider the natural beauty in your community. Plan hikes to those places and take with you someone who knows nature very well. Be sure to take cameras with you to keep permanent records of the wonders in nature which you see.

List all the opportunities for free recreation in your community.

Plan to visit a church of another faith.

Plan visits to manufacturing plants, mills, and great stores.

Plan socials to which you have invited young people of other races.

A "Touring Meeting"

Introduction

Children may have deep impressions made on their lives by the things which other people have constructed. Many of you have made a touring trip of some special place of interest, perhaps a park, museum, a zoo, famous church, school, or college. Let the Juniors tell about such places they have visited, and what they found.

In our lesson today we are going to talk about some of the places of interest in Palestine, the land where Jesus lived.

The Stable in Bethlehem

It is not often that a stable is a place of interest. But in Bethlehem, there was a stable of great interest. In this stable Jesus was born. It is hard to believe that the King of kings should be born in a stable, usually kings are born in palaces. But His lowly birth confirms prophecy. "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich." (II Cor. 8:9) And so it was, that Jesus was born in a manger, because there was no room in the inn.

Jacob's Nell

In Samaria, near the city Sychar, is Jacob's well. For hundreds of years, the water has been used by the people thereabout. One day the Lord came to this well on one of His journeys. Being weary he rested. A woman of Samaria came to draw water. It was at this well that Jesus gave her of the "Living Water" which he had to offer, and faith was born in her heart.

The Garden of Gethsemane

Outside the city of Jerusalem, across the brook Kidron, lies a beautiful garden. It was there Jesus took His disciples on the night of His betrayal. After the supper, He prayed with them and tarried. The disciples fell asleep but Jesus prayed until His hour had come, when he should be betrayed and given into the hands of sinners.

Calvary's Hill

Outside the walls of Jerusalem is Calvary's Hill. There the Lord was crucified. Why did the Lord Jesus die on Calvary? It was because of the sins of the whole world! The Bible says, "For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God." (I Peter 3:18) Our hearts are filled with gratitude for the one who gave His life for us on Calvary's Hill.

The Question Bee

1. What is our city or town like? 2. Where should be the favorite meeting place of Christians? 3. Quote Luke 4:16 to find where Jesus loved to go. 4. Have you attended any young people's retreats?

The Prayer List

We thank Thee Lord that wherever we are, we are not alone. May this be a helpful guide to us; may we never fear, knowing that Thou hearest and seeth all things. Help us to do Thy will. Amen.

GOD IS GOOD

Yet in the maddening maze of things
And tossed by storm and flood,
To one fixt state my spirit clings;
I know that God is good.

COURAGE TO PRACTICE PEACE

Genesis 26:18-31

Isaac would not "make the headlines" today. Not much space is given to him in Scriptures as compared with the other patriarchs. He was a rather common man, a plain man of perhaps mediocore ability, and less energetic than his wife Rebekah. However common people are important. He was a worthy son of Abraham and lived close to God. He appeared to him at different times and renewed the promises which had been made to his father. Isaac led a quiet and uneventful life, and was distinctly a man of peace.

Isaac Practices Non-resistance vss. 18-25

At the time of our lesson, Isaac was dwelling in the Philistine country along the sea coast, in the neighborhood of Gerar, a very fertile section of Palestine. The Philistines greatly envied him because of his prosperity. They closed up the wells which Abraham had dug—a direct violation of a covenant which their king, Abimilech, had made with him (Gen. 21:13). Good wells are exceedingly valuable in that country. The very life of Isaac's people and of their livestock depended on them. Isaac quietly and peacefully cleaned out these wells.

Isaac's servants discovered an unusually good spring of running water, and at once the envious Philistines, who preferred fighting to digging, claimed it as their own. Isaac had a right to these wells because of the covenant which Abraham and the King had made (Gen. 20:15). Isaac showed his love for peace by giving up the fine wells rather than fight for his rights. He did this a second time. He would not fight with the Philistines. What an example for us today. He moved some distance, dug another well and was no longer disturbed. It is best to get away from quarrelsome people, if possible. Isaac won by peaceful methods. The Philistines stopped fighting. Gentleness won over violence. His quiet spirit, ready to yield rather than quarrel, was a stranger in those wild days and lands. It is ridiculed by most people and nations today. Do we fully believe in it?

Isaac moved to Beer-sheba where his father had lived for years and here he had spent much of his early life. God appeared to him in a vision and encouraged him by renewing the promises He had made to Abraham. Isaac restored the altar and worship in the place now doubly sacred and hallowed by the Lord's appearance to him. Isaac is an example of non-resistance. He used every means available to find a way of living in peace with his neighbors. He was willing to sacrifice for peace.

Peace Treaty vss. 26-31

The King of the Philistines was won over by Isaac's peaceful acts and nature. He had tried to drive him out of the land. He now came to make a league of peace with Isaac. He saw his growing importance, his prosperity in abundant crops and growing hearts. He saw that Isaac's God was mighty to help him. He saw that the Lord blessed him in his peaceful living. Abimelech proposed that a covenant be made, such as had been made with Abraham. Perhaps he feared Isaac's revenge. Isaac showed his goodwill and desire to remain in friendly relations, by making a feast, and they ate together. Isaac said nothing about claims for damages which he could rightly have made. He returned good for evil.

Courage to Practice Peace

Some, perhaps very many, consider Isaac's yielding as an evidence of weakness. It shows real courage. The "bully spirit" is ready to fight. It requires moral courage to "practice peace" under some circumstances. It requires moral courage to stand for one's convictions, and many find that much harder than to face bullets. It requires courage to practice peace—non-resistance—toward our enemies in the present days. How much better to make some sacrifices than to engage in fighting. We can "practice peace" in personal life. We can have a peaceful spirit and aviod saying and doing that which will produce ill-feeling and stir up strife.

"The strong yield when they WILL, the weak when they MUST."

"Isaac's peace treaty says nothing about reparations."

In what ways may persons "practice peace" today?

What did Isaac gain, or lose, by yielding?

How can nations learn to "practice peace?"

CPS Camps

Farm Furloughs Successful to Date

A representative of Selective Service System has made a survey of the farm labor experiment on dairy farms in Dodge County, Wisconson. This survey has to do with the ten boys who were selected from the Denison, Iowa, camp for farm service in this dairy county. The survey consisted of interviews with the boys, the farmers, and neighbors.

The report closed with these sentences: "In general all of the farmers are well pleased with the assignees, and want to make them feel at home. All of them go to church regularly, some with their employers and others at different churches. All assignees operate the farm machinery or are learning how. Most of the land on these farms is under cultivation—corn hay, grains, and peas being the principal crops. . . Assignees are able to visit one another frequently through the generosity of their employers...

"Information obtained during this survey and from the interviews indicated that the Experimental Placing of Assignees from C. P. S. Camps on Dairy Farms as Farm Labor is very much of a success, and further release of assignees for this full-time work in localities where there is a critical shortage of farm labor is recommended."

Request for Cars to be Removed from Camp

"From July 4 letter by General Director Henry A. Fast to Directors of all M. C. C. administered Camps: 'At our conference in Washington with Colonel Kosch and Major McLean held June 24, Colonel Kosch very vigorously protested against the presence of cars in camp. He stated that they continued to be a constant aggravation to good public relations... We have repeatedly urged boys in C. P. S. camps of their own free will to take their cars home and leave them there... We now reluctantly have to demand that the cars in camp be limited strictly to a maximum of three and that these be tolerated only on the express condition that they be available for official camp use any time they are needed. We expect cars in camp to be removed by the end of this month.'

"July 9th response by one of the directors: 'The announcement of the new policy on cars in camp came today. This will hit our boys quite hard. I think it would help a good bit if something could be gotten across to their folks through the church press advising them to take it as one of the things necesary to conserve the privilege we now have and to encourage the boys to accept the added isolation which it will entail with good grace, rather than have the home folks react critically or lamenting the fact that the boys cannot get home as readily as heretofore.'

"It is believed that our constituency will cooperate in the spirit desired by this director." —Orie O. Miller

CORRESPONDENCE

EAST SWAMP MENNONITE CHURCH

Quakertown, Pennsylvania

The following scripture reference is of great comfort to us in these times, "And they shall fight against thee; but they shall not prevail against thee; for I am with thee, saith the Lord, to deliver thee." Jer. 1:19. In the light of such promises God's redeemed saints find renewed strength and courage to go on.

Our recent young people's Bible conference was an unusual success. Dr. Arnold C, Schultz, pastor of the Ebenezer Mennonite Church, Bluffton, Ohio, and Bible teacher at Bluffton College, brought a most interesting message each night on "Archaeology and the Bible." We do praise the Lord for such men in our conference and college, who still preach the good old gospel as found in God's Holy Book. Would to God we had more such "defenders of the faith," so that when we sing "Faith of Our Fathers" it would come from our inner soul, and not just be words and a tune.

At the thirty-first anniversary program of our C. E. Rev. Howard G. Nyce showed from God's Word that intolerance is not sin. During the summer our mid-week and Sunday evening services continue as usual. Why should we as Christians not go to church in summer? The Devil has no vacation; he is always busy. Our pastor is teaching a course on "Personal Soul Winning" at our mid-week services. We feel that we cannot afford to give the Devil any more opportunities to defeat God's cause than he has at other seasons of the year. Our American army is not taking the summer off, why should the Soldier's of the Cross?

Thus far, our attendance at Sunday School and church services has remained about the same, perhaps, showing a slight increase in spite of our East Coast gas rationing.

Young people graduating from the Moody Bible Institute this spring were: Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Unruh, Richard Baehr, and Burwell Kennedy. John Baehr graduated from Bluffton College. We pray God's richest blessings on these people. Some of these graduates are planning to continue their studies at Wheaton College and Dallas Theological Seminary. We are looking forward to seeing some of young people in full time Christian service.

Recent guest speakers in our church were, Dr. Vance Havner from South Carolina, and Rev. Walter Dyck from Beatrice, Nebraska. On July 14 we had a brief dedication service for the newly erected cabin at Menolan Retreat Ground. Its name is "Bethel Pines" in memory of Rev. and Mrs. William S. Gottschall, our former pastor. —Corr.

SALEM MENNONITE CHURCH

Dalton, Ohio

Because we always find the letters from the different churches very interesting it occurs to this correspondent that a sign of life from the Salem people at Dalton, Ohio, might be enjoyed too. (May you continue to send us such interesting news and may other churches do likewise).

We have much for which to be grateful to our Heavenly Father. Corn, wheat, oats, and hay produced very well. Fruits of all kinds are plentiful, and the gardens look promising. Truly we can say with David, "Bless the Lord, O my soul and forget not all his benefits." We can also say that the Lord has truly been with us in the spiritual realm.

Under the leadership of our much beloved pastor, Rev. A. S. Rosenberger, we are working onward and upward to the best of our ability. Of course, the war affects every one to a certain extent. Several of our young men are in the service. Most of them are in some C. P. S. camp.

So far the rubber and gas situation has not made much change in our church work. May it never come to the point where we no longer can go to our places of worship. One has a feeling that if baseball and golf among other amusements are necessary for public morale, as many claim, then we may hope that God will bless his children to the extent that they can keep open their churches where "real" public morals is nurtured.

Mrs. August Heuselman, who passed away after a long, hard illness of cancer, was the only member of our church who passed away this year. During the winter months our pastor conducted prayer meeting and Bible study services during which the book of Revelation was studied. During Passion week services were conducted every evening by our pastor and several guest speakers. The Dalton Community Chorus, directed by Victor Graber, and including a large number of our members as singers, gave "The Messiah" at the Orrville, Ohio, Presbyterian Church during this week.

The following were married in our meeting house, George Brenneman Jr. and Goldie Hofstetter, and Kenneth Kandel and Martha Steiner. A number of our young people are planning to enter Bluffton College in September.

Our Christian Endeavorers are quite active and hold their socials regularly every month.

We can say that by the grace of God we have reason to be encouraged by the work which we have been able to do in the building of the Kingdom of God. It is our opinion that the greatest mission of the church today is to get closer to God than ever and to acquire a new zeal and faith to win more and more people to Him. —Mrs. Edward Miller, Corr. (Another item of good news: This church of 208 members sent in $210 for C. P. S. camps during the first quarter of 1942. —Editor)

Dr. E. L. Harshbarger, much-beloved professor at Bethel College and outstanding peace worker in our conference, passed away after much suffering on July 26. The funeral was held in Memorial Hall on July 29. More about our departed brother will appear in next week's issue.

—Brother L. J. Horsch, Treasurer of the General Conference Peace Committee, wonders whether the General Conference would have had a deficit on August 1 if the fifty-five churches which did not contribute during the second quarter had done so and if the churches which did contribute had reached their quotas.

—Rev. John T. Neufeld, pastor of the Mennonite Bible Mission, Chicago, Illinois, writes (July 20) that they are now in the middle of their four weeks Vacation Bible School term. "The attendance is above fifty. The program calls for an hour and a half of music and Bible study and then some handwork. One of the projects in handwork is the making of wall mottoes by wood burning with an electric pencil. Some very beautiful results have been obtained by even some of the smaller children. Some of these mottoes remain on the walls of the homes for years. The Bible study includes memory work, and it is a delight to hear the children recite Bible portions at the closing exercises. It is something they can take with them." Brother Neufeld also writes, "We have enjoyed The Mennonite as it comes out now very much and have subscribed for all families from our church."

—Dr. A. Warkentin spoke in the First Mennonite Church, Upland, California, on August 2. He will also be a speaker at the young people's retreat to be held at Lake Sequoia August 8 to 16.

—Dr. C. H. Suckau is improving nicely after an eye operation in Chicago.

—Eicher Mennonite Church, Noble, Iowa: "The cantata, 'Hail the Easter King,' was given by a mixed choir under the direction of Wilburt Graber. We had a Mother's Day program and two infants were consecrated. Miss Aganetha Fast brought a very interesting message on May 24. On Monday afternoon the ladies from our church and the ladies of the Wayland Mennonite Church gathered together to hear another message from Miss Fast. The children gave a special program on Children's Day, and a short play entitled 'The Widow's Mite' was given on June 21. The four Mennonite churches of Iowa met in our church for their annual get-together. Many were present. Rev. Nunemaker brought the morning message.' —Corr.

—Correction: The statistical report of the Alberta Community Church, Portland, Oregon, for the first quarters of 1941 and 1942 should read as follows:

Church	1942	1941
Worship attendance	60.6	46.3
Total offerings	$257.21	$151.57
Sunday School
Attendance	81	79.3

—Salem Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakota: Edgar Miller recently left for the Fort Collins, Colorado, C. P. S. camp. The boys from the Weeping Water, Nebraska, C. P. S. camp were home for a short week-end visit on July 4 and 5. The Ladies Missionary Society has refinished and refurnished the church nursery. The result is a very pleasant room. Mrs. Jacob J. Waltner, the mother of Miss Lena Waltner of Bethel College, passed away on July 11. The Byler Quartet of Goshen College gave an inspiring program on July 15. Rev. Willard Claassen and family vacationed in Kansas for a few weeks. Mrs. P. R. Schroeder and daughters Louise and Esther Ruth visited in the community over the week-end of July 19. At the joint Sunday School picnic of the Salem and Salem-Zion Mennonite congregations the two daily vacation Bible school groups rendered music in the morning and Dr. Ralph Kauffman gave an address. The families brought their picnic lunch baskets, and the afternoon was devoted to visiting and athletic contests. —Hermie Preheim

—Poudre Canon News is the name of the paper started on July 10 by the Fort Collins, Colorado, C. P. S. camp. This bi-monthly paper can be had for seventy-five cents a year. A note in it says, "A gift much appreciated by our camp was a shipment of 120 Hymns of Praise given to the camp by the Buhler Mennonite Church of Buhler, Kansas. Our director served this church as pastor until November, 1941, when he accepted the position of camp Director of C. P. S. No. 8, Marietta, Ohio." Some of the boys will do work on a large earthen dam which will be used for providing drinking water for the city of Greeley, Colorado. Of the first sixty-seven assignees twenty-one were from Kansas. Oklahoma was second with fifteen.

—Rev. and Mrs. Emerson F. Slotterback are the parents of a son, Marvin Daniel, who was born in July 1942.

—Alumni of the Bethel Deaconess Hospital, Newton, Kansas, recently enjoyed a get-together at Island Park, Windom, Minnesota. Present were: Mrs. D. H. Fast, Mrs. Anuta Loewens, Mrs. W. A. Piper, the Misses Wilma Janzen, Marie Toews, Kathryn Friesen, Elsie Hubin, Marie Lohrenz, Salome Fast, Susan Hooge, and Sisters Katie Dick and Marianna Enns of Newton, Kansas. —Mountain Lake Observer —Married: Elbert Koontz and Louise Schroeder, daughter of Mrs. P. R. Schroeder, in the Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake Minnesota.

—Relief: In a July 21 cable to O. O. Miller, Brother Joseph Byler states that an arrangement has been completed to take care of a colony of 120 children in Lyon, France, and that supplies have been assured. The latter is important, for supplies are hard to get in France. Peter Dyck in England kept very busy in May evacuating "bombees," transporting bedding, clothing, etc., and doing other things.

—C. P. S. News: Fire ranging and forestry work have now been added to the activities of the Canadian C. O.'s. Harold S. Bender, dean of the educational program, is making a three weeks tour of all Mennonite camps in an effort to study and offer guidance in the camp educational activities. A recently revised edition of The Conscientious Objector under the Selective Training and Service Act of 1940 is now off the press. Copies can be had from the MCC office at Akron, Pa., for five cents each. The pamphlet lists forty three camps, gives information on all forms of C. P. S. service, and presents the position of the government to C. O.'s.

—The Civilian Bond plan is being worked out in such a way that the smaller contributor can share in this type of service.

EASTERN DISTRICT SECRETARY'S NOTES

RETREAT—117 young people registered for the High School Retreat held at Men-O-Lan, (the Eastern Disrtict's own Retreat Ground) Thursday, July 16th, to Sunday, July 19th, inclusive. The Young People's Retreat was held the following week end. Last year all the Retreaters slept in tents. This year, five cabins had been completed. They were built by the following five churches; First Philadelphia, Lansdale, East Swamp, First Allentown, and Souderton. WEST SWAMP—The members of the Conference rejoice with the West Swamp church because of the safe arrival from India of the Dr.s Harvey and Ella Bauman and family. Dr. Harvey Bauman is a member of the West Swamp church. They arrived in Quakertown on Tuesday morning, July 14th. ROARING SPRING—The members of the Roaring Spring church are anxiously looking forward to next September when Rev. and Mrs. Paul Wenger, returned missionaries from India will live in the parsonage and Rev. Wenger will serve as pastor of the church. FIRST CHURCH, PHILADELPHIA—The members of the First Church are anxiously looking forward to the arrival of Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf who is on her way home from China. The cabin at Men-O-Lan was named in her honor. EAST SWAMP—The cabin placed at Men-O-Lan by the East Swamp church is called "BETHEL PINES" in memory of the late Rev. and Mrs. W. S. Gottshall. The church recently held a very fitting dedicatory service at the cabin. The Young People's Christian Endeavor Society recently celebrated its 31st Anniversary. Rev. Howard G. Nyce, pastor of the Allentown-Upper Milford charge delivered the address. SCHWENKSVILLE—The congregation is looking forward to the completion of a number of improvements to the Church and Sunday School. Mr. and Mrs. Morris H. DeHaven recently celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary. SAUCON—The Happy Clarks conducted a service in the Church on Sunday evening, July 19th. HEREFORD CHURCH, BALLY—The church held a special service on Sunday afternoon, July 19th, to celebrate the completion of renovations to the church. Rev. Russell L. Mast, pastor of the Deep Run Church, was the guest speaker. BETHANY, QUAKERTOWN—The first District Workers Conference for the 1942-1943 Conference year was held in Bethany Church, Monday afternoon and evening, July 20th. The speakers were Rev. Walter H. Dyck of Beatrice, Nebraska, and Rev. S. F. Pannabecker, returned missionary to China. Both of the brethren were instructors at the retreat this year. UPPER MILFORD, ZIONVILLE—The pastor is instructing a catechetical class of nine members to be received into the church fellowship in October. REV. PANNABECKER delivered illustrated lectures on China in the Hereford Church, Bally, on Tuesday, July 21st, Grace Mennonite Church, Lansdale, July 22nd, and Second Church, Philadelphia, July 23rd. A number of churches grouped together for each mission address.

THE RIGHT METHOD

Any group of individuals or union of groups which seeks to achieve a common goal must have some method of erasing the differences which inevitably arise among imperfect human beings. Two methods are available. One is the old, much-used method of violence. In it the will and beliefs of one individual or group are subjugated by violence to the determined will of another individual or group. It is the method of self-assertion and of little or no respect for the other. The other is the method of love. It entails self-denial, high esteem for the other, and a great reverence for the will of God. Interestingly enough, man is tempted to throw the cloak of holiness over both of these, when really only the latter method is holy.

Christians in the day of Paul were tempted to use the first method. It came so naturally. It seemed permissable to use it for achieving holy ends for the Kingdom of God. Paul suggests all this when he writes, "Let nothing be done through strife or vain glory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves." (Phil. 2:3)

Paul, with eyes that saw, noticed that Christians often strove with one another ostensibly for high and holy purposes, when in reality they were trying to win their point because of vanity and the desire for self-glorification. Paul saw that tenaciously defended beliefs are often (not always) only the mask behind which hides a highly defensive self. He looked with suspicion on strife, for he knew that the right heart conditions were lacking there.

Paul suggests the right method for settling differences. Each Christian is to esteem the other better than himself. That takes humility, an open mind, an open heart, and above all love. When men with differences meet in such a manner, then the differences are not enlarged by each bracing himself against the other. Rather the differences tend to vanish as each assumes that the other may be right and may have something to teach him. Each seeks to learn from the other, and the two become more closely fused in union. They become more and more one through the mind which was in Christ Jesus.

Inevitable differences arise in our General Conference for no one is perfect. We need a method for erasing these differences. God has given us the right one. Let us use it. We can be assured that it works. To use it we must follow exactly what the Holy Spirit says through Paul. Let there be nothing among us that has even the semblance of strife or vain glory. Let us be "lowly" in mind. Our ideas may not be so true or important after all. Let us really respect each other to the extent that each esteems the other better than himself.

Does this mean that we should not have strong convictions, that we should be wishy-washy? Far from it. It means that we should not assert self, but rather seek the will of God. It means letting the other person express himself while one listens with utter receptivity. It means asking questions in an humble manner when certain points are not clear. It means maintaining one's former stand, when after trying one's best to learn from the other, one still sees the matter in the same light. This latter statement is potentially dangerous. Satan tempts us sorely to believe that we have truly sought to learn from the other person, while all the while we have only been going through the form of it. If Paul's method is to erase differences it must be truly tried and not played with hypocritically. When it is used as God wants it used, then it will work. Then one or both of the two parties which differ will give in, and right and truth will prevail. If we cannot get together as Christians, then something is wrong. And let us not be too sure that the fault lies with the other person. "... let each esteem other better than themselves." —rw.

WE REMEMBER

No longer is Dr. E. L. Harshbarger with us to work and to inspire as he used to do. His talents were employed in much hard work, work done for the sake of others. Students and audiences deemed it a privilege to hear him present the truth with grace and salt. His were not the easy, vague generalities. He had the facts. When perplexing problems of peace work arose he was one of the first to be thought of. To him we owe much for the provisions in our nation's laws which permit men to be true to their conscience. His life was characterized by humility and service, two marks of greatness in the Kingdom of God.

IN MEMORIAM

EMMET LEROY HARSHBARGER, son of Samuel and Edith (Yoder) Harshbarger, was born near West Liberty, Ohio, Sept. 16, 1901, and departed this life July 26, 1942, at 4:10 p. m. in the Bethel Deaconess hospital in Newton, at the age of forty years, ten months, and ten days.

In his early youth he united with the Mennonite church near the place of his birth.

His early education was obtained in the public schools of West Liberty from which he graduated as valedictorian in 1918. The next year was spent in the normal school of Logan county.

He taught four years in the grade schools of Ohio during which time he received a years college work in summer school in Bluffton college, Bluffton, Ohio.

In the fall of 1923 he re-entered Bluffton college to complete the requirements for the A. B. degree which he received with honors in 1925. He taught one year in the high school of St. Paris, Ohio, and four years in the high school of Bluffton. During this time he attended summer school at Ohio State University where he was awarded the Master of Arts degree in August, 1929.

Dr. E. L. Harshbarger

He was appointed assistant instructor in the history department of Ohio State University in 1930 and at the same time worked for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy which he obtained in June, 1933.

In the summer of 1936 he was a Carnegie Fellow at the Institute of International Law in Ann Arbor, Michigan.

He became a member of the faculty of Bethel college in September, 1933, which position he maintained until his illness.

Among his other activities he was a director of a study group in Europe in the summer of 1937. He was instrumental in founding, and was dean of the Kansas Institute of International Relations which was held at Bethel college from 1935 to 1940. He was active in college debate circles, among other offices holding that of governor of the Province of the Great Plains in 1939-1940.

He spoke frequently before church and civic gatherings on the subject nearest his heart—good will among all peoples. He was president of the Peace Committee of the General Conference of Mennonites from 1936 until his death.

He was an active charter member of the Kiwanis club.

He will be missed as a worker in the Bethel college Mennonite church where he served as teacher of the Men's Bible class, as presiding officer at church meetings, and in other capacities.

He was married to Eva Geiger of Bluffton, Ohio, August 19, 1925. He is survived by his wife, two sons, John Howard and Ivan LeRoy; his mother, Mrs. Edith Harshbarger, Urbana, Ohio; one brother, Luke, of Springfield, Ohio, and two sisters, Mary, of North Newton, and Mildred, of Akron, Ohio.

Funeral services were held Wednesday, July 29. A brief service was held at the family home at 9 o'clock, with Rev. Peter Goertz having charge. Public funeral services were held at 10 o'clock at the Bethel College Memorial Hall, with Rev. J. N. Smucker, Rev. Peter Goertz, Rev. Ed Kaufman and Rev. C. E. Krehbiel taking part. The Bethel College a cappella choir under the direction of Prof. W. H. Hohmann sang, "Be Still My Soul," "Hark; Hark My Soul," and "My God and I." Honorary casket bearers were Bernard Bargen, Jacob Doell, Abraham Friesen, John Moyer, Aaron Regier, David Richert, Peter Wedel and Abraham Warkentin. Active casket bearers were Ralph Kauffman, Leonard Kreider, Harry Martens, Willis Rich, Otto Unruh and Sam Goering. Burial was made in the family lot in Greenwood cemetery with Rex. M. Moody of Moody's Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Though no longer with us to work as formerly, his influence carries on in those whom he helped to see visions and dream dreams, in those who were touched by his warm friendliness, in those who observed his witness in intense suffering, and in those whom he loved very dearly.

A PRECIOUS POSSESSION

"It is a precious possession, and he alone wins it who pays the price. It is richly worth the cost of tears and pain and inward struggle and prayer. To let loss and defeated hope and perplexity and the fear of death come upon us with all their crushing power, and then, in the midst of them all, to gather slowly the inner forces of our being as if in full sight of God and thus to push back their deadening weight and stand forth strong and unconquered, this, this is an achievement worthy of the best that is in us. Many of us know what this is, and prize it so highly that if all else were to be taken from us, we would beg that it alone might remain."

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

OUR HOMECOMING FROM INDIA

By Dr. H. R. Bauman

Work was going on as usual in Champa, C. P., India. Mrs. Bauman was packing for the hill vacation, and had hoped to be with the children in Landour by May first. I was to follow two weeks later and stay till near the end of June—six weeks. Our plans were to leave India in December for our regular furlough after eight years of service. The children return from school the end of November and start school the middle of March. As soon after the end of school as possible we wanted to sail for home and put the children in school in America the middle of January. The spreading of the war to Burma and the bombing of Ceylon and the Orissa coast in the Bay of Bengal brought the war within three hundred miles of our station. The feeling that the war would never affect our mission area began to fade. We were immediately put into danger zone No. 1 when we had been in zone No. 3. It was felt that the Japs might attempt an invasion of India through our area and attack the great iron works at Tatanagar and other places from the rear.

On April 23rd notice came "strongly advising" us to leave for America unless we were absolutely necessary to the military program. Sufficient accommodation was being made available for all Americans who wanted to leave. No other ships might be available for months or even two years. All those who desired to leave India within two years had better leave but all were advised to leave. The government of India, however, had given us no notice or warning to leave. They feel that they have things in hand and depricated any attempts at evacuation from our area.

On April 25th the missionaries were in session and decided that those whose furloughs were due this year should leave now and that any others who might desire to leave for home might do so. We were to go at once but the steamer was in Karachi, and we were to be there by April 30th. This was impossible. No packing had been done and the children were in school nine hundred miles away. I immediately wrote to the consuls in Karachi and Bombay (we were in the Bombay area) that if the boat was delayed until May 8th we might be able to make it. Reservations should then be made. Reply soon came asking us to be in Karachi between May 12th and 15th. This we thought we could do. Arrangements were made for the children to accompany someone to Karachi, and we would go straight from Champa to Karachi. Mrs. Bauman cancelled her hill going. So many passanger trains in India were cancelled and travelling discouraged. Travelling was very slow and difficult. Trains were overcrowded. The poor often got no tickets. Those who were able to bribe the ticket agent got tickets. Railway coolies too sometimes trying to get big bribes would hold up passengers. Yes, many Indians at present are taking advantage of war times and making travelling difficult. He no longer falls at the feet of the white man. India wants to be free of all foreign domination. This is very evident when travelling.

Notice soon came that the ship was further delayed. Had it been sunk? Packing was finished to the extent that we could be ready on a few hours' notice. The hospital work went on as usual. We worked until the last day. We left Champa for Bombay May 28th hoping to find the children there on our arrival the next day. Passage was fully confirmed May 26th. On arrival in Bombay May 29th we found the children but also learned that two of my telegrams had not reached them. The principal of the school felt they had better not go since the passage did not seem to be confirmed. Only limited accommodation was promised on the ship leaving Bombay instead of Karachi. The children went with the intention of returning to school if passage were not obtained. This was in the height of the hot season, temperature 114 F.

Passport was obtained and baggage sent through customs. Permits had to be obtained to get drafts, travellers' checks, and American money. Permits had to be obtained from the police, military authorities, and Reserve Bank of India to leave India. Permits had to be obtained from the government of the Central Provinces to return to India after regular furlough in America. All men passengers and women without children had to sign statements that they were aware of the fact that no life boats were available in case of emergency. They would have to take to rafts. Promises had to be signed not to mention anything about the ship after landing. "Loose tongues, lose ships" was posted in the pier and on the ship.

Our steamer sailed about 3 p. m. May 31st. It seemed everything was done on a Sunday on our trip. Sailed on Sunday, reached harbor in South Africa on a Sunday two weeks later, left that port on a Sunday one week after arrival, and arrived in New York Harbor on Sunday night six weeks after leaving Bombay.

The trip itself was rather uneventful. As far as we know no submarines were seen. The destroyer which accompanied us the last two days dropped five depth charges the last day out, but I saw no submarine. This was plainly seen from deck at a distance of only about half a mile. An airplane also watched over us the last lap of the trip. Before that we were not accompanied as far as we know. However we depended on the great Pilot into whose hands we had entrusted ourselves. Many of us had the assurance before we sailed that we should get to our destination somehow, sometime, not necessarily without getting off the ship though.

Only the minimum amount of baggage was brought along. Our goods are stored in Champa to which we hope to return after the war. The political situation is such we do not know what may happen tomorrow. We feel however that the medical missionaries will be the first that will be allowed in India under HOME Rule. The church of Christ will remain in India whether the foreign missionary remains or not. Most likely there will be a time of severe persecution for the Indian Christians but that too will have its good effects.

The missionary group enjoyed fine fellowship on ship board. Every evening twenty minutes after sunset we had a song service ending with a prayer and the national anthem. On Sundays regular services were held and also Christian Endeavor. Open meetings were held in the afternoon when the Political Situation in India, the Educational work, The Church in India, Missionary work in India under Home Rule, etc., were discussed. It was surprising to note that most of the missionaries took a very optomistic attitude towards the future of missions in India. We had a very representative group on board ship. There were 470 missionaries, with nearly half of these children, representing nearly all the American missionaries in India as well as some Canadian and a few English missions, comprised our group. At first some of the non-missionaries objected to our meetings and singing. Before we reached New York many of those joined in the singing and some even requested special songs. I should mention also that every morning a Bible class was held when the Gospel of John was studied. Unfortunately 'mal de Mer' made us stay in the open as much as possible and we could not attend these classes.

The children had their troubles. Measles and whooping cough were brought on board so every ten to fourteen days we had a new batch of patients. Isolation accommodation was meager so all the doctors and nurses got their share of patients to look after. There were fourteen missionary doctors and even more nurses on board ship. One doctor had his appendix removed two days after leaving South Africa. Ships do not stop for operations or burials these days. This seventy year old doctor was out of bed the 8th day and before we reached New York he told me that he felt fine and thought he could make hand springs.

Rumors on board ship were numerous. We never knew what to believe so got to taking them all in a humorous way. We never knew just where we were except in God's care. We went from the middle of the hot season to the middle of winter in South Africa and arrived home in the middle of summer, a distance of 12,000 miles plus at least two thousand miles of zigzagging. It was a great experience. All this distance on the path of PRAYER, for were they not praying for us in India! Missionaries had a special prayer meeting in South Africa when they heard of us, and the people in America too were remembering us. Yes, God answers prayer, He is still on His throne.

Business and Salvation

By Walter E. Isenhour

Business and salvation should go together. Why not? We realize that we are in a business world, and in order to live we must transact business. Everybody must have a living. God expects us to have an occupation, and to deal one with another. There is, indeed, a business side of life as well as a spiritual side. Both should go together. Absolutely.

No man should engage in business that is wrong; that is out of keeping with God's holy Word and will, that gives him a guilty conscience; that would keep him out of heaven, and that would hurt his fellowmen physically, mentally, morally, financially and spiritually, and keep them from serving and worshipping God acceptably, and rob them of heaven.

If men everywhere would take salvation into their business, and business into their salvation, which is reasonable and right, this would be a far different world to what it is today. Everybody would treat each other fair and square. There would be no lying, cheating and defrauding. In laboring for one another, and in dealing with each other in business, it would be pleasant. Men would not mistrust each other. Every man would give a hundred cents to the dollar and sixteen ounces to the pound. They would live and let live. They would be absolutely honest with each other. This is how it ought to be.

However, since the vast multitudes leave God out of their business, and won't live to do His holy will, it is up to those of us who blend business and salvation to be true and faithful. Let's do our best to be straightforward and honest in the business world, and to serve and worship God acceptably. It is wonderful to owe no man anything but to love him; to realize that we are not beating our way through life by dishonest means and methods, that we are doing God's will by the occupation we follow, the work we do, the way we deal with our fellowmen, and meanwhile have our affection set on things heavenly. Yes, every man's business should be in harmony with salvation—with God and His will. No one can be dishonest and unfair in his business, or follow the wrong business, and in the meantime have salvation, rich, full and free. —The Gospel Banner

By J. Winfield Fretz

RECREATION UNDER CHURCH DIRECTION

In practically every Mennonite community in America there are church regulations advising against or entirely prohibiting, on pain of exclusion from church membership, attendance of certain forms of public commercial amusement such as picture shows, dancing, roller skating in public rinks, and pool rooms. Certainly there is good reason for these restrictions among Christian groups. Most thinking young people understand the justification of the rules because of the inconsistancy of such activity with Christian conduct and ethics.

The thing that young people chafe under, however, is the attitude of irresponsibility on the part of the older people to provide something wholesome and constructive in its place. Young people believe in Christian Endeavor meetings, in Sunday School class parties and other church activities, but they feel there is need for wholesome fun, sociability, and Christian fellowship in addition. This has been constantly denied them. I believe the Mennonite Church has refused to face this problem squarely and honestly. She has refused to wrestle with the problem in official sessions. Her members have refused to admit that clean recreation and directed play is any part of the church's responsibility. A good many ministers have recognized the seriousness of the problem and have tried to do something constructive about it. But one minister or one church alone cannot provide the solution.

Several Alternatives

This denial of responsibility to provide attractive and worthwhile activities for our young people on Saturday and Sunday evenings has resulted in, and will continue to result in several unsavory alternatives. The use of the automobile has made it possible for the young people to get in their cars and drive away from home leaving many parents feel about their sons and daughters like Abram of old: "and he went out, not knowing whether he went." From observation and experience all of us know that when once loosed from the bonds of home and community young people, filled with the hunger for adventure and daring, do things that they realize later on would have been better for them not to do.

Another alternative frequently resorted to is that of parking on some out of the way place. The potential evils of this type of activity are evident enough not to need elaboration. These undesirable alternatives to a wholesome recreation have led to some of the most shocking immoralities in some of our supposedly strongest Mennonite communities. Ministers and older people should not delude themselves into thinking that the occasional confession of sin on the part of a young couple in their church is the extent of immorality and sin in their congregation. That confession generally represents only those whose sinful acts have caught up with them or whose tender conscience prompts them to seek forgiveness.

These remarks are not the result of a careful investigation on my part of the immoral conditions among Mennonites. They are merely the essence of what I have discovered incidentally through my associations with Mennonite young people from various communities over the years. The same observations could be made by anyone else who wishes to "have eyes to see and ears to hear." The substance of it all is this that if the Mennonite Church does not assume responsibility for creative and constructive recreational activities for its young people they will find it somewhere outside the church or they will resort to unwholesome activity within the church. The late popular phrase "go places and do things" is characteristic of youth but unless the church feels some obligation for determining the kind of places to go to and the things to do she cannot expect that her young people will automatically choose the straight path.

Invitation

The First Mennonite Church of Summerfield, Ill., extends a cordial invitation to all delegates and visitors who are planning to attend the Fifty-Fourth Session of the Middle District Conference which is to be held in this church from August 16-18. Summerfield is located on Route 50 and can be reached by the Greyhound Bus line out of St. Louis.

—Rev. Elmer Basinger, pastor

Addition to Conference Program

On Monday evening the Women's Missionary Society will have charge of the program of the Middle District Conference. A member of the Ebenezer church will lead in the devotions. Music will be given by the Berne, Indiana, Society and the Summerfield Church. Mrs. Ferd Isaac and a missionary from China will give missionary talks. —Sec.

THE CHRISTIAN'S SERVICE STATION

By Mrs. Sam Preheim

We are constantly being advised over the radio, and other advertising agencies to have our car serviced before undertaking a journey. This is good advise, and a wise person will follow it.

It is just as important that every Christian should have his life serviced. Yet how often we Christians undertake the journey of a day without realizing the importance of having our life serviced for that journey.

In meditating upon this I noticed several similarities which are interesting to note.

First let us remember that a car that is not in running condition, is not serviced. It is taken to the garage to be repaired by a master mechanic. So also the Christian life that is not functioning must be repaired by the Master Mechanic, Jesus Christ. It must be revived, and a revival meeting is a good place for it.

The Christian's service station is the Mercy Seat of Christ. His servicing is his period of devotions, which should include, scripture reading, prayer, and meditation.

Every car, even in the best of running conditions, must be serviced regularly in order to keep it so. So also every Christian needs regular periods of devotion.

Some Christians think once a week, preferably the regular Sunday morning service, is sufficient. Others find it to be wiser to service their life every morning before undertaking the journey of a new day. While still others wait, to their own sorrow, until in distress.

The first thing the station attendant does is to fill the tank with gas. Gas supplies the power, power to perform. Christ has promised power, through the Holy Spirit, to those who ask of Him. Power to witness, power to serve, power over temptation. "They that wait upon the Lord, shall renew their strength." Isa. 40:31, Acts 1:8.

Next, the supply of oil is checked and if necessary is replenished. We are told that proper lubrication prevents friction, increases efficiency, and lengthens the period of the car's usefulness.

What is there that the Christians receive at their divine service station of daily devotions that prevents friction, increases efficiency, and lengthens the period of their usefulness? Is it not love revealed by a patient and unselfish spirit. "Love suffereth long and is kind." Read I Cor. chapter 13.

Of course the water there is checked. It is dangerous to let the supply of water in the radiator get too low. An over-heated engine may cause various kinds of trouble. I remember one instance when it caused a "cracked head." Likewise, the Christian needs to provide a reserve supply of cooling influence. A proud spirit and uncontrolled temper, like the over heated engine, may cause all sorts of disaster, a big head, hot head, even a cracked head. Humility and self-control, are cooling influences obtained through the power of Christ's Spirit; and most of us need to replenish the supply daily through communion with Christ.

Another important service rendered at the station is the checking of the air pressure in the tires, decreasing, or increasing it as necessary. Our reason informs us that the proper amount of air in the tire is necessary in order to insure smooth riding. The inflated tire absorbs the rough, uncomfortable, irritating shocks, which would otherwise be nerve-wrecking. Most of us realize in our Christian life the need of just such servicing, as there are so many experiences that are irritating and nerve-wrecking, such as, doubt, worry, anxiety, fear, and misunderstandings. "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on Thee."

"The little sharp vexations,
And the briars that catch and fret,
Why not take all to the Master,
Who has never failed us yet?

Then leaving all our trials.
With the One divinely strong,
Forget that we bore the burden
And carry away the song."

There is one more service which the station attendant performs, of which we sometimes think lightly, but which in reality is of the greatest importance. This service is the cleaning of the windshield, thus producing a clear, and unobstructed vision. Why of the greatest importance? Because a car is a power for death if guided through obstructed vision. Unobstructed vision is important, for the safety of the car. its occupants, and everyone who crosses its path.

Our service station attendant, even Christ, has promised us clear vision if we come to Him and ask in faith. He will receive a vision of the pitfalls and snares of the tempter, a vision of our duties and responsibilities toward God and our fellowmen. a vision of our insufficiency, and His all-sufficiency, a vision of our present privileges in Christ Jesus and future blessedness yet to be realized.

Poor visibility causes many accidents; Jehovah, speaking through Proverbs 29:18 says, "Where there is no vision, the people perish."

How many an accident has been avoided by having the car properly serviced. How many could have been avoided if everything had been checked over, no one

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Clyde H. Dirks, Hutchinson, Kansas

AUGUST 17—"If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink." John 7:37

The late Mrs. Porter, widow of a missionary said, "If Christian people did but know how men thirst after God, they surely would hasten to send them the news of His love." Can it be that we have neglected others because we ourselves have not come often enough to drink at the fountain of life? Can it be true as someone said, "We export so little Christianity because we have so little?"

Once in Kansas City, I left my hotel room for a cafe for breakfast. It was too early for the cafe to open, but looking in I learned a parable. I saw the waitresses eating their breakfast. "They were feeding themselves before they fed others." It is so in Christian experience. We cannot give what we do have, therefore we must feed our own souls before we can feed others. We must drink at the fountain before we invite others. We must be won before we can win. The text implies a need. "If any man thirst." Thirst is relieved not by wishing or weeping, trying or crying, struggling or suffering, but by actual drinking. "Drink or die," there is no other alternative. Once you drink you must continue to drink. The memory of a drink yesterday will not suffice today. Life is much like a storage battery. When in use it is constantly giving out, but it will not last long unless it continues to receive.

AUGUST 18—"Christ is all, and in all. Col. 3:11

Someone has truthfully said that "man is like an airplane, the higher he rises the smaller he becomes." When one can say, "Christ is all" then that one has become so small in his own estimation that God has first place in his life. It was said of the consecrated Bishop Thoburn that "he chose Christ as a Career." The choice of anything is not only for something, but is at the expense of something else. If you read this book you cannot read that one. If you go here you cannot go there. If you desire to be alone with someone, you cannot be with another. So to say that "Christ is all" means that you are willing to give up anything and everything that will hinder you from making Christ real in your life. Emerson said that "God offers every mind it's choice between truth and repose. Choose that which you please, you can never have both." God offers you the choice between a self-centered or Christ-centered life. You must take one, you cannot have both. Can you say, "For me to live is Christ?" No one has a right to do as he pleases unless he pleases to do right. If Christ is all, then He will be in all that we do.

AUGUST 19—"Henceforth I call you not servants; I have called you friends." John 15:15

This is the line of promotion. We who begin as slaves have become friends. We have gone up the grade of Christian relationship. A new consciousness dawns within; a larger sense of life possesses us.

Friendship is one of God's choicest gifts. Prov. 17:17 says, "A friend loveth at all times." Most accurately this describes our Saviour for what friend is more constant that He? It also describes what kind of love we ought to have for Christ. Christ applied the beautiful term of friendship to us in vs. 14. "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you." In asking the question, "Can two walk together except they be agreed?" the prophet Amos gave expression to the basic consideration of forming and cultivating friendship. In it he also gave the reason Why our friendship with Christ is often so unreal and uninteresting We want to go our way while Christ goes His way. "A friend," it is said, "is one who walks in when everybody else walks out." Today while many walk out from Christ, may we walk in and do his bidding.

AUGUST 20—"But Grow in Grace." II Pet. 3:18

Spiritual growth is a living act. We cannot originate it, nor force it. We may encourage it and help it by prayer, meditation on the word, self-denial, and by Christian work, but like the lily or flower, tree or plant, all our growth must be the legitimate result of life within, which life is given us of God. Spiritual growth is spiritual life unfolding. It cannot be forced and remain true. We can make the clock strike before the hour by putting our hands to it, but it will strike wrong. We can tear the rosebud open before the time, but we then destroy its beauty and fragrance. God has a perfect plan for the weaving of our lives. When we live in opposition to that plan we mar the web. Every time we interefere we make a flaw.

Growth may be hindered by unfriendly conditions such as cold, droughth or weeds. Remove these hinderings and, without effort, there will be growth. Life is formed much the same as an icicle—one drops at a time. If the water is clear it will sparkle in radiant beauty, but if it is muddy it will mar the beauty of the icicle. Like the icicle, life takes the color of that which feeds it. Christianity is a process repeated; not only a process remembered.

AUGUST 21—"Be thou an example of believers" I Tim. 4:12

Every man leaves his mark. Whether Christianity is to be static or dynamic is largely up to us. A Christian must himself be the living evidence of that which he says if his words are to have power and be effective.

The old colored lady truly said, "You can't lead where you ain't goin'." A stream can never rise higher than its source. A man will not long be successful in trying to make others what he is not. The value of your life to the world will be measured not by what people see of you, but by whom they see in you. The label on the flower vase goes for little. The fragrance comes from what is in the vase, and not from what is on the outside. A native Chinese who for the first time saw a missionary said, "I have often heard of Christ, but this is the first time I have seen Him walking around." A minister who had often talked to a prisoner about Christ found him unmoved. Then one day he offered him a pardon and became the prisoner's substitute. The prisoner's heart softened and he yielded to Christ. He said to the minister, "It was not what you said, but what you did that broke my heart and caused me to yield to Christ.

AUGUST 22—"And the Name of the Lord Jesus was Magnified." Acts 19:17

This statement by Paul recalls to our minds the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in Heaven." In II Cor. 5:20 Paul says, We are ambassadors for Christ." An Ambassador is a "representative or agent for another charged with a special mission." As Christians we are not only representatives of Christ, but are directly responsible to seek the good of others. When young people asked William Booth for a Christian Endeavor Motto, he gave them the word "others."

When I discover a remedy that cured me, I am under obligation to share it with others who have what I had. When I taste a new food, I want to share it with others who have not heard. How blessed to have the testimony of the evangelist of whom it was said, "When he came into the room you felt that he had brought God in with him." Wesley once told a ministerial Candidate whom he ordained, "Get on fire for God and people will come and watch you burn." Life will advertise what is in it, and may God help us to magnify Him.

AUGUST 23—"Unspotted from the World." James 1:27

In the economy of life we are persuaded to make daily contacts with the world, and if there is compromise in the least of things, the world will leave its impression, its spot upon the Christian.

How often we see people who are like the boy, whom the minister saw, standing by the door of his home bitterly crying, in need of help, and yet not daring to lift the latch. When asked why he cried, and why he did not go in he said, "Mother sent me out clean this morning, but I waded in the mud, and just look at me now." He had done what he pleased to do and the world had left its spot upon him.

Truly has someone said, "Renounce the world, and you conquer it. Love the world, and it conquers you."

We cannot "walk" in the council of the ungodly, and "stand" in the way of sinners, and "sit" in the seat of the scornful" and yet enjoy the presence of God. Daily ought we to pray, "Lord if Thou wilt thou canst make me clean."

AUGUST 24—"I seek not mine own will, but the will of Him that sent me." John 5:30

Christ had no doubt about His mission to earth. He came to reveal the Father. He is God's final word to the world. In Heb. 1:2 we read that "God, —hath in these last days spoken unto us by His Son." In fulfillment of this Christ said to His followers, "He that hath seen Me, hath seen the Father."

Is not our mission also to reveal Christ? Paul said, in Gal. 1:15 & 16 "God hath chosen me to reveal His Son in me." Believing this He could later say, "Christ liveth in me" and "For me to live is Christ." Paul not only believed something; he lived someone. Belief is real and vital only when it is acted upon. Someone has said, "The philosopher is satisfied to explain the facts about life, but the Christian wants to do something about it." To do the will of God is to discover that to expend is to expand; that to give out is to increase; that to feed others is to gather up; that to give drink is to be refreshed.

Running water doesn't freeze nearly as quickly as water that is still. If you don't want to get cold, and indifferent, keep going. Get something to do, and do it.

CHICAGO MINISTER WEDS OHIO BRIDE

Rev. Erwin Albrecht, pastor of the First Mennonite Church in Chicago claimed for his bride, Miss Magdalene Bixel of Bluffton, Ohio. The Ebenezer Mennonite church was the scene of an impressive wedding Sunday afternoon June 28th. Only members of the immediate families were present for the double ring ceremony which was performed at two o'clock by the Rev. Arnold C. Schultz, pastor of the bride. Immediately following the church wedding the parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Bixel honored the couple by an informal reception held for 150 guests. An arrangement of vocal, piano, and vibra celeste music was held throughout the afternoon. Pink and white graced the dining table as well as those serving.

The bride is a graduate of Bluffton High School and Bowling Green State University, and has been teaching third and fourth grades in Beaverdam schools. The groom, formerly of Kingman Kansas, has been pastor of Chicago Church since his graduation from Bethel College, North Newton, Kansas, and Hartford Theological Seminary at Hartford, Connecticut. A host of relatives and friends wish them heaps of success and happiness in their new married life and Mission work. —Corr.

LIFE SKETCH OF ERNST HARDER

It was in January, 1922, when a battle was fought between the "red" and the "white" armies in the southern Ukraine near the penninsula of the Crimea in Russia. The shell explosions could be heard clearly from the big Mennonite hospital in the small town of Muntau. I was born, so to say, between the two enemy lines in this hospital on January 23. It had been a custom in our family to give the oldest son the name of the father; but my parents agreed to make an exception in my case. Born in such a dangerous and earnest time, I was named Ernst. My younger brother now bears my father's name, Abraham.

The first three years of my life I had no home. My parents had lost ownership of the orphan home where they had given forty parentless children a place of loving care. Our family fled from one part of the country to the other, until finally in 1925 we escaped to Germany.

Here is where my life began. Here I spent my childhood years, and together with the beginning of my boyhood years, these were the sorrowless, the happiest of my life. I attended public school in East Prussia and four years of the Oberreal-schule in the Pfalz. I liked everything in school except mathematics and latin. My heart's desire was to become a farmer. I had the most enjoyable time during my vacations, working on several of the big German farms. When I was ten years old, my parents allowed me to join one of the many German youth organizations. To my delight, I was taken to a two-weeks' summer camp during my first year already. This organization, besides following a Bible study program, had also a well-rounded physical education program. I learned to know other young boys, and enjoyed the friendship of many older boys. We camped, we played, we sang, we prayed. Our aim was to bring to Christ all German youth attending higher educational schools.

When I was eight years old, I had told my mother that I would try to follow Christ. On the day of my baptism, when I was fourteen years old, I was conscious of the fact that my life belonged to Jesus. Neither of my parents ever has asked me or urged me to accept Jesus as my Saviour. Their lives, and especially mother's Sunday School instructions, were so convincing to me in those early years, that I could not but follow their example. During my later life Jesus has become greater to me through my dealing with Him in prayer and experience.

In 1935 my father accepted the call as teacher to the Zentralschule in Fernheim, Paraguay. My two brothers and I rejoiced at the thought of going into a land that was just recently settled for the first time. (Two thousand Mennonites came in 1930 from Russia to settle in the wild Chaco region. After five years they had built up a school system and called my father to teach in the Zentralschule). But soon reality told us that not everything is gold that glistens. We had to get used to the hot climate, the relatively poor housing conditions, and many other things.

I attended the last year of the Zentralschule. Then I worked at home on our little farm for a year and at the same time assisted in carrying out the physical education program in the Zentralschule. All this did not satisfy me. Oh, I liked to farm and work on a ranch, but it seemed to me that that should not be my life work. When I looked around, I saw many projects which needed young and energetic help. There was our little mission station trying to carry the Word of God to the brown Indians; I felt that there would be a field for me. Fernheim would need teachers and ministers in the future; there was a place to serve my own people.

I decided to go out and try to get an education that would make me better qualified for any field in which God would want to use me. Mr. Epp, a missionary from Canada, told me that many students in Canada and the U. S. earned their way through school. That gave me an idea, and the next time a representative of the MCC came to the Chaco, I asked my father to find out what the possibilities were of going to school in the U. S.

At first there seemed to be no chance, and so with the consent of my parents, I went out to study the Spanish language in our capital, Asuncion, in order that I might be able to enter a high school later on. I worked during the day and studied in the evening. The following year, however, there seemed to be a way open to go to the mission school in Argentina, which is under the direction of the Old Mennonites. While waiting for a visa to enter that country, I received the glad news that North American friends had arranged for me to come to the U. S. It came to me as a definite answer to all my prayers and a sign that that was the right way for me to go.

I have since graduated from Freeman Junior College and will be a sophomore in Bluffton College next fall. I have learned to appreciate many things that are dear to you, and I have learned to love the people of this country. I had to get used to your thinking and had to adapt myself to your manners. There are some things in which we do not agree and many things which we have in common. My sincere hope is that my studying here may tighten the bonds of friendship between our Mennonites in the South and you Mennonites in the United States.

This summer I'll be in Mountain Lake working for some of my expenses, and during the school year I'll be able to work too. I would like to earn my way through school as independently as possible but my status as an alien student makes that a bit hard. The help that has come from the young people has been appreciated, and I would like to express my sincere thanks to those who have helped.

Half of the six years for which I came are about over already. I am looking forward anxiously to the time when I shall be ready to go back to my people or to bring the glad message to the Indians. Till that time I shall try to use my time as profitably as possible.

We live in a time for which the future looks dark. We hardly dare to think of the war and hatred everywhere. Then I like to go back to the Book of all books where it says in Psalm 27:14, "Wait on the Lord: be of good courage and he shall strengthen thine heart; wait, I say, on the Lord." To trust in the One who reigns over all has been one of my desires. Sometimes that is even harder than one thinks. A half year after I had left home, I lost my dear mother. That created an empty place which can never be filled again. She was the soul of our house, the center of our home life. And she is no more. Her prayers, however, have helped to form and guide my life more than anything else. Her life was service; my life shall also be a service for God. —Taken from a news letter of the Western District C. E. Convention.

REFUGEES AMONG US

Matthew 25:34-40; Hebrews 13:1-3

I. Worship Period:

1. Songs: "I Need Thee Every Hour," No. 187; "Guide Me, O Thou Great Jehovah," No. 160.

2. Reading of leading topic, prayer and leader's remarks.

3. Dramatization: "Whither Next"—eight characters at five cents; "Around the Calendar with the Crops"—twelve impersonations at ten cents, to be had through Mrs. A. J. Neuenschwander and Mr. A. E. Kreider.

4. Offering for relief work.

II. Leader's Inroduction:

One of the cruelest results of the war has been the dislocation of large numbers of families.

The American Committee for Christian Refugees estimated in 1941 that there were about 20,000 Christian refugees in this country. Most of these were of Jewish stock.

It is clearly the responsibility of the Christian churches to receive and welcome these refugees into our midst.

They are eager to find humble security in this land of opportunity, to avail themselves of American ways and privileges, to make their own contributions to the development of American communities. Let us by every means in our power help these people, our brothers in Christ, who have been treated so harshly by the enemies of everything humane and Christian. "If a man love not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?"

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

1. Jesus among foreigners,	John 4:40-42.
2. Unjust treatment,	Exodus 1:13, 14.
3. Hospitable heathen,	Acts 28:1, 2.
4. A prevailing friendship,	Ruth 1:16, 17.
5. Love in practice,	I John 3:17, 18.
6. Lamenting captives,	Psalm 137:1-4.

IV. For Discussion:

1. Why are people so hesitant to welcome refugees into their midst?

2. What can your group do to help refugees?

3. How can we build Christian attitudes toward refugees?

V. Facts for Study:

In a very real sense the migrant group is a refugee group in the United States. They are homeless wanderers welcomed for the labor they give, but unwelcome to the life of a community. They cannot become rooted anywhere for they go along with the crops, now picking berries or fruit, then harvesting beets perhaps, then picking cotton. Christian people are just beginning to wake up to the fact that they have responsibilities toward these unfortunate peo- people. They and especially their children need homes and some comforts, self-respect and the respect of others, love and understanding.

The Japanese are also becoming a refugee group among us. Many of these people are being robbed of their rights in these days. They are losing the sense of security which this country should offer at least to those of them who are its citizens. They are even becoming outcasts whom nobody wants. Their chances at earning a living are very slim, they are often driven from their homes. Their community life is broken up. How will they feel toward those who are treating them unfair and unjust? What can we as Christians do for them? The churches will have a big problem to solve toward these who are at our very doorstep. Let us begin to think earnestly about our obligations toward them.

VI. Illustration:

"One incident stands out vividly in the minds of those of us who docked at Halifax, Nova Scotia, during the Revelation Cruise. We had come many miles to a strange land, and those who greeted us on the shore were people we had never seen before; but they did not seem like strangers to us on the "Transylvania" as we lifted our voices together in the praise of Him who had bought us all with His blood and made us rejoice in His presence. How wonderful was the unity of the Spirit among the peope on the pier and on the boat that day! Perfect strangers clasped hands. Many wondered that day if this were not a glimpse of the joy we shall have in heaven when all barriers will be broken down."

VII. Food for Thought:

"Judson, after undergoing unspeakable suffering while lying in stocks in prison for months, gained his freedom and then asked the king of Burma for permission to go to a certain city to preach his gospel. 'I am willing for a dozen preachers to go, not you,' was the reply. 'Not with those scarred hands. My people are not fools enough to listen to and follow your words, but they will not be able to resist those scarred hands.' "

MY FAVORITE BOOK

Advertise this meeting with a huge poster on which appears an open book and this verse:

"Books are keys to wisdom's treasure,
Books are gates to lands of pleasure
Books are paths that upward lead,
Books are friends. Come, let us read."

Include the announcement of time and place of meeting.

A week previous to the meeting ask a number of Intermediates each to ask at least five persons these questions and report the answers at the meeting:

1. How much time do you give to reading? 2. What do you like to read? 3. Do you read a daily newspaper and which part of it is most interesting or helpful to you? 4. Do you think books influence your life? 5. How do you choose what to read? 6. How should you?

Ask each member to tell what ten books he would like with him if he were shipwrecked on a desert island.

Ask several people in your church who love books to arrange an exhibit of favorite old and new books.

Write to publishers and ask for lists of new books soon to be published.

If your church has a library, ask your members to select a book from it and read it before the next meeting. You may be surprised at the number of good books. If your church has no library, perhaps the Intermediates can start a growing interest in the building up of one.

IMPROVING UGLY PLACES IN OUR COMMUNITY

II Kings 25:8-10; Neh. 3:1-3

A "Clean Up" Meeting

Every community has districts that are less desirable than others. There are ugly places that need our attention. Why are these places ugly? Perhaps its just neglect, poverty, sin, and carelessness. Just so in our own lives, when these sins creep in, we become ugly and hideous. It cripples our bodies and minds.

How the ugly places in our community need us! Just where we are, is our Jerusalem, and the Bible tells us that "Ye are to be witnesses unto Me both in Jerusalem and in all Judea and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth." (Acts 1:8) So begin just where you are and tell those about you how great things the Lord hath done for you. As we tell others of Jesus and as others receive Him unto their hearts, things of ugliness and sin take to their heels.

We would rather find the beautiful things and places, but our topic tonight is considering how to do away with some of the scars which effect the beauty of their surroundings.

The following is a list of scars we find in our communities. Discuss them and make your own conclusions. (a) vacant lots, junk yards, rubbish heaps, (b) tumble down buildings, (c) streets littered with paper, (d) Stagnant pools, (e) Liquor advertisements.

The Question Bee

1. Report on these scars in your community.
2. How can the best approach be made?
3. Who owns the unpainted buildings?
4. Can we ask the town authorities to cover up the present dump and establish another in a less public place?

The Prayer List

Ask God to make our lives beautiful places for God to live in. May we never allow sin and rubbish to mar our lives, and cloud our path, and close the view to see Jesus at all times.

will ever know, as there are no tabulated records to compute from.

How many an opportunity for Christian service has been neglected or inefficiently done, how many a temptation yielded to, how many a "blow out" that could have been prevented, if we had taken time to have our life serviced by Christ; only eternity will reveal. If you would live the abundant, victorious life do not neglect to have it serviced daily at the Mercy Seat of Christ. —Wilmington, California

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

A. S. BECHTEL

August 23, 1942

REALIZING THE PRESENCE OF GOD

Gen. 28:10-22 Study Gen. 27, 28

The two chapters included in the larger lesson of today tell the story of how Jacob, through trickery and at the behest of his mother, obtained the blessing which Isaac had intended to give Esau, the first-born son. Esau's resentment toward Jacob became very bitter and his expression of remorse is very pathetic (27:36-40). He determined to kill his brother after the death of Isaac (27:41, 42). The mother, Rebekah, heard of this and she immediately urged Jacob to flee to Haran where her brother Laban was living. She probably suggested to him that he find a wife there from among her kinsmen. Isaac acts upon this suggestion and sends Jacob away with his blessing.

God's Promise to Jacob vss. 10-15

Jacob traversed much new and strange hill country along the way to Haran. After several days journey, night overtook him in a strange and hilly country. He was alone, away from home and friends. He lay down to sleep in the open air. He used flat stones for a pillow, a custom practiced in palestine to this day. He had an unusual dream, really a vision, for God was granting to him a gracious revelation. He was tired, thinking of home, his mother, his aged father. The dream was Divinely sent. The flat limestone rock of the region takes the form of steps rising heavenward. He saw these as he lay down to sleep. In his dream, he sees these reaching to heaven, showing a close communication between heaven and earth and especially between God and man.

He sees God's angels going up and down these steps—a two-way passage-way. Most important of all, he sees a vision of the Lord who speaks to him and repeats to him the promises which had been made to Abraham and Isaac (vs. 13-15). He knew that God was speaking. Jacob and his descendants were promised land in every direction (cf. 13:16 and 26:4). God gave him a four-fold assurance which must have greatly encouraged him: (1) the divine presence, "I am with thee;" (2) the divine protection, "and will keep thee;" (3) the divine preservation, "will bring thee again unto this land;" (4) the divine purpose, "I will not leave thee until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of." This assurance must have been very comforting to Jacob in his loneliness while going alone into a strange country.

Jacob awoke from his sleep convinced that the Lord was there as well as in Beersheba. He perceived that he did not get away from the presence of God. No such open revelation had ever come to him before and he was taken by surprise. How often God takes care of us without our knowledge. How much more peaceful life is when we know that God is with us. He experienced a feeling of awe such as he never had before this. He felt this place was intensely sacred because of the revelation given to him. To him it was God's house and heaven's gate. He set up a pillar of stone to mark the site and consecrated it with oil as a memorial and named the place Beth-el, which means "house of God."

Jacob vows solemnly that since God has promised to do so much for him, he will do something definite for Him to show his gratitude. Jacob took God at His word and declared the Lord to be his God. Jacob believed that faith should be accompanied by service. Our gratitude to God needs to be expressed in commitment of self and substance to God. Thanksgiving and giving are inseparably linked together.

Realizing the Presence of God

Many find it difficult to realize God's presence so clearly that it becomes a source of inspiration in every-day living. Some act as though God were only in the house of worship. They appear to think of Him as far off at other times. If we can feel the fact of "God's presence" with us, it will help us to invest all of life with sacredness. Faith is our second sight which makes God real to the soul. He is always at hand and our hearts should be responsive to His voice.

How may God's presence be made real to us?

How do Christian vows help us to keep close to God?

HOME FOLKS FIRST

Would you like to know how always to say
The pleasantest things in the pleasantest way?
To bring you the friends you will always need?
This bit of advice you must surely heed—
Just say them to the home folks first.

Do you want to know how always to do
The things that politeness requires of you?
(For courtesy is the oil, you know.
That makes the wheels of the day's work go.)
Just do them for the home folks first;

For home folks are nearest and dearest and best,
And home love is surest to stand every test;
The pleasantest things in the pleasantest way—
So if you would know how to do and to say
Just do them for the home folks first.

Where Shall I Go

By Betty J. Regier

Margaret sat listening to them. They rose one by one and talked. The basement of the church was crowded—some chairs had been brought down from the primary rooms. Most of the members of the young people's organization were there, also a sprinkling of visitors and older folks.

The meeting was in the form of a consecration service. It was very inspiring: lit candles, a wooden cross dressed in white paper, and bright spring flowers. The minister had made a very nice speech about devoting one's life to Christian service. And there in that midwestern town church the farmer's sons and daughters, the children of millers and grocers and banker had risen and, as with one voice, consecrated their lives. Some had pointed out specifically what they wanted to be; others, though not sure, knew they wanted their lives to be lived for Christ. Their voices were clear, pure, the voices of youth, sure and certain, free of the cynicism and disillusionments that years may bring.

Of course, Margaret had often thought about it in the sixteen years of her life. She had thought vaguely of doing some great and grand thing some day—perhaps write a book that would stun the world, or work in some great country like Africa as a missionary. But she, like the others wanted to know; sixteen is so impatient.

The meeting broke up in a buzz of talk.

"Wasn't it wonderful!" Arlene, Margaret's friend said, as they started leaving the church. There was such a difference between the girls—Arlene was short and dark, vivid in an impulsive, hurried way, and Margaret was tall and blonde with a quiet, steady personality overlying great potential energy.

"What are you going to be Marg?" she asked.

"I—I'm not sure. I don't seem to have found out."

"Why don't you teach? Think of the chances there! All those little children! The minister said childhood was the most elastic period of life—the chance for stretching the right way." Arlene spoke gravely as though her childhood were a thing of the far past.

At home, Margaret closed the door quietly and entered the living room.

"Well, how was the meeting?" her mother asked cheerily, looking up from her book.

"Wonderful!" Margaret breathed. "It was about what we were going to do with our lives. Some of them stood up and said. Ned's going to be a doctor and go out along the Congo or somewhere. Arlene said she was going to do welfare work."

"That's fine," said her father, who was helping Dick, the younger child, construct a model plane. "And I hope you young folks realize that your work must be, for Christ if you are Christians."

"Yes, dad, of course."

"What are you going to be, Margaret?" Dick asked, carefully applying glue to a delicate splinter of wood.

Margaret sank into a chair.

"Oh, I don't know!" She burst out. "All the boys and girls seem to know about themselves and I don't about me!"

"You're young," her mother consoled.

"You'll know soon enough," her father said. "Just keep on praying, working, living the Christ-life."

The next day it rained. Margaret's home was near town and she walked the short distance to school. After the breakfast dishes had been washed, she started out, clad in slicker and rubbers with an umbrella over her. The rain poured so heavily, it seemed like white walls all around her, shutting her in a circle of gloom. The mud sucked at her rubbers and there were rivers in the road. But Margaret liked the rain and the wet sweet smells that came with it. She started humming a song.

Then she stopped. She thought she heard something. Or was she mistaken? No... A whine.... or more like a weak cry, very near. Then Margaret saw the car. The rain dimmed her vision, but when she drew nearer, she was horrified at see that the car was lying on its side in the ditch, its wheels pitifully twisted.

"Oh!" Margaret cried and almost dropped her satchel and the umbrella. Her first impulse was to run.... run.... through the mud and rain... to safety ... to warm rooms and people. Then she heard the cry again. She felt, intensely, the eerie situation—the floods of rain isolating her, the empty road, the wrecked car, the feeble cry.

She thrust from her the desire to run. Somehow or other she half slid, half crawled down the steep bank. The door of the car hung away, like a broken arm, and the windshield was shattered. There was the smell of exposed gasoline.

There were two people in the car—a very little boy, who was whimpering, and a man who lay very quietly.

"I—I must get them out!" Margaret cried. "Cars burn sometimes when there's a wreck, don't they? There's that awful smell of gas."

She grabbed the child by the arm. Something told her that the accident had just happened.

"Come, get out!" she cried. "Hurry! Are you hurt?"

But he was more scared than hurt. Poor little

CORRESPONDENCE

BETHANY MENNONITE CHURCH

Quakertown, Pennsylvania

The Union C. E. meeting of the West Swamp charge, of which Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander is pastor, was held in the Bethany Church on July 19. Our topic was "Is Mission Work Still a Challenge?" Dr. Floyd S. Pannabecker was our speaker. We were very happy to have him as our speaker at such a time like this and on such a vital question. He told us of the terrible predicament in which the Chinese teachers are. The mission schools are the only schools which are still open. The teachers are harrassed by both the Japanese and the Chinese Communists. These Chinese Christians are put to a very severe test. Let us pray for them.

We also had the pleasure of having in this same meeting Drs. Harvey and Ella Bauman, who with their children have just returned safely, God be praised, from India. Mrs. Bauman brought greetings and said that this time it had been harder to leave the dear people of the mission station than ever before. War conditions made it necessary for them to leave at this time. Dr. Harvey is one of our own "boys," and naturally we are especially glad and thankful that he and his dear wife and family were brought home safely. Dr. Ella said in another meeting, "How could it be otherwise when the whole route was prayer-lined?" Isn't that a beautiful thought?

Besides these two speakers we had the devotional opening, leader's short talk, and two questions on the topic by members. We all felt richly rewarded for coming out on a humidly hot night, the warmest of the season.

The worker's conference of the Eastern District was also held in our church. It was a wonderful conference. Mrs. Ed. K. Stoneback, Corr.

GRACE MENNONITE CHURCH

Albany, Oregon

Enrollment in summer Bible school was 111. Twenty-nine had perfect attendance; thirteen were absent one day; the average attendance was sixty-nine. There were fifty beginners, thirty-five primary pupils, and twenty-six Juniors. Of the total number forty-two attend our Sunday School. Thirty-four attend none. This last group we shall with the help of God win for the Sunday School.

We had four teachers in the Beginners department, two teachers in the Primary department (that is one teacher and one helper), and two teachers in the Junior Department. During the last week another helper took charge of the memory work of the various groups. Mrs. P. A. Kliewer was supervisor and had charge of the opening exercises.

The closing program demonstrated the work of the ten days of school. The auditorium was filled. Many expressed their praise. In these ten days the Word was planted into the hearts of the children through songs, hand work, illustrations, Bible stories, and memory work. Hand work was used to drive home through the eye the great truths of the Bible. The cost of the ten days was $28.88. This was all paid one week after the school closed. Some of it came from the free-will offering of the closing night and the rest from our Sunday School birthday offerings.

We are looking forward to the visit of Dr. and Mrs. P. A. Penner, who have been in India for many years, engaged in the greatest of all tasks, that of preaching the glorious gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Through the children who were in our Bible school we will find open doors into homes that are in great need of the Saviour. With His help we shall enter these doors. Pray for us and the work here. Soon 35,000 soldiers will be here. Even now we can notice in the city new opportunities.

The people on the farms are very busy with berry-picking, etc. The attendance at our Sunday Service has not fallen. In fact, it is better. We thank God for the faithful numbers of this church.

Rev. and Mrs. Ummel and daughter, Miss Emma Ruth, and Miss Classen were in our church one evening in June. The message and the pictures by Rev. and Mrs. Ummel were greatly appreciated. Miss Claassen gave the report of the resolution made by the young people of our conference. "Come, Lord Jesus." May He find us busy. Corr.

Where Shall I Go?

fellow! His face was gray with shock. He was so little, much younger than Dick. He wailed in bewilderment and fear.

The man opened his eyes. He was drowsy; his face, too, was very pale. There were bruises on it, blood ran down his hair.

"Oh hurry, please!" Margaret cried. She helped him to crawl from the wreck. As in a dream, she worked, feverishly, for the smell of smoke had quickened her actions. The man didn't seem to realize what had happened.

"Jackie," he called, "Jackie, you here?" The little fellow cried and clung to his hand.

The rain will put the fire out, Margaret thought. But if it doesn't. . . . I must get him away from the car. He's going to fall. . . . O dear God, help him to walk at least fifteen feet more.

"Can you walk—just a little farther?" Margaret cried. She was supporting him with all her strength.

"Of course," he mumbled. "My head hurts terribly. I can't see very well."

They seemed to be wading through a sea of water. Jackie fell once with a splash. He shrieked, and clung to Margaret. Everything seem to stop them. It all happened in a minute or two—but fear had slackened time to slow-motion.

Somehow Margaret managed to propel the man to a higher elevation where there wasn't so much water before he collapsed again. Faintly she heard the crackle of flames which licked up the gasoline with greed and were fed by it to lashing fury.

"Why doesn't someone come!" Margaret thought, not realizing that it had happened so quickly. She did not realize that she was cold and mud spattered, her books were gone, her slicker was on the man. "He must be dead!" she whispered. The little boy cried dismally.

"Don't go 'way," he wept, when she turned to leave.

"But listen, Jackie," she cried. "I—I want to get help. You stay here by—by daddy."

"No! No!" he stormed. "No!" He hugged her arm convulsively. He was so little. If it had been Dick, (he had brown, thatchy hair like Dick's) could she have left him?

"Come along then. But oh - you - you can't walk!"

"Don't go 'way!"

"Here let me carry you."

She hoisted him up. He almost choked her with his arms.

"Don't go 'way!"

"No—I won't. See, I won't leave you."

Desperately, she floundered to the road. One rubber was gone and her shoe too. She had cut her foot somehow.

"Hold on to me tight!" He sobbed.

"Sure! I won't ever let you go."

Then suddenly there were people there, and a car—miraculously—a doctor. There was much confusion and running to and fro. People were talking to Margaret, a stretcher bore away the sick man, more people came, cars plowed up at the roadside, men stood in boots in the ditch watching the car burn.

Someone tried to take Jackie away from Margaret. He shrieked and buried his face on her shoulder.

"He's frightened. Let me go with him to the hospital." She said gently.

She couldn't understand why they were concerned with her at the hospital.

She sat by Jackie's crib while he slept, her bandaged foot on a chair. She felt tired and so spent. People had talked to her but their voices as their faces, were a blur. Out of it all she had gotten that Jackie's father was alive and would get well and that she had saved them. Her mother had come too.

It was so peaceful here. White-capped nurses rustled to and fro, low-voiced, cheerful, and efficient. Once Jackie stirred and a nurse bent over his bed.

"Where's daddy?" he cried.

"Sleeping now. He's tired. But he'll want to see you soon."

"Oh. Are you a nurse?"

"Yes."

"Where's that girl?"

"Here. Right here." Margaret said. He groped his hand to her and she took it.

"You're my nurse." He said sleepily. And then Margaret knew! She knew where she would dedicate her life! She looked around her in wonder—the white beds, the shining floors, the Christian nurses, the order, the cleanliness, the gentleness. . . . Jackie, with his thatched hair, his "Don't go 'way," his motherliness (his mother was dead), his dear little clinging hand, had shown her!

Later her mother came with the car to take her home. Never had Margaret been so happy. A voice inside her bubbled with song and she was beautiful with the beauty of shining purpose and youth.

"Mother, I don't believe I've ever been so happy."

"Yes, it was a great thing and a brave thing you did dear! You went right into danger to rescue them. I shudder to think of it, but darling, I'm so proud of you."

The tears burned in Margaret's eyes.

"That wasn't exactly what I meant," she said in a low voice.

And then she thought of Jackie again, the little patient, lying in his hospital crib, a nurse bending over him with a soothing hand on his brow.

—It has been traditional with the four churches of Pandora and Bluffton, Ohio, to exchange pulpits for the morning services. This event occurs annually the Sunday following the Fourth of July. In the evening a song festival is held. This year the Ebenezer Mennonite Church was host to an overflowing crowd. The song leader for the occasion was Dr. S. F. Flueckiger of North Manchester, Indiana. He formerly worked in the community and served the church in various capacities. He also attended Bluffton College. Thus he renewed many friendships in the surrounding churches. The pianist was Miss Mabel Amstutz of the local church. All four churches responded with a choir number and one special number. The climax, however, came when the Dr. Flueckiger led in a "Hymn Singspiration" both in English and German. Memories lingered when everyone stood to sing "Ich weiss einen Strom," a favorite of one of the pillars of the church, namely P. B. Amstutz, who has gone before us. All his children and grandchildren were touched. Such a Mennonite heritage as we are entitled to is something to be grateful for. The closing number was "Unfold, Ye Portals" by all four choirs, without rehearsal. Truly everyone present expressed the sentiment of a real fellowship and that it should never be discontinued. —Corr.

—From Mennonite to Mennonite: A Mennonite girl in Reedley, California, put her name and address on a pine knot and put it into the box of grapefruit which her mother had packed. The box came to a Mennonite store in Middlebury, Indiana, and the pine knot came into the hands of J. Herbert Fretz, who is in charge of the Mennonite church of that place for the summer.

MINISTERIAL INTERNSHIPS

A young man who has completed all or a part of his schooling for the mininstry and who awaits a call from some church is often somewhat troubled when that call is slow in materializing. A church which is without a minister and yet would like to call a young man is often somewhat troubled when all available young men are inexperienced in the total work of a church and are comparatively unknown to them.

Some ministerial students serve non-Mennonite churches during their school years. They may learn much, but very likely their experiences will be considerably different from what they would be in a Mennonite church. Furthermore, they don't become known among our Mennonite people as they would if they served one of our churches. Some of our college students get opportunities to serve in surrounding churches. This is highly desirable. However, this experience is mostly limited to preaching. During the summer some of our college students serve Mennonite churches which are without a pastor. This is good experience, but the guidance of an experienced minister is usually not available to them.

Might not some form of ministerial internship be helpful to our churches and to our young men who desire a pastorate? The doctor finds an internship valuable. Once the apprenticeship system was depended upon for the training of novices. Perhaps, we are missing something by trying to cram a man's training into the four walls of the classroom. Let knowledge be confronted by the problems of actual church work and it tends to become a more workable knowledge. The Old Doctor Mayo had in his home a kettle in which was the skeleton of an Indian chief. No wonder the Mayo Brothers learned their anatomy well. When too small to peer into the inside of a man lying on a table, the Doctor is reputed to have set one of the youngsters at the head of the dead man upon whom the autopsy was being performed. Steadying himself by clenching the hair of the dead man the youngster had a good opportunity to lose fear and to learn something about operating. Actual church work and learning need to go hand in hand under the guidance of an experienced man.

Might it not be well for some of our churches to inaugurate such internships? They would render a service to those churches desiring to call a young man, to the young man who wants experience, and to themselves. It is natural for churches to want men with some experience. A young man needs that which an experienced man can teach him in the process of actual work. The church which offers the internship benefits through the added services of another man.

We have in our conference thirteen churches each of which have more than four hundred members. Perhaps, there is enough work in each of these for the pastor to appreciate the help of another man. The young people, especially, might welcome such an arrangement. Perhaps if a church of two hundred members can support a pastor, then those of four hundred and over might be able to pay for the board and room and something extra necessary for an interne. The three summer months or half a year or more could be used for the internship.

Whether the above suggestion is the best solution to the problem which confronts us is questionable. However, it is at least one possibility for attacking that problem. Comments from the pastors of some of our larger churches and from some of our young men would be appreciated. —rw

I. CHURCH SCHOOL DAY AUGUST 30, 1942

After discussing the question with some members of the Board of Education it was thought advisable to ask our churches to observe the last Sunday in August as Church School Day. This will make it possible for our congregations to give special attention not only to our schools but especially to the young people from their midst who are going away to school. Grade school as well as high school students should also be remembered. Other denominations are also doing this. From the publications of one of these are submitted the following objectives of this Church School Day.

I. To provide an appropriate observance of the opening of our church schools and of the public schools.

1. By conducting a worship service with a Christian education theme both morning and evening.
2. By selecting a Scripture with a Christian education theme for the Sunday school lesson.

3. By conducting a farewell service for young people going away to our church schools.

4. By discussing a Christian education topic in young people's meetings and junior meetings.

II. To bring to our Mennonite people an increased consciousness of the importance of our church schools.

1. By calling attention to the dangers and temptations confronting our young people in the public schools and state institutions of higher learning.

2. By emphasizing the difficulties confronting the home in meeting the school problem without the aid of the church school.

3. By giving proper recognition to the provisions that the Mennonite church is making through her schools for the training of her young people.

4. By encouraging Mennonite young people to attend their church schools.

III. To secure a closer relationship between the church and her schools.

1. By emphasizing in our church schools the need of a deeper devotion to that task of rendering the highest possible service to the Christian home and the church.

2. By impressing our people with the responsibility of supporting our church schools.

a. By sending our young people to those schools.

b. By giving enthusiastic and prayerful promotional support to the schools.

A DOLLAR TO EACH C. O.

"If my wheat will make thirty bushels to the acre, I will give every C. O. boy in camp from our church one dollar." This is what one of our members said before the harvest.

His wheat made thirty bushels. His dollars are on the way to the boys. Here is what one of the boys writes in receipt of his dollar, "If we only had more at home like that, our lot would be a great deal easier. It is not the dollars we care for so much, but the spirit of good will."

Have we thought of the situation of our C. O.'s? Many of us earned forty and fifty cents an hour at this time of the year. They are in camp because they said it is wrong to go to war. Do we owe them something of our earthly possessions?

Although our treasurer informs us that our church leads all others in contributions for C. O. camps, we have only reason to be humble before our God, that he has laid it upon all our hearts in a special way to support this work with such willingness. —Bulletin, Bethesda Mennonite Church, Henderson, Nebraska

CPS Camps

A WORD TO THE WISE

An aged, deeply concerned brother wrote the Akron, Pa. office as follows:

"It seems to me that a word of caution to our church folks through our publicity notes would be in order. Boys coming home from camps should be very careful in remarks as to their good times in camp. Others who are drafted and inducted into the army resent such remarks by C. O's. IT also creates a bad feeling in the home communities when such talk is broadcast by the home folks."

A word to the wise is sufficient. —Orie O. Miller

ON BEHALF OF THE BOYS IN CAMP

As the period of service in camp continues indefinitely there is a continued opportunity for pastors of the boys to carry on correspondence with them. Many boys and pastors have already profited through this fellowship by letter. It is felt that this opportunity for helpful contacts should not be neglected.

At the same time friends, Sunday School teachers, and acquaintances of camp boys could be of genuine help by writing an occasional letter.

GOOD WORK

The North Fork Camp in California recently was commended by Mr. M. A. Benedict of the Forest Service, Sierra National Forest, for its satisfactory work in fighting forest fires.

"I have heard so many favorable comments about the work of your group at the fire in the Sequoia Forest," says Mr. Benedict, "that I want to express the appreciation of both the Sequoia and Sierra Forest for the fine way your group performed at the fire.

"Their willing and enthusiastic attitude was very refreshing and their work was of high caliber. I hope that you will express to them our keen appreciation of their efforts."

THE POINT OF VIEW

A little girl walking in New York city with her father, saw some workmen on top of a building twenty stories high, and she asked, "Papa, what are those boys doing up there?" He replied that they were not boys, but men, who looked like boys because they were so high. The little girl meditated for a moment, then said solemnly, "They won't amount to much when they get to heaven, will they?" The question gave the father food for thought. As we rise toward heaven self becomes smaller, until by and by, when we reach the height of the heavenly character, self will not amount to much. —Selected

WILHELMINA KUYF ARRIVES

Sister Wilhelmina Kuyf has arrived from China at one of our ports, but the port is not mentioned in the news received. She is being detained on board ship until all information about her experiences has been sent in through the F B I. It seems that this is done with all of the passengers.

We thank the Lord for her safe arrival and hope that she will be able to give us some information about the other interned missionaries. She, no doubt, will report as soon as she arrives at home in Philadelphia. —P. H. Richert, Sec.

TEACH THEM TO OBSERVE

Just before Jesus left this earth in physical form he gave the disciples a few very important commands. "Go ye... preach... teach them..." In our Christian educational program in India we stress the last of these three particularly, though not depreciating the others. We teach our school children the main contents of the Bible, the main truths. We teach them to memorize leading chapters and verses of the Bible. Since children are by nature hero worshipers we teach them Biblical biography. However, there are still further phases of life in which we must "teach them to observe."

We must teach them that truth is worth more than any benefit obtainable through a lie. We must teach them that even a crust of bread honestly earned is worthy of God's blessing, whereas a king's meal procured in a crooked way is not worthy of such a blessing. We must teach them that a loan means that whatever has been borrowed must be returned. The great majority of our people think it clever to get out of paying back what has been borrowed.

We must constantly teach against the ideal of mere sitting and talking wisely, doing as little as possible and drawing as high a salary as possible. Such ideals are in too uncomfortable many of our people. This is not in line with Christ Jesus who said, "My Father worketh, and so do I." So do they in whom Christ dwells. "I in Thee and they in me." So one of the Christians' ideals is honest, hard work.

These and many more common place things we must teach them to observe, not only the children, but the adults too. Hence, our Christian education program is heavy and demands constant effort and vigilance. —John Thiessen

OF ONE BLOOD

In this world there is a lot of social prejudice which in India takes the form of rigid castes. Each caste considers itself particularly of one blood which is different from that of other castes, so much so that members of different castes cannot eat together and surely cannot inter-marry. Against this evil the Spirit of Jesus fights. Yet periodically this evil wants to life its head within the Christian church.

In our Basna area about ninety-nine per cent of our Christians come out of one caste, the gara (Gara) caste. It has become so well known that garas are likely to become Christians that often there is no persecution. The non-Christian garas themselves think of themselves as potential candidates for Christianity. Our evangelists have a tendency to walk clear through a village without stopping until they come to that section of the village where the garas live. There they preach the gospel.

There is something to be said in favor of this, because thinking in India goes group-wise, not individual-wise. If the whole gara caste in India becomes Christian and really will be Christian, that will mean that the church is strong in India.

But there is also a serious drawback to this way of thinking about human beings. Already for some years a low caste, called "Ghasias" have been interested in Christ. The gospel has been preached to them. The missionaries have wanted to accept them. But our Christians as a whole have not welcomed them. They fear the mixture. Recently I drove through a village in which one of our evangelists had his touring tent. I stopped with him and talked with him. I pointed to a group of houses and said, "Have you preached there?"

He smiled and replied, "They are ghasias." So it goes. The Apostle Paul says in Christ there is no Jew or Greek, etc. Yet our Christians have not yet arrived at the Apostle Paul's level of thinking. We believe you in the homeland are praying for the church in India. Please, pray also for strength and insight in the church to overcome this division-spirit.

FRED JOHNSON WRITES July 24

We have just closed our daily vacation Bible school in which we had forty-seven children and young people. There teachers taught classes ranging from beginners to high school. All enjoyed the work very much. For this we thank the Lord.

Mr. Mark Kwanveyma, an elderly Indian, has been joining in our services. He requested that we open a Hopi Bible class, so that he could learn more of the Word of God in Hopi. He is not yet a Christian man, but he is one who is seeking the truth. Bear this man up in your prayers. No doubt the Lord is speaking to him and to others who have heard the gospel in Moencopi these days. May it please the Lord we may see souls come to the Lord one by one in Meoncopi. Pray for us workers at this mission.

ENGLISH HYMN BOOKS NEEDED

Some time ago a church wrote to the secretary that they had purchased the new Mennonite Hymnary and as a result they had a goodly number of copies of the Mennonite Hymn Book, 1927 edition, that might be used by some mission church.

We wrote to several of our mission churches and soon had two replies saying that they would appreciate the used but still usable Mennonite Hymn Books. Each church agreed to pay for the necessary express charges.

Now the call comes from some mission places in Canada that they would appreciate getting used copies of the Mennonite Hymn Book.

If any church has such, please, report to the secretary of the Home Mission Board, and give the number of good and usable copies you have. In this way we can make the necessary connections.

Thank you,
A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

Rev. Regier in Mexico

Rev. J. M. Regier, Chairman of the Home Mission Board, is at present spending about three weeks serving Mennonite churches in Mexico. In some instances he will serve Holy Communion. He will also perform some ordinations and visit the different groups with special services.

Services Started in Toronto, Canada

A goodly number of Mennonites in Ontario have in the past gone to Toronto to find employment of one kind or another. The Home Mission Board has encouraged ministers and elders living near this large city to make contacts with the people with an aim of bringing them together in worship services.

A series of services every two weeks have been held during the months of June and July. In the later of May, Evangelist J. J. Esau conducted the first of these meetings. At one of the first of these meetings held in the First Lutheran Church, about 60 persons were present. It is hoped that the work can be carried on regularly in the future and many souls nurtured in the Lord, and others brought to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ as Lord and Saviour.

Work of Rev. Esau

During the summer months when Rev. J. J. Esau visited the various churches in Ontario and Manitoba, letters came telling the board of appreciation of the good work of Rev. Esau.

Whitewater, Man. July 24, 1942

Greetings in Jesus Name:

It was our privilege to have Rev. J. J. Esau, Bluffton, Ohio, in our church July 9 and 10. While he brought us forceful and challenging Gospel messages. He shared with us some of his experiences; these were a source of inspiration to all of us. We wish to thank Brother Esau and also the Home Mission Board for this visit. We feel definitely that in this manner the spirit of missions was enhanced.

There are 430 members in our congregation and these live in the main in six villages or communities. We have worship services in all these places and as elder I serve with baptismal and communion services regularly and take turns in conducting worship services. This year it was our privilege to baptize seventeen young people on their profession of faith and to receive them into the church. This summer we had a large Young People's Rally in our Congregation when they came together from all the preaching points.

We ought to be very grateful that we have the opportunity to worship regularly in quiet and without disturbance and are permitted to live our life of faith as we understand it. We pray for the Board, the Lord's gracious guidance and presence.

Fraternally, G. G. Neufeld

MORBUS SABBATICUS

The Disease, its Symptoms, its Cure

Morbus Sabbaticus, or Sunday sickness, a disease peculiar to church members.

1. The symptoms vary, but it never interferes with the appetite.

2. It never lasts more than twenty-four hours.

3. No physician is ever called.

4. It always proves fatal in the end—to the soul!

5. It is becoming fearfully prevalent, and is destroying thousands every year.

The attack comes on suddenly every Sunday; no symptoms are felt on Saturday night; the patient sleeps well and wakes feeling well; eats a hearty breakfast, but about church time the attack comes on and continues until services are over for the morning. Then the patient feels easy and eats a hearty dinner. In the afternoon he feels much better, and is able to take a walk and read the Sunday papers; he eats a hearty supper, but about church time he has another attack and stays at home. He wakes up Monday morning refreshed and able to go to work, and does not have any symptoms of the disease until the following Sunday.

Remedy—"Be not deceived, God is not mocked." —Gal. 6:7.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

OUR BROTHERS THE AMISH

There are Mennonite people today who read about the Amish people and see their pictures in newspapers and magazines with interest. They are indeed fascinated with their "peculiar" ways and their "old fashioned" clothes. They seem so queer and so quaint with their horse drawn buggies, their plainly furnished and decorated homes, and their long beards. The fact is that these Mennonites very often do not know that the Amish people are a branch of the Mennonite Church and therefore brothers in the faith. In this matter I speak from experience. It used to be a boyhood delight to drive to Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, to see the Amish communities. It seemed almost like visiting a foreign country, so strange and novel were the customs of these people. It was not until I was well along in college that I discovered to my amazement that Amish people were Mennonites and therefore religiously related to me. This discovery was the stimulus for further serious thought.

How Account For Differences?

The fact is that there are many more similarities between our own branch of the Mennonite Church and Protestantism in general than there are between ourselves and the Amish Church. The beginning of these differences goes back to the early Seventeenth Century when Jacob Amman felt that the Mennonite Church was not adhering strictly enough to the traditional teachings of the church and for this reason gathered around him those who were like minded and established a separate branch of the church. Today the Amish still adhere to this rigid interpretation of church discipline while our conference and several other branches of Mennonites have grown steadily more lenient in matters of discipline and more indifferent to some of the religious principles of our church. It is generally conceded by impartial students of the subject that the General Conference of Mennonites and the Amish represent the two extremes of Mennonitism.

Whither Bound?

It might be well for us to examine ourselves and the road on which we are traveling to see where this road will lead. At the present time our church is serving in the capacity of a ventilator for Mennonitism. Our practice of conformity to large segments of society around us and especially to the larger Protestantism has been the door by which many have gone from the Mennonite Church. Our colleges have all too often been the stepping stones by which our young people have moved from the farm and the small town to the professions and to the large urban centers and thereby lost to the Mennonites. Of the thousands of Mennonites who have left the rural communities for the cities and won places of leadership and success in an economic and professional way, one can find scarcely a dozen who still claim to be Mennonites or even interested in the Mennonite Church.

Our Amish Brothers have remained in rural communities as farmers and craftsmen. They are the fastest growing branch of the Mennonite Church. They are the branch of the Church which more than any other body of Mennonites is today testifying to the "Faith of our Fathers." Leaders in the Catholic Church hold up the Amish as good community builders; the Federal Government points them out as model farmers; to many in the world-at-large they are those peculiar people who "never hurt anyone but always help people." And all along the Amish quietly go about their work and way of life without caring very much what people think. They sincerely believe they are serving God, and when people believe that, it doesn't matter whether they please man or not.

The Amish people are our brothers in the Christian faith. We can disown them, be ashamed of them, apologize for them or claim them as our own. Whatever we do will affect our branch of the church more than theirs. It is my conviction that we can and should claim them heartily and learn from them anew some of the basic religious values we have lost or voluntarily surrendered in the name of a more "broad-minded" Christianity.

FORTUNES AND MISFORTUNES IN PARAGUAY

From Brother Vernon Schmidt and Dr. John Schmidt word arrives telling of severe frosts in the Primavera and Friesland colonies and also in the Chaco. The Friesland colony suffered in particular because the tomatoes and other vegetables were badly damaged.

In the same letter both the Schmidts mention plans for road improvement, building of a telephone line, hospital construction, helping in the organization of the Bible School, etc. "The Chaco gives ever so many opportunities for planning," comments Dr. Schmidt.

Yet he asks: "Why stay here when I could do more enjoyable work some other place?" To answer his own question he quotes Romans 8:18, "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us," and I Peter 4:12, 13, "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you: But rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy."

Mennonites And Their Environment

By William H. Stauffer

The very impressive article in last week's issue of The Mennonite by my beloved teacher, Dr. C. Henry Smith, prompts me to say two things: First a word of agreement with what he has written. Second, a further word about tomorrow.

I hope that every minister and every lay-person has read and reread the six suggestions at the close of Dr. Smith's article. They certainly are worthy of consideration. The tragedy is that they were worthy of consideration a generation ago, but too many couldn't see it. I want to write particularly about the first suggestion: The great need of the Mennonite church is a training school for the ministry where the whole gospel is taught, including the gospel of peace.

I am one of those who took his seminary training in one of our so-called "best" seminaries. The scholarship was excellent. The general spirit was good. But the atmosphere was entirely urban. The emphasis was upon seeking for a large city pulpit. As a Mennonite and a great lover of rural life I simply never felt quite at home. Mine was a great seminary to which to go, but it was a hard place from which to come and be fitted for our churches. And I am sure that that is also true of a good many others who have gone to other seminaries.

On the other hand, I have noticed with a good deal of delight and satisfaction that the generation of preachers who came out of Witmarsium have something which many of the rest of us missed. When I see them together at conferences I am always the more convinced that we who have gone to other schools have missed something that is vital in fellowship, in a sense of common purpose, in a sense of deep understanding in the midst of small differences. Unless we have the courage and foresight to open a Bible school and seminary of our own our General Conference will disband in another generation.

Now about Mennonites and tomorrow. I am in thorough agreement with Dr. Fretz's ideas on this point. We are basically a rural people. Our genius is a rural culture that is really different. Our parents had it. We are rapidly losing it. And we are largely losing it because we are drifting apart and allowing urban ideas and urban environmental factors to make rapid inroads into our entire way of life. We will maintain our historic principles only as we again become rural, and emphasize the native values of rural life. We will be Mennonites, historically speaking, only as we become clannish again, but clannish for the sake of better family and community living, and not just for the sake of being clannish. Maybe we'll have to model after the Amish, but with intelligence and education. An Amish Bishop who is a good friend of mine tells me that if they would allow their children to go to high school and college they would go to the cities and villages, and they would lose them. He is exactly right. We must again discover the inherent values of a genuine rural culture, and build it into the entire framework of our communities so that our children will go to high school and college to educate themselves to return to their communities for better service.

To do this we must do more than have a Mennonite seminary for the training of our preachers, or even a Mennonite college or two to educate our youth. We must have that, but we must have more. That is too slow. If we'll depend on that alone we'll lose out. Our present generation of adults must be reached through an active extension department in our colleges. It is our parents who have lost this valuable spirit of rural life. Too many of them encourage their children to seek "higher" vocations than farming. Too many of them are not making their farms and homes something to which their children can return with a deep sense of humble satisfaction. We need to model after a fashion after our state universities and reach out into the entire framework of our community life, and build up clannish communities, if you will. But build communities in which the basic values of the soil and of general rural family living are brought together and enhanced by every member of the family. We really have something to give to the world if we'll take a hold of it and use it fully.

A GLIMPSE OF FRANCE'S FOOD SITUATION

"In general the food situation is not much better although there is some fruit now and then. They say that this part of France formerly had an abundance of fruit. This year there is very little to be had on the market. There are a few cherries for sale now and then. In case there are cherries for sale there is a long row of people waiting so that a person gets tired waiting for them. In the restaurant we have many new carrots and even turnips already."

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Clyde H. Dirks, Hutchinson, Kansas

AUGUST 25—"Follow Me, and I will make you Fishers of Men." Matt. 4:19

Jesus Christ today is calling men to follow Him and to take up His work. This call necessitated the abandonment of all former ways of life; to serve all earthly ties, and to take the way He had marked out. On a much traveled highway there is a large signboard. On one half of it is advertised beer, moving pictures, the dance, the card table and a goodly number of so called worldly pleasures. On the other half of the sign is a picture of Jesus Christ as the Supreme leader of youth. At the bottom of the sign is the question, "Which will You follow?" In answering the call of Christ we too must decide which way to go. We choose either His way or the world's way. We cannot follow both. Is God asking you to leave something? Christ's call is to go somewhere. It was not to follow out a life-direction already taken, but to begin and become something entirely new. Christ's call is to do something. First to enter into fellowship with Him.. Mark 3:14 "That they should be with Him." See also I Chron. 4:23, "They dwelt 'with' the 'King' 'for' his work." The choicest privilege of a true follower of Christ is to be "with Him." Secondly, the call to do something was to be active partners with Christ in His work. The call is to be "Fishers of Men." What will be our response? Let us say, "Lord, Here am I, send me."

AUGUST 26—"I am the Almighty God; walk before me, and be thou perfect." Gen. 17:1.

There is a vast difference in walking before men, and in walking before God. We have walked before our friends, our neighbors, and the world, very eager to win their regard and approval. Each step we have taken with the consciousness that we are being watched, and with the secret desire that our walk should be approved. We have found it quite convenient to put on a good front before men for they can judge only by outward appearances, "but God looketh on the heart" and that involves every secret thought, desire, and deed. It is to God that we must render an account of our lives, therefore let our walk be before Him. It is said of Enoch in Gen. 5:24 that he "walked with God" and the writer of the Hebrews says in Heb. 11:5 that he had this testimony that "he pleased God." Here we see that the pleasing life is a possible life for we see it in Enoch in actual living experience. Walking presupposes life. Only people who are alive walk. In we see that only "He that hath the Son, hath life." Walking suggests activity. Walking is the expression and proof of life. To walk with God means activity for God. The proof of God's possession of us lies in the Christian walk. "By their fruits ye shall know them." Walking involves progress. Stagnation cannot characterize the Christian life. We go "from glory to glory and are changed into the same image." Walking before God will lead to a separation from that which is displeasing to Him.

AUGUST 27—"Give me also This power." Acts 8:19.

Simon lived at a time of crisis much like that of our own day. People were thoroughly dissatisfied with empty formalities of religion. They were sick of the routine demands of traditions. They were yearning and crying for reality. All around people were expectant and ready to turn to something sure and abiding. What an opportunity for Christians to lead expectant, longing hearts to the salvation in Christ. Simon is a type of people in every age whose controlling desire is for power. Power to do some great thing. Simon's sin was not in that he wanted power, but in the way in which he wanted it. He wanted power the easy way. He offered money rather than himself. He wanted to be "some great one"—but he was "weighed in the balances, and found wanting.". The words of Him who knows the hearts of men are, "He that would be great among you let him be your servant." Simon wanted power without a change of heart. God teaches us here that what a man is sets limitation on what he can do. An apple orchard cannot be expected to produce peaches. Jesus questions his hearers "Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?" There is a vital relationship between fruits and roots. What a man is conditions what he does. Power, as manifested by Christians, made Simon conscious of his lack of power. The disciples did not say how much power they had, but their works for Christ caused Simon to say "Give me also this power." When Christians everywhere will begin to live, and bring their works up to their profession people today will be caused to say, "This is what I want," and will become Christians also.

AUGUST 28—"O Lord: Thou are my refuge and my portion in the land of the living" Ps. 142:5.

A fundamental need of every man is a refuge for his soul. Every living thing must have a place of refuge from the stress and storm of life. Animals have their holes and dens, birds have their nests, the day of toil has its night. Man, too, needs a refuge. There must be moments of relaxation, recreation, liesure, prayer and worship. Life grows stale and hard without a place of refuge. Physicians and psychiatrists are beginning to see the value of a refuge for the soul of men. Many human ailments are directly traced to man's lack of a refuge for his soul. Many are those who have regained health and physcial vigor because they learned to take their souls to refuge. The disciples must have felt like the Psalmist when Peter said, "Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou alone hast the words of eternal life." To whom should they go? The Pharisees? But they were insincere and insincerity is nothing to turn to when a soul is seeking refuge. To the scribes? With all their learning they did not recognize Christ when he came. To the rulers? They could not rule their own spirits. To the world? That refuge too is unsatisfying for "the world passeth away and all that is therein." Have not many of us often confessed with Abraham Lincoln "I have been driven many times to my knees in prayer to God with the overwhelming conviction that there was no place else to go." Does your refuge suffice? Can you say "Lord, Thou are my Refuge?"

AUGUST 29—"That He might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby." Eph. 2:16.

The message of the Cross is a message of reconciliation. God comes to man by way of the cross; man comes to God by way of the cross, and man comes to man by way of the cross. In this hour of the world's spiritual need the church must emphasize the cross. The world is now facing naked facts. The church must realize again that only the message of Christ and the cross can meet the need of a tired, perplexed, suffering and troubled world. The church has now a supreme opportunity to present the claims of the cross and the cleansing by the blood of Christ. Someone has said, "God may have had other words for other worlds, but His word for our World is Christ."

There are golden crosses on hymn books, crimson crosses on Bibles, little wooden crosses on mantle pieces or drawing room tables and golden crosses on watch chains. These are valuable only as they stir our hearts to consider The Cross on which Jesus died for our sins. For the Christian two things stand out in the cross. First, the moment you yield to it you will love it. If you take the cross from Christ, the world loses its Saviour. Second, against the background of the Cross you see the real value and worth of a soul. The price paid for you on the Cross is so great that in the light of it you cannot place a cheap value on yourself. Peter reminds us that we were "not redeemed with silver or Gold, but with the precious blood of Christ." The cross stands at the center of the world's best life. You cannot evade it. You cannot go around it, its arms are too wide. You cannot dig under it; its roots are too deep. You cannot climb over it; its head reaches heaven. You must face it and answer the question, "What shall I do with Jesus, who is called Christ?"

AUGUST 30—"It is finished." John 19:30.

What is finished? We are all the time coming to the end of things here. The day ends, the week ends, the month ends, the year ends, work ends, rest ends. There is an end to laughter, tears, fasting, feasting, journeying and abiding. Everyday is full of ends of things begun, but can we say any of these are finished?

When one goes into a cemetery he is profoundly effected by the recurrance of the two words, "born" and "died." There is no room to write what has been achieved between those two events. But there has been a beginning and an end. Yet can we say a man is finished when he is laid in a cemetery?

A man may lay down his pen at the end of a book and say, "It is finished." But is that the end of the book? The book has only begun. A man may lay down the traces of sweating horses at the end of the last furrow of the plowed field, and say, "It is finished," but is that the end of the field? No, the field will yet produce its greatest crop for the good of man. Suppose your friend is building a house. You were present when the foundation was laid. From time to time you watched the progress of the building. One evening your friend comes rushing in and says, "It is finished." You know at once what he means. The house is finished but is that the end of the house? The benefit of that house has just begun.

Was it the end of Christ when He died on the cross and said, "It is Finished?" The world was not through with Him when it nailed Him to the Cross. What is finished? Redemption. Here is perfect accomplishment. Completeness. It need never be done again. It can never be done again. The hymn has it, "Tis done, the great transaction's done, I am my Lord's and he is mine."

AUGUST 31—"Lookng for that Blessed Hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ. Titus 2:13.

Hope is the mainspring of human life, when the mainspring is broken the watch ceases to run. When hope is dead, the man ceases to act. There is no medicine that science has ever discovered so powerful as hope. No man is defeated so long as hope lives. No man can be victorious after hope is dead. This blessed hope is made an accompaniment of the new nature and works as an auxiliary force by which the soul is set speeding on the upward way. (See I Pet. 1:3-4.) Hope lives on the future. Faith may ask only for the present, but hope is faith plus expectancy. It is faith on tip toe of joyful anticipation. Hope is kept alive by tomorrow. It feeds and flourishes on the unseen, for hope that is seen (that is realized) says Paul is not hope. Confine hope to the here and now and it must straightway droop and die. The believer's position is that of waiting and looking unto the coming of the Lord and loving His

Eastern District Retreats

By Rev. Howard T. Landes, chairman

The fifteenth annual retreats of the Eastern District Mennonite Churches were held on July 16th-19th and July 24th-26th at our retreat ground, Men-O-Lan, near Finland, Pa. The theme of the retreats was, "The Shining Life" based on the Scripture Matthew 5:16, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father who is in Heaven." This theme was developed by the Reverend Walter H. Dyck, Beatrice, Nebraska, as follows: 1 "A Personal Testimony" based on "your light," 2 "A Spontaneous Testimony" based on "the word let," 3 "A Conspicuous Testimony" based on "before men," 4 "A Practical Testimony" based on "good works," 5 "A Fruitful Testimony" based on "glorify your Father." Other instructors were Dr. S. F. Pannabecker, who taught "The Shining Life on the Foreign Mission Field." Reverend A. J. Neuenschwander presented to us "The Shining Life Revealed by New Testament Characters." Reverend J. J. Plenert gave lectures on the book of the Colossians. Three helpful periods were conducted by a Christian layman, Mr. Carrol Parks, Allentown, Pa., on "Practical Points for Public Speaking and Helps for Sunday School Teachers and C. E. Workers.

There were 136 retreaters and nine members of the staff attending the High School Retreat. Those who attended the Senior Retreat numbered seventy-eight retreaters and eight members of the staff. This was the largest attendance in the history of our eastern retreats. The suggestion has been made to plan three retreats for next year.

The retreaters received many blessings. There were conversions, consecrations, and a deep desire on many to go back home to a life of service in their Sunday School and churches.

I asked several who attended the retreat to give their impressions in writing, "This is our second year at Men-O-Lan grounds. We had three very interesting and helpful instructors. We also had the privilege to hear Dr. Harvey Bauman who had just returned from India before the retreat. Many were brought to a closer relationship with Jesus our Saviour and Lord. This is the reason for having our retreats." Richard Delp, Lansdale, Pa.

Other comments received were, "This retreat was born in an atmosphere of prayer"... "I regret the retreat is ended, would love to stay longer." A Senior retreater said, "The Retreat was five times better than the best." We prayed at the opening of the retreat, that we might experience "days of Heaven on earth," and truly our prayers were answered.

Another high school retreater wrote, "Take one beautiful stretch of wooded Pennsylvania countryside dedicated to the service of God, add one dining hall and five cabins, (plus several necessary tents) and you have Men-O-Lan ready for a retreat. Measure out 136 Intermediates who have previously been filled with a strong purpose, a desire for Christian inspiration and instruction, mixed liberally with good fellowship.

"Dot with mixture of good leaders, long ones from Nebraska, medium ones from China, the short one from Quakertown; the size really doesn't matter, so long as they are imbued with the power of God, and spiced with a bit of good sportsmanship and humor.

"Fold in the Word of God without measure, and cover with abiding Presence of the Holy Spirit. Mix well for three days, and bake in the sunshine of Christian love. Yield-one perfect retreat, and the results are guaranteed." Miss Grace Moyer, Allentown, Pa.

The retreat, as perhaps no other place, impresses the truth that a "Simple Life" brings one closer to God. There is where we take time to visit our neighbors, to associate with fellow Christians, to drink in the beauty and peacefulness of nature, and most important of all, to worship the God of all creation and Christ our Redeemer, as well as to study and meditate upon His Word. What constitutes a "Shining Life" was also strongly impressed, as the leaders presented it in a challenging way, not only by their words but also by the testimony of their lives as they mingled with the retreaters." Dorothy Dietz, Quakertown, Pa.

NOTICE TO C. E. LEADERS

Beginning with this issue the date for each of the different C. E. programs will be omitted. It is not necessary in most cases, if not all, that a particular program be used on a particular Sunday. Most programs are of such a nature that they can be used on most Sunday evenings of the year. If you are a member of a program committee looking for program material, find some copies of The Mennonite and select the program which is suitable. We do hope that you will try to use as many of the Senior programs in order as you can, for they were designed as a series. —rw

SENIOR DEPARTMENT

Series for August—Evangelism

THE TIE THAT BINDS—Epesians 3:14-21

Suggestion:

Why not make this an open-air, sunset meeting with singing of a large number of evangelistic hymns. With a good song leader in a beautiful spot of nature where you can see the setting sun this should prove both refreshing and inspiring.

I. Worship Service:

1. Songs: "Day Is Dying in the West," No. 31; "I Can Hear the Saviour Calling," No. 500.
2. Reading of scripture passage, prayer, leader's remarks.
3. Singing.
4. Offering for C. E. Work.

II. Leader's Introduction:

"A tie that binds the hearts of Christian people to one another is their common faith. They believe in God. They have confidence in Jesus Christ. They recognize the authority of Jesus' teaching for themselves and for the world. They have faith in Him as the Saviour of the World.

Another tie that binds the hearts of believers to one another is their mutual love. "Beloved," said John, "let us love one another; for love is of God." The Christian love that unites Christ's followers in sympathy and fellowship is, as Professor Drummond used to say, "the greatest thing in the world."

A third tie that binds the hearts of Christians to one another is their zeal for the Kingdom of God. They are united in a common task: first, to exemplify in their own lives the teachings of Jesus, and, second, to spread those teachings throughout the world. Together they pray and work to hasten the day when the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdom of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ."

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

1. Blessedness of unity, Psalm 133. 2. Unity of spirit, Ephesians 4:4-6. 3. "No respecter of persons," Acts 10:34, 35. 4. Christ's prayer for oneness, John 17:20, 21.

IV. Instead of discussion period, use this time for singing.

V. Facts for Study:

Faith and love and zeal for the Kingdom, these are essential for any evangelistic work Those who desire to be evangelists must have their own hearts right with God, and right with each other. Further they must have an intense desire to bring those who do not know and love Christ to Him. The love of Christ for the lost must also grip their hearts, and "Seeking the lost, yes, kindly entreating, Wanderers on the mountains astray," must not only be a song upon their lips in moments of devotional services but a deep-rooted expression of daily living. Times when through song and service Christian young people become conscious of this mission are a bond which unites them for a common task.

VI. Illustration:

All of One Blood

As a doctor for twenty years in the Orient, I think I have a special right to speak on this subject. I have taken a microscope and examined the blood of Americans; I have taken a microscope and examined the blood of Koreans. There is no difference. Present-day medical science has developed a new blood test. As you know, before a blood transfusion is made, the blood of the donor and of the sick person must be tested to see whether their blood will mix with safety. Through these tests it has been found that there are four groups of individuals. Group one, two, three, and four are found in America, and you can't mix the blood of different groups even among Americans. Groups one, two, three, and four are found in Korea, in Japan, in China, in every race in the whole world. "God . . . hath made of one blood."

VII Food for Thought:

Somebody has said sometime: "Your life talks so loud I cannot hear what you say." May the church of Christ not only speak of Him but win men unto Him by its way of living."

INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT

My Favorite Hobby

Bible references on Hobbies:

The fascination of creating, Jer. 18:1-6; Skill in carpentry, I Kings 5:6; Skill in engraving, II Chron. 2:7; Skill in music, I Chron. 13:8; A chance for all kinds, I Chron. 28:21; Do with all thy might, Eccl. 9:10; Topic, Col. 3:16, 17.

Have your superintendent help you to arrange an exhibit of hobbies not only of members of your society but enyone who is interested. Arrange it attractively and then invite the public to come and see your exhibit. This may be at the time of your meeting or some other time more convenient to the public.

At your meeting have the members discuss why they engage in certain hobbies and how they got started. Have several visitors tell about theirs.

On the blackboard list reasons given in an informal discussion as to the value of hobbies. Why should everyone have a hobby?

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT

FINDING FRIENDS WHO NEED US—Acts 9:32-42

A "Who-is-my-friend" Meeting

Proverbs 17:17 gives us our memory verse for this topic. "A friend loveth at all times and a brother is born for adversity." What kind of a friend have you been, a "fair weather friend" or one who was there also in adversity. Are you a friend who sticketh closer than a brother?

Many times we do not even know our neighbor as our friend, because we haven't tried to learn to know him.

When we make a survey of our community, there will come to light a number of human situations which are not so good. There may be discovered a section where foreigners live, and their children playing about the streets need what we have to give them. The survey may also include a hospital, and some of its sick may well receive the loving ministry of the Juniors.

You might ask, "How can I find friends?" Be one, and be on the lookout for new friends to be served, either with kindness, games, clothing, food, or with the Word of God. You might visit new homes, speak to schoolmates, playmates, write letters or send boxes of toys, books and other articles.

The Question Bee

1. Who is my friend? 2. How and when did Jesus show Himself a friend to the children? 3. How can we help the sorrowing? 4. What does Jesus command us to do for the widows and orphans? (Jas. 1:27)

"Ye are not your own—ye are bought with a price"

Fritz Kreisler, the great violinist, said, "I was born with music in my system. I knew musical scores before I knew my A.B.C. It was a gift of God. Music is too sacred to be sold. I never look upon the money I earn as my own. It is only a fund entrusted to my care for proper use and disbursement. I reduce my needs to the minimum. I feel morally guilty in ordering costly meals, as it deprives someone else of a slice of bread—some child perhaps a bottle of milk. My beloved wife feels exactly about these things as I do. In all these years of my so-called success, we have not built a home for ourselves. Between it and us stand all the homeless in the world!"

DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

appearing. This waiting is lit up by the Blessed Hope. There are two kinds of waiting. There is the idle, listless waiting, sort of loafing. Like a man waiting for mealtime. He has no responsibility of getting the meal and has nothing to do but to wait until it is ready. Another kind of waiting is that seen at a relay race in which one man carries a stick a certain distance, a second man carries it to a third etc. These men are waiting on tip toe, all alert, the runner is "all there." This is active waiting. Think of a broadcasting system waiting to relay a message to the States from Europe. That kind of waiting cannot be done asleep. Think of a surgeon waiting for the anesthetic to take effect so he can begin the operation. That waiting is active.

Thus we look for the "Blessed Hope," and love the appearing of our Saviour. "Unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." Heb. 9:28.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

A. S. BECHTEL

August 30, 1942

God's Help always Available

Gen. 32:2-12, 27-29. Read chaps. 31-33

Jacob arrived at Haran and was cordially welcomed into the home of his uncle, Laban. He remained here for twenty years, working for his uncle who prospered greatly during this time. He toiled fourteen years for the two daughters of Laban, given to him as wives. During the last six years he was paid wages in flocks and herds. He prospered exceedingly in these years (chaps. 30, 31) and Laban became very envious of him. God warned Jacob to return to Canaan with his household and possessions (31:3). Esau also was prospering during these years. Isaac was still living and Jacob was now on the way to his father's dwelling place. His route took him by the place where Esau lived.

Jacob Feels the Need of Help vss. 2-12

When Jacob came into the region east of the Jordan, he saw a vision of angels whom he recognized as God's messengers to encourage him and assure him of divine protection. He remembered Esau's threat to kill him, which caused Jacob to leave home and he feared that he would now take vengeance upon him. This was a real crisis—some think the greatest crisis in Jacob's life. It was easy to flee from Esau, but to come back and meet him now, he believed meant great risk to himself and those with him. He took a wise precaution and sent messengers to Esau that he might win his favor. This was really a confession that he had wronged him. He informed Esau that he was independently wealthy and would not need any help from the father's estate.

Jacob became greatly alarmed when he was told of Esau coming to meet him. His wrongs against him arose to plague him. He felt sure that Esau's intention could be only evil, coming with so many men. He took all precaution within his power to protect his household and his possession and to appease his brother. He felt too that all his precautions were not enough, so he resorted to earnest prayer.

His prayer arose to a lofty height of poetic fervor. It included thanksgiving, petition and appeal to divine faithfulness. Its humility indicates a noticable change in his character—an inward transformation due to contacts with God. He senses his unworthiness of all his prosperity. This helped to pave the way for greater spiritual blessings. He believed God could deliver him when all human means would fail. He did all he could to help answer his prayer.

Divine Help Given vss. 24-29

There is an element of mystery in the struggle, spiritual and physical, during the night by Jabbok (vss. 24-26). It seems plain that God appeared to him in human form. Jacob pleads desperately that God would bless him and grant him deliverance from Esau. The wrestling was primarily spiritual during the prolonged physical struggle. Jacob's persistence won the coveted blessing for him. It was attended with a radical change of character in which his old disposition gave place to a new nature.

He was returning to Canaan in his own strength. He had to learn that his inheritance of Canaan was God's gift and not the reward of his own strength. He had forgotten the real significance of his name. The new name, Israel, means "He who strives with God." It meant a change of character in Jacob. He was assured that now he would prevail in his meeting with Esau. Jacob won his victory through the defeat of his own will. His self-confidence was conquered. He did not learn the name of his wrestling partner, but he received the blessing which was proof of God's presence with him.

God's help is available now. There are many times in every lifetime when His help is needed. Sometimes we feel that no human power is sufficient. There may be a spiritual crisis in which we cling to God like Jacob did. God's Spirit is here, sent into the world to be our helper. At any time we may plead his promises and may confidently entrust ourselves into his hands.

Whom did Jacob master to receive the blessing, the angel or himself?

Jacob called upon God for help. Why did he take all possible precautions?

By whose standard did Jacob judge Esau?

IN MEMORIAM

DANIEL ARTHUR EWERT, March 8, 1917 to July 19, 1942. Son of John A. and Bertha Wiebe Ewert. Enjoyed farm life in the Johannestal community near Hillsboro, Kansas. Graduate of Hillsboro High School. Active in Sunday School, Bible classes, and C. E. Read Bible through in both English and German. Member of the Johannestal Church and janitor of its meeting house for last two and one-half years. Died from injuries sustained when horse kicked him in the abdomen. Mourned by father and mother and by two sisters, Ruth and Bertha.

FRENI MUELLER WALTNER, Feb. 7, 1862 to July 11, 1942. Daughter of Johann and Maria Mueller. Born in the village of Futter, Volhynia, Russia. Came to America with parents in 1874 and with them settled on a farm in Childstown Township, S. D. This was her home the rest of her life. Church membership: Salem Zion Mennonite Church and Salem Mennonite Church. Married Jacob J. Waltner, who preceded her in death. Mourned by five sons, John, Emil, Ben, Edward, and Henry, all of Turner County, and one daughter, Lena of North Newton, Kansas. "She believed in work and the dignity of it. She believed in the simple life and lived by it, in simplicity in dress, manner, and religion."

SAMUEL S. LEITZEL, March 1, 1877 to July 19, 1942. Son of Henry and Mary Shelly Leitzel. Married to Grace Shirk, who preceded him in death three weeks before. Farmer in Heister Valley, R. D. CORRESPONDENCE

MENNONITE CHURCH
Lehigh, Kansas

The Silver Wedding of our pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. B. H. Janzen was celebrated on May 7 (the date is May 3). The festivities were held in the auditorium of the Lehigh High School. Over three hundred guests came for the service and lunch. Rev. John H. Epp, from Colby, Kansas, who had joined Brother and Sister Janzen in marriage, and Rev. H. L. Janzen, from Enid, Oklahoma, who is a brother of Mrs, Janzen, were the speakers. A cornet duet was given by Irven and Elmer Janzen. The B. H. Janzen children, Elmer, Beulah, and Myrtle each gave a reading. The church choir sang several songs.

Our union meetings, which are held on the high school lawn on Sunday evenings, started on August 2.

Brother George Martens, who is in the Gossel Hospital, is very low at the present time. Mr. and Mrs. David J. Auernheimer are kept at home a lot on account of bad health. Mrs. A. A. Hiebert has not been able to attend church for a long time because of her health. Harley Ewert recently left for camp. Eight members are in camps now. May God bless and strengthen and keep all the depressed families is my prayer. —Mrs. F. G. U.

BETHEL MENNONITE CHURCH
Winton, California

Since news reports from our congregation have come to The Mennonite so sparsely I have thought of bringing some news items off and on for our beloved paper. In fact, I have been requested by our group to do this. In the past twenty-five years I have contributed to The Herold, the Hillsboro Vorwaerts, the Mennonitische Rundschau, and others. The Herold has discontinued publication, and the Vorwaerts has changed to the Journal.

God works in us both to will and to do, therefore we are fully dependent upon him as our leader and guide. Let us be thankful for the words, "I will be with you always, even unto the end of the World." These come from the lips of eternal truth, from him who is the Author and Finisher of our faith.

We are having another hot spell at the present time. A similar spell three weeks ago did extensive damage to some of the vineyards. Unless the weather changes that damage will now be increased. We and our crops are in God's hands. May He protect us from further loss.

Our pastor had a most blessed time at the Pacific District Conference, enjoying the program and meeting many old friends. This week Rev. and Mrs. J. P. Glanzer are vacationing with friends at Dinuba, their former home. We expect them back this week end. (July 26)

Mrs. Beatrice Van Meter from Glendale, California, a former missionary to China, gave us an interesting talk and showed pictures on June 21. She lost her husband soon after they came back some two years ago. He had contracted the illness in China.

Some of our young people are going to the retreat at Lake Sequoia in Grant National Park, August 8-15.

Last Sunday we observed the Lord's Supper. Most members took part. May it be and ever remain in every heart a token of remembrance of the Lord's suffering, until He comes again to receive His own.

On July 5 we had our Sunday School classes at the river side for a change. The day was well spent with a program, music, and songs. We could all go home blessed and much encouraged in the work of the Lord. In this day when the war clouds are so dark over us and we know not what the morrow may bring, it is doubly necessary that we take all things to God in prayer. That we consecrate our all to Him and to His service is my prayer.

We are looking forward with much joy to July 29 and 30 when Brother P. A. Penner is to be with us and is to tell us of his labors and show pictures. Brother Penner has given forty years of his life in the mission field of India. This is a great service to the Lord and the heathen world. Thanks be unto God for it.

We thank God for our little church here. It is only about fourteen or fifteen months since we organized our group here. With the help of God we have increased our attendance and improved our meeting house. We are looking forward to more blessings from the Lord. —Noah A. Koehn

BUHLER MENNONITE CHURCH
Buhler, Kansas

On July 5 our church had the privilege of ordaining Henry Franzen of Bethel College to the ministry. Dr. C. E. Krehbiel, President of the General Conference, performed the ceremony, assisted by Dr. Ed. G. Kaufman of Bethel College. Rev. A. J. Dyck gave an impressive message on the duties of the pastor to the church and on the duty of church members to the pastor.

Early this summer the board of trustees and the church council planned to redecorate the meeting house. In order to do this "loyalty day" was observed. Each member had a chance to contribute. Due to the redecorating we have been having our Sunday School and church services in the high school auditorium. On July 26 Willis Rich of Bethel College conducted the adult Sunday School classes. We are planning to be back in our meeting house on August 9.

Rev. and Mrs. Manning, returned missionaries from Africa, were the guest speakers in our church on July 19.

Married: Mildred Martens, daughter of Nick Martens of Buhler, to Bill Dyson of Hutchinson.

SECOND MENNONITE CHURCH

Paso Robles, California

Greetings, with a portion of Phil. 1, "I thank my God... for your fellowship in the gospel from the first day until now; being confident of this very thing, that He which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ."

We have had a number of guest speakers in the past few months, all of whom have brought us messages of encouragement and blessing. Mis Ruth Hege, a niece of Rev. C. Hege of the First Church, a missionary on furlough from Venezuela, spoke to us in the morning service on February 1. At the sewing society meeting the following day she told of the joys and the hardships connected with her work on the field. We wish to pass on one sentence of her message "Safety lies not in the absence of danger but in the presence of the Lord." Although the way was apparently closed against her return, it was opened at the last moment and she was enabled to re-enter Venezuela just before her permit expired.

On Feb 8 Willis Rich, representing Bethel College, spoke briefly of its work in the morning service. He visited many of the members in their homes during the week days before and after this Sunday.

On March 8 the Men's Chorus of the Mennonite Brethren Church of Shafter gave a program of gospel music and testimonies in our morning service. They were entertained in various homes for the noon meal and went to Camp Roberts in the evening to give a program there. The following Sunday our choir again gave a program at the camp.

On Easter Sunday about fifteen of our Junior boys and girls, accompanied by adults, gave an Easter program at the County Jail and Hospital in San Luis Obispo. With the exception of the prayers, and two brief messages, the program was entirely by the children and consisted of appropriate songs and scripture selections. There were many requests, especially at the hospital for them to come again, and they expect to give another program there on August 2.

On Pentecost Sunday the five members of the Catechism Class were baptized by the pastor, Rev. F. F. Jantzen and received into the church. The congregation of the First Church in Paso Robles were our guests and Rev. C. Hege assisted in the services. In the afternoon the regular joint session of the two Christian Endeavor Societies (a semi-annual event) was held in our church.

Rev. and Mrs. Frank Manning and two children, missionaries on furlough from Tanganyika, Africa, visited us on May 31. Both Mr. and Mrs. Manning spoke in the morning service, and in the evening they showed slides of their work. On the following day Mrs. Manning was present at our sewing society meeting for a short time and gave us many instances of God's faithfulness in caring for them not only in Africa but also on their journeys to and from the field.

Rev. H. Albert Claassen of Beatrice, Nebraska, was with us on June 14, representing the work of Freeman Junior College and our peace activities. He gave the morning message and spoke of the work he was representing in a special afternoon session.

Rev. and Mrs. Paul Kuhlman, with their three children, formerly missionaries in China. now serving the Oklahoma Bible Academy, visited at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Schroeder, the latter part of June. Paul gave us the message on the morning of June 21, at which time our pastor was absent attending the Pacific District Conference.

Rev. and Mrs. Harold Johansen of Cottonwood, California, and two children visited at her parents. Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Claassen the week following and Harold gave us the message on the morning of June 28.

"Brethren, pray for us." (I Thess. 5:25) —Corr.

GRACE MENNONITE CHURCH

Pandora, Ohio

The annual consecration services for little children were held on Mother's Day. A reception was given in June for new members received into the church during the Easter season. The theme "Growing Service" was used for the reception.

The Men's Fellowship held a supper at the church with Rabbi Bernard Dorfman of Lima speaking on the subject "The Customs and Religious Life of the Chinese People." The Grace Senior Fellowship, a young people's organization, presented a play "A Soldier of the Cross" at a regular evening service.

Recent visitors in the pulpit have been: John Ramseyer, instructor in the University High School. Columbus, Ohio, who spoke on "Recent Trends in Education;" Rev. Walter Schutz of Africa, who showed pictures of his work on the mission field, and also filled the pulpit in the absence of our pastor. Rev. Musser, Miss Elizabeth Hilty, former missionary to China, who spoke on the present situation in China, and Delvin Rickhofer of Bluffton, who will assist in the work of the Mennonite Central Committee in Switzerland.

One Sunday each year the four Mennonite Churches of this area exchange pastors for the morning service. Rev. Peter J. Boehr of the St. John Church served our church. In the evening the four churches combined for a musical festival under the direction of Dr. Samuel Flueckiger of Manchester College, North Manchester, Indiana.

The choir has been rehearsing this summer for the rendition of the oratorio "Elijah" to be given in August.

Four weddings of members have taken place this summer: Dorothy Burkholder and Wayne Holt, Uvira Neiswander and James Suter, Alma Sugy and Earl Dean Steiner, Arlene Steffen and Francis Snare.

EASTERN DISTRICT SECRETARY'S NOTES

Retreat—Last week we reported that 117 had registered the first evening for the High School Retreat. We thought this was very good, but they continued to come the next day until the total number was 139. Next week we can inform you how many attended the Young People' Retreat. Rev. S. F. Pannabecker's mission addresses given in several of our conference churches were very interesting, and the beautiful pictures were enjoyed by everyone. Secretary's Record—Dr. Elmer E. S. Johnson, pastor of the Hereford Church, Bally, very proudly exhibited the first official record book of the conference dated from 1847 to 1884. The book was found in an attic of one of his parishoners. More about this record on some future date. Workers Conference—The Workers Conference held in Bethany Church, Quakertown, Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, pastor, was well attended on Monday, July 20th. The church gave the members of conference a very warm reception. The messages by Rev.'s Walter H. Dyck of Beatrice, Nebraska, and S. F. Pannabecker of Bluffton, Ohio, returned missionary from China, were very interesting and helpful. Roaring Spring—Mr. John Boehr, member of the graduating class of Bluffton College, and his sister Mary Ellen were present at the Workers Conference. John is supplying the pulpit at Roaring Spring. They came to the conference with Rev. and Mrs. George Greger of the Napier Church. We were glad to see John and Mary Ellen and Rev. and Mrs. Greger who traveled almost two hundred miles to attend. Upper Milford, Zionville—About twenty of the members of the church housecleaned the church recently and the floors of the Sunday School and church were given a wax treatment. First Church, Allentown—The pastor, Rev. Howard G. Nyce delivered a message over the Allentown Radio Station WCBA, on Saturday evening, July 25th, for the Lehigh County Christian Endeavor Society. First Church, Philadelphia—Rev. and Mrs. Plenert report that their mid-week Bible study and prayer meetings are well attended. C. E. Witness—The last issue of the C. E. Witness; Miss Grace Moyer, editor, was very attractive as well as interestingly produced. All the district young people should read this newsy little paper published bi-monthly, and everybody should read The Mennonite which is published every week. Retreat—Seventy-eight young people attended the Senior Retreat held at Men-O-Lan during the week end. July 24-26. Bluffton College Trustees—The district representatives of our college at Bluffton, Ohio, are getting set for a campaign in the east to help wipe out the existing deficit. A letter to be sent to all pastors will announce the method to be pursued, and it is hoped that there might be a generous response and a hearty cooperation. Richfield—The conference extends sincere sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Leitzel who mourn the death of Mr. Leitzel's mother and father within three weeks time Mr. Leitzel is a deacon of the Richfield congregation. Hereford, Bally—Rev. Paul R. Shelly, son of the congregation who spent the past two years supplying a congregational pulpit in Aberdeen, Washington, expects to arrive home about the middle of August. He plans to continue his studies in some Eastern school during the coming winter. Allentown—The Sunday School adopted the Six Point Record System at its regular monthly meeting in July. The new system will begin with the beginning of the Sunday School year in October. Mr. Carrol Parks, a Christian layman addressed the July Sunday School Workers' Conference on "Child Evangelism." At a recent meeting of the Pre-Millenial Fellowship of Allentown, of which the pastor has been president since its inauguration, it was decided to change the name to the Allentown Christian Fundamentalist Fellowship. Napier—Mr. William A. Barley was instantly killed on July 10 when a truck loaded with steel collided with his car. The funeral was held in the Roaring Spring Church and the service conducted by Rev. George Greger. Mr. John Boehr brought the evening message Sunday, July 19 on "Limiting God." It was interesting and thought provoking. Rev. Greger writes, "the 'Tulls Hill Parsonage' is open for your inspection. Drop in and pay us a visit, even if it has to be short." Pastors please note—In order to help make The Mennonite more interesting, the executive committee of our district authorized the secretary to prepare these articles. If you have news that should be included, even if just a line or two, please forward to the secretary at once.

OUR CHURCH SCHOOLS

Our church schools are very necessary. We can imagine that if they did not exist deeply spiritual, far-seeing men would gather in groups and say to one another, "We must have our own schools for our own people. We need them for training our ministers, missionaries, teachers, and others who want an education." If we did not have our own church schools our young people would be faced with the choice of going to public schools or other church schools. Public schools are not permitted to make the glorification of Christ the supreme emphasis of their program. Other church schools may teach much that we hold in common with them, but usually they do not teach all of the precious doctrines which God's Holy Word speaks to our minds and hearts. Furthermore, the uniting fellowship of our church schools is necessary for effective, cooperative work in our far-flung conference territory. Our church schools were not called into being unnecessarily.

Our church schools are ours to support. They exist for our sake. What we do for them will be reflected in what they do for us. Support them well with suggestions that edify, prayers that ring with sincerity and love, students that are an asset, and material gifts that make possible, and our church schools will blossom to the glory of Christ and the welfare of our whole conference. Neglect such support, and the results will be accordingly.

August 30 has been set aside as Church School Day in our conference. On it should be remembered all who will go to school, from the Kindergarten pupil to the post-graduate student. But, especially, let us remember our church schools and those who will attend them, for we are responsible for them. May we give God the opportunity to do great things on this day and in the days to follow. —rw.

Gossip Greeting

"I heard—" "They say—" "Everybody says" "Have you heard—" "Did you hear—" "Isn't it awful—" "People say—" "Did you ever—" "Somebody said—" "Would you think—" "Don't say I told you—" "Oh, I think it is perfectly terrible!" Yes, folks, that is the way it always comes. The foul stench of gossip is always preceded by one of those dozen introductions. The next time someone approaches you with a story beginning this way ask him or her to pray with you! Probably the story will never be told. —La Verne, Calif., Bulletin

II. CHURCH SCHOOL DAY AUGUST 30, 1942

From the publications of another denomination the following suggestions for observing Church School Day are submitted.

I. WORSHIP SERVICE

1. The pastor or minister in charge can choose an appropriate text with a Christian education theme.

2. Special prayers can be offered for young people going away to schools, for the schools, and for the officials responsible for conducting them.

II. THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

1. A special passage of Scripture bearing on the theme of Christian education can be chosen for the Sunday school lesson.

2. The superintendent with the cooperation of the ministry can conduct a suitable farewell service for the young people going away to college, emphasizing the responsibility devolving upon them to represent faithfully their homes and church while away at school.

3. The primary and junior departments can conduct a service appropriate for the boys and girls entering the public schools.

III. THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S MEETING.

1. The program committee can outline a program emphasizing the value and importance of Christian education and giving information regarding the provisions which the church is making for the proper training of her young people.

2. A program emphasizing the importance of Christian education can be worked out for the juniors wherever junior meetings are held.

IV. AN OFFERING should be lifted for the support of our church schools sometime during the day.

1. Such an offering might be specified for the Board of Education, or for some particular school.

2. Some churches might want to establish a fund for worthy students who need financial assistance in their preparation for service in the church.

V. IN THE HOME parents can give due recognition during family worship to the importance of a

V. IN THE HOME parents can give due recognition during family worship to the importance of a Christian education and of the relation of the home to the church school and the public school. Special prayers should be offered for all the young people entering school.

The pastor, Sunday school superintendent, and chairman of the young people's society should cooperate in planning the program for Church School Day so that a live, coordinated program can be presented. Procedure will vary according to the local situation. Some churches will want to carry out the Christian education theme through all three services, and others may want to use only one service in the observance of Church School Day: Again, local observance may depend upon the number of young people entering school. Some churches ask these young people to serve on the program before leaving for their period of training at a church school.

Whatever procedure is followed, it should be entered upon prayerfully. A number of churches celebrate a day of prayer for their young people who are training in their schools. This practice inspires the young people to greater faithfulness to the home church.

THE LAITY IN EVANGELISM

Why is it that so many churches do not have a larger ingathering from the non-professing people of the community? One reason undoubtedly is that too many Christians feel that we have our churches which are open to everybody, let the people come if they like. But Jesus has not told us to wait and be ready to make disciples when people come and inquire. He commanded us to "go... and make disciples." (Matt. 28:19). We forget that the spearheads of advance in evangelism are friendship, personal contact, and witness. These, in part, account for the rapid growth of the Early Church. (Acts 2 and 8)

Possibly we have been giving too much credit for the astonishing ingathering on Pentecost Day to Peter's sermon. We are inclined to forget that 120 people (mostly lay people) were on fire with love for Christ, speaking to everybody at the feast about "the mighty works of God" (Acts 2:11) and inviting people to become followers of Christ.

God has in past days mightily honored mass evangelism. A person needs but to remind himself of the ministries of Moody, Finney, and Torrey to be convinced of that. In recent days, however, this approach seems to have been less fruitful. Those of our own churches which have relied largely upon evangelistic meetings to evangelize the community have been rather disappointed. They find that these meetings are not making much impression upon those people of the community for whom they are held because they will not attend. Again they find that although individual members of the home may be touched, these meetings do not reach whole families. Even the life of the church members seems not to be raised notably by such meetings. And those who do confess Christ in them sometimes find it difficult to get really assimilated, because the church has not risen to the occasion. Many are beginning to feel that we should turn more definitely to the witness of lay people as the approach to the task of "making disciples." Jesus went about speaking to people personally and inviting them to follow Him. His followers also did much of their witnessing in personal interviews. Religious conversation was purposeful and glowed with the desire to have others follow Christ.

It would be hard to improve upon the method of Jesus. He sent His Twelve and the Seventy out by two's. Jesus here gives us a method of using the laity of the church. Some ministers who have followed His examples are joyful and enthusiastic over the results of ingathering and over the spiritual uplift of the church. As an example let me refer you to Dr. A. Earl Kernham's book, Visitation Evangelism in which he outlines a proceedure in this type of evangelism which contains many helpful suggestions, even though not everything in the book may be found acceptable and practicable. The book is published by Fleming H. Revell Co., 17 North Wabash Ave., Chicago.

The Evangelization Committee urges that the pastors of our Mennonite churches definitely plan this fall to enlist the laymen and laywomen of the church in efforts of winning as many people of their respective communities to the discipleship of Christ as possible. Plan definitely and purposefully. Plan early. Choose your own time for a consecrated and concerted effort. Determine to give the Lord a chance to show Himself strong in your behalf (II Chron. 16:9). And remember that nothing will come out of it unless the effort will be constantly and heavily watered with prayer. The Lord gives His richest blessings only when we pray for them. (Ezek. 36:37) Let every effort, therefore, be bolstered up by faithful intercessors. A praying group is essential. —W. F. Unruh

Bethel College Day of Prayer

In conformity with an earlier resolution by the conference and an old custom of the churches to observe the last Sunday in August as a day of prayer for schools and colleges, the Board of Directors of Bethel College kindly requests the churches to observe Sunday, August 30, in the manner designated. In these times of stress and strain Bethel College in a special way needs the prayerful, as well as the financial, support of all school friends. The observance of this Sunday in the manner indicated will greatly help to lighten the burden of the coming school year.

Rev. P. H. Richert, Sec'y,
General Conference Mennonite
Board of Foreign Missions,
Newton, Kansas

Dear Rev. Richert:

It is two months today since we said good bye to the Browns, and a few of the Chinese friends who were permitted to come to the station with us, and we are still a long way from home. However, we on these repatriation boats have been very conscious of the tide of prayer following all the way, both that originating with the Chinese friends, and that from the friends in the U. S. It has been a good trip though today some folks are singing, "I'm weary of the sea, lads, I'm weary of it's roar." Many of us have been very conscious of the hand of our God upon us.

There is no way of knowing how much you have heard of conditions in China, but I can tell you that it comforted us very much to hear that you had inquired about us through the International Red Cross, and later, that our sustenance and other expenses were cared for.

We find, on comparing notes, that people were treated differently in various places, but since December 8th, the Browns and I, together with five of the Nazarene missionaries, have been interned in our Taming city house. We were allowed to bring in food and other supplies from the suburbs. Our participation in the work was stopped at once, but in some places not a single service was omitted, the Chinese have been going on faithfully in a very encouraging way. There are many details of this that I can tell you later.

We were given our choice, later, of going to U. S. or staying, and because April of this year was my furlough time, I chose to go. The Browns, and Miss Goertz and Miss Regier at Kaichow chose to stay. Later we were told that we should all have to go, but when it finally came down to it, three of the Nazarenes and I were told to go. Three days later our long journey began.

Want to mail this letter in Rio de Janerio, and between there and U. S. I hope to write a fairly detailed account of conditions in our various stations, and what has been done by the General Committee, and other information that may be of interest. The evangelistic work, in most parts of the field, is going on, with the Chinese Christians learning new lessons of dependence on the Lord, and souls have been baptized into the fellowship of Christians.

Naturally, on arrival at New York, hope to go directly home to Philadelphia, from there I shall send the letters I have from the Browns and others, and you can get in touch with me there as to what lies ahead.

I am very happy that it has been permitted to me to serve out this first term. Pray with me that the furlough time may be a real time of preparation for further service, and that it may be in China.

Yours, in Christian fellowship
Wilhelmina Kuyf

A PRAYER FOR INDIA

O Lord, these are days of great events for Thee and India. They call for large souls with enlarged minds, laden with Thy power which delights to manifest itself in superhuman achievements.

As we face these events of tremendous importance, we come humbly, needy, trembling, lest we fail Thee, lest we fail to buy up this opportunity for Thee, lest we fail to measure up to the day of Thy visitation. May first rate events not be dealt with by second rate ministers of Thine, O God.

Cleanse us, O Lord, of every hindrance, every love of ease, every sin which hinders Thy power and glory with us. O my Saviour! cleanse me of the enemy within. And when Thou hast cleansed us, then empower us with physical vigor, enlarge our hearts with spiritual power, give us keen mental grasp for Thy tasks for us. Give us thy love and compassion. Give me Thy love and compassion, my precious Jesus.

We pray, O Lord, for the 180 inquirors at Champa, Mauhadi, Janjgir, and Korba,—those whose hearts Thou hast touched. O Lord, descend upon them with Thy fire, to burn out all the dross, that they, enkindled by Thy Spirit may come and receive water baptism during the autumn 1942 and these days while it is day. Make Thy Word within them the Sword of Thy Holy Spirit.

We pray, O Lord, for Thy servants, Indian and foreign. Send them forth in the faith and power of others who have been sent forth by Thee,—Elijah, John the Baptist, Paul and Barnabas, Finney and Moody. And when Thou hast thrust them forth, O triune God, then honor their faith with an abundant harvest of souls.

We pray, O Lord, for Thy Church on our field. We thank Thee for this church. We thank Thee for what Thou has done in the Basna Area. We thank Thee for the believers in eighty different towns and villages. Come and sanctify this church there, and in Janjgir, Champa, Mauhadi, Korba, and all the smaller groups of believers in many surrounding villages. For Thou hast said in Thy Word, "The nations shall know that I am Jehovah, when I am sanctified in you before their eyes." The times, O Lord, are in Thy hands. This day, this year is ours. We know not the future. We plead with Thee, do Thou sanctify Thy church, wholly, entire, blameless, that India may know and believe.

We ask it in the name of Him, Who, when He saw Jerusalem, wept, because she knew not the day of her opportunity, in the name of Jesus our Saviour. Amen.

A Letter About Our Clothing Relief

Dear friends of the General and Central Mennonite Conferences:

In response to a request from Mrs. Harry Yoder, I take advantage of this opportunity to tell you a little about the clothing part of the M. C. C. Relief Program.

September 5, 1940, an inexperienced worker—myself—and a new project met at the old Ephrata Mennonite Church, now known as the M. C. C. Clothing Depot, with Akron, Pennsylvania, as its address. The amount of clothing that had collected before my arrival together with the many new things that had to be learned and tried were to me a very great undertaking. The utter necessity of wisdom from above and the Spirit's leading was very clear. Day by day we implored God's help and felt our way through the tons of clothing that kept coming to us from all directions in all modes of transportation.

Before this time, each branch of Mennonites did their relief work either through their own relief committees or through some other organization such as the Friends' Service Committee or the Red Cross but this marked a new method by which all branches of Mennonites could unite their efforts by sending clothing for foreign or other relief to this central office where the clothing would be sorted, classified, baled, and prepared for shipment and sent whenever possible and wherever they were needed.

The Mennonite people have proved that when there is a need and the call for help comes, they are ready to sacrifice, to dig deep into their pockets and to work hard to help relieve suffering. This proof has been repeated over and over when we note that from December, 1940, to December, 1941, twenty-five tons of clothing were baled and valued at $50,091.77, of this amount clothing valued at $42,826.40 has been sent to foreign fields—France and England—for relief. Besides this, over five tons were sent to Paraguay in January, 1942, to the Mennonite people there who are in need just now.

You will be interested in knowing what part you had in this contribution. My record is not absolutely correct, because not everyone gives the branch of Mennonites which they represent, but as nearly as possible this is noted. I have combined the General Conference and the Central Conference because I did not always know which one was sending. As the work develops we hope to get more system and accuracy into our records. In the meantime, we trust your charitable forbearance. The records show that from December 19, 1940, to November 27, 1941, the General Conference and Central Conference Mennonites contributed 2,583 lbs. (over one ton) of clothing. Since November 27, 1941, large amounts of clothing have come from these branches and are coming in continually.

It seems this part of the M. C. C. relief work is just opening up. Many new sewing circles are organized and those that have operated for years are doubling and trebling their output. The kind and quality of clothing sent in is much better than a year ago. There is still room for improvement.

A fine thing to do is to have every Sewing Circle or Ladies' Aid carefully (1) repair, mend, sew on buttons, darn stockings, if necessary; (2) clean—laundry if necessary or dry clean if justifiable, brush out trouser cuffs, etc.; (3) mark sizes or age of garment, also state if for boys or girls, when the question might arise as in the case of pajamas; (4) and inspect carefully to determine if the quality of clothing (whether new or used) justifies the expense of transportation. Also ask yourself (1) if you would be happy to receive that garment if you were the recipient in Europe today without food, shelter and clothing and (2) what your opinion would be of the Mennonites in America, who are sending this clothing, from the clothing you got through them.

The standards of the Mennonite Church are high, and we must not lower them by sending inferior quailty of clothing for relief purposes. We have done very well in the past, but that is not enough. Today we face an indescribable need. Millions of war sufferers and the famine stricken countries challenge us to give our possessions and to give ourselves to minister to them. For every garment we gave before we should now give four or more. Does that seem hard? It all depends on our own attitude toward these problems. Christ comes to you and me daily in some form or another of suffering and needy humanity. Do we minister to Him or do we not recognize Him and send Him away coldly, later to awaken to the terrible sin committed—closing the door to Christ.

However large our gift, unless it is done in the name of Christ it will avail very little. However small our gift, if in the name of Christ with God's blessing upon it multitudes will be clothed. "Naked and ye clothed me." "For without me ye can do nothing."

Sincerely,
Mrs. M. C. Lehman

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

AMERICAN MENNONITES

It is a regrettable fact that so many Christians know so little about men and the events of the past that helped to mould the conditions of the present. There are very many Christians who do not know anything about the beginning, the history, and the principles of their own churches. We need to know something of the past if we are to understand the present and plan for the future. Jesus repeatedly illustrated this when he referred to the "prophets of old" and to "the traditions of the elders," and then constantly talked of the Kingdom of God that would someday be established "on earth as it is in heaven." We have, therefore, good precedent to study the past and plan for the future in the Christian life.

Henry A. Fast, who knows American Mennonites better than perhaps any other living person because he has been in more homes, preached to more people and traveled over more territory than any other Mennonite, recently characterized American Mennonites in the following way.

Characteristics

The most outstanding characteristic, he said, was the centrality of the church in the life of the people. This speaks well for Mennonites, but of course only if the church is a vigorous, living, growing Christian fellowship serving God and man as a Christian brotherhood should. Sometimes churches are the center of community life because of conflict and strife. When this is the case it is no virtue to make the church the center of community life.

Other characteristics mentioned by Brother Fast are: Mennonite hospitality, family worship, concern for the welfare of the poor and the unfortunate members of the churches, strong emphasis on Jesus' way of love and non-resistance, deep interest in relief of human suffering, great interest in missions, capacity for cooperation in time of crisis as illustrated in the time of the Russian famine in the 1920's and at the present time through the Mennonite Central Committee, the Civilian Public Service program, and the stability of the church and the Mennonite communities in general. These are characteristics, on the whole very positive, for which we should be grateful to God.

But there are further characteristics which are just as real but for which we cannot be so thankful. There are evidences which indicate that many Mennonites are no longer as scrupulously honest in business relations as Mennonites once had the reputation of being. The corrupting and secularizing influences of public school education have affected the lives of our people to the detriment of a more devoted religious life. Attendance at Bible schools has often led our young people in diverse directions resulting in ugly arguments which in turn developed local splits in the brotherhood. Our own liberal arts colleges have not always done what they might have in training young people for service at home but have rather been the means whereby Mennonite young people have graduated from Mennonite communities to the secular world. Mennonites have in many cases lost their sense of mission, that is, the feeling that Mennonites have a distinct contribution to make or a particular Christian function to perform. While we have cooperated in times of crisis we have also argued, quarreled, and had strife in times of peace unbecoming of a Christian brotherhood. These things ought to make us all want to know more about our church, its strength and its weaknesses so that we might learn to serve her and her Master more intelligently, more devotedly and more effectively.

RELIEF

Items From England

An unusually interesting letter from Brother Peter Dyck is dated July 23 and comes from Wolverhampton, England. In it he mentions that Sister Edna Hunsperger is assisting at "The Woodlands," the Mennonite Home for evacuee old people. Of this Home he comments: "In a world whose bottom seems to be knocked out by hatred and mistrust, 'The Woodlands' stands as a testimony of the fuller and richer life all peoples are meant to live."

Sister Elfrieda Klassen is at the "South Meadows," which is the Mennonite home for convalescent children and babies. Of her work she says: "Everything is going fine at 'South Meadows.' Naturally, it is very different from what I was used to, but I expected that, and I do think that after a while I shall like it very much. I certainly am not disappointed. There is enough work to keep us going from morning until night. . ."

Excerpts from a Relief Bulletin on France

"On April 14 we weighed all the 113 children eating at the canteen. At the close of the Easter vacation two weeks later we weighed them again. The figures show that: 102 of the 113 children had lost from one pound to three pounds in weight during this period of absence from the canteen, during two weeks. When the Prefet was advised of this fact, he at once undertook measures to secure the continuation during the summer of all the school canteens."

"There are stories of the care with which weight charts are kept by community leaders. Sometimes the children march once a week to the only scales in town in the railroad station or drug store. A gain of as much as a pound becomes an occasion for general rejoicing."

A Message to Live in the World

By Mrs. John D. Unruh

We as Mennonites have a message to live in the world, because we also believe in the practical application of the non-compromising methods of Jesus. Let us examine this in three respects.

1. The sensitive spirit of Jesus was deeply moved by human suffering. "Who went about doing good. ." so we read in Acts. Apparently, His good deeds on earth were far too numerious to put on record. While He preached wonderful words of life, he also fed the hungry, healed the sick, comforted the mourning, etc. And, Jesus sought to arouse similar sympathetic activity in His followers.

2. Jesus rejected the various solutions for the ills of the Jewish Nation of His day, like we must reject the contention of saving democracy by means of war in our day. The intensity of Christ's concern for those in misery makes His choice of methods all the more remarkable. One would think He might have chosen a speedy method, a short-cut, to lift man out of his misery, but Jesus always selected means which were consistent with the end desired. This is an important fact to remember in reference to non-resistance. If I use violence to win, I will reap violence. Indeed, it is quite true; if I pick up a stick by one end, I am also picking up the other end.

Jesus did not compromise with evil. For Him there was only one narrow way. For us there can be only one narrow way—The Jesus Way: The Way of Love. War is a short-cut to a desired goal of possession: "an eye for an eye." Jesus says, "... resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also."

3. Jesus was willing to pay the price. It cost Him His life but God blessed His consecrated Way of Love with a resurrected life and an open grave from which has poured forth a power which has pierced nations and empires; and, history bears witness to the fact that the more Christianity has been persecuted the stronger it has been left in its wake.

Our forefathers with their many migrations and hardships were willing to pay a great price. Today the agonized call for help reaches our ears. Today, again, the non-compromising methods of Jesus must bear persecution, and more particularly by our drafted young men.

Prayerful action patterned after the methods of Jesus can keep our people from falling into despair in a time of crisis. If you have ever been near a major accident, where human life was involved, you will agree to the fact that those who plunge into the bloody situation with aid, do not faint nor collapse; while others standing afar watching and exclaiming, "Oh, how dreadful! Oh, My— Oh, Oh, My!" are overcome by the sound of agonized pleadings and the sight of broken limbs and flowing blood. First aid to the victims is definitely hindered by additional calls for help. Likewise, falling into despair in a time of crisis will not aid the work of our Lord. At the accident scene there were those who saw beyond the suffering, mercy and aid, and they gave freely all they had. It was they who did what could be done. Likewise, prayerful action patterned after the methods of Jesus can save our people from falling into despair in these ever darkening days of this crisis.

Therefore while we hear the shoutings: "More Food Production," "More Saving to Buy Defense Bonds," etc., we must be even more active constructively, guided by Jesus' Way of Love. We, too, may shout: "More Food Production," "More Saving," "More Self-Sacrifice,"—for Peace; proclaiming our Redeemer where permitted, and where not permitted due to war zones, God Himself will translate our love and testimony for Christ in the services we render.

God has blessed us as a pacifist people thus far with alternatives almost too good to be actually true. I refer especially to our C. P. S. camps, the possibility of Civilian Bonds, etc. May we as a people become more whole heartedly united on these matters; may we cherish more and more prayerfully and actively the grace of God in these respects.

There are encouraging signs that God has blessed the message of our church. Has He perchance blessed it because our forefathers have preserved the gospel truth in their way of life pure and undefiled? At the beginning of the First World War we were fairly well organized and carried on a fair amount of mission work. We lived our simple life, adhering to the simple gospel truth as Jesus taught the Apostles, not ostentatiously but obscurely. We were far from famous, but our doctrine on non-resistance made us ignominiously famous overnight with the outbreak of the draft in World War I. We were characterized as queer, ignorant, unpatriotic, and I know not what. In fact, I believe we were hated as much as the Germans with whom our country was at war.

Today we can see that the more we were slandered, the more extensively our doctrine was advertized. Our persecutors did it for us. Today the entire world is not only aware of the three historic peace churches; instead, pacifism is exerting a tremendous force on the public conscience. It has pierced so to speak all bodies in the Protestant World as well as the Roman Catholic Church.

A second sign: There is an unbelievable absence of hate in the present war thus far. In spite of all that propaganda has been attempting, hate has been rather slow in forthcoming. Over and over again we hear that nobody really hates anybody. Men of leadership returning from England tell us there is a lack of hatred in England also toward the German people.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Clyde H. Dirks, Hutchinson, Kansas

By Dr. J. E. Hartzler, Goshen, Indiana

SEPTEMBER 1—"Wisdom is the principle thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting get understanding." Prov. 4:7.

Early this month young America goes off again to school, thirty million strong. The wise man suggests that "wisdom" is the chief thing, and that "understanding" is most essential. Knowledge, we have often been told, is power. It is true. If knowledge means power, then wisdom, among other things, means control. We may put it in the form of an equation: knowledge equals power; wisdom equals control. Power minus control equals chaos. Power plus control equals achievement. The educated person is the one in whom knowledge and wisdom are in proper balance.

SEPTEMBER 2—"Finally, Brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." Phil. 4:8.

Men cannot live on high levels when their thinking is on low levels. Men can not live up when their thinking is down. Men can not live victory while their thinking is defeat. To know what to think can be determined only after we have learned how to think. To think on things that are true, honest, just, pure, and lovely puts one on high levels of living. A man is no bigger than the things he thinks about.

SEPTEMBER 3—"And they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Mic. 4:3.

It was 159 years ago today that the Treaty of Peace between Great Britian and the American Colonies, ending the Revolutionary War, was signed in Paris. A few years ago the New York Times reported that of the 3,421 years past we have had only 268 years without war somewhere in the world. Following these wars 6,000 peace treaties have been signed, all to be good forever. The records show that the average life time of these treaties has been only two years. It would seem that after 3,421 years of failure we would try some other method. I would like to see the Christian way tried.

SEPTEMBER 4—"And when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held: And they cried with a loud voice saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?" Rev. 6:9-10.

Have you ever noticed how tyrants carry on for a time, then die and lose control? How martyrs die and take control? It was not the men who stoned the prophets who lived; it was the prophets who lived. It was not Nero who lived; it was St. Paul. It was not Caesar who lived, but Jesus. Dictators and tyrants are but for a brief time. Martyrs, those who die for truth and right, have eternity on their side.

SEPTEMBER 5—"But covet earnestly the best gifts: and yet shew I unto you a more excellent way." I Cor. 12:31.

For St. Paul that "more excellent way" was the way of love. It is precisely in this, namely, Divine love, that Christianity excels all other religions. In three particular things the Christian faith excels, namely, (1) It clarifies the mind; (2) It purifies the heart, and (3) It motivates the will. This means, among other things, that Christianity is intellectually respectable, emotionally sound, and volitionally dynamic. Any religion that can not enlighten the mind, purify the heart, and motivate the will has little promise of eternity.

SEPTEMBER 6—"This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." I John 5:4.

"Consolation" is a great Christian experience, but it is not the main line of the Christian faith; it is a by-product. The main line of the Christian faith is "mastery;" mastery of sin and evil. For the Priest and the Levite, on the Jericho Road, religion evidently was a consolation; to the Samaritan it was mastery. Jesus mastered Caesar. St. Paul mastered Nero. It is not so much consolation that the Church today needs; it is rather the spirit of mastery. Consolation, like happiness, is a by-product of mastery. The Christian faith is a way of victory over the world, and this because it has eternity on its side.

OUR CHALLENGE

(Given below are excerpts from an address given before the First Mennonite Church of Reedley, California, by D. V. Wiebe, M. D. on May 24. Dr. Wiebe practiced medicine in Reedley and took an active part in church work. Perhaps, by the time this appears in print he will have left for China with a unit of the American Friends Service Committee to do relief work there).

"During our absence of eleven months we have been on a trip which had a three fold purpose. First of all, both my wife and I felt that if we wanted to carry on our work successfully, we had to have a change, we had to have a vacation. In this respect we fully realized in our trip what we had been looking for. It took me about three weeks to get away from a heavy load, a feeling of responsibility, which then was gradually replaced by the interesting things surrounding me. The second purpose of our trip was to see our beautiful country; in this respect we also fully realized our expectations... The third purpose of our trip was that I wanted the opportunity of refreshing and bringing up to date my medical and surgical knowledge. From September 1 until the time we came back to California I have been taking Post Graduate at our various medical centers, following a certain schedule that I had outlined for myself. In spite of the fact that war was declared during this time, the school work was carried on very effectively, probably more effectively than it would have been otherwise. It was especially gratifying to me to notice how enthusiastic the big men in our profession were when I talked to them about the work which I hoped to get into in the near future.

"During our absence I have had the opportunity of meeting a number of the leading men of our Historic Peace Churches. While in Kansas during July, 1941, when making a call at our good friends, the August Ebels, I there met the President of the Mennonite Central Committee, Dr. P. C. Hiebert, who gave me an outline of the work of the committee. Later we had the unusual opportunity of being present at all of the sessions of the General Conference at Souderton, Pennsylvania. It was here that I met for the first time the very sincere and efficient secretary of the M. C. C., Orie O. Miller. Later I met him again in Philadelphia where we had the opportunity of talking things over. Also during the week at Souderton we had the happy opportunity of being guests, with Dr. Langenwalter, in the lovely home of the Clarence Picketts. Clarence Pickett is Secretary of the American Friends Service Committee. Later it was my privilege to attend several meetings of this committee and to become well acquainted with their work. In connection with this we also came in contact with the inspiring E. Stanley Jones. I shall never forget him. In New York I became quite well acquainted with Thomas Tanner, who is the President of the British Friends Ambulance Unit. He was in America for a brief time to enlist support for the British Friends Ambulance Unit. Although he was British and I American, and although we had entirely different backgrounds, we found that we agreed exactly in our convictions.

"During the last war I arrived at certain conclusions and formed definite convictions. For twenty-five years I have had these convictions before me and have looked at them and studied them, and during all of this time they have in no way changed. When I entered the medical profession I did that not because I looked at my medical work as an end in itself, but only as a means to an end. I am now coming to the central thought of this talk.

"When a proposition was presented to me by the American Friends Service Committee, it was such a challenge that I could not turn down. After Ina and I had taken it into prayerful consideration, I accepted the challenge and promised to go out with a number of younger doctors into some war torn area for actual Emergency Relief Work. The reason why I am sent by the American Friends Service Committee instead of by the Mennonite Central Committee is simply because they have the machinery set up and are already in the field doing this type of work, while the M C C is at present not yet organized for medical and surgical relief work.

"Now why would I leave a good income, a good practice, a comfortable home? Why would I make the one big sacrifice of leaving my wife behind me to go into an area into which she is unable to get a passport?... This I want to say particularly to the young people. I feel that there is such a challenge, vibrating with opportunities, for everything that is worthwhile and interesting in life, that you as young people must not miss it. To make use of this opportunity you must be engineers in the modern sense of the word. Listen to what a prophet of old said about the opportunities in the Kingdom of God. He asks you to enlist in the work of building a highway through the desert, to raise the valleys, to lower the hills and mountains, and to make the crooked straight. Should not a program like this fill us with ambition and excitement? During the present crisis, it is our duty to go into the war torn areas and heal and reconstruct. We must match in sacrifice, in hardships, in danger, and if necessary in blood and tears, the efforts of the military forces. Only then will we make that contribution which as Historic Peace Churches, it is our duty to make. By making this contribution we will win the cooperation and financial support of our government.

"But all of this is not the final answer to the question of relief for the needy. The final answer has

BUTTERFLYOSOPHY

Butterflies are like lovely thoughts flitting here and there. One sees butterflies only on sunny days, and beautiful thoughts only emerge from minds at their best. Lovely thoughts preceed lovely deeds. They are a rare species. They color the lives of the ones who have them as well as those whose lives they touch just as God must have made the butterflies so beautiful to add a bit of loveliness, of joy, and an example of carefree felicity to His creation. Both add to the store of joy in life. If you have ever tried to catch a butterfly—and who has not—you will find them elusive and unpredictable, flitting to and fro. Sometimes lovely thoughts are just as elusive. Kind deeds should follow kind thoughts and are as far superior to them as the butterfly is to the cocoon from which it emerges. On a calm, breathless spring day in May in France I saw a pair of blue petals opened to the sun, but no, they were not petals for suddenly they flew away! I was astonished. My first thoughts were, "Am I dreaming, or have the violets sprouted wings?" It was a butterfly on the wing, one of the loveliest of God's creations. Our Creator must be a lover of beauty, for He makes so many beautiful things. We have a touch of the Divine; we are most like Him when we are adding to the beauty, the joy, the abundance of life! —Helen A. Penner

C. E. WORKERS, NOTE!

This issue does not carry any C. E. program outlines, for there does not seem to be a demand for a program outline in each issue. According to the present plan program outlines will appear in the first and third issues of the month. We hope that you will use outlines in old copies of The Mennonite and that you will make use of those which are run.

AFTERGLOW

Shine when troubles shake you,
Shine when friends forsake you,
All the way, every day,
There's a crown a-waiting;
Shine when foes assail you,
Shine when others fail you,
Keep your eyes on Jesus,
And shine, shine, shine.

These were the words of the retreat chorus which rang through Camp Men-o-lan. The retreat theme was "The Shining Life," based on "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works and glorify your Father, which is in Heaven."

In addition to the inspiring messages by the retreat leaders we had a very impressive communion service on Sunday morning. Rev. Freeman Swartz was in charge of this.

The East Swamp C. E. Society gave a very good presentation of the Biblical drama, "Following Jesus."

This second year at Camp Men-o-lan created much interest among the young people. This retreat was one of the largest since the retreats were begun fifteen years ago.

It is our prayer and desire that the young people who have attended the retreat this year may go back to their individual churches and work more earnestly than they have in the past, asking God that theirs may be a "Shining Life" unto others who are following. —Corr.

CANADIAN RETREAT

The Second Saskatchewan Mennonite Young People's Retreat was held at the Rostern Experimental Farm, June 29 to July 3.

June 29th. What a lovely day after weeks of rain! Arriving when the supper bell rang we noticed that the others with plate, cup, knife, and fork in their hands were ready for supper. We were directed to a lowly cow barn for night quarters. What next, we thought. After carrying the luggage to the loft we were ready for supper. The boys had their quarters on the other hay loft.

Registration began after everyone had eaten a tasty supper. About two hundred seemed to be present.

Then we all gathered at the hall where seats, platform, organ, and table with pulpit had been arranged. J. C. Schmidt, President of the Youth Committee welcomed us. "Be still and know that I am God." He commanded us to have real faith like one of the members of the Youth Committee. We had had two weeks of rain, and on Sunday it was still raining. Having been asked whether it would rain some more he replied, "No, I have prayed and it won't rain." We did have wonderful weather all the days of the retreat.

H. W. Friesen, a member of the Youth Committee, read Psalm 77. After prayer and a number of hymns we all went out to the campfire, where songs, duets, and other special numbers were rendered. At 9:30 we all returned to our sleeping quarters, Where Miss B. Schmidt led the evening devotions. at 10 lights were out. The sheep and the cows started their evening hymn. After all was quiet we too fell asleep.

Wednesday morning the sparrows flew about over our heads, always crying, "Cheer up, cheer up." This seemed to awaken everyone. At six when the rising bell rang everyone was wide awake. At 6:30 we were all ready for morning devotions.

At 7:30 everybody was just as busy as could be eating breakfast. After the dishes has been quickly cleared away we all gathered at the hall again at 8:30. Cheerful and happy everyone joined in the song "I will sing of my Redeemer" and prayer. J. C. Schmidt read Ephesians I:1-14. Later we had ten minutes recess. Mennonite history was taught by Rev. J. G. Remple from 9:30 to 10:10. He pictured some of the first Mennonites, Hans Denk, Balthasar Hubmeier, George Blaurock, Konrad Grebel, Felix Manz, and Melchoir Hofmann, who in spite of persecution were sure of their life. Some of them died as martyrs.

After a few minutes of recess Sister Aganetha Fast challenged all of us with "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to all the creatures." After the closing exercise everyone hurried to the dinner tables which were placed in the shade between two big hedges of Caraganas. Everybody had his fill and then went to play ball or games just as he pleased until 2:30.

Six girls and three boys served, washed dishes, and set the tables again. Many hands made fast work, and at 2:30 all of us gathered for a business meeting. Bishop J. Regier discussed home missions. He used Mark 6:32-43. Jesus saw the people. That's why its so necessary to look anew into our hearts every morning. Look at your home and at your neighbors and ask yourself, "What can I do for my Saviour?" Always have a warm and open heart for the poor. There's always something to be done in the church, Sunday School, or Christian Endeavor. May we really keep toiling on for Jesus.

Rev. I. P. Friesen told us about his trip to Palestine which took thirty-three days and which he tried to describe in thirty-two minutes. The time passed just too fast. Soon everyone was ready for supper. Someone remarked, "We have a retreat, but the flies think it a treat."

After supper we sang for half an hour. Rev. J. Thiessen spoke on Phil. 1:27-30. 1. Mennonite young people let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ. 2. Stand fast in one spirit with one mind. 3. Strive together for the faith of the gospel. 4. In the behalf of Christ be ready to suffer for thy faith. Christians shall be happy people with a sense for the clean and holy things.

Miss Fast taught us the chorus, "When your fears rise mountain high. And words block your way. Then your eagle wings they fly. Up, up, up, up you go with the mountain down below." She wore a Chinese gown to show us what they looked like. She gave a number of illustrations of how daring some Chinese were during the war in their effort for Christ, and how Christ had saved them through hardships.

After singing "Abide with me" all went to their resting places. Miss E. Dyck lead in devotions, and we all went to bed very quietly and tired after such a blessed and wonderful day.

Thursday was a beautiful day, though rather smoky. Wesley Ewert lead our group devotion and read some morning thoughts, and we together read one chapter of the Bible and prayed. We sang a few choruses and waited for breakfast. At breakfast we found that there was no milk for the corn flakes. Someone hunted for pitchers; soon we were through eating.

Charley Dircks spoke on Bible and Rev. J. G. Remple went on with Mennonite History. Rev. Isaac Duerksen lead thirty minutes of hearty singing. Rev. Esau spoke and the courses went on as usual.

All those who wanted to teach daily vacation Bible school gathered at one o'clock. Twenty-eight decided to go out, some for two weeks, others for four, and some for six.

Rev. Esau then taught us that we should read the Bible to be wise, learn it to be saved, and practice it to be holy, and that the Christian life consists of a vital relationship with God.

Wesley Ewert read Matt. 6:38-48 to us. The way of Jesus. Not only His teachings but also His life bears witness of His love. Most important of all He went to the cross. Jesus had a mistrust against forcing anybody to do a thing. The way of love is often hard, but Jesus himself holds up the cross for His disciples. He has a way for solving our personal difficulties. There is no other way.

After supper Missionary Dan Versche showed some lantern slides of the poor people in Columbia. What a difference after they have heard the gospel of Christ! Many more missionaries are needed out there. In talking to us about the rich young ruler Rev. Esau suggested that hundreds of people go and come in the churches and stay like they were before. Let's take something out of it for ourselves.

Thursday night, what a grand night! Christ was truly present. Christ wonderfully revealed himself and saved many souls that night. May they grow in strength and grace and serve the Lord.

Friday was filled with activities until five o'clock, but we four girls left on the morning train to teach S. V. B. S. It really was grace that we could spend those lovely days together and listen to the Word of God

NOTE OF EXPLANATION

This second quarterly financial statement has been enlarged in size because of postal regulations. However, it is not too large for convenient filing.

No financial statement can present fairly all the aspects of a churches giving. We must remember that the ability to give varies with the amount of material wealth possessed. Other things being equal a church in a farming community where the soil is exhausted cannot do as well as the church in an area of extremely fertile land. Other things being equal a small church may find it difficult to equal the giving of a large church because of the larger load for ministerial support that falls on the members of the small church. Other differences in ability may exist.

This supplement seeks to present the various figures in a clear, condensed form, so that they will be more meaningful and interesting to the readers. It gives us a clearer picture of our conference giving than the former method of presentation. May those less able to give rejoice in the giving of those more able. May the members of all churches make sure as to whether they are giving according to the will of God.

The first supplement was received with much favorable response. May this one fulfill the same needs. —rw.

A Year of Civilian Public Service

July 1942

NOTE: The following is a reprint of a circular recently published by the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania.

On Sept. 16, 1940, the Selective Training and Service Act was approved.

On Dec. 19, 1940, basic principles of the present C.P.S. (Civilian Public Service) program were agreed upon when representatives of the Peace churches and of some other groups met with officials of the Selective Service System. The Peace churches agreed to assume responsibility for the administration of the whole C.O. problem in co-operation with the government.

On May 15, 1941, the first boys arrived at a Quaker camp near Baltimore, Maryland. On May 22, nine boys arrived at the Mennonite camp near Grottoes, Virginia, and an equal number at the Brethren camp near Manistee, Michigan.

The monthly arrival at Mennonite C.P.S. camps during the early part of the year averaged 50 to 75. By the year's end, this rate had increased to almost 200. By July 1, 1942, over 1,200 assignees from M.C.C. constituency groups were in camp, some 60 of which were in non-Mennonite camps or on detached service. Thirteen camps are under M.C.C administration. Several others are co-operatively administered. An M.C.C staff and camp personnel of over 60 individuals is required for administration. Every effort has been made to build up a vital and significant educational and religious life program keeping in mind the individual and the group.

The M.C.C (Mennonite Central Committee), from the beginning, hoped that $25 per man month would cover the churches' total share of the cost of C.P.S. and arranged to distribute this cost among the several co-operating churches on a per membership basis. About ninety per cent of the per membership allotments have been paid. The lag in campee arrivals from earlier estimates enabled cash operation of the program, even though initial equipment and various overhead costs resulted in a $30 per man month average. The present cost, including all overhead and the M.C.C. share of the non-peace church load, comes within the $25 estimate—the budget being based on a Mennonite campee total of 1,600.

Our congregations throughout have been prompt and liberal in their support of C. P. S. and in giving approval of its lines of development. Selective Service has kept faith with its original agreements, and its officials continue to express satisfaction with the work of the administrating agencies. The campees are grateful for this provision for their services and are diligent in making it meaningful and significant, and the public, in the main, has been understanding and tolerant.

We pray God that all concerned may continue to be challenged by its opportunities and ready to make the sacrifices necessary for its continued development.

Advantages of the Present Civilian Public Service Program

Ours is the opportunity to work out deep Mennonite concerns for we are privileged to appoint our own camp staff. They are eager to make our service a witness to our faith.

The genius of Mennonitism can find expression in the pattern of camp life—in the character of the administrative policies, in relations of man to man, in quality of service, in standards of conduct, and in the recreational, educational, and religious life program.

Unlimited possibilities for deepening religious experience, enlarging vision, learning and sharpening skills, enriching life, and performing a service of genuine worth.

Priceless friendships ripen around the fellowship of toil, worship, study, play, and service. Eternity alone can measure the fruit of this venture of faith and love.

Educational and Religious Life Program

Adequate provision for the spiritual needs of the boys in camp has, from the beginning been the great basic concern of the M.C.C. The boys also have shown a deep and genuine concern for their own religious interests even though they have not nearly all reached the same level of spiritual maturity.

The whole program is religiously motivated, but various provisions have been made to stimulate vital religious life.

Each day invariably begins with a brief but meaningful period of devotion and it closes with a quiet prayerful commitment for the night. A word of gratitude is spoken at every meal. Careful provisions are made for Sunday services, morning and evening. Evening Bible study courses are provided during week days. Prayer circles, initiated by the boys, meet at regular intervals. Quartets and choruses receive frequent requests to serve in churches. Individuals or groups of boys have been asked to teach in local Sunday School classes or to assist in young people's work.

The educational program of the camp has taken into account the desires and concerns of our Mennonite constituency; the educational, social, and religious background of the boys; their recreational, educational, and religious needs and interests; the availability of leadership qualified to assist in educational activities; the limits of time open for these activities; and the limits of funds available for this purpose.

The urgent need for a clear statement of policies and objectives, soon apparent, was met October 10, 11, 1941, at a Chicago meeting of Educational Directors of camps, Presidents of four-year Mennonite Colleges, and the Executive Committee of M.C.C. This group felt our educational and religious life program should result in: (1) a deeper appreciation of our Mennonite heritage and mission in the world; (2) a better understanding of the Christian's relation to the state and the community; (3) a deepening of Christian experience; (4) a promotion of personal growth in skills, in mind, and in appreciations.

This statement resulted in the development of a Core Course composed of six units each written up in booklet form. To encourage their use, these booklets are distributed free to each man in camp. This course has already proven very helpful and interesting.

The educational program includes other courses like safety instruction, interpretation of the work project, first aid, Bible and other religious studies, languages, courses taken for credit in college or high school, music and singing, nature study, reading art, woodwork, crafts of various kinds, hobbies, and so on. It also includes training looking toward possible reconstruction service.

The camp program provides ample opportunity to grow in skill of hand, in breadth of understanding, in depth of Christian conviction, in efficiency of Christian living and serving to those who make use of them.

Questions Frequently Asked Regarding Civilian Public Service

1. What is Civilian Public Service?

The program of (civilian) service provided for those draftees who because of "religious training and belief" are conscientiously opposed to participation in war. Through the provisions of the Selective Training and Service Act and the co-operative efforts of the historic peace churches and other interested groups with Selective Service this has become possible.

2. What is the "work of national importance" these men perform?

Mainly government-approved service in soil conservation, forestry (fire-fighting), agricultural research—but extending also to work in public health, general and mental hospitals, dairy farms, evacuation centers, and emergency relief in the United States. Other avenues of services are continually being explored.

3. How is the program administered?

Housing (usually consisting of abandoned C.C.C. camps), machinery, tools, and technical skill necessary for the work program are furnished by the Government.

Food, clothing, administrative direction, the educational, recreational and religious life program, medical care and sanitation, maintenance of high standards of conduct and service are responsibilities of the church agencies (Brethren, Catholics, Mennonites, Quakers). The administrative staff consists of director, assistant director (educational director), matron, dietition, and business manager. The business manager always is an assignee and the educational director often is.

4. How is the program financed?

The men either pay their keep themselves, or else their churches or other interested groups do so.

It costs the M.C.C. $25 per month per boy to pay for C.P.S. costs—food, medical care, educational and religious life program, camp administrative staff, Akron M.C.C. office, our share of the National Service Board office in Washington and of nonpaying campees.

On the basis of the above figures and the anticipated number of boys in Mennonite camps (1,600), M.C.C. estimates the total cost for the six months beginning August 1 for our 120,000 church members. If our churches contribute at the rate of $2 per church member, M.C.C. will be able to pay its share of the C.P.S. program.

5. What part does the National Service Board play?

It serves as the connecting link between M.C.C and the government. It is controlled and financed by the Mennonites, Friends, Brethren, and other interested groups. It has no legislative power. It acts only on the unanimous consent of the groups it represents.

Co-operating with Selective Service, its job is finding suitable camp locations, providing equipment, assigning men to certain camps or transferring them later, assisting appeal cases, keeping personnel records and handling a host of other details concerning men in camp in relation to Selective Service.

6. How is a Civilian Public Service Camp administered?

Jesus and His way of love, likewise the principles and standards commonly accepted and practiced in

Mennonite circles, determine the nature and quality of camp life and service. The religious fellowship created through prayer, discussion, and worship together is the center of camp life. It gives rise to respect and honor of one another and high devotion to duty. It creates standards of neatness, sanitation, personal conduct, and relationships within the camp and with the community which are a worthy witness of the faith the boys profess.

7. How are the staff members selected?

The General Director of Camps, H. A. Fast, is charged with the responsibility of finding persons with the character, training, experience, and Christian attitude which qualifies them for various aspects of camp staff work. After discussing available persons with Orie Miller, Executive Secretary, they are recommended to the M.C.C. Executive Committee. If the persons are approved, they are asked to serve in a place and position where needed.

Maintenance—which includes board, room, necessary furniture, and medical care equivalent to that received by the boys—is furnished. Also, a monthly remuneration, determined by what is a commonly accepted fair wage scale in Mennonite circles is paid the staff.

Great care is taken to appoint only such as share our great central Christian concern as a people and who feel an inner divine call to serve.

8. What is meant by detached service?

Out-of-camp government-approved service like that in hospitals or dairy counties. Assignment to such projects is voluntary. Board, room, medical care, clothing are provided, but no pay. Any remuneration paid goes for church relief service.

9. Why is soil conservation "work of national importance?"

Fourteen per cent of our land has been ruined by erosion and more than half of the land in the country has been affected to some degree.

Someone has said: "Life is a pyramid; man is at the top and soil is at the base." To preserve our soil (and other resources) is to help preserve our country itself.

10. What is the attitude of local communities to the presence of a near-by Civilian Public Service Camp?

As a whole, the relationship has been exceedingly favorable. Occasional demonstrations of unfriendliness have occurred, but to date they have been led only by a few isolated individuals in the community. Some communities, at first cool and reserved, have become outspokenly friendly because of the good account the boys have given of themselves by the testimony of their personal character, the quality of service they render, their bearing in the community, and the kind of camp life and camp program they build up.

11. What is the attitude of the Government to the Civilian Public Service Program?

The Government has been entirely co-operative and eager to work out a program that would be acceptable to the boys and to the church groups. They have been eager to maintain friendly public relations and ready to work our problems that arose on questions of health, the work program, discipline, or classifications and deferments.

The Government men in charge of the work program have repeatedly testified that C.P.S. boys have far exceeded their expectations in amount and quality of work done.

12. How do men in Camp feel about C.P.S.?

They are eager to be useful and constructive in what they do. Some feel a more vital "work of national importance" could be done. Many know the need and importance of conserving our natural resources. Most of them know Selective Service is co-operating in trying to broaden the field of service to include areas of extreme human need.

What campers say:

"There is an abundant opportunity to develop spiritually. I will value my experience here as an important period of my life."

"A C.O. must realize that he is not opposed to war alone, but to the whole system of life which makes war the only method of solving national conflicts."

"I have studied my Bible more in camp than ever before in my life."

"Farm boys, skilled workers, college graduates, boys with limited schooling, and boys with a variety of religious and family backgrounds all live intimately together. The respect and fellowship which grows from this is something I shall always cherish."

13. What is the relationship between the Civilian Public Service program and the relief activities of the church?

Throughout Mennonite history, our people have been unable to take life or participate in war, but have been eager and quick to heal wounds, relieve suffering, and save life. This impulse to refuse to destroy and the joy to relieve suffering sprang from the same Christ-like impulse—love.

The Civilian Public Service program is interested in performing a positive service that will prevent destructon and add to human well-being. At present men in C.P.S. are rebuilding soils, forests, and conditions of human health. They are eagerly waiting to get into the midst of present areas of human need and suffering and to offer their service of body, mind, and spirit to the building of better conditions and better human relations.

14. What about the future of C.P.S.?

No predictions are possible. The Government is favorable to its continuance. The M.C.C. constituency has with remarkable faith, courage, and sacrifice backed the program. As long as God keeps alive in us this spirit and grants us the means, the work can continue.

away from the tumlut and strife of life. Let's pray that this good work may be kept up and be a blessing to many. —Helen Sawatzky, Hague, Saskatchewan

THE ALCOHOL PROBLEM YESTERDAY AND TODAY

Gen. 13:13; 19:23-25 Duet. 32:31-33, Amos 6:1-7

It is well to note that alcohol has been a problem from ancient times. The effects of alcohol upon the human system have been the same in all ages and among all races. Drunkenness has been recognized as an evil, even in ancient times (Isa. 28:8). Today the problem is greater in our nation than ever before. A prominent lawyer who has had much to do with liquor law violators says, "The worst liquor-selling places in pre-prohibition days were better than the best are in these days, and you can quote me as saying so." Official statistics say that "moonshining" and "bootlegging" have doubled since repeal. This too in spite of the solemn promise made, that repeal would stop it. Drinking among school girls and young women has increased as never before in the history of the nation.

Problem in ancient Sodom

The exceeding wickedness and sinfulness of Sodom most probably included excessive drinking. There was also gross immorality. Lot chose the best of the land for himself and with it this environment. The people of Sodom filled up the measure of their iniquity, and God miserably destroyed them (vss. 24, 25). The punishment was of the utmost severity. "The raining down of fire and brimstone from heaven is believed by many to have been by volcanic eruption —God used this means. The fiery shower fell on the cities and destroyed them. It was a Divine judgment" (Jamieson-Fausset and Brown). All the inhabitants save Lot and his two daughters, perished.

Moses wrote a parting message for the children of Israel just before his death. He contrasts the gods of the heathen people with Jehovah, the Rock of Israel. He is the unchanging refuge and stronghold of Israel, their defense and protection at all times. The national stock of the heathen is corrupt in nature like Sodom, and brings forth bitter fruit in evil deeds. Israel needs to take warning lest she become like the heathen people and deserve the same fate.

The Problem in Ancient Israel

Amos pronounces judgment upon those living selfishly and in fancied security, not seeing any danger. They believed Samaria, the capital of North Israel to be impregnable against all foes. This secure feeling had a bad effect upon the morals of the people. The chief men of the nation, the religious leaders, were setting a bad example to the people. The cities mentioned are cited as examples of greatness that had been brought low. Samaria may suffer a like fate. Leaders and people believed that punishment or calamity was far off in the future and many lived in luxury and self-indulgence and its accompanying evils. Excessive drinking, feasting and frivolous song and music were quite common (vs. 5). They had no concern about the other parts of the nation. They drank wine in large quantities. Punishment will surely come to these leaders. They will be the first to go into captivity. God's work always tends to completeness. The way of the ungodly has a false kind of prosperity. The pleasures of sin are but for a season.

The Alcohol Problem

It is recognized by the state. Alcohol can not be sold without any restraint, like groceries. The state restricts and may prohibit its sale. The Supreme Court of the United States in a famous decision made some years ago said, "To keep a saloon for the sale of intoxicating liquor is not a natural right to pursue an ordinary calling; there is no inherent right in a citizen to sell intoxicating liquor by retail; it is not a privilege of a citizen of the state or of the United States." Many judicial decisions during the prohibition days declared that the liquor business is a privilege granted by law, and not a right in itself.

The Church recognizes the problem. The Old Testament prophets saw the devestating effects of alcohol. Amos warns Israel that the use of alcoholic drinks will bring judgment and eventual captivity. This became a fact in just a few years later. Paul recognized drunkenness as a sin which would bar one from the kingdom of God (I Cor. 6:10). The Church can not avoid grappling with this problem. Beverage alcohol is a deadly foe of spirituality, of morality, and of Christianity, and of ALL the ennobling things for which the Church stands. Alcohol is the sworn enemy of the Church. The Church needs to keep the WHOLE TRUTH concerning liquor before her people. This she must do through her publications, from the pulpit and in her schools. She needs to take a definite and plain-spoken stand against this evil in her official pronouncements. She should give her full support to movmeents for total abstinence and for the extension of "dry" territory. For the most part, the Church in America is doing this. A knowledge of facts should convince every SENSIBLE person of the injurious effects of alcohol.

May we expect God's approval of us as a nation so long as we legalize the iniquitous liquor business?

HOME MISSIONS

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

Note: Some time ago a mission secretary from a certain church asked Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary of the Home Mission Board, for news items from the home mission fields, to be presented on the regular mission Sunday. Brother Neuenschwander sends the following items. They were presented, and an offering for foreign and home missions was taken. This is the usual practice in this church every first Sunday in the month. Maybe the mission secretary of your church will want to make use of this news.

German Hymn Book

The Canadian Hymn Book Commission has been laboring long and hard to bring to their people a German Hymn Book that will fill their needs for many years. A number of men in the United States have examined the book and feel it will stand a favorable comparison with our Mennonite Hymnary. There is quite a lot of extra work connected with the task, since the printing and binding of the book needs to be done in the United States, Canada not having sufficiently large German printing establishments. The first books are about ready for distribution.

Work in Toronto, Ontario

In recent years a goodly number of Mennonites have sought and found employment in Toronto, Ontario. Some of the Ontario ministers have been greatly concerned about this untouched field. Particularly concerned was Rev. Jacob Janzen. The Home Mission Board is also interested in this field, can be carried on regularly in the future and many and recently a series of worship services were planned for every other Sunday. On the first night of the series of meetings Rev. Janzen preached, and he reported that sixty were present. They have rented a convenient assembly place in the First Lutheran Church of Toronto. Other ministers from Ontario were scheduled for July and August. A few weeks ago thirty copies of our former hymn book were sent to this new group. They expressed their thanks for the help.

Canadian Conference

The Canadian Conference of Mennonites convened in Manitoba on July 4-8. Rev. John J. Esau, blind evangelist, has worked in the Canadian churches for a number of months this year. He started in Ontario and later worked in Manitoba. Before he returned home he attended a retreat in Rosthern, Saskatchewan.

Girls Who Work

During the past year the young women who work in Vancouver and have their home in the Worker's Home next to the church made various kinds of fancy work and sold this. The proceeds were used to put a new furnace into the home. Such noble work is greatly appreciated. In Vancouver, Saskatoon, and Winnipeg there are almost always more calls for workers than can be spplied. This speaks well of our Mennonite young women when there is such a large demand for their services.

Grace Mennonite Church, Dallas, Oregon

Grace Mennonite Church is now completely independent and self-supporting. They have 208 members and a large Sunday School. Rev. Homer Leisy is the pastor. About five years ago the Eastern District Sunday School Convention gave $150.00 towards the erection of their meeting house. This church has made exceptional progress and has fully paid the obligations on their meeting house.

Rev. Albrecht Marries

On June 28 Rev. Erwin Albrecht, pastor of First Mennonite Church, Chicago, was married to Madeline E. Bixel, a member of the Ebenezer Mennonite Church, Bluffton, Ohio. Rev. A. C. Schultz, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony. They are at home at the parsonage at 1500 West 72nd place, Chicago. On July 6 they started a two weeks summer Bible school.

First Mennonite Church, Hutchinson, Kansas

This church has received new members on two occasions since Easter. Rev. Neuenschwander conducted meetings in February. A large number of Mennonites have found employment in the city, and the number is growing rapidly. Bonnie Jean, seven-year-old daughter of Rev. Dirks, asked him to tell us of a boy who ate eighteen sandwiches, three ice cream bars, and fruit and cake at their summer Bible School picnic. The fellow is only eight years old. No doubt he will grow fast if he doesn't get sick. The total enrollment was 102.

Lehmans Have Baby

Rev. and Mrs. Sylvan Lehman are the parents of a new baby that was born early in June. It is the fifth child in the home. Rev. Lehman is president of the Eastern District Conference.

Miss Etta Davis

Miss Etta Davis who helped in our church at Portland, Oregon, and also took some work in a college, recently accepted a call to teach commercial subjects in Freeman Junior College, Freeman, South Dakota.

Albany, Oregon

Rev. P. A. Kliewer reports that a large camp for soldiers is to be built near Albany. He feels that this is a challenge and an opportunity to serve the soldiers and give to them God's word. Recently the Home Mission Board sent them a sum of money to purchase New Testaments and Bibles. This money was taken from a Fund that the board has for this specific purpose, namely the purchase of the Scripture for distribution.

Literature For Camps

The Home Mission Board, desiring to aid those young men now in our C. P. S. camps, sent more than $75.00 to the Publication Board for the purpose of supplying copies of The Mennonite, the Christian Sunday School Quarterly, The Mennonites by Dr. C. Henry Smith, and With Christ On The Edge Of The Jungle by S. T. Moyer to the different camps where our General Conference young men are stationed.

Many of the common people have thus far at least been clinging to a subconscious feeling that this is not The Way. Who can deny that the members of the historic peace churches have not been the principal bearers of this leaven?

A third sign: The phenomenal spread of pacifism is astonishing throughout the entire world. How widespread this movement has become in this country alone may be partly indicated by the announcement of a declaration over a year ago of some fifty of the most influential ministers in this country in which they publicly declared that they would not take part in or support another world war. Upon reading the articles some of these same men write today in defense of our doctrine on pacifism and their own convictions on non-resistance, one stops to marvel at their comprehension of things that have escaped us—we who have been reared in pacifist principles for centuries.

There are signs of others being ready to carry on our message with stronger vigor and greater zeal than we. "Glory be to God!" for the acceptance of the methods of Jesus beyond the borders of the pacifist churches. But Jesus wept over Jerusalem, His Own People. Might we also weep and REPENT over our divided support.

May our gratitude for our salvation and our desire to respond to the command of our Lord, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations," continue to find unexpected response to the needs of our day with the non-compromising methods of Jesus.

God has, indeed, blessed the living doctrine of our church. May we prayerfully and actively become more united so that God can use us more powerfully in the working out of His Divine Purpose.

Note: The foregoing is a part of a discourse delivered on a missionary program.

"As long as I keep my face toward the light, the shadows will fall behind me." —John Madison Younginer been given to us by Christ Himself. We know that finally, when our last deed here in this world has been done, there will be some very pertinent questions asked. We will be asked what we have done with the fifty, sixty, seventy or perhaps eighty years which were given us to work in this world among our fellow men. We will probably then have to cast our eyes down and say that we know that what we have done really does not amount to very much. Let us hope that then we may hear it said, don't you remember that at a certain time I was very hungry, I was starving I could not make it any longer, and then you came and fed me. I was so thirsty, there was no water, and you gave me to drink, I was naked and you gave me clothes. I had no place to go and you gave me shelter. I was dying from the wounds of a bomb shell, and you gave me relief and healed my wounds.

"What a wonderful opportunity this horrible war offers us as Christians to give a Christian testimony! Are we ready to accept this challenge?"

IN MEMORIAM

Christ is All in All or Jesus Only

By J. B. Epp

Please read Eph. 1:1-14. In these verses—all in one breath, as it were—we have the words of our heading illustrated most clearly; "Christ" is mentioned here more than twenty times. In some verses from three to four times.

In vs. 1 Paul not merely calls himself as Apostle, i. e. "one sent," but sent "by Jesus Christ." There are many others "sent," or commissioned, but if not sent by Jesus Christ, they cannot be considered being in the "Service of the King." Thus also, if one says he is a preacher, by that he is not yet saying that he is preaching "The Truth" as it is in Christ Jesus. Read II Cor. 11:13-15. Only one who preaches Christ, and that "Christ is All and in All," he is a "preacher."

In the same verse the saints are not merely called "believers" (faithful ones) but "believers in Christ Jesus!" Therefore, not everyone who calls himself merely a believer, is therewith a believer in Christ according to the Scriptures. "Many will say in "That Day," "Lord, Lord... ;" and will hear the answer: "I never knew you, depart..."

Is it then enough, just to say, "I believe?" or "I have faith?" One may believe something, in a general way, but to have saving faith, this must be based upon Christ and His blood shed for our ("my") sins! A living trust in Christ alone, and in Him crucified, saves!

Vs. 2. "Grace and Peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ." Man may show much grace, in the sense of pity or pardon, etc., where Christ is not considered at all. Much of this may be good in its place. But in this verse it speaks of saving grace, which alone is in Christ!

And we speak and hear much of peace. Peace is desirable. To be a peacemaker is certainly commendable. But when Christ says, "My Peace I give unto you." He speaks of quite another peace! He speaks first of the peace of God in Christ, offered to the individual soul. This is a reconciliation to God, which can only be effected by Christ. And we do not expect real and lasting peace in the world, until "The Prince of Peace" returns to earth, Who will then also deliver the entire creation from corruption. (Rom. 8:19-23).

Eph. 1:3-14. Please read this passage again, and note how "Christ" is mentioned one to four times in each verse, and how all our relations to God, without exception, are in, and through, and by, and with, and from CHRIST. He is the only meditator between God and man.

Vs. 3: God is not our Father and God, except by Christ; and all heavenly blessings are ours only "in Him." So then everything that comes from God to man, or goes from man to God, is only through Christ! Vs. 4: We are chosen in Him, not apart from Him. Vs. 5: We are adopted by (through) Him. Vs. 6: We are accepted in Him. Vs. 7: We are redeemed thru His blood; and forgiven according to His grace. "Without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins." Vs. 8: Christ is also our Wisdom, I Cor. 1:30. Vs. 9 and 13: God's will has been shown to us in (through) Him. Vs. 10: All things, in heaven and on earth, are united together in (through) Him. Apart from Him we would not be heirs; we are only His fellow-heirs. Vs. 12f: Our trust is in Him. Vs. 13: We are sealed in Him, with the Holy Spirit (not even that is apart from Christ!) Vs. 6, 12, and 14: All for His Glory! Vs. 15: Once again, our faith is mentioned as being in Him. Cf. vs. 1.

The following verses continue in much the same way: Vs. 17: God is the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, and with Christ He is also ours; if we are in Christ! Vs. 19: Only together with Christ are things also ours. If Christ had not risen and gone up into heaven, there would be nothing whatever for us, in any way. Vs. 22f: And He is "The Head over all things;" we are His body (not "a" body), the Church. Vs. 23: He "filleth All in All!"

This then must be emphasized in all our preaching and teaching, in order to make it Biblical, and "according to the scriptures!" It is possible to over-emphasize this truth?

It makes a very great impression, to read this passage aloud, and notice the constantly repeated 'in Christ,' 'through Christ,' 'by Christ,' etc.—at every point! Such reading of this passage should indelibly impress the fact upon our soul: Truly, "Christ is all and in all!" and "Jesus Only."

THINK AS YOU READ

1. Does my life please God?
2. Am I feeding on God's Word daily?
3. Do I enjoy the Lord Jesus Christ?
4. Is there anyone I do not forgive?
5. Have I ever won a soul to Christ?
6. How much time do I spend in prayer?
7. Do I have direct answers to my prayers?
8. Are my friends accepting Christ?
9. How much fruit am I bearing?
10. How does my life look to the unsaved?
11. Do I give one-tenth to the Lord?
12. Is the world better or worse by my living in it?
13. Where do I make my greatest mistakes?
14. Do I do anything I don't like in others?

CAMP BRIEFS

During July, 1942, a total of 253 boys arrived at Mennonite camps.

From a number of the camps it is reported that extensive canning of fruits and vegetables has taken place. Campees have done the work in many cases. working overtime.

At a few of the camps boys are selected by the technical agency to assist in specialized work, such as surveying, experimentation, meterology, etc.

Due to the shortage of rubber and gasoline, Selective Service System has issued a memorandum stating that government trucks are no longer available to the camps for recreational, educational, or religious trips.

MY SONG

Pictures are made by using light and shade,
Joys come from out the background of a cross,
There is no failure in the plan God made,
Nature, from out her store, sends good with dross.

The days of toil bring also nights of rest;
And if through pleasure runs a thread of pain,
Earth gives to each some portion of her best,
A bow of promise surely follows rain.

—The Oregon Y. P. Retreat was held near Turner, Oregon, August 14 to 16. Instructors were: Rev. and Mrs. Paul Wenger and Miss Etta Davis. Rev. D. J. Unruh served as dean and Rev. Arnold Regier as recreational director. Four churches participated. Cost per person was $3.00.

—Bulletin Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Pratum, Oregon: The Paul Wengers visited recently. The entire church debt has been paid. From the Sunday School Times is quoted the following, "Let us make our Christian home different in that its members do not need to find amusement and entertainment in the things of the world, the movies, the dance, the theatre, and the card table, but shall find such love and understanding and companionship in the home that these things of the world shall not even be missed nor shall they even be desired."

—Rev. Clyde H. Dirks writes that they had 102 pupils enrolled in daily vacation Bible school this year and that the church board decided for the second year to give The Mennonite to the teachers of the daily vacation Bible school. He further writes, "Our church is buying one year subscription for each teacher. I feel that the best ways of getting people interested in The Mennonite is for them to read it." (This pastor is right. Many would read this church paper if they were introduced to it.) Rev. George Kopper recently was the guest speaker at the union service.

—Bulletin, Inman Mennonite Church, Inman, Kan.: "The Kaufman family is planning a short trip to visit some of our C. P. S. camps. It is not that they feel that the boys do not get enough to eat; it is rather a token of appreciation for the stand which they take in this emergency. Others who are not members are encouraged to write to some of the boys in the country's service."

—RESOLVED (at the General Conference session last summer). That we rededicate ourselves in these days to the vital Christian principles of life as emphasized by Mennonites, such as holding fast to the Word of God, our expression of good will and constructive service, living the simple life; and that we likewise urge that our Mennonite interest in Missions, publications, and schools be given a continued large place in our spiritual and financial support of these things that are vital."

—$2.00 per member every half year was our assessment for C. P. S. camps that went into effect on August 1.

EASTERN DISTRICT SECRETARY'S NOTES

Flatland—The Sunday School held its annual picnic in the church grove recently. Rev. Harold D. Burkholder pastor of the East Swamp Mennonite Church preached the sermon on Sunday morning, August 9. West Swamp—Dr.'s Harvey and Ella Bauman and family are visiting Mrs. Bauman's relatives in the state of Missouri. They plan to live in Quakertown this winter. East Swamp—Recently the Young People's Society held a service at the Home for the Aged at Fredrick. Rev. Burkholder delivered the message, and the entire group again had supper with the workers and guests of the home, a custom observed annually since the secretary was pastor of the church. The members of the church bring all the eatables along. Do the old folks enjoy it? You should see them. First Church, Philadelphia—Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Bechtel spent a brief vacation at the shore recently. Rev. J. J. Plenert, pastor of the church, was elected Retreat Chairman for 1943. Lansdale—Mr. John Fretz, one of our young people's Leaders of the Eastern Conference is the proud father of a daughter, Beverly Linda, born July 10. Upper Milford, Zionville—Miss Griselda Gehman who had won a scholarship to Ursinus College and then later decided to go to Bluffton College, was fortunate in getting a scholarship to Bluffton. She is very proud of this fact, and we hope she will be extremely happy that she decided to go to our own college at Bluffton, Ohio. Souderton—Mr. Oliver Hederick returned to his home from the Sacred Heart Hospital, Allentown, where he had been a medical patient.

WHY NOT LOVE?

Rather frequently I hear used the word "tolerance" or some form of it. It has made me wonder whether it best conveys what we fundamentally believe and whether the word "love" in its place would not be much more thorough-going and Christian. Personally I would much rather have someone love me rather than merely tolerate me. However, I would rather have him tolerate me than torture or kill me. Are we in a position where love is too much to ask for even from those who profess to be Christians?

Is not the word "tolerance" a let-down for love? Has the word "love" been so twisted and mutilated into something so other than its real essence that we must seek another word to set up as the ideal attitude which should exist in a possible area of conflict? Are we not making love an empty, meaningless wall flower by walking about with the word "tolerance" on our lips so frequently? Is not love the highest and best attitude for human beings to possess. Should we be satisfied with anything less in a Christian or with a non-Christian until he becomes a Christian full of love? God's love in a human being's heart is the best condition that we can think of. Why not work for it? Why set any lesser goal? Paul did not write a chapter on tolerance, but he did write one on love. Jesus spoke not of tolerance, but of love. On the cross God revealed not merely tolerance, but overwhelming, saving love.

Tolerance has a negative connotation. It suggests "not harming." Love has a positive connotation. It suggests "concern for another's welfare." Tolerance suggests "let live." Love suggests "help live." Tolerance offers little for changing another from wrong to right. Love offers the most powerful dynamic available. Tolerance may degenerate into carelessness about right and wrong. Love in its concern for the welfare of another does not become careless about such a life and death matter as right and wrong.

To achieve a condition of love is difficult. Trying to achieve the same condition by changing the terminology from love to tolerance will not help. The basic difficulty remains. Why introduce a lot of new terminology when the old is as good as the new or even better for solving the basic problem? A lot of changing of terminology seems to be like wishing that the dishes would wash themselves. It won't do the job. There are some basic things in life around which all kinds of terminology can play without budging them an inch. The root problem is to get man to yield himself to God. Nothing less than that will do. Recognizing this fact makes a lot of terminology seem like escape mechanisms. Any term used should be used in recognition of the fundamental problem involved. Tolerance does not seem to lay bare the fundamental problem as does the term "love."

Of course, love must be rescued from the kind of mutilation which it suffered when during persecution by the Catholic Church men and women were tortured on rack and wheel supposedly for their welfare's sake and the torturer's love of God and man. Love must be reinstated in the meanings which Christ gave it. Meanings whereby love can never sanction the subjection of a man's body, mind, or soul to violence. Love must be revealed to be like the gentle, warm spring breeze which thaws the snow and prepares the way for green grass and budding blossoms. Deny we must that love can ever be anything like an angry tornado destroying and mutilating that which it is supposed to build up and bless. That true love does not spoil, we know. That true love may have to permit the loved one to bring on his own destruction, we know. But that true love does not destroy the one loved, we know even better. Love, therefore, should be upheld as a condition which cannot be improved upon and which will best meet one's deepest needs. Love should be looked upon as the best solution to troubled human relationships.

"We should be tolerant." Is that what we should say? Would Christ not have us say, "We should love." Love makes possible a peaceful attempt to change another from wrong to right without harming him in any way. It is like doing a thyroid gland operation without bungling the job. Tolerance suggests leaving the sick thyroid gland alone. We need more than tolerance in this world. We need righteousness hallowed by love.

ENLISTING LAYMEN FOR EVANGELISM

In a recent article on "The Laity in Evangelism," the Evangelization Committee urged our pastors to enlist the lay people of the church for witness bearing. It was proposed that we follow the example of Jesus and send lay workers out in two's, as He did, to invite people to become followers of Christ. In this article we want to suggest a type of procedure which has brought gratifying results.

We need to make ventures in lay evangelism. The church should not only admonish Christians to witness to their neighbors and leave it to each individual to do what he can, but she should undertake to inspire and teach them how to witness. She should direct them in well-planned and purposeful undertakings. The pastor will need to take the lead here.

An evangelistic enterprise is on our part a cooperative undertaking with Christ and God's Holy Spirit. Whoever takes part will need to prepare himself through prayer and a study of the Scriptures. We need to make sure we will irradiate religious earnestness and contagious enthusiasm for Christ before we start. This calls for a period of preparation.

Here are suggestions on a possible procedure:

1. Set apart a week as a Week of Intensive Lay Evangelism. This week should come at a time when there will not be too much interference by other community activities.

2. Make a survey of the unchurched people of the community. Obtain the names and addresses of the people who do not attend church and of those especially who make no profession of Christianity.

3. A series of sermons might be preached in preparation for the Week of Intensive Lay Evangelism. Point out the need and possibility of lay witness and urge upon the whole church the duty and privilege of testifying for our Lord and Saviour. Assure the people that efforts will be made to assist them to become effective in their witness.

4. Invite people who are willing to give the evenings of a week for home visitation work to hand in their names. If necessary talk to men privately to enlist their willingness to go out in pairs to different homes to present to people the claims of Christ and of the church upon their lives.

5. Appeal to the Ladies Missionary Society to provide church suppers for those men who are willing to give their evenings for evangelistic visitation work. These common meals will be of great value. They will make the men feel that the church is back of them in a real way. They will bring the men together and help them feel a real fellowship in this work. They will give the pastor an opportunity to keep close check on the progress of the work. They will give him the opportunity to give inspiration and direction every evening as is needed. They will give the men an opportunity to share with each other such experiences as they may have had. If anyone has had a "let-down," the enthusiasm of another worker will bolster him up again. Those who have succeeded in helping people come to a decision for Christ will prove a tremendous inspiration to others when they share their experience. At this time, too, the assignments of homes, or, perhaps the exchange of assignments can be made. Here before they go out for the evening's work the pastor can pray with them and assure them of the presence of our Lord Jesus Who has promised to be with those who thus go out in obedience to His command. After the dishes are done and before they go home, the women who served the meal may want to unite in prayer for God's blessing upon the work which the brethren are doing in the various homes that evening.

6. The Week of Lay Evangelism could be advantageously begun on Sunday afternoon. Get the men who have promised to help together and instruct them on how our testimony and appeal might be made, and how certain objections that may come up might be met. Here is the great opportunity for the pastor to make his contribution. The men must be helped to be their best for the Lord in their own way. A worker's personality will be a powerful influence. The worker should seek and determine to be natural. We are most persuasive when we are natural. It is for the pastor to help the workers be as natural as possible in their approaches and appeals, and in their way of using the Scriptures. (If anyone should be interested in getting suggestions on how such guidance might be given, he could write to the undersigned member of the Evangelization Committee, and we shall gladly give such help as we are able to give.)

7. Careful plans should be made to nurture the faith of those who are led to accept Christ, so that they may confess Christ publicly through baptism. Those who decide to renew their loyalty to the church should be given every sort of encouragement. It should not be thought that to get their decision is the goal. The church must make plans to help them carry their decisions out faithfully.

This method of witnessing, it will be found, requires real effort, careful planning and much prayer. It not only helps win people to the Lord, but it also contributes greatly to the deepening of the spiritual life of the church. —W. F. Unruh

GOOD NEWS FROM CHINA

Bro. John Regier, father of our missionary Miss Marie J. Regier, has sent us a letter from her, the first one since their internment, and it gives much reason for gratitude for their safety and welfare. She writes as follows:

Kai Chow, Hopei, China, March 14, 1942

Dear Parents:

One can hardly believe it that I am writing again to you, and it is very doubtful, whether this letter will reach you, but there is some hope.

The last letter I wrote you was dated Dec. 8, 1941, but I did not get to mail it. On that day I was called out of the class room and both Miss Goertz and myself found ourselves to be prisoners of war. The first night we were kept in the city, and the following day we were taken by truck to Hsinhsiang about 90 miles from here. There we were interned in a Catholic Hospital together with four nuns and nine priests (one German nun, one American, and two Chinese). The priests were all Americans. We were well treated, but had no contact with the outside world.

On Jan. 1, we came back to Kai Chow. At first for two weeks, we were in the city in the house which the Goerings built. The highest officer also lived in this house. Later we came back here to our station. The Americans in Tamingfu all live together with Willa, and were never taken away. There are eight in that yard.

I would like to write much more, but a short letter will perhaps get through sooner than a long one... We received word to-day about the telegram which the Board had sent. It took two weeks for the letter to come here from Shanghai, and it will perhaps take just that long for this letter to go there, from whence it will be forwarded by telegram.

We are very thankful that we can still be here, and are so well cared for. We have all we need and more. The people are very good to us.

Oh yes, your letters, long ones, and Ion's with the pictures arrived two days before our leaving. And father's air-mail letter arrived when we returned. They were a real treat for me, and Miss Goertz enjoyed them almost as I did.

We read, write, paint and receive visitors. Although we cannot go out, we are not cut off from the outside world. I am writing a day by day letter, and hope to be able to send it to you some day.

With Love Yours
Marie J. Regier

AND DAVID DANCED BEFORE JEHOVAH

The dancing in the Orient and Occident has nothing in common. Not even so much as the moving of the feet. Come with me to Dongonia village. After a brisk bicycle ride of a number of miles we arrive at 8 a.m. Sunday. We are still a goodly distance from the village, and we see a large crowd of people, dressed in white. We come closer. They are all our Christian brothers and sisters with their children. We are still a hundred yards away, and a drum starts. Singing starts. Brisk milling around starts. All men and boys start to move forward. The women gracefully manuever themselves behind us. We are now between the two groups. Drumming, singing, and vigorous dancing goes on in front of us. All women and girls modestly follow. We march through the village. Non-Christians come running to see what is going on. It is loudly announced that the principal of the mission boys' school has arrived in the village. We march to the school. In the crowd are quite a few non-Christians already. Now at the school friendly verbal greetings are given and received. The dancing and drumming is now over. It all was a prolonged expression of our abrupt American "How do you do." —John Thiessen

FREDONIA SETTLEMENT

Dear readers of The Mennonite, may I be permitted to write a few lines of our little settlement in this part of the state (Kansas). Nature does all in its power to make things more beautiful and pleasing. We have had our share of moisture this year, consequently, corn, beans and fodder hardly ever looked better. What would happen if men's hearts could be brought in tune with nature? We find that nature and the wisdom of the Almighty one always say the same thing. It is as Goethe says, that nature is the living, visible garment of God.

Now as to our little group here and the progress we make in establishing ourselves. This does not seem to coincide with nature. Because we live so far apart problems come up that seem to be unhealthful for spiritual growth. This has not in any way unified us, rather it has broken up the good will of some, who took much interest in building the community. Fredonia used to be the center of our settlement, but since some have settled near the town of Independence, in Montgomery County, Fredonia is no longer the center. Two more families have of late settled twelve to thirteen miles northeast of Fredonia; this again calls more for Fredonia. What shall we do when tire-rationing is causing a greater pressure every day? Would it not be better to have two groups, rather than one, or shall we continue to pull in different directions? With more settled we have not increased our average attendance. With no church-home of our own, indifference grows. —Gustav Frey

A VISIT TO MEXICO

For several months the congregation at Cuauhtemoc, Mexico, a member of both the Western District Conference and the General Conference, had tried to get an Elder to come to visit them, to officiate in a baptismal service. Not knowing to whom to write, and the ministers receiving their letters not knowing that anybody else was looking after this matter, this visit was unduly delayed. When the matter was brought to the attention of the Home Mission Committee of the Western District Conference, they at once conferred with the Home Mission Board of the General Conference, and since the writer is a member of both of these committees it was decided that he should go as soon as possible. I consequently arrived at Cuauhtemoc Friday night, July 24.

Since the minister, Rev. Jacob Janzen, had not been ordained as an Elder, the invitation was to baptize a class of seven, whom he had properly instructed in the catechism. When I learned that I was to go, I immediately resolved to make an effort to have Brother Janzen ordained as an Elder. The Home Mission Committee concurred in this. I soon discovered that this would be quite acceptable to the congregation. We had church services every night. On the first Tuesday night we announced that the next evening there would be a short business meeting. On Wednesday night the "brethren" all remained, and by unanimous vote they expressed the desire that their minister be thus ordained. This ordination took place on Sunday morning, August 2.

At the close of this service it was decided to have the baptismal service the next Sunday, August 9. Without consulting others much, I announced that their own Elder would officiate at this service. I then brought a message for that occasion, and Rev. Janzen officiated in his first baptismal service. Both of these services on August 2 and 9 were very unusual for that flock and made deep impressions on the people.

Rev. Janzen is forty-one years of age, a man of humility and deep Christian convictions, and by ordaining him we believe that the Church has now been helped to help itself. Their membership now stands at thirty-one. There are also about that many children below fifteen years of age. Their church was dedicated in 1941. It is built of mud bricks and only half the building is used for the auditorium. The other half is divided into four rooms, in which they also conduct their day school. They are very anxious to find a German-speaking teacher for this school.

There seem to be small prospects for rapid growth, but the little church needs our prayerful support as they fill a definite need in that community.

Peace Committee Meets at Winona Lake

On August 7, the Peace Committee of our General Conference met at Winona Lake. The meeting of the committee on this date gave its members also the opportunity of attending the splendid conference on Mennonite Cultural Problems which convened on the evening of the same day and the next day.

One of the most important needs that the committee felt should have urgent and immediate attention, was the need for a field man who could visit the churches during these days of crisis, in order to acquaint them more thoroughly with the peace program for our conference. The greater the unity of our program during these confusing days, the more powerful will be our Christian witness for the way of peace to the world. Every church in our conference should have a clear understanding of the position of our conference on "Peace, War, Military Service, and Patriotism" as it has been approved by the General Conference, and the positive witness we are attempting to make for Christ before the world through our Civilian Public Service program. Every church should have an opportunity to become better acquainted with this important conference activity during these trying days.

Therefore it was agreed by the committee to procure a man who will be able to do this work for at least a year. Just who the man will be that will consent to do this very important work, the committee is not quite ready yet to announce. But we believe that God will lay it on some qualified man's heart to do this task for the sake of His cause.

We believe that it is during these days of darkness that we must let our light shine with as much intensity as possible. By giving our faith an opportunity to express itself in Christian service, in deed as well as word, there is bound to be light and a powerful witness for a definite Christian way of life that will be hard to resist by the powers of darkness. The Civilian Public Service program is such an opportunity for witness.

But great Christian witness has always cost those something who would give it. Jesus Christ went to the Cross in order to witness for the love of God. Beginning with August 1, 1942, the financial quoto per member in our General Conference—let us say in order to sustain our Christian witness for peace—will be $2.00 per member for six months, or until February 1, 1943. This truly is a small cost when we consider the greatness of our opportunity.

Peace Committee

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

HOSPITALS

It is an old saying that one half the world does not know how the other half lives. It might be said with equal accuracy that one half the Mennonites do not know how the other half lives. It is surprising how little many of us know about the work and the people of other districts in our own conference, and it is positively amazing how little we know or even care to know, of activities carried on by the conferences in other branches of the Mennonite Church. Such provincialism is inexcusable in a small Christian group that likes to think of itself as a brotherhood. A good illustration of this limited knowledge of the work carried on in various parts of the Mennonite Church is that of maintaining hospitals.

There are fifteen hospitals scattered throughout Mennonite communities of the United States and Canada. These hospitals are an expression of the Mennonite philosophy of caring for our own sick and needy, just as are the old people's homes found in various Mennonite communities. But these hospitals are not built exclusively for Mennonite people; they are built and maintained for the purpose of rendering a needed service to the community. With two exceptions these hospitals are all located in small rural communities. From personal knowledge and observation most of them appear to be about the optimum size. The fact that nearly every one of the small hospitals is self-supporting further bears this out. It means that the institutions are about the size the community can afford to support, neither too large to be overly burdensome nor too small to be inadequate for most local needs. The hospitals are supported by means of patient's fees, through offerings from the churches, and through local community support in the form of gifts of food, equipment, and cash.

More Hospitals Needed

There are many local communities without hospital and clinical services. As a result the health and the welfare of many communities suffer. It should not be necessary to drive twenty-five or fifty miles to find the nearest hospital. Leaders in Mennonite communities where hospitals are needed should seriously consider meeting such needs. This is one area of community life and civilian defense where Mennonites can engage wholeheartedly. If collecting scrap metal, buying war bonds, and promoting war efforts is contrary to the Christian convictions of Mennonites, certainly the construction of hospitals and health centers for the general good of the community is not. What other agency is as well qualified to care for the sick as the church? She has the message of mercy, peace, goodwill, forbearance, perseverance, and faith so essential to this work. She alone can minister to the soul as well as the body of man.

Indeed Christian hospitals should be a phase of mission work. On the foreign fields this is the case. On the home field we have somehow lost sight of this opportunity to minister to spiritual and bodily needs simultaneously. Most of the fifteen Mennonite hospitals referred to have a vital concern for the spiritual welfare of their patients.

The Sisterhood

In 1900, through the work of David Goerz and Sister Frieda Kaufman, a sisterhood was established in Newton, Kansas, in the hope that it would provide an opportunity for Christian service for women who wished to consecrate their lives to the ministry of serving the sick. This idea spread to the Mennonite hospitals at Mt. Lake, Minnesota, and to Beatrice, Nebraska. Unfortunately few young women are today entering the sisterhood. Mrs. Ursula Frantz at Beatrice has recently revived interest in this work by providing a modern equivalent to the older sisterhood by calling it "The Community Nurses Guild." Girls entering this guild are given a two year course in practical nursing. In addition to the general nursing duties the girls are taught to conduct bedside devotions, something which is almost entirely neglected by professionally trained nurses. An attempt is made to preserve the Christian service motive of love that has so frequently escaped highly trained and well paid nurses.

THE STORM

The sky was dark, the outlook grey
The air was still that gloomy day.
A storm was rising in the west,
And birds, for shelter, sought their nests.

The storm came on in lazy langour,
Gath'ring in fury and in anger.
The wind rose and whipped the branches;
The trees moaned at these cruel advances.

The storm arrived in all its glory;
The lightning flashed and told its story;
The rain poured down and lodged in streams
That knew what real thirst really means.

Then with a slow and lingering quaver,
The storm returned to the Great Creator.
And in its place there remained in view,
A world that was beautiful, shining and new.

STATISTICS CONCERNING C. P. S. CONTRIBUTIONS IN WESTERN DISTRICT

As of July 1, 1942, the Western District churches were nearly $1 per member behind in support of their share of the Civilian Public Service program. We are obligated to raise at least one-half of the $20,000 deficit which the General Conference is endeavoring to raise as soon as possible. The 50c, $1, and $1.25 quota periods (ending August 1st) total $2.75 due per member. Few churches would dare point a finger at others. Only six churches had met this goal by July 1st. They are the following:

1. Zion, Elbing, Kansas	$5.87 per member
2. Garden, Halstead, Kansas	$3.87 per member
3. Johannestal, Hillsboro, Kan.	$3.57 per member
4. Brudertal, Hillsboro, Kansas	$3.30 per member
5. Meadow, Colby, Kansas	$3.25 per member
6. Emmaus, Whitewater, Kans.	$2.76 per member

Consult your pastor or peace treasurer for the standing of your own church. Nine churches have sent in no contributions. "Not that other men be eased, and ye burdened: but—that there may be equality." "See that ye abound in this grace also. I speak not by commandment, (no one knows how much another church should give) but by occasion of the forwardness of others, and to prove the sincerity of your love." (II Cor. 8:7-8, 13-14)

THE RECENT CAMP DIRECTORS' CONFERENCE

On August 5 and 6 nine of the twelve Mennonite camp directors met for a two day's conference at Winona Lake, Indiana. Along with the general directors Brethren H. A. Fast, Albert Gaeddert, M. C. Lehman, members of the Mennonite Central Committee were also present.

From the first devotional period to the closing prayer of the conference a long list of camp problems and policies were discussed in a frank and open way. The need for an unmistakable witness to our nonresistant tenet was the keynote discussion on the agonda. All subsequent discussions, whether on camp discipline problems or government property responsibilities, were carried on with this objective in mind. The work of the camp pastor, public relations problems, furloughs, camp morale—all these were also discussed as aspects of the camp program.

Brother Harold S. Bender's report on his recent tour of Mennonite camps showed that though much good educational work was done there is now a need for revision and improvement. On the basis of his recommendations, a new educational program is being projected for the coming year.

A highlight of the conference was the session in which Paul Comly French, Executive Secretary of the National Service Board for Religious Objectors at Washington, D. C. sat with the directors and presented helpful information to them.

Col. Lewis B. Losch of Selective Service System was a welcome guest for two sessions. His good spirit brightened the meeting as he clearly presented the side of Selective Service System in the church-government relationship of the camps. The Colonel expressed his sincere appreciation for the cooperation given by the Mennonites and assured the group of continued government confidence in the Mennonite-administered camps.

It was this reassurance of mutual confidence together with a renewed understanding of the camp issues that made the conference a means of help to all who attended.

A Challenge to All of Us

A government technical man at one our camps recently said when speaking of the camp boys: "These boys have had a profound influence on us. We have worked with them during this time and there have been no fist fights, no profanity, not even a cutting word from one to another."

The director who reported this statement comments thus: "Naturally this made me happy but at the same time made me thoughtful. I wondered whether in the long drag of the extended period of service, the morale would hold and the influence continue to be profound. In the evening I shared the statement with the boys at our prayer meeting and said I thought it should be both an inspiration and a challenge to us."

Information for Medical Students

Information has reached the Akron, Pennsylvania, office to the effect that Selective Service System is willing to appeal for II-A classification for IV-E men who are in good standing in medical schools. This is done in individual cases and is not a blanket provision. It is first necessary for a man to get IV-E classification in order to establish his sincerity. Having attained this there is then the prospect of securing II-A classification.

For further information on the above and for data on possible internship in U. S. Public Health Service Hospitals, interested persons are invited to correspond with the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pensylvania.

Contributions to C. P. S.

Various inquiries come to the M. C. C· Office regarding special contributions to C. P. S.

In planning contributions to CPS, churches, mission societies, young people's groups and others should remember the $2.00 "tithe" per church member per 6 months comes first. Without it CPS breaks down. Some churches and church groups wish to contribute something beyond this "thithe." Such contributions are very welcome. Money contributions should be sent through usual church channels to the MCC office at Akron. For distribution of gifts in kind it would be best to inquire at the Akron office. Extra donations above the "tithe" could be designated for clothing replacement in cases of need, for medical care not covered by MCC provisions, camp kit supplies, educational needs and special propects. Canned food, fresh vegetables, and fruits are also very welcome provided arrangements are made for necessary transportation. Before delivering food supplies the director of the particular camp for which the donation is intended should be contacted.

A YEAR IN THE CHACO MENNONITE COLONIES

Dr. John R. Schmidt's labors in the Chaco have now extended over one year. In retrospect, Dr. Schmidt's recent letter summarizes his impressions of the Chaco and tells of his services there.

An unusually dry season has caused a virtual failure of the cotton crop. The cotton crop and the fruit trees were further damaged as a result of frost. Only the kafir crop, the sweet potatoes, and beans were of a fair yield. He states: "The incomes have been much too small to bring most families through if it had not been for the financial aid from M.C.C. at various times and especially the sending of the clothes."

Dr. Schmidt's medical services have been of a considerable variety. His filing system has accumulated the records of some 1200 persons. Over 1350 people have had eye examinations, 750 of them received prescribed medications. Besides the thirty-one operations which he helped his brother (Dr. Herbert R. Schmidt) to perform, he has performed at least twelve minor operations himself.

Further needs of the colony come to the mind of Dr. Schmidt as he refers to the plans for road improvement, as he mentions the names of books Brother Nicholi Siemens desires for the Bible School, and as he makes a note requesting additional medical equipment.

PLANS FOR CHILDREN'S COLONY PROGRESSING

The colony for children, reported by Brother Joseph N. Byler in his cable of July 21, has begun to take care of ninty children. By October it is hoped that 120 children can be provided for. The home is located on a plot of fifteen acres, twelve of which are under cultivation of vegetables. "It is one of the most complete gardens I have ever seen," comments Brother Byler. Besides vegetables the colony also has its own chickens, ducks, rabbits, and cows.

Brother Byler expresses the hope of securing a Mennonite nurse from Switzerland to help in caring for the little ones.

CLOTHING REACHES EUROPE

Last April a shipment of five tons of new and used clothing was made to France. The clothing, valued at $11,000, was sent on a Portuguese vessel.

Because of the hazardous journey by sea and because of the acute need for clothing in France it is especially gratifying to learn that this shipment has reached Lisbon, Portugal, and will proceed from there to a French port. Sister Lois Gunden in a recent letter expressed the hope of distributing this clothing among the people whom our workers are serving in France.

A MONTH'S WORK IN ENGLAND

During June Brother John E. Coffman reports that a total of 634 persons were helped by the Mennonite relief projects in England. Around 100 of these were given full time relief. Among the 100 were the children at Wickhurst Manor Nursery Home, the Basque Spanish children in Plymouth, the aged bombees at the "The Woodlands," and the children of the South Meadow Home in North Wales.

ORDINATION SERVICE

The Lord willing, the ordination to the holy office of the Gospel ministry of Brother Walter H. Regier will take place in his home church, the First Mennonite Church of Newton, Kansas, on Sunday, September 6. The services are to begin at 10:30 a. m.

Brother Regier has accepted a call to the Friedenstal Church of Tampa, Kansas.

We solicit your prayers for the brother who assumes so great a responsibility, and invite all who can to come and share in the blessings of the service.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By J. S. Hartzler, Goshen, Indiana

SEPTEMBER 7—"Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work." Exod. 20:9. Today is Labor Day, a legal holiday in the United States in honor of labor and laborers. Work, hard work, is honorable. The purpose of work in the divine economy is something more than mere bread and butter. There is ethical and moral value in honest labor not found anywhere else in the world. Everybody, rich or poor, high or low, kings or queens, should be engaged in some form of productive labor. Such labor does three things for us, namely, (1) It gives expression to the urge of creativeness, (2) It produces originality, and (3) It stimulates initiative, all of which are essential in the achievement of Christian and creative personality.

SEPTEMBER 8—"And as ye go, preach, saying, the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give." Matt. 10:7-8. The church that "keeps" Christ is bound to lose him. We can not keep Christ unless we give him away. It is one of the unique things about the Christian faith that of increasing what we have by giving it away. Sacrifice means the denial of self in service for others. He who can give to others without taking away from himself, without losing what he has, is a fortunate person. This means making both a "living" and a "life." In the physical area we make a living; in the spiritual we make a life.

SEPTEMBER 9—"From that time forth began Jesus to shew unto his disciples, how that he must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day." Matt. 16:21. Many people never enjoy the best there is in life because they are not willing to suffer the worst. Seems like a paradox, but it is true. To enjoy the best we must be willing to suffer the worst. A world redeemed from suffering is a better world than one that never knew suffering. It is comparatively easy to do right when everybody is our friend, and when things go right. Jesus is our example on how to live when everything goes wrong.

SEPTEMBER 10—"The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall justle one against another in the broad ways: they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightening." Nahum 2:4. Today we run, not only like lightening, but we run with lightening. Speed is the big word. We are coming to measure distance in terms of minutes rather than in miles. London is so many minutes from New York. Berlin is so many minutes from London. Tokio is so many minutes from San Francisco. We do well remember that "speed" without "direction" ends in disaster. The direction in which the nations are moving is quite as essential as the speed with which they are moving. A good man on horse-back is a better symbol of progress than is a bad man on a bombing plane.

SEPTEMBER 11—"O Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, and ye would not." Luke 13:34. The prophet is a man of interpretative insight; he can see the results of a line of action before the action goes into effect. The prophet has always warned his day and generation in an effort to prevent inevitable results, but nobody, few to say the least, ever listened or took him seriously. The world rushes on with armies, marshal music, propoganda, lies and aggression, contrary to the advice of the prophet, and then after defeat and national disaster the world admits the wisdom of the prophet.

SEPTEMBER 12—"Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." Psa. 2:9 "And whosoever shall fall on this stone shall be broken; but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder." Matt. 21:44. No man ever "broke" the law of gravitation; the law of gravitation, when violated, breaks men. No man ever broke the laws of chemistry; the laws of chemistry, when violated, break men. No man ever broke the laws of electricity; the laws of electricity, when violated, break men. Men and nations do not "break" the laws of God; they violate the laws of God; then those laws break men and nations. The nations today at war are not breaking the laws of God; God's laws are breaking them. This has always been the warning of the prophet, but the world never listens.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. ESTHER JANZEN née FRIESEN, July 21, 1901 to August 13, 1942. Daughter of Elizabeth Kroeker Friesen. Attended Bethel College for two years. Taught for a number of years in and around Henderson. Married Peter H. Janzen. Children born: Carol Jean and Donna Elizabeth. Member of Bethesda Mennonite Church, Henderson, Nebraska. Taught Sunday School a number of years and last few years was superintendent of the Junior department. Always active in chorus work and at present was director of the senior ladies chorus. IN THE MAIL

Dear Rev. Weinbrenner:

According to the request in the last issue of The Mennonite, you are looking especially for replies from those who have meetings every Sunday. This is not our program, but probably you would like to hear from others as well.

Both our Junior and Intermediate societies meet only once a month, and the superintendents of both organizations mentioned that they refer to The Mennonite for material but do not use it as their main source of help. Probably the main reason for this is that the space devoted to it is too small to do justice to the work, as more material is needed to plan an interesting and helpful program. Another reason is that their topics for the year are selected at the beginning of the year, therefore they follow the International C. E. topics which are not always followed in The Mennonite.

Our Senior C. E. Society meets twice a month. That program material is perhaps used a bit more than the other two, but again we must say we do not have it as our main source of help.

I remember at the conference a suggestion was made that the C. E. material be issued separately. If this were done in quarterly issues, perhaps, more space could be devoted to it, and in that way it would be more helpful to the societies. (No funds for this project.—Editor)

This is just our reaction to your request.

Sincerely yours,
Dorothy Dietz
Quakertown, Pa.

P. S. We use the Christian Endeavor World mainly, but that material must be used with care, for it is not as fundamental as it might be.

All-Mennonite Young People's Retreat

As the chimes rang out over beautiful Lake Wawbee, ninety-seven Retreaters found their way to Sunset Hill for the regular evening meditations led by Rev. Forrest Musser of Pandora, Ohio, who led our thoughts along the conference theme: "I Follow Christ."

The annual All-Mennonite Young People's Retreat convened this year on the Brethren-owned camp grounds located about twelve miles south of Goshen, Indiana. This excellent camp site has been named Camp Alexander Mack in honor of the pioneer Brethren preacher. The retreaters felt that this spot was the most beautiful and best organized retreat ground on which our young people have had the privilege of meeting. The large buildings were all constructed of large stones which had been gathered from the surrounding countryside. Perhaps, the most beautiful was the auditorium which seats 1500 people. The beauty of this sanctuary lay chiefly in the large stained glass windows. and the Hammond Organ which helped each retreater closer to God.

We shall endeavor to tell you briefly how we spent a typical day at camp.

At 6:15 we were awakened by the rising bell. After a quick clean-up we hurried to morning devotions at Sunset Hill. Rev. Musser led us in a short service after which each retreater continued his morning devotions in private at some spot on the hill side. At 7:10 the bell sounded for breakfast to which we also hurried. Each retreater had the opportunity of helping clear tables and washing dishes.

Breakfast was followed by morning classes. Each person chose two of the following:

"Youth in the Program of the Church"—led by Rev. W. S. Shelly
"The Bible in Youth's Curriculum"—Rev. W. Weaver
"My Expression and Contribution as a Christian in a Changing World"—Dr. Lloyd Ramseyer

Chapel followed classes with programs arranged by Miss Elva Schrock in which the retreaters took part. At 9:35 classes were resumed and were followed by a thirty minute recreation period planned by Miss Mary Elizabeth Lantz and J. Herbert Fretz.

The third period met at 11 o'clock with a choice of attending Miss Lantz's Music class or Miss Schrock's biographical class "They Dared to Live."

By this time it was 12:10 and the retreaters had little difficulty remembering that this meant lunch time, and they quickly gathered in the vicinity of the dining hall.

The afternoon was given over to a rest period followed by an Activities Period. During this hour we could choose between choir, organ, bird lore, and crafts. The remainder of the afternoon was spent in recreational activities which included baseball, tennis, swimming, croquet, horseshoe, boating, ping pong, or trying to get some sleep. Several retreaters took part of their play time for orchestra and special vocal practice. Life Guards were provided at the beach, and no swimming was allowed unless they were on duty.

At 6:00 p.m. the welcome ringing of the bell brought us to the dining room for the evening meal which was preceded by a short service in which a free will offering was taken. This offering was taken for those less fortunate than we and amounted to $50.00. The meals were kept lively by the singing of choruses, readings, and "extemporaneous numbers." The kitchen force favored us with several numbers which we enjoyed very much.

At 7:15 we gathered for the inspiring sunset services. The visitors who came to camp also had the privilege of hearing Rev. Musser at this service. Our evening meetings were varied· Some of the outstanding speakers were Dr. J. E. Harztler and Dr. Winfield Fretz. Other programs consisted of open forum, a missionary playlet, and stunt night. The high light of the evening was the campfire service, and on the final evening we had an impressive candlelight trail service. After we got back to our cabins following campfire our cabin counselers led us in our evening devotions and the signal for "lights out" came at 10:15.

We enjoyed the entire week of retreat—all of it—the religious inspirations, the new friends we met from three states, the teachers who taught us, the good times we had, and the fine spirit of cooperation among all the retreaters. And we know you would enjoy it too. So we would like to see you next year at Camp Mack where there will be room for you, and with your help we will have another successful retreat. Much of this success was due to the efforts of our retreat chairman, Rev. Harry Yoder. The newly elected chairman is Rev. Shelly who would appreciate your help in making next year's retreat plans.

RESOLUTIONS OF THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S ORGANIZATION OF THE MIDDLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE OF 1942

The Young People's Organization of the Middle District Conference at its fifty-fourth session is aware of the complex social forces which are threatening to uproot us as a denomination. We recognize that the Mennonite youth of today will become the Mennonite leaders of tomorrow. In order to stimulate thought and action and in order to meet some of these serious problems that may very well severely test our faith, we, the resolutions committee, do hereby offer the following suggestions and recommendations:

1. Conference Attendance: We recommend that more young people attend the Middle District Conference. We feel that it is imperative that every society send at least one member as delegate to the Young People's Session.

2. Peace: We resolve that we familiarize ourselves with the work of the Middle District Peace Committee and cooperate with it. We urge our young people's group to vigorously support our Civilian Public Service Camps, (a) by registering as Christian objectors, (b) through prayer, (c) through adequate funds. With other people saving their pennies and investing them in defense stamps, it is imperative that we invest in Civilian Bonds, or better, make generous gifts toward the successful continuence of the program. We suggest that groups obtain moving pictures of camp life from Dr. Fast, and show them in the churches. We also suggest that groups obtain literature from Dr. Fast for definite courses of study. We recommend that at least three to five Sunday evening programs during the year be devoted to peace.

3. Personal Conduct: We urge that our young people become conscientious in all things—not merely in regard to military service or in supporting the war effort. We realize that much difficulty and misunderstanding in Mennonite communities between non-Mennonites and Mennonites in regard to the war has originated from this score. If we want to be a part of the world in some things, then we might just as well be a part of the world in all things. Morality in sex, honesty in business dealings, love and fellowship in the home, humility and simplicity in the community, and cooperation in the Church are just as essential in the building of the Kingdom of God as non-participation in military service. Let us live with such high conduct that men cannot help but see the power of Jesus working in us. As a source of strength, we feel that young people should set aside a definite portion of each day for Bible study and prayer.

4. Retreat: We suggest that more churches experiment with the "Retreat" idea. More young people should attend those retreats which have been planned and organized. Each church in a retreat district should send at least two delegates. Definite courses of study for corresponding age groups should be planned.

5. Social Activity Program: We realize that an adequate social program must be provided by our Young People's Organizations. Wholesome recreation is just as essential to a well balanced religious life as is religion to a well balanced physical life. The only way we can hold our Young People in the church, is by stimulating mutual association and by building up what the sociologist terms a "we group" feeling. We urge our young people's groups to develop the dramatic talents of their members through presentation of plays, musical talents through musical festivals, cantatas and oratorios, and expression through public speaking or oratorical contests, not merely on matters of peace, but perhaps on matters of church policy, etc. We believe that a recreation program which builds on a cultural and intellectual foundation is the type that is most sorely needed in Mennonite circles today.

6. Agriculture as an Occupation: We urge our young people to choose, wherever possible, agriculture as a vocation. We believe that Mennonites should by all means hold on to their land. It is now obvious, that only where one is economically independent can one be politically, socially, culturally, and religiously free. The failure of our urban Mennonites to hold on to their peace convictions is a case in point. Mennonites can best contribute to the growing Kingdom of God by remaining primarily a rural people.

7. Support of Denominational Schools: We urge all Mennonite youth to attend our denominational schools, and support them in every possible way. We realize that if we as a denomination are to survive, we need well trained intelligent leadership—a leadership that has been developed by teachers who are interested in a perpetuation of the principles which we consider vital to our faith.

8. Education in Church History: We recommend that young Mennonites become more familiar with their church history, culture, and language. We realize that too many Mennonite young people are Mennonite as the result of parental choice rather than individual choice. We feel this to be a dangerous situation, as exemplified by the failure of many of our youth to remain in the church after reaching adulthood. We feel that too many of our youth and adults are unaware of the implications which membership in the Mennonite denomination carry. Therefore we recommend that definite classes in church history in Sunday School or in Catechism be organized which teach pre-baptized young people a thorough outline of Mennonite history. We recommend that every Sunday School library or young people's group own a copy of Smith's Story of the Mennonites, which we feel to be the most practical and feasable work in the field.

9. Social Action: We have come to realize that many of the roots of modern war are found in maladjustments in our economic life. Let us foster the cooperative spirit wherever possible. Let us train our young people's groups in the history of cooperatives and the economics of cooperatives. When this generation of young people becomes adult, let us have a cooperative Mennonite economic society rather than a bitter, jealous, competitive one. If at all possible, let our young people sponsor cooperative canning projects, cooperative harvesting, and even co-operative marketing projects. Brotherhood in economics, to our way of thinking, is just as important as brotherhood in matters of the spirit. Too many Mennonites take pride in showing off their material possessions, but too few have the capacity of exhibiting any spiritual ones.

In those communities where different races or nationalities exist, let us exhibit a friendly and tolerant attitude. Let us do all we can to eliminate class, race, and factional strife.

SENIOR DEPARTMENT

REPORTS OF RETREAT—THE CAMPFIRE GLOW—Luke 24:28-32

I. Worship Service:

1. Songs: "Holy, Holy, Holy! Lord God Almighty!" No. 1; "Saviour, Again to Thy Dear Name We Raise," No. 43. 2. Reading of scripture passage, prayer, and leader's remarks. 3. Reports from retreats. 4. Offering for C.P.S. camps.

II. Leader's Introduction:

"Contemplate the glowing embers of the campfire, the rising wisps of smoke, the circle of friendly people, your comrades in Christ. Who shall interpret the scene for you? The geologist can tell you the rock on which the fire is built, how it was made and how long ago. The chemist can reveal to you some of the mystery of conflagration, the strange chemical unions which take place as the wood on the campfire burns to ash and smoke. The physicist can tell you how the light from the fire is transmitted through space to shine upon your face and the faces of your friends in the circle. The psychologist and sociologist are able to explain something of mysterious human relations by which we all are bound in one great bundle of life and by which our actions are so largely determined. But none of these interpreters has explained the spell of the scene. After them must come the artist, the poet, the dreamer." God speaks, and men hear His voice.

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

1. A camp of vision, Gen. 28:11, 12, 17. 2. The holy presence, Matt. 18:20. 3. A holy camp, Deut. 23:14. 4. A campfire program, Eph. 5:19, 20. 5. A campfire, Psalm 8.

IV. Use the discussion period for some more reports of the retreat.

V. Facts for Study:

Jesus and His three best friends had had a wonderful night on the mountain. Peter, James, and John had had the unforgettable experience of seeing their Master transfigured, so that God and the spirit world seemed very near and real. It strengthened their faith wonderfully and sent them down to the valley next morning treading on air. Now study the valley experiences. What a letdown the other disciples had! That epileptic boy was too much for them, and they couldn't understand why they could not help him. Vision is to fit us for service in the valley.

The mount for visions—then below
The paths of daily duty go.

VI. Food for Thought:

A by-product of the retreat is the opportunity to make friends.

Without the warmth of friends, I could not live!
Without the joyous interchange of touch,
Of word, of deed, of spirit that they give,
Life's other gifts don't matter very much.

The dead possessions of the world's great store
Have meaning only as they come and go
From friend to friend, in mute symbolic flow
Of giving and receiving—nothing more.

A man can live without the greater part
Of sustenance, or happiness, or power,
But sweet communication of the heart,
The mind and soul is lifeblood to the flower.

No greater gift did God to humans give.
Without the warmth of friends, I could not live!
—Betty Knowles

IN THE GLOW OF THE CAMPFIRE

"Did you ever watch the campfire
When the wood has fallen low
And the ashes start to whiten
'Round the embers' crimson glow?

"With the night sounds all around you
Making silence doubly sweet
And a full moon high above you
That the spell may be complete?

"Tell me, were you ever nearer
To the land of heart's desire
Then when you sat there dreaming
With your feet before the fire?"

Plan to have a light picnic supper nearby and then to walk in silence to your places around the unlit fire. Have it lit by a member who kneels and recites "Kneel Always When You Light a Fire" by John Oxenham.

Sing hymns and choruses which you know by memory.

Time of prayer and guided meditation, in which you think of faults and sins which you would like to have burned out of your lives, and of services which you may give to help light the world around you.

"Meditation is the tongue of the soul and the language of our spirit; and our wandering thoughts in prayer are but the results of neglect of meditation and recessions from that duty; according as we neglect meditation, so are our prayers imperfect, meditation being the soul of prayer and the intention of our spirit." —Jeremy Taylor

A "Campfire" Meeting

It would be interesting to have this meeting some other place and time, than our usual meeting place. A campfire meeting suggests a campfire, experiences of life and activity, purity, fervor, and power. All these and other virtues might well be brought out in the program of the evening. Our memory verse, "Thou God see'st me" (Gen. 16:13), is a thought that should be uppermost in our minds in all our activity. May our deeds be such that God can reward us.

God First

A visitor to an orphanage in New York told the children how in the great city they had put up signs everywhere which read, "Safety First!" A little fellow who heard what he said jumped up and said, "Down here we put God first."

All of us should put God first in our lives. The Bible says, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

Take Time

Take time to breathe a morning prayer.
Take time to read God's Word each day.
Take time to be pleasant.
Take time to be polite.
Take time to be patient.
Take time to be thoughtful.
Take time to get acquainted with Christ.
Take time for an evening payer.

Daily Bible Readings

Fellowship, I John 1:3-7; Confession, Rom. 10:9-10; The Great Commission, Matt. 28:19-20; Humility, Luke 18:13; Love, I John 4:7, 8:21; Singing Together, Eph. 5:19.

The Question Bee

1. Who denied Jesus in the glow of a fire?
2. Where did Peter deny his Lord?
3. Why should the question, "What will you do with Jesus?" demand our attention?

The Prayer List

Thank God for friends, the Bible, wholesome entertainment, good books, and our privilege to worship God.

Ask God that the people of our land may humble themselves before the Lord, that he may rule and have power in our land.

THE PERILS OF FAVORITISM AND JEALOUSLY

Joseph Sold Into Slavery

Genesis 37:23-36 Read 37, 39-41

The intensely interesting story of Joseph is the most attractive and appealing biography in the Old Testament. One perceives the overruling providence of God through all of it. The cruel sin of his brothers—selling him into slavery—is a link in the chain of providence by which he came into high office in Egypt and so was enabled to save the land and his own father and brethren from the calamity of famine.

Jealousy, Hatred of Joseph's Brethren

Several causes contributed to this. Foremost was Jacob's favoritism (37:4). The two sons of Rachel, the wife he truly loved—Joseph and Benjamin—were his favorite children. They were also the youngest children. Jacob openly showed his favoritism—an inexcusable indiscretion for any parent. "Foolishly he made for Joseph a garment of special distinction (37:3) which showed that he was to be a gentleman and do no work." (H. T. Robinson.) This was a long robe made with pieces of colored cloth. Other causes of hatred were Joseph's dreams indicating his destined superiority, which he unwisely told to his brothers. Added to this was the evil report (37:2) which Joseph brought to his father after visiting his brothers.

Joseph's Brothers Sell Him vss. 23-28

When Joseph appeared at Dothan, most of his brothers were ready to slay him. Rueben was eager to save his life and persuaded them to put Joseph into an empty pit from which he hoped to rescue him and "deliver him to his father again." The jealous brothers siezed Joseph, took off his distinguishing coat and put him into a pit. Then with fiendish unconcern as to his fate and utterly ignoring his pitiful entreaties (cf. 42:21), "they sat down to eat bread." What an evidence of their callous brutality and hardness of heart. They were indeed a hard lot and probably believed they had disposed of their brother and his dreams. "Their hatred of Joseph probably had a far deeper seat—their dislike for his piety and other excellencies which made his character and conduct a constant censure upon them."

Judah, apparently more compassionate than most of his brothers and wishing to save Joseph's life, saw that no good could come to them in slaying their brother. The opportune coming of a company of Ishmaelites, Arabian merchants who also trafficked in slaves, gave them an opportunity to get rid of Joseph without killing him. They sold him for the usual price of a male slave from five to twenty years old (Lev. 27:5). Joseph was brought into Egypt, and thus God used these merchants in helping to work out His great purpose in the life of Joseph.

Joseph's Brothers Report to Jacob vss. 29-36

Rueben evidently was not present when Joseph was sold. His plan to rescue him was frustrated. He was the oldest son and felt his responsibility to their father, for Joseph's safety. He showed his grief and distress of mind in rending his clothes. How should he account to Jacob? The brothers decided to deceive their father. They had to make some explanation for Joseph's disappearance. Committing one crime necessarily led to another to conceal it. Cruel deceit was a consequence of the awful crime which they had committed. Jacob recognized his son's coat and gave way to extreme passion of grief and mourning. His sons saw his anguish of soul, yet for many years they kept their guilty secret from him. Jacob had deceived his father Isaac, and now his sons deceived him. "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." Joseph was given a large opportunity in Egypt, and he showed himself a worthy man. God's favor more than counterbalanced all the evil that was done to him. He was given the place of greatest authority under the king.

Perils of Favoritism and Jealousy

Some parents—too many—still evince a definite tendency to show favoritism, especially for the youngest child. Children are keenly conscious of such favoritism and its results are harmful for all concerned. It lessens love and respect for parents and arouses jealousy. A favored child—"mother's or father's darling"—is usually "spoiled" in that there "develops an exaggerated conception of personal perfection which makes it difficult to give proper heed to good advice and to other's wishes."

Jealousy shuts its eyes to facts and distorts the vision. It makes it difficult to see anything good in one whom we dislike. Jealousy is only too common among Christians and in the Church. Pastors may even become jealous of the success of some brother pastor. How frequently it shows itself in singers. We all need wisdom and tact.

Who is usually most to blame for jealousy growing out of favoritism?

Why do parents frequently fail to see the perils in favoritism?

When is the time to deal with dangerous and wrong attitudes?

EMMANUEL MENNONITE CHURCH

Pratum, Oregon

"This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our Faith." I John 5:14. Outer victories are very uncertain. What looks like victory today may be and many times is defeat tomorrow. We praise God for an inner victory. God has been good to us.

In May Miss Sarah Buller of Newton, Kansas, and former missionary to Africa, brought us several very interesting messages in Sunday School, Endeavor, and also in the meeting of the women's missionary society. The Mother and Daughter Banquet was well attended by about ninety. Rev. P. A. Kliewer was the guest speaker and challenged us with a message on "That Possible You."

John Zurcher, who had been married only five months, was killed in an airplane crash near Everett, Washington. Comrades in the army testified of the Christian character that he had shown among them. May the seed sown bring forth much fruit.

Rev. and Mrs. Unruh, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Roth, and Mrs. Ida Herr had a blessed time at the conference at Colfax.

Rev. and Mrs. Ummel and daughter, Miss Emma Ruth, and Miss Phyllis Claassen were welcome visitors on June 28. They informed us about the work with migrants and the young people's program for the coming year.

We were made happy and were blessed by the visit of Rev. and Mrs. P. A. Penner. Seeing their pictures and hearing the messages of these servants of God surely proved to us the power of the gospel of Jesus Christ and that it does pay to send missionaries to those in darkness.

The executive committee of our women's missionary society commemorated the thirty-fifth anniversary of the society. The offering for famine relief in India, taken at the program, amounted to $41.66. Many charter members are still active. Those unable to come are a part through their prayers and gifts.

Two years ago we wondered as to how we could raise the money for remodeling our meeting house. Money was borrowed. Money was pledged and received through offerings. The offering of July 5 more than covered the debt. On August 9, while the notes were burned, we sang "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow." May we always praise him. Ps. 113:3. —*Mrs. W. E. FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Wadsworth, Ohio

The Mennonite Ladies Christian Service has completed its first year of service. Quilting, knotting comforters, making quilt blocks, sewing for Bluffton College, European relief, and the Red Cross include most of the activities of this busy organization.

The purpose of this organization is three-fold. First, to make every lady member feel she is needed; second, to help her get acquainted; and third, to fuse new blood into her.

All the lady members of the church were divided into four circles or groups by lot and remain in their circles for two years. A chairman and co-chairman is chosen by each circle. Circle 1 serves January, May, and September; circle 2 serves February, June, and October, etc.

This organization meets the first Thursday of every month for an all day sewing. The circle in charge for the month serves the lunch at noon. It is also responsible for flowers in the church on Sunday mornings. Sometimes a circle takes charge of arrangements for special services. For example, it is customary that on Harvest Home Sunday, the last Sunday in September, a lovely display of vegetables and fruits is arranged in the front of the church and after the service, taken and donated to the City Hospital. Circle 1 serves in September; so this group is responsible for all arrangements if the organization so desires.

Sometimes responsibilities for special occasions are divided among the circles. This worked very well in planning the farewell party for Rev. and Mrs. Shelley and family and also the reception for Rev. and Mrs. Smucker. One circle planned the program, another served the refreshments, etc. At other times ladies from each circle are chosen to serve on special committees as the Sewing Committee, Project Committee, etc.

The finances of this organization have also been successful. The monthly missionary offerings, money cleared from serving noon day lunch, paper sales, and selling of gadgets have kept the treasury able to meet its many expenditures with a surplus of approximately eighty dollars on hand. Expenditures include such items as orders for already cut garments from Mennonite Central Committee, thread, material, postage, etc.

The cooperation of the women at large has had a profound influence on the church. All ladies who have contributed their time, money, and services have made in their own way a unique contribution in Christian service.

Dedication of the new basement on Wednesday evening, July 29 combined with the annual Fellowship Supper was indeed a high point in the life of the church. Following the Fellowship supper in the basement an interesting program followed at which Rev. Wilmer Shelley of Topeka, Indiana, and former pastor of the church was guest speaker. Also invited for the evening were the Rev. A. S. Rosenberg's of Dalton, Rev. Wm. Stauffer's, and Rev. A. R. Keiser's of Bath, Ohio.

The pastor, Rev. Smucker, expressed sincere thanks to all who contributed time and money toward the reconstruction of the basement. Special thanks were extended to Brothers G. W. Brown, Leslie Bartlett, William Overholt, and John Mornowick for extra duty on the project. This new basement is a marvelous addition to the facilities of our church.

Also of interest is the new nursery for use during church services. It was started July 22 with Marilyn Daniels, Juanita and Jean Welday in charge.

Delegates to the Middle District Conference session at Summerfield, Illinois, August 16-18 include Hattie Yoder and the pastor.

Jeremy Brintlinger, Nina Newcomer, Wayne Brubaker, and Billie Weinsheimer are attending the all Mennonite Retreat August 3 to 9 at Camp Alexander Mack near Milford, Indiana.

Our minister, Rev. Don Smucker lectured at Winona Lake, Indiana, August 7 and 8 and spent August 9th at the Mennonite Retreat at Milford Indiana.

Among the many activities in the church for young and old we find many ways to render service. Above all we need sources where our strength, faith, and hope can be renewed in this war-torn world. As a congregation we have found our Sunday sermons filled with inspiring thoughts for these trying times. "God is our refuge and strength." Psalm 46:1.

LIFT MY EYES TO FAR HORIZONS

God of the wide distances of the world, lift Thou my eyes to far horizons.

Forgive me that I have been too much absorbed in the narrow borders of my own small life.

Grant me to see the long course of history out of which my single life and this vast world have come.

Show me the great men who have lived in the days gone and those alive today.

Let me look into the future "far as human eyes can see," and make the events of the world tomorrow a part of my plans and hopes today.

Show me what happens in distant places of the earth and among strange and far-off people.

Tear me loose—with a wrench and pain if need be—from what is so near that it binds and narrows my soul.

—First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana: Rev. Elias Zimmerman, a converted Christian Jew, spoke Sunday morning, August 16, on "Who Crucified Christ?" In the evening the Wheaton College Men's Quartet sang. Edward Burkhalter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Menno Burkhalter, is a member of the quartet.

—The First Annual Conference on Mennonite Cultural Problems was held at Winona Lake, Indiana, August 7 and 8. Brother Melvin Gingerich suggests that the term "Mennonite Life Conference" might be more satisfactory for describing it, but not altogether so. This conference, which according to plans is to be made a yearly meeting, rests on the belief that the will of God should govern all of living. On this basis various problems are considered. When Christians study various problems and counsel with each other in regard to them, then something definitely helpful can be expected to result. Consequently, we should welcome the plans for the future.

There were over 125 individuals present for one or more sessions. Ten states were represented ranging from Pennsylvania to California, and thirty-two congregations scattered over five branches of the Mennonite Brotherhood had one or more representative present. This was the first of what promises to become an annual series of conferences of this nature. I believe everyone who was present will agree that each one of the addresses delivered and the discussions which followed was singularly significant. It was voted by the group to have this work carried on in future years under the direction of a committee appointed by the Mennonite college presidents who met in a body for the first time and affected a permanent organization on the day preceding the meeting of the cultural conference. —Brother H. H. Brubaker, Director of the Camino California, camp is planning to return to the African mission field. Brother Leland Bachman and Sister Bachman will transfer from the North Fork, California, camp to Camino, where Brother Bachman will assume directorship.

—Brother Samuel Goossen is going to North Fork as director and Brother Albert Behrer is transferring from Cascade Locks camp in Oregon to North Fork where he will serve as assistant director.

—Brother Ralph Hernley will soon transfer from the Henry, Illinois, camp where he has been assistant director to the Howard, Pa., camp where he will assume directorship. Sister Hernley, who has been dietician at Henry, will perform similar duties at Howard.

—Ten more boys have been transferred from the Denison, Iowa, camp to farms in Dodge County, Wisconsin.

—Twenty Grottoes, Virginia, boys have been approved for work in the Staunton, Virginia, mental hospital.

—Seven boys from Grottoes, three Sideling Hill (Wells Tannery, Pa.) boys and one Marietta boy have been transferred to Beltville, Maryland, to the Federal Research Center.

—Brother Henry A. Fast gave the dedication sermon at the recent dedication of a chapel at the Marietta, Ohio, C. P. S. camp.

—The chorus from the Weeping Water, Nebraska, C. P. S. camp recently sang at some union services in Hillsboro, Kansas. The camp invites groups from various Mennonite churches nearby to come and visit.

—Roland Bartel, Mennonite campee at the Crestview, Florida, C. P. S. camp, has taught a standard first aid course, which was recently completed by eight men. The men at this camp are doing health work.

—Thirteen men from the Medaryville, Indiana, (former Bluffton camp) camp attended the Mennonite Cultural Problems conference at Winona Lake. "A tired but very enthusiastic group of campees returned from the conference with the deep feeling that is should be made an annual event."

—Henry, Illinois, C. P. S. camp: The four-acre garden is yielding abundantly potatoes, tomatoes, sweet corn, beans and cabbage.

—Beltsville Experimental Farm project: Men are being sent to this project in the state of Maryland. For a description of this farm project see the article "The World's Most Fantastic Farm" in the June issue of Readers' Digest or the article "Magic Acres" in the November, 1941, issue of the American.

—Fort Collins, Colorado, C. P. S. camp: Cameron Pass is a side camp in the heart of the timber and has an altitude of approximately 9,500 feet. The nineteen men in it are to do road building. Another side camp at Red Feather Lakes is split into two sections with nine men at the Ranger station and nineteen men at Dead Man Camp. The nine men are to do "tree-surveying"—counting the number of trees, listing the kinds of timber, etc. This is done on horseback. The others are to build forest roads. Some in the main camp are putting rock check dams in gullies. A government man recently said, "It takes six hundred years to put back one inch of the top soil that has been wasted by erosion." First aid is taught. Have such power tools as lathe, eight-inch bench saw, and combination jig and band saw. Of the 144 men in camp forty-nine (the highest representation) are from Kansas. Of the total 102 are farmers. Mennonites compose 82.6 per cent of the camp. Rev. John F. Schmidt is director.

HELP FOR WIVES OF C.O.'S

A pastor writes thus in his church bulletin:

"A new problem is arising in Mennonite churches as a result of the policy of our government in drafting married men. The government makes provision for dependents of married men who go into the army. No provision is made, however, for married men who go to the C. P. S. camps by reason of conscientious convictions. Who will be concerned about their dependents? Has the time perhaps come for a new expression of brotherhood in our Mennonite fellowship in that we consider this problem as a church? This is part of the hardship of war, but is it not the Christian way to 'bear one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ'?..."

Is is not true that if a man with wife or wife and children to support is not given any hope of help by his relatives or his church, they are clearly adding to the temptation which may cause this man to forsake conscientious scruples for economic reasons? May not the sin of unwillingness to share another's burden be the seedbed for a harvest of unrighteous decisions? If so, should not those who are able to, offer their help?

How can the necessary help best be given? One branch of the Mennonite Church in Canada has approached the problem as described in the following quotation:

"The married C. O.'s have been faced with the larger problem. Some even have been called upon to go to camp with little children left behind to be supported. In most cases such wives returned to their own parents, which is preferable. This is the most normal procedure. Where this is not possible, some stay with the husband's parents. Others were given rooms and work with kinsfolk. This is both practical and affords a minimum of expense. It is likewise true to the scriptural counsel of Paul in the epistle of Timothy. Some wives work close to the camp, in near-by cities. Some take on work in a shop, office, or factory.

"The apostolic precedent in the care of widows presents practically a similar situation for the wives of C. O.'s who are deprived to a large extent (entirely in the United States) of their husbands' support. The injunction of an inspired apostle was that those Who believed and had widows were to relieve them; that is, parents, brothers, sisters, uncles, aunts, cousins. The direct counsel is, 'Let them relieve them, let not the church be charged.' The church was to provide for 'widows indeed' who had nobody to look to for support. The charge was further strengthened by saying, that if any cared not for their own, and those of their own household, they had denied the faith and were worse than an infidel.

"The guard against full support for younger widows was that none were to be granted it under sixty years of age. The reason for this prohibition was that they might learn to be idle, busybodies, tattlers, and wanderers from house to house.

"The problem of wives is intensified where some four or more children are left behind. In one such case the relatives helped considerably, and the church assists in the extra burden. This is indeed a fine Christian gesture. 'Bear ye one another's burdens.' Where this extra need arises, the church should assume her end of the need with liberality and Christian grace."

The present fires of affliction may help to burn out the dross of unbrotherliness which has entered into relationships which should be much purer and much more loving in the light of Christ's words, "This is my commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you."

Blessed is the man or woman who can say, "I know that as long as my parents, my brothers and sisters, my brothers and sisters-in-law, or my brethren or sisters in the church have something to eat, I and mine will also have something to eat." Blessed is the person whose blood or church family prompts such hope. —rw.

BE THOU FULL OF FAITH

By Flora L. Fellman

I was impressed with what C. Henry Smith said in The Mennonite, July 28, beginning on the first page. Yes, we hear and read so many good, sound things; from a child I attended Sunday school and church and was interested in the word of God and tried to grow.

The way many church members live and do has for a long time made me sad. When outside of church you do not know that by their actions and deeds they are church members. What is lacking? First, I think there is no desire to grow. The Bible is not searched enough. Do they understand what they read? When we really want something we usually keep on working until we have it, if it can be obtained. If we desire to grow wise unto salvation we read and study the scriptures daily· If we do not understand, we can ask someone who will gladly explain just for the asking, to help us.

How many heads of families who are known as Christians have or erect family altars when they begin housekeeping? If we want to grow we will follow what we learn from our great men of faith in the Bible. Righteousness begins in the home. Proverbs 22:6, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old, he will not depart from it."

How can parents rear their children in the fear and admonition of the Lord, when they do not thirst after righteousness themselves and just swim with the tide? Yes, it is human nature to follow the crowd, and at the present time how many show the faith of our fathers? Beginning with the faithful men of the Bible down to our present age should mean enough to us. I cannot comprehend why their lives are not a pattern for us. We read and hear that their obedience always ended with victory and that God blessed them.

Perhaps sometimes the ministers have not the courage to preach real plain sermons. Not all hearers can comprehend and understand these deep sermons which do not mention any of the daily, common sins. I remember hearing old people discuss that years ago the preaching was so powerful that the hearers wept. How much weeping do we see now? They seem satisfied with themselves and seemingly are not aroused to deep thinking except at times when stricken with grief or misfortune.

Courage is what this sad world needs. Yes, courage, my brother, to say "no" to worldly things and to join the few faithful and often despised ones, and to take a forward step.

We cannot wholly blame our boys and young men for not all going as conscientious objectors. They may not have been bred and trained by parents who had the faith of Abraham, or who worked for peace like Isaac until he could say, "Now the Lord hath made room for us."

We have heard it said that the Mennonites could not support all their boys and men if they would all go as conscientious objectors. I believe if they go in the faith to render the most service to humanity, aiming to fulfill God's will, God will take care of the situation. No one, however wise he may be, knows the future. So we cannot and dare not lean on our own understanding. In Proverbs 3:5 we read "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart." I believe that God in a wonderful way will make all provisions, and open the windows of heaven and pour out such blessings that the Lord will provide; He never forsakes His own.

Home training is best, what a child gets in the home from God-fearing parents is an influence all through life. Praying mothers and Christian fathers have power to mould lives. The child whose parents themselves do not understand the will of God, neither pray nor study the Bible, nor try to live Christian lives, if brought into Sunday school may be influenced by its teachers, or perhaps watch some Christian whom it follows.

A good Sunday school teacher helps much. Parents, children, or anybody who seeks after righteousness may learn to understand the Bible and its truths in Sunday school.

Upon arriving at an understanding age one can learn and grow by being a good listener to the sermons preached. The minister should so prepare and deliver his sermons that anybody can understand, for some are only babes and must be fed on milk. Also he should have the courage to speak what God puts into his heart, and preach peace and how it can come into our hearts. The Prince of Peace says, "Blessed are the peacemakers; for they shall be called the children of God."

The Mennonite should not only go into every Mennonite home, but it should be read by every member of the church. We miss a part of our life if we do not read our paper; it informs and educates us. Also I wish the young people would spend their time in reading worthwhile books. What a beautiful picture to see a whole family together at home in the evening, reading and studying! Will they not grow and bear fruit?

Jesus said men ought always to pray and not to faint. Perhaps the matter of establishing a training school for our ministry was not attacked as strongly as it should be. Many feel it necessary, but only God knows how many effectual, fervent prayers He has heard in this matter. If the financial problem is the only reason for the General Conference not establishing a training school, why not lay it before the Lord in prayer more strongly than ever and appeal for help from believing members? Surely, if God is willing at this time He will hear and answer and in some way

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

BROWNS WRITE

Taming, Hopei, China
March 25, 1942

Dr. John Warkentin
228 E. Huron
Chicago, Illinois, U. S. A.

Dear Linda and John:

We are happy and thank the Lord that we are getting along nicely. Our place here in the city compound is big enough for us eight people,—we three and five Nazarenes. During the winter we had only one heater in the living room. The rest of the rooms were cold; but now the weather is warming up, and we expect to feel more comfortable for a few months. When the hot season comes on we shall feel more crowded. However, at any rate it is the Lord's kindness that we are permitted to live in our mission quarters. Not only that we are at home, so to say, and it is thus more convenient, but we can continue to have contact with the work and fellowship with our Chinese Christians. They have a hard struggle, but the dear Lord gives grace. In many ways we feel greatly encouraged. Our staying here after most of the missionaries left surely was of the Lord. The end has not yet come, and nobody can foretell how things will develop. But even if the dear Lord would now open the way and put it into our hearts to go home, our staying this one year has meant a great deal for Christ's cause, and we now already feel well-paid for doing so. There are, however, some very important things in the mission work to develop in the near future. We greatly rejoice in our service and praise the Lord.

No, we are not disobedient. Even now we have again handed in our names, as willing to go home, if God so leads and provides a way for us. Humanly speaking, such a chance can hardly be expected. Of course, with God nothing is impossible.

We hope that this letter will get through and reach you in due time. We also hope and pray, that you are well and that John can finish his medical course this spring. We congratulate! God keep, guide, and bless you all!

Your affectionate and loving parents,
(Signed) H. J. and Maria Brown

A NEW ERA OF PRAYER

By Bishop Brenton T. Bradely

It is borne in upon me that as a Church we are failing to accomplish what is both essential and possible in the matter of prayer. A recent re-reading of the book by E. M. Bounds, "Preacher and Prayer," has deepened this feeling, and I am led to send you this little message on the need of prayer in our lives and service in India.

Bounds says, "The man makes the preacher. God must make the man." He then adds, "The pulpit of this day is weak in praying." Let us examine our lives and service in the light of this statement. Let us remember the great truth that is expressed in these words, "It is impossible for the preacher to keep his spirit in harmony with the divine nature of his high calling without much prayer." Can we truthfully say that there is "much prayer" in our lives? Just how much prayer is there in our daily lives?

"The preacher's study," says Bounds, "ought to be a closet, a Bethel, an altar, a vision, and a ladder .... because God is in the study." Is this the kind of daftar we have, and do other people recognize it? On the contrary, are we not condemned when we read, "The little estimate we put on prayer is evident from the little time we give to it... how poor and mean our petty, childish praying is beside the habits of the true men of God in all ages!" Can we ever get through our present difficult situations in India without a new baptism of prayer? Surely we must acknowledge that "no man can do a great and enduring work for God who is not a man of prayer."

In these dark days of perplexing problems, when our need of wisdom is felt as never before, we should ponder over the statement, "Thought is not only brightened and clarified in prayer, but thought is born in prayer. Revelations are made in the closet which are made nowhere else." William Wilberforce, whose rule was to allot two hours and a half daily to his private devotions, states a fact that we need to remember, "Surely the experience of all good men confirms the proposition that without a due measure of private devotions the soul will grow lean." Martin Luther stated this with even more emphasis when he said, "If I should neglect prayer but a single day, I should lose a great deal of the fire of faith." What about our fire of faith?

If there is weakness or lack in the Church in regard to prayer, are we—missionaries, pastors, district superintendents, bishops—not the persons who must be held mainly responsible? Can we do any truly greater or more significant work than to lead our people into a deeper, more fruitful prayer-life? Bounds speaks words of weight when he writes, "The greatest benefactor this age could have is the man who will bring the preachers and the Church back to prayer." Who will do this? In your district, your station, your institution, who can do this? Surely those who are known as our "leaders." Do you think that the following words may, therefore, apply to you? —"Nothing but a specific effort by a praying leadership will avail."

I wish to join you in a more earnest, a more definite a more fruitful prayer-life. Let us make a new covenant with Christ, and let us enter upon a new era of prayer!

"Is anything too hard for God?"

Yes, if a man's heart is hard! If, despite all our problems and difficulties, we refuse to lean on God and "take hold of His strength," then the situation is "too hard."

We need to summon the Church to prayer,—but unless we be men and women of prayer, we have no right to do this, and nothing worth while would result if we did do so!

Let us pray!

Abraham Lincoln said:

"The occasion is piled high with difficulty, and we must rise to the occasion."

PEACE SECTION NOTES APPEALING CASES

Increasing war pressure is reacting more and more prejudicially against the C. O.'s in certain areas. There is increasing difficulty for our people to get a IV-E classification from some local draft boards. The proper procedure in making appeal in such cases is simply to ask the local board for the privilege to sign the proper application on the back of the regular questionnarie, (Form 40). Or it may also be accomplished by writing a letter to the Appeal Board. This should be done within the ten-day period provided for the taking of appeals.

We are continuing in our attitude of discouraging appeals on other grounds than conscientious objection. Public resentment can very readily be aroused in such a situation.

In a number of cases where C. O.'s have been turned down by the local and appeal boards and finally by the Presidential Appeal Board and have refused induction into the armed forces, they have stood trial before a Federal Court. In every case from our M. C. C. constituency with which we are acquainted, these C. O.'s who have been sent to prison have been paroled in a short time to a C. P. S. camp. If you are acquainted with any exception to this, where C. O.'s have not been paroled after the necessary thirty-day quarantine and the time needed to clear the parole application, you will do such men a service by informing us of the case. We may be able to assist them.

RELIEF

A NEW ROAD FOR THE MENNONITE COLONIES

For some time the Mennonite colonies, Menno and Fernheim, in Paraguay, have been in the prospect of having a road built along the boundry between the two colonies. Brother Vernon Schmidt reports having surveyed a given area as a preliminary measure. "I am quite pleased with the possibilities of this road project," he states in his August 9 letter. Difficulties in the work are lack of a tractor and other efficient equipment. Under these handicaps the work will of necessity progress slowly.

Both Vernon Schmidt and Dr. John Schmidt refer to an accident which befell the latter while he was helping with the road work. A piece of a limb falling from a tree top struck Dr. Schmidt on his forehead, and he narrowly escaped a serious injury.

Brother Vernon Schmidt's letter mentions attending a baptismal service for ten Hutterites, and Dr. John Schmidt reports that the Bible school has started with thirty-seven pupils.

CAMP BRIEFS

Brother Walter Schmidt, campee, has been chosen business manager at the Howard, Pa., camp.

Brother Delvin Kirchhofer of Bluffton, Ohio, has returned to Grottoes, Virginia, as educational director.

Nineteen boys from Grottoes, Virginia, have reported for work at the Western State Hospital, Staunton, Virginia.

Present prospects are that a new camp will be opened at Belden, Montana, near Glacier National Park some time in September.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

CHRISTIAN SIMPLICITY

To our mothers and fathers the term "simplicity" had a much more positive meaning than it does to us of the present generation. They had it impressed upon them in their catechetical classes that a life of simplicity was a fundamental characteristic of the true Christian. Not only was this taught to them in church, it was emphasized in the home in a dozen different ways; in matters of dress, in one's speech, in the serving and eating of food, in the conservation of clothing, shoes, and household furnishings, in every avenue of life Christian simplicity was stressed. Few of us in this generation have a similiar understanding and appreciation for the word "simplicity." It has been increasingly less emphasized in our present day teaching and preaching. Many ministers have come to believe that it is definitely a secondary matter. The important thing, they contend, is to preach the correct doctrines and the matter of simplicity will automatically take care of itself. They emphasize more what Jesus and Paul taught than the way Jesus and Paul lived. Both of course are important, but Mennonites in previous generations have laid a great deal more stress on living the pure and holy life than merely believing in it. They have traditionally stressed obedience to Christ as much as they did faith in Christ, and the records everywhere indicate that they were not given to loud shouting, much talking, and long verbal testimonies. They believed rather that a quiet life, lived purely, courageously, lovingly and obediently was a more powerful testimony to a sinful world than any spoken words could possibly be.

Following False Gods

Not only have we of this generation come to substitute Christian belief for Christian living, but we have come dangerously close to following after false gods. We have practically kicked the doctrine of simplicity out the back door as an outmoded virtue. By many of our people it is looked upon as a relic of pioneer days but something not to be taken seriously in these prosperous days when wheat is a dollar a bushel, pork fifteen cents a pound and sixty-five or a hundred dollars a week is easy money in a defense factory. In such days it is easy to feel that salvation can somehow be attained through a large bank account.

And what about our other habits and customs? Where do we as Mennonites go for our standards of right and wrong? Do our habits, our homes, our clothes and our lives bespeak Christian simplicity? All too often they bespeak Hollywood, New York and Paris extravagance instead. This is illustrated in the case of clothing styles. They are not determined on the basis of modesty, utility and availability. We desire new dresses, suits, and shoes not because the old ones are worn out but because the old ones are out of style. Once only pagan and uncivilized people painted their faces and decorated their ears and nails, but now it has become respectable for Christians and even Mennonites to do it. When one asks what is the Christian basis for such custom and conduct he can find no honest answer. When he asks how such customs enrich the Christ-like life he is greeted with silence. When one suggests giving up such pagan and worthless practices and using the time, the energy, and the money for the relief of human suffering, he is likely to be left standing alone and referred to as a queer old fogy.

Strength and Beauty

A life of Christian simplicity is not one that is sour, ugly, and uninteresting. It is a life of strength, courage, joy, and beauty because the person choosing such a life has a true sense of values. He is free from constant worry about material accumulations and freedom from worry brings joy and strength. A person pledged to a life of Christian simplicity is free to use a larger share of his time and substance to do that which deep down in his heart every Christian wants to do, that is, share generously, love redemptively, and serve sacrifically. Mennonites must again discover the power of simplicity. How tragic that even today many of our brothers are exchanging it for a mess of pottage.

WHY HE SUCCEEDED

A lady I knew came back to the place she had lived as a child. Passing a fine, big house, she read a name on the brass plate upon the door, "Who is Dr. Joseph Walker?" she asked.

"Why don't you remember him? He lived in a little house close to your father's farm."

"What! Joe Walker, who used to pick berries for us in the summer?"

"Do you remember anything about him?"

"No, except that my father said the berries Joe picked never had to be gone over a second time. He did his work well, and I remember he never wasted a moment."

"Well, that's just what they say of him now. That's how he has got on." —Ex.

"SOUTH MEADOW"

A Service of Love "Unto the Least of These"

By Peter J. Dyck

When Browning wrote "Oh, to be in England now that April's there," he was sunning himself in Italy, as far away from England's April showers as he could possibly get. However, it is his second line and thought, perhaps more sincerely and truthfully expressed, which is applicable to this country today. Apart from nature's attractions, and in spite of the war, England today is a fascinating country, "and whoever wakes in England sees, some morning, unaware. . . ."

To speak of an ever changing universe is one thing; to be eyewitness of a metamorphosis of a conservative country such as this is another. From Whitehall down to newspaper boys selling lean papers in battered streets this change can be seen by anyone who has eyes to see such things. Change, in all its varied and obscure forms, at one time slowly, at another dynamically, sometimes for better and sometimes for worse, is permeating all phases of English life.

A country thus caught by its very roots, with disaster hailing on it from above, is bound to have problems, many and varied. We are exceedingly grateful that air raids have been few these many months, thus giving at least time—itself a healing factor—for a wholesome change of things. All the same, we are painfully aware of the fact that there can be no simple and single solution for the complex problems already in existence.

The care of English children is, perhaps, one of the major problems confronting welfare authorities and philanthropic societies. Comparatively few children have been able to quit the country, finding refuge in America and Canada. Fewer still have emigrated since the shocking City of Benares disaster. Many school-aged boys and girls are now spending their third year in evacuation camp schools scattered here and there over England's countryside. Others, aged two to five, are billeted in residential nursery homes, such as our "Wickhurst Manor" in Kent. Children under two years of age may not be evacuated without their mothers. Consequently, there are a number of evacuation hostels, many of them run by the Society of Friends, exclusively for the use of mothers and children.

Such hostels, however, are necessarily too few to accomodate more than a fraction of the children who stand in need of care. Under specific conditions, therefore, it is permissible to evacuate a child under two years of age without its mother. It must, for instance, be convalescing; have a doctor's certificate; be returned home as soon as it is well; etc., etc.

Children's hospitals in Liverpool are not able to cope with all Merseyside children. First, because of an increasing number of children, who, as a result of air raids and poor shelter conditions, seek admission into hospitals; second, because in some cases part of the hospital has been taken over by certain authorities for such purposes as First Aid Posts. The result is that many children operated upon or receiving other treatment in hospitals, are being prematurely dismissed in order to make room for children still outside. But a child under two years of age soon lapses back into its former state of ill health if not given a fair chance of recuperation.

The Liverpool Child Welfare Association, in existence before the war, but unable to cope with the increased number of children who need attention in the last few years, contacted us in the hope that we would be able to do something for these little mites. Although this kind of work is not really "first line" relief—supplying of food, clothing and shelter, which is our primary purpose in England—my colleague and I decided, after prayerful and careful consideration of the matter, that it nevertheless comes within the framework of our civilian relief program. Fortunately we have a criterion, in times when matters are or appear difficult, which is our authentic guide. If a particular aspect of the work can unreservedly be placed under our administrative slogan "In the name of Christ," without our feeling a sense of frustration or uneasiness; if, too, we have called upon our counsellor common sense; and, if we believe to hear you calling "go ahead" across the waters, then we feel that all is well.

This is what we felt in the case of the Liverpool convalescent children who had to leave hospitals before they were really well, or were refused admission because theirs was a case involving prolonged convalescent treatment. In the name of Christ we undertook full financial responsibility—with the exception of a small government grant—for a convalescent home in North Wales, not too far from Liverpool. Matron and nurses are provided by the L'pool Child Welfare Association, yet if our Canadian or American nurses could lend a hand, a few more children could be admitted.

Parents of the babies admitted into our convalescent home usually can make only a very small contribution towards the cost. Some parents are unable to give anything at all, while others cannot even provide clothing for their children. Consequently many baby garments which our women have prepared and sent to England are now being worn by convalescent children in "South Meadow." When a child is well enough to leave the home it takes the "gift clothing" away with it. We keep in touch with every child after it has left the home.

How happy the children are after recovery from impetigo, gastro eneritis, pneumonia, and nearly al-

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By J. S. Hartzler, Goshen, Indiana

SEPTEMBER 13—"And he said unto them, ye will surely say unto me this proverb, Physician, heal thyself." Luke 4:23. Every generation asks for a better world, and believes that a better world is to be had. But how shall we have it? Two answers have been given: (1) Make better men and we shall have a better world. (2) Make a better world and we shall have better men. Each answer assumes that better men means a better world, and that a better world means better men. The fact is we can not do much about the world until we first do something about ourselves. "Physician, heal thyself," will make a good motto for all of us. We can not solve our outward problems, until we first solve our inward problems.

SEPTEMBER 14—"And the times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men everywhere to repent." Acts 17:30. To be "ignorant" simply means that we are uninformed, uninstructed, unenlightened or inexperienced. To be "stupid" means to be dull, insensible, senseless and mentally inert. The mental status of stupidity is somewhere between ignorance and idiocy. To be ignorant of some things is no discredit necessarily, but to be stupid is inexcusable. War in our day is not a result of ignorance; it is the result of someone's stupidity. We know better. War today is a confession that we have made little progress over our primitive ancestors. Our speed and power means only that bad men can go faster and farther, and that cruel men can hit harder and more frequently.

SEPTEMBER 15—"For the good that I would I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do. Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me." Rom. 7:19-20. To "sabotage" an ocean liner, a defense plant, or whatever, means that someone, with intent to aid the enemy, has damaged some essential part or equipment in order to put it out of commission in favor of the enemy when the real crisis is on. Sin in a man's life is something of a saboteur; it destroys the effectiveness, the efficiency, of a man's spiritual, intellectual, and moral equipment in the interests of the enemy. Men who give place to sin find themselves in defeat and not victory in the day of crisis.

SEPTEMBER 16—"But I say unto you, that ye resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also." Matt. 5:39. It is human nature to react on the first impulse. When evil is done to us our first impulse is usually to return evil for evil. In other words, it is a question whether feeling or reason is to furnish the motive for action. Men and nations go to war, not on the basis of reason, but on the basis of feeling. The second cheek means time for reason to get into action. Feeling always moves faster than reason, and is usually less safe. Feeling has its place, but reason must direct. If men and nations would apply the principle of the second cheek we would have no more war.

SEPTEMBER 17—"Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people." Prov. 14:34. It was 150 years ago today that the Constitution of these United States was adopted. Many, perhaps most, of the early settlers in America were fleeing from persecution and religious limitations of old Europe. When they came to this new land they came with the Bible under their arms, and with God in their hearts. Three institutions were immediately set up; namely, homes, churches and schools. It was their religious convictions, their philosophy of life, and their democratic ideas of state that made this country and gave it a century and a half of unusual prosperity. Righteousness does prosper a nation, but sin means its ruin.

SEPTEMBER 18—"And the Lord added to the Church daily such as should be saved." Acts 2:47. Man is so constituted as to be incomplete in himself; incomplete apart from God and his fellowmen. Men are complete only when they cooperate with each other and with God. Personally, I am in the Church, not because the Church needs me, but because I need the Church. All men need the Church because they are human and are humanly constituted, dependent and incomplete in themselves. The Church is the leading social point of contact between God and man, and between man and man. The Church has for its task the enlightenment of the mind, the inspiration of the heart, and the motivation of the will.

HOW COULD I?

If I could see
A brother languishing in sore distress,
And I should turn and leave him comfortless,
When I might be
A messenger of hope and happiness—
How could I ask to have that I denied
In my own hour of bitterness supplied?

If I might share
A brother's load along the dusty way, ...
And I should turn and walk alone that day,
How could I dare—
When in the evening watch I kneel to pray—
To ask for help to bear my pain and loss,
If I had heeded not my brother's cross?

"They Should All Be In The Penitentiary"

By Rev. Howard G. Nyce *

On Tuesday, July 28, I heard Dr. James McGinlay speaking over the radio from the Morning Cheer Book Room, Philadelphia, Pa. He gave an excellent message of Matthew 27:22, "What shall I do with Jesus which is called Christ?" As he came toward the close of the radio period, he made the following statement, "All religious weaklings should be in the penitentiary and if I had my way, they would all be behind prison bars. At the present time every true American must hate the Japs and what I say for the Japs goes for the Nazis as well."

Two days later, Thursday, July 30, I happened to be in Philadelphia and attended the noonday meeting as I had done on other occasions. I happened to sit on a front chair, the auditorium being crowded. After the meeting Dr. McGinlay walked up to me and shook hands. I said, "Dr. McGinlay, I enjoyed your message as well as I did last December when you were here. Your message last Tuesday on the radio was very helpful to me until you spoke about religious weaklings and I was surprised when you said that at present every true American must hate the Japs and what I say for the Japs goes for the Nazis as well. I happen to be president of the Allentown Christian Fundamentalist Fellowship."

Before I could say any more, he said, "We should have much in common."

I replied, "Yes, I believe we have much in common, but not all things." Then he asked what I meant. I answered, "I am just a little puzzled, because I thought the fruit of the Spirit was love, joy, peace, etc., but where does hate come in?"

He asked, "Which God do you serve, the God of the Old or New Testament?"

I answered, "The God of the Old Testament is the God of the New Testament; Jesus was God manifested in the flesh."

Dr. McGinlay then replied, "I worship the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and their God commanded the people to kill. Didn't God himself kill?"

I said, "Yes, God commanded wars in the Old Testament as a punishment to Israel when they sinned against Him."

He said, "Isn't God the same yesterday, today and forever?"

I replied to this question, "Yes, He is the same God, but this same God in the person of Jesus Christ said, 'It has been said of old.... but I say unto you.' "

He replied, "Oh, I know what you are thinking of, but Jesus also instructed His disciples to buy a sword."

I answered and said, "I am aware of that, but he also told Peter to put his sword back into its place."

Immediately he asked, "But He didn't tell Peter to throw it away, did He?"

I then said, "How then do you explain the words of Jesus when He said, 'If my kingdom were of this world then would my servants fight?' "

"Oh," he replied, "We are not in that kingdom now."

I replied, "That is where you and I differ again, because Jesus taught that the Kingdom of God was within the believer. We are strangers here and Heaven is our Home. Since I am a child of God, I must obey God rather than man."

Then I asked him, "What do you think of the conscientious objector?"

Immediately he replied, "I think he is a sap."

I replied, "That's interesting, for I am a conscientious objector." He looked at me in surprise and perhaps wished that he might fall through the floor. I then added, "I happen to be a Mennonite too."

Then he said, "Oh, I see, that explains it. I have the highest regard for you people. Some of the most wonderful fellowships I ever had was with your good people in the States and Canada. You folks are the salt of the earth. I see that I will not get to first base with you." Then he continued, "Come out into the Book Room, I have a book here I want you to read." He picked up the book entitled, Not Now, But Afterward. He said, turning to the chapter called, "Should a Christian Go to War." "You can see here that I didn't mean you people at all." Then he read from a paragraph on page 103 as follows, "It seems strange that with the exception of a few well-meaning religious sects whose teachings are opposed to participation in war, the majority of the pacifists are modernists to whom the Word of God either in the Old Testament or the New is not an authority." Then he added, "I admire you people for your conviction, although I believe you are wrong."

I answered, "That is a matter of opinion, and I am entitled to mine as you are to yours." He agreed to the statement in regard to opinions and then wrote his name in the book with Romans 8:28 beneath it. I asked, "How much is the book?"

He replied, "Oh no, you can't pay me for this."

Then I asked, "Am I no longer a sap?" In reply he assured me that he didn't mean the Mennonites, Friends, Brethren, and several others. I answered, "Probably you didn't but when you made the state-

WESTERN DISTRICT C. E. CONVENTION JULY 25 AND 26, 1942

Thirty-two C. E. societies were represented when the Western District C. E. Union met for its fiftieth annual convention in the new Memorial Hall at Bethel College July 25 and 26. The convention theme, "Things We Believe In," was considered from various angles.

"We Believe in Being Neighborly" was the subject of Dr. H. R. Schmidt. He spoke interestingly on the conditions of our Mennonites in Paraguay and showed moving pictures taken on his recent trip to South America. "We Believe in Civilian Public Service" was the address given Sunday afternoon by Dr. H. A. Fast.

Four discussion groups were features of the Sunday afternoon program. 1. "We Believe in Missions" was conducted by Dr. Ed. G. Kaufman. Some high points of this discussion were these: "... after the war it will be necessary to do missionary work in all countries. Suspicion and bitterness will have to be removed and this can be done most effectively by missionaries. A hard day, but a new day, lies ahead of missions. We will need to strive for both personal conversions and the purification and Christianization of all of life."

2. "We Believe in Getting Along with Others" was the subject for discussion in Dr. R. C. Kauffman's group. This group considered two aspects of this problem: (1) Our relationship to the outside world, which in general does not at present share our point of view (regarding our historic peace position), and (2) our attitude toward those within the Mennonite group who do not conform to this traditional position of the group. In regard to the first point, the necessity of conviction and tolerance was stressed, the importance of fellowship, and cooperation in all those areas in which there is agreement. No conclusions were drawn regarding the second question; however, the report says, "From the point of view of retaining our identity and distinction as a peace group, the answer given this question may possibly exercise an even more determining influence than our policy with respect to the outside world."

3. "We Believe in the Simple Life" was the discussion led by Dr. J. Winfield Fretz. Here is one short paragraph taken from Dr. Fretz's summary of the discussion: "The simple life can be one of two kinds. It can be prompted by a legalism or by a spiritualism. The one is compulsory, the other voluntary. The latter type yields the greatest results. A complete, wholehearted and eager yielding of one's life to a standard of simplicity will give much time and energy to do the things which all of us like to do and need to do; that is to give our lives to the building of the Kingdom of God; to make possible the growth of a world brotherhood."

4. "'We Believe in Peace" was the topic of discussion by Dr. H. A. Fast. (Findings have not been reported.)

Other features of the Sunday afternoon program were a short mission play by the juniors of the First Mennonite Church of Newton, and the anniversary address, "Who Knows?" by Dr. C. E. Krehbiel, president of the General Conference. Dr. Krehbiel used as a basis for his talk the verse, "Who knows, but thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this." He told something of the beginnings of the C. E. Union and spoke of the importance of the work of young people and of the challenge it presents.

In the absence of the vice-president, Jake Goering, William Juhnke presided at the business session which followed the delegate luncheon. The business consisted of reports by the officers and various committees. The greater part of the session was spent in adopting resolutions introduced by the resolutions committee of which Jake Entz was the chairman.

This year was the time to elect a new president and two new program committee members. William Juhnke is the president for the coming two years, and Ruth Ewert and Ronald von Riesen, members of the program committee. The adoption of the resolutions involved the taking over by the Western District C. E. Union the management of the Young People's Retreat of the district. Consequently it was necessary to elect four members to the retreat committee. The two who are to serve a two-year term are Prof. B. Bargen of Bethel College and Helen A. Penner, and those who were elected for one year are Mrs. L. C. Kreider of North Newton, Kansas, and Rev. Henry Hege of Corn, Oklahoma.

At the evening meeting Sunday, Miss Augusta Schmidt, recently returned from India, spoke on "We Believe in Spreading the Gospel." She related some of her experiences in mission work in India and told of her trip to America. Miss Helen A. Penner, for several months a relief worker in France, spoke on

"We Believe in Relieving Human Suffering." She said, "In our Mennonite program of relief work we are definitely demonstrating that we believe in relieving human suffering, that we believe in Christian love as the law of life, that we believe each individual is precious in the sight of God, and that we not only believe in non-violence but in something more positive than that—which we might call an 'offensive' of good-will."

As a fitting climax to the convention, Dr. T. H. McDowell of Enid, Oklahoma, spoke on "Christian Youth Believe." He pointed out that young people today do have faith and do believe. They believe in God; they believe in Jesus Christ; they believe in those things which make for peace, good will, and brotherhood among all mankind.

RESOLUTIONS OF THE WESTERN DISTRICT CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION HELD AT MEMORIAL HALL BETHEL COLLEGE, JULY 26, 1942

I. Retreat

A. Retreat Control Question

Whereas at a joint meeting of the Western District Retreat Committee, the Executive Committee of the Western District C. E. Union, and the Executive Committee of the Kansas State Sunday School Union a recommendation was adopted to the effect that the Western District C. E. Union take over the Western District Retreat work subject to the following provisions.

1. There shall be a Retreat Committee consisting of six members: the General Conference Y.P. Representative from the Western District, the president of the Western District C. E. Union, and four members elected by the Western District C. E. Union, each to serve two years, two to be elected each year in order to assure continuity.
2. There shall be a counselor appointed by the Educational Committee of the Western District Conference who shall act as advisor to the Retreat Committee, and to the Executive Committee of the C. E. Union.
3. The Executive Committee of the C. E. Union shall meet annually with the Retreat Committee.

Whereas the above provisions were adopted by the Kansas State Sunday School Convention held in Buhler on June 7, 1942, which adoption involved the relinquishment by the Kansas State Sunday School Union of its sponsorship of the Young People's Retreat provided the C. E. Union adopt the same provisions,

Be it resolved that the Western District C. E. Convention adopt the same provisions.

B. Relationship of Retreats

Whereas the young people of the General Conference have young people's retreats as a common project and also a common source of inspiration,

Be it resolved that the Western District C. E. Convention go on record as encouraging any steps that might be taken by such supervising agencies as the General Conference Board of Education and the General Conference Y. P. Union toward unifying the of retreat programs throughout the General Conference.

II. Missions

A. South America

Whereas our brethren in South America have presented a challenge to us by their perseverance for the sake of their faith,

Be it resolved that we continue our support of Ernst Harder by encouraging each society to contribute at least one dollar ($1.00).

Be it resolved, further, that we encourage each member to contribute at least ten cents (10c) toward the support of some project among the South American Mennonites to be designated by the MCC and also reported back by them so that the individual societies may know the destination of their contribution.

B. Mission Projects

Whereas blackouts have become the order of the day,

Be it resolved that it shall not be so with our foreign and home mission work. Let us continue faithfully to keep up our gifts toward projects of individual societies. Such societies as have not yet taken on a specific project or are not in general supporting mission work are encouraged to do so.

III. Peace

A. Our Relationship to Our Boys in Camp

1. Whereas it is our obligation to keep in touch with those of our young men in the service of the country whether in C.P.S. camps or in the regular military camps,

   Be it resolved that the local chairman of each society be encouraged to offer his assistance to his pastor in taking over a regular system of contact with these young men. In such a set-up names of draftees as well as their birth dates might be distributed among the young people who might in turn become responsible for contacting our boys. The Tidings might well be sent by each society to its members in camps.
2. Whereas our boys need our support especially in prayer,

   Be it resolved that the program chairman of each of our societies make a schedule of names through which the societies may at each program remember the needs of one or several of the boys in service. The boys might also be encouraged to send home their requests.

3. Whereas we feel a particular debt of gratitude to our young men who have remained true to the faith of our fathers by choosing constructive work at their own expense rather than destructive work, Be it resolved that we encourage them in every way. Each society is hereby encouraged to remember and act with reference to the fact that many of our boys need a dollar or two for postage and incidentals. Each member is encouraged to support the C. P. S. camps by contributing at least ten cents (10c).

B. Our Relationship to War-suffering
Whereas the MCC so adequately represents our ideals in its projects,
Be it resolved that we contribute at least ten cents (10c) per member toward some war-relief project sponsored by the MCC.

C. Literature and Study
Whereas there is a constant need for re-emphasizing the Faith of our Fathers,
Be it resolved that each society make itself responsible for investigating the advantages of the booklets entitled Mennonites and Their Heritage. These have been issued by the MCC especially for the boys in the C. P. S. camps. Each society is encouraged to use these in special study classes this fall.

D. In Appreciation
Whereas Dr. Harshbarger has in times past so unselfishly given of his time with respect to our peace stand,
Be it resolved that we authorize the convention secretary to send the Harshbarger family our heartfelt sympathy and the assurance of our prayers for them in this their hour of bereavement.

IV. District and Conference Work
Whereas the young people's C. E. work of our district as well as the General Conference Y. P. Union needs our financial support,
Be it resolved that we continue the policy adopted at last year's convention in which each society was to contribute at least fifty cents ($0.50) per year for district C. E. work and one dollar ($1.00) for General Conference Y. P. Union work.

V. Tidings
Whereas the publication work of the Western District C. E. Union with special reference to the Tidings has in the past been more or less regarded as an integral part of the work of the Western Districct C.E. Union,
Be it resolved that the Western District C. E. Convention take whatever action it sees fit to more efficiently integrate this project in our Western District C. E. Union work as a whole.

VI. Efficiency in Giving
Whereas the resolutions suggested minimum amounts for the various projects and whereas individuals often desire to give more than the minimum on certain projects,
Be it resolved that each society be encouraged to make a schedule of offerings incorporating the suggested projects and to keep its members informed as to the purpose of the offering from time to time.

JUDAH: AN EXAMPLE OF SELF-SACRIFICE

Genesis 44:18-34 chaps. 42-44

In our last lesson Joseph was on his way to Egypt in the caravan of the Midianites. He was sold as a servant to the captain of the king's guard. He was rapidly promoted—he was trustworthy—until he became overseer of the house. Finally he became governor and stood next to the king in authority and power (41:39, 40). Seven years of great plenty came as Joseph had predicted, and then seven years of drought. This drought was wide-spread, extending into Canaan. Joseph sold the grain which had been stored in Egypt under his direction. Jacob sent his ten sons to Egypt to buy grain.

Joseph Tests His Brothers Chaps. 42-43

Joseph recognized his brothers as soon as he saw them. They did not know him. He spoke roughly to them, accusing them of being spies. They earnestly declared their sincerity of purpose in coming to secure needed food. They told him about their father and younger brother. Joseph sold to them as much as they could take and they returned home. It became necessary to go a second time to Egypt. After much persuasion, Jacob consented to have Benjamin go with them, for Joseph had said that they could not see him unless Benjamin came with them. Joseph made a feast for them in his own house. He inquired about their father. He had their sacks filled, their money put back into their sacks again, and had his silver cup put into Benjamin's sack.

Some wonder why Joseph tested his brothers as he did. Naturally he would wonder whether they were still the same heartless, cruel men they were when they sold him. He wanted to see whether their moral temper had changed. He could lead them into distressing situations in which their true character would be revealed. The climax came in his threat to keep Benjamin as his bond-servant on the ground that his silver cup was found in Benjamin's sack (vss. 12,17). Would the brothers be willing to let him stay?

Judah's Plea vss. 18-34

Judah, who had taken the special responsibility for

Benjamin's safe return home (43:9), was the spokesman before Joseph. He spoke through an interpreter and this plea has been truly called, "one of the finest specimens of natural eloquence in the world." He repeats, in substance, the account which they gave of themselves from the first (42:13). Judah dwells on the fact that the "little one" was inexpressibly dear to his father for his dead brother's sake. Joseph would well understand what it would mean to the father to lose both of his favorite sons. This shows that Judah had indeed changed in heart. He shows a great concern for his father. "Judah's plea is perhaps one of the most tender and affecting pieces of natural oratory ever penned or spoken" (Clarke's Commentary). His plea revolves around one great idea—the desire to spare his father a new sorrow, and this found a ready response in Joseph's own heart. Judah had seen the anguish of his father when Joseph had disappeared, and he could not endure the thought of another such experience. "The deep and fervent love of the aged father for his youngest son forms the center of Judah's plea round which the other parts are skillfully grouped" (Whedon's Commentary).

Judah proved himself to be a loyal son and a true brother. In desperation he does his utmost to fulfill his responsibility. This was the climax of his plea. His desperate earnestness and deep feeling gave his plea tremendous force and it was delivered most effectively. Again and again Judah touched upon the ONE POINT which would appeal most deeply to Joseph—the effect of Benjamin's detention upon the aged father (vss. 20, 22, 28, 29, 31, 34). He withheld his proposal until the end and Joseph was deeply moved by the willing self-sacrifice. Joseph had found the answer to his question concerning his brothers. They were changed men and he could trust them now.

Self-Sacrifice a Law of Life

This lesson topic sets forth a great truth. It is a law of life at its noblest and best. It is a law of the kind of life God would have us live. It was the law of the life of Christ while on earth. Those who have His spirit in their heart are willing to sacrifice the most. People with little or no religious faith are usually less willing to make sacrifices for others. It is profitable to examine our motives for sacrifice. Christ's motive was purely love. It is well for us to show our love in deeds. It will cost something in time and strength and, at times, in money.

Why did Joseph's brothers fail to recognize him?

For whose sake should we be willing to sacrifice?

How do we usually practice self-sacrifice?

provide ways and means to establish a training school. With God all things are possible. One or more in the conference may have the money to give if God moves them for a cause that aims to lay a good foundation for the Mennonite faith of peace and righteousness.

While I am not well versed in the doctrines of the various denominations, I feel that the Mennonites have the Christ-like spirit and are aiming to live according to the scriptures. It hurts a true Mennonite to see some drifting away and being conformed to this world. I believe that the General Conference should by all means aim for and follow C. Henry Smith's suggestions.

If God is love to us, we will have a desire to stand up for Jesus and wholly follow His teachings, not only those which are convenient. We will be hungry and thirst after righteousness; we will bear, believe, hope for, and endure all things.

We must be strong; we have hard work to do, souls to lift; we must not tremble on the brink, we must not be lukewarm or wicked. "Sinners turn, why will ye die." Lord increase our faith, help our unbelief. We have no excuse for not knowing that all good things are prepared for us to live uprightly. Now is the time; let us eat, fill ourselves in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, that we may grow and become strong.

How many of us church members realize and feel that we are a part (if only a drop in the bucket) of the General Conference? Let each one of us ask God to create in us a clean heart and renew a right spirit within us and pray for love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, meekness, temperance, faith, hope, and courage.

"Pray without ceasing."

"Righteousness exalteth a nation."

"He hath showed thee, O man, what is good: and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

"Not by might, not by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of hosts."

"Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?"

"Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men be strong."

These scripture verses will help us. The Word of God stands forever. Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not. I wish to ask of you, those who have God's Minute to pray the prayer offered by Hugh Thomson Kerr, D. D., on page 231. —Quakertown, Pa.

HOME MISSIONS

THE EVANGELISM COMMITTEE—ITS SCOPE AND WORK

Early in 1941 the Home Mission Board created a Committee on Evangelism. The committee was and still is composed of the following brethren: Rev. Erland Waltner, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, Secretary; Rev. W. F. Unruh, Moundridge, Kansas, member; and Rev. J. J. Plenert, 429 Knorr Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Chairman. The last named, being a member of the board, forms the connecting link between the board and the committee.

The committee got to work immediately, and in July, 1941, put out the handbook on evangelism, Other Sheep I Have. This booklet, distributed at the General Conference, has had a wide circulation. The first thousand copies were soon gone. It is the fervent hope of the committee and the board that many souls might be garnered for the Master into His Heavenly Kingdom.

During the months following the General Conference the committee has been working on plans for greater usefulness in this field. Inquiries from pastors and churches have come to the committee and this raised the problem about the work and scope of the committee.

Recently the Home Mission Board made it clear to the committee that they have authority to make and publish plans and suggestions that deal with this field. Since many churches have special types of evangelistic meetings every year, or every other year, and do not always know where to look for suitable leadership, the committee has been authorized to gather a list of available men and to make recommendations when requests are made.

The Home Mission Board is anxious to see the spirit and work of evangelism greatly stressed during this time when vital spiritual life is urgently needed.

Read carefully the articles and suggestions to be made by the committee; follow them. Feel free to write in and enlist their aid and counsel. Pray the Lord of the Harvest that many of these "other sheep" who are still wandering aimlessly around might be brought safely within the fold of Christ, the great Shepherd.

THE WAY OF PEACE

by R. W. Galle

We must go back to the sword of the Spirit, put on the whole armour of God for strength, and know in our hearts as did men of old the comfort of the Holy Spirit, come what may.

I am writing this article in love and in fellowship for a deeper fuller understanding and protection for each other as Christians, in "The Way of Peace."

Breathes there a man with a soul so dead spiritually, a claiming Christian who says himself that we may live by the New Testament and disregard the Old? God forbid. Although I have heard it. Since there are such, it is a guarantee that they have never read, carefully studied, cared to understand, or, perhaps, have not taken or had the proper approach to either Testament. Of course one can live without the Old Testament, but what folly to live in ignorance when the New is in the Old concealed and the Old is by the New revealed. The same God gave utterance to both while Holy men of God wrote. It would be like leaving one shoe off to leave out the Old Testament, and we would be at a loss to understand many things. Especially, the happenings of the future. News pertaining to the end—time happenings and the return of Our Lord Jesus Christ. The news will not be stale. Read them, particularly, in Ezekiel chapters 37-39. The books of Daniel, Isaiah, Jeremiah, the Olivet discourse, Matthew chapters 24-25, Mark chapter 13, Luke chapter 21, Revelation, and many others. Oh, but people will say, "I have heard that ever since I was a child, and so did my grandfather, and nothing has ever happened." II Peter chapter 3:3-4 states, "knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, where is the promise of His coming? For since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creating." This includes the sayings of many so-called Christians in our day.

The angels praised God saying, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." Luke chapter 2:14. Men then were and are again in terrible confusion. So is it and will be more at His second advent. And as it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man. They did eat, they drank, they married wives, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and the flood came, and destroyed them all. Likewise, also as it was in the days of Lot; they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded. But the same day that Lot went out of Sodom (meaning the true Christians will also be taken out unharmed out of the Great Tribulation before His second coming) it rained fire and brimstone from Heaven and destroyed them all in that city. Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of Man is revealed.

GOOD MEDICINE POEMS

Good Medicine Poems is the name of a booklet of poems which were composed by Amanda Friesen. In response to a request for more information about herself Mrs. Friesen writes:

"Yes, I am a member of the Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Doland, South Dakota. My husband, Jacob A. Friesen, is pastor of this church.

"I have been bedfast with arthritis a number of years. At the present time I am able to be up part of the time with the aid of crutches. However, I am unable to bend or sit.

"The incentive for publishing a small booklet of cheer came after unsuccessful attempts to hold interesting but heavy books up long enough to finish reading them.

"Some pastors and Christian workers have purchased Good Medecine Poem booklets especially for use in hospital visitation. May the Lord bless and use each poem according to His will."

Happy in Him, Amanda Friesen

Below is another poem from this booklet.

WEALTH CANNOT BUY

Wealth cannot buy
A happy heart, the stars above,
Cool raindrops, or a mother's love.
A kindly word, a restful sleep,
The patter of a baby's feet
Wealth cannot buy.

Wealth cannot buy
A gentle tone, sight for the blind,
Forgiveness, or a healthy mind.
A confidence that once was lost
Or wasted hours, at any cost
Wealth cannot buy.

ment over the radio that they should all be in the penitentiary, you didn't add the words, 'except the few well meaning sects.' Your statement was a general statement and all were included."

Then he said, "I would like to continue this discussion with you, but I have a dinner appointment." We said goodbye and parted. As I walked down the street, it suddenly dawned upon me that I got a book from a Scotchman for nothing.

A CHRISTIAN'S FINANCIAL CREED

My money is mine only in trust. It belongs to God, just as I do.

This money is not filthy lucre. It is not the devil's coin. It is stored up human power. It is so much of myself which I can set at work in China or India or New York or Colorado.

God is counting upon this money for His work. It is to build His churches and preach His gospel, train His workers and send them out, teach and heal and save His children, and help bring in a new kingdom of righteousness and brotherhood and peace.

To spend my income rightly is one of my first tasks as a Christian. Until I settle this my prayer and confessions will be like saying, "Lord, Lord," and not doing the will of my Father.

I should set aside a definite proportion of my income for the church and the service of others. I do this in acknowledgement of God's sovereignty over all my material possessions. I do this to guard against my own selfishness. I do this because it is businesslike. Giving by impulse and without system does not accord with the importance of this work.

The proportion to be set aside for these purposes should not be less than one-tenth of my income. The Old Testament enjoined the tithe (one-tenth) in ancient Israel, and surely I am receiving far more from God than did the men of any former generation. Nevertheless one-tenth is not to be the limit of my giving. I should not begin with less than one-tenth. I ought to give more if I am able.

I should invest this money for God as carefully as in my temporal business and keep strict account of this fund. I should study the church and its work that I may give wisely. I should give systematically. I should pray with my giving.—H. F. Rall, in New York Christian Advocate.

RAINFALL

Life holds no greater promises than this,
The rush of rain in corn or grassy glen;
The rainbow with its green and amethyst
And then the burst of growing things again.

Life holds its tears and lets them trembling, drop.
But lo, the tints of rainbows later shine—
And then, like some young tree, whose growth seems stopped,
We spring with suddenness to heights sublime.

CHRISTIANITY FOR A CRISIS

By Prof. Desmond W. Bittinger

McPherson College, McPherson, Kans.

Kubili lived deep in the Sudan not far south of the Sahara desert. She was one of the finest Christians I know, though her road to becoming one was not easy. One after another we had laid away on the hillside, just below the ancestral grove, her four children. Tears filled her eyes, she was puzzled, dazed, her steps were slow. Her mother had insisted that it all came about because she was a Christian and the family and tribal gods were angry at her. Still Kubili came to church regularly and attended school through the week.

One Sunday, in church, we noticed splotches on her bare back, which upon examination turned out to be leprosy. When we examined her, she said, "You must not tell me it is the disease too awful to name." But not only must we tell her it was, but that she must not come to church and school any more. Kubili went away, more bewildered than ever. In a few days she called from the compound gate, and as we sat with her, she related, very humbly, her sad life, and then concluded: "Though my children be taken from me, every one, though school be taken from me, and though I cannot come to church, even though my husband must leave me, and my home become desolate, NOTHING, NOT EVEN ALL OF THESE, CAN TAKE AWAY FROM ME MY CHRIST!"

Experiences like that have cheered those of us who have been missionaries, and they make us add: "Nothing must be allowed to stop the spread of this Sustenance and Hope which comes in Christ." Now we want to bring back that message of "Joy in Crisis" which can come out of Africa to bless and encourage us all in the days which lie ahead. Together, we must keep alive the Spirit of Christ who belongs to ALL humanity.

ways malnutrition, one has to see to believe. The parents are very grateful for what has been and is being done to their children, especially, since they know well that if we do not extend a helping hand their little ones may perish. How deeply the distress of past experiences has penetrated into the lives of those whom we are trying to help, directly or indirectly, many of us will never know. Nor can we ascertain how much these chaotic events are destroying and warping the lives of our children. What we do know, however, is that He, who would not restrain children from coming unto Him when he lived with them in the flesh, would likewise not now, that He is with us in Spirit, permit that harm should come to the least of these.

Every child is a potential man or woman who may, if given the opportunity, help to build God's Kingdom here on earth. In helping a child you are building God's Kingdom.

IS THIS LOVE?

Onward rage these wars of hate
Satan's lust to satiate;
Sons of mothers, torn with pain
Give their all, and die in vain,
Face the guns of cunning make,
Satan's lust for blood to slake?
While the God of good above
Whispers, "Children, is this love?

"Is this love... the love I've taught? ....
Will this carnage come to ought?
Down the ages men have died
In these crusades... crucified!
Ignoring in their greed for pelf...
'Love thy neighbor as thyself.' "
And the God of good above
Pities them, in His great love!

HINDRANCES TO BROTHERLY HELP

There seems to be a renewal of interest in brotherly helpfulness among Mennonites. Men speak of the kind of Christian care for one another that will be so adequate as to make the usual life and property insurance unnecessary. Some suggest that the families of men who may have to go to C. P. S. camps and who may need help be provided for by brothers and sisters of the faith. There seems to be a conviction that we are fast drifting away from the brotherly care manifested among the early Christians and that if you would put the Kingdom of God first we must recover this genuine concern for each other in the material realm.

That many in our churches need help is evident; that all of us would benefit spiritually from thorough use of scriptural, brotherly helpfulness is evident at least to some. It is true that brotherly helpfulness is more in line with putting the Kingdom of God first than struggling individually and relying upon profit-motivated organizations to help one over the exigencies of life.

Why is it then that we do not practice brotherly helpfulness more? What are the factors or some of them that hinder such a program? Are the following, perhaps, some of them?

First, the increasing failure of all of our people to live a common life of hard work and simplicity under very similar circumstances. Few people feel like helping those who do not exert themselves as hard as they themselves do. A farmer who cultivates corn until seven o'clock will hardly feel like helping another who quits at five, eats supper, and then hurries to town to see the movie that begins at seven. The man who drives a 1923 model car will hardly feel like contributing much to help the man who always drives the latest model. People who are asked to help others who have more than they, often respond with "We have to get along without it. Why can't they?" Sometimes there is a barrier to helpfulness between the farmer with few or no "conveniences" and the city man who enjoys them. Differences in work and in property possessed make for "class" antagonisms among Mennonites as well as among others.

This does not mean that there should be a communistic "leveling-out" of possessions. It does mean, however, that there should be a Christian sharing in the sense of Paul's words, "He that had gathered much had nothing over; and he that had gathered little had no lack." To make this possible and right, however, means that all should work hard and live simply. When people live similar lives they understand each other better, sympathize more with one another, and feel more like helping one another.

Second, the tendency to put the Kingdom of God into some other place than first. He, who first of all thinks of striving for the material things of life, will think much about helping himself but little about helping his brother. The early Christians described in Acts helped one another. They put the Kingdom of God first and made material things secondary. Reverse that emphasis and brotherly helpfulness dies a very natural death. He who says, "I will be true to my conscience if God guarantees me material abundance" is working against brotherly helpfulness and not for it. Such a spirit is not in line with that of Jesus who had no place to lay his head.

Someone has suggested this thought, "Solve a problem at its most difficult point and you solve it all down the line." So it is with the problem of brotherly help. Let all those "born of the Spirit" put the Kingdom of God first in their lives, and they will help and be helped. However, it takes more than one to practice mutual helpfulness. There must be a general committment to putting the Kingdom of God first. May not this be the fundamental problem with many implications arising therefrom? —rw.

We Are An Epistle

By Rev. Franz Albrecht *

The Apostle Paul writes: II Cor. 3:2, "Ye are our epistle, written in our hearts, known and read of all men."

Dearly Beloved: Meditating upon these words I think of so many members of our congregation, who are away from home for various reasons. There are the boys in C. P. S. camps and in military service, students in colleges and universities, young people in offices, stores, and homes, and members of our congregation who are teaching in nearby and faraway schools.

We as a congregation do well to remind those who leave their church and home: "Ye are our epistle, our letter written in our hearts." We love you and pray for you as Jesus prayed for his disciples. The love and heart's desire of parents, teachers, and ministers is expressed in prayer for those we love.

Jesus loved His disciples when He prayed according to John 17:15, "Father, I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil one." But let us not think or believe that these words are written only for those who are away from their homes and churches. The Apostle writes to a congregation, the church at Corinth: "Ye, all of you, are written in our hearts."

We, Timothy, their pastor since the Apostle Paul left Corinth, and Titus who told the Apostle about conditions in the church, and he himself and many others may have been included when he wrote: "Ye are our epistle written in our hearts." I believe parents and pastors and teachers do well to let those unto whom they minister know: "Ye are our epistle written in our hearts, known and read of all men." They do well to tell their children, whether they are at home or not. We at home are known and read by all men as well as our members away from home. The Apostle continues, v. 3: "being made manifest, that ye are an epistle of Christ." He tells them to let everybody with whom you come in contact know that ye are "a people for God's own possession, that ye may show forth the excellencies of Christ, who called you out of darkness into his marvelous light." (I Peter 2:9, R.V.)

Those in camps ask their fellow Christians at home to be sure to live up to their confession of faith in Jesus Christ and to be true followers of Him, Who redeemed us. Christian homes and churches are means which our heavenly Father uses to lead men to Christ and to strengthen them in faith and love, to

On August 23 the above message was read in the First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, of which Rev. Franz Albrecht is Pastor Emeritus. Brother Albrecht is unable to attend church and is confined to his bed much of the time. However, he is still very vigorous in mind and spirit, and takes a great interest in church and conference work.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

LETTER FROM THE BROWNS

Taming, Hopi, China, June 3, 1942

The Foreign Mission Board,
Newton, Kansas, U.S.A.

Dear Brother P. H. Richert:

Greetings in Jesus' Name! I sent a letter to be taken along on this steamer, but since Miss Kuyf has now gotten permission to leave for the U.S.A., I take this opportunity of writing a few lines. She can tell you all in detail. I am sorry that under circumstances no detailed report of work or treasury is practicable, but let me mention a few things.

Miss Kuyf has drawn the first quarter, 1942, salary. The Misses Marie Regier and Elizabeth Goertz have drawn the first quarter salaries of 1942, and have no other account with me.

We have drawn the fourth quarter, 1941, salary. That is all. We had written that the first quarter, 1941, (1942?) salary of ours should be paid into our account at the First National Bank, Freeman, South Dakota. All other subsequent payments should be deposited there. We still have funds of our own to run on, and we have now been notified that through the work of the International Red Cross we can draw funds at the Swiss Consulate, Shanghai, for subsistence and repatriation.

We thank you very much for your early assistance and intercessory prayers. God keep and bless you and us all!

Very sincerely yours,
(signed) H. J. Brown

MARIE J. REGIER WRITES

To the churches at home:

My desire has always been to do things, to accomplish something, to be successful. Life hasn't been that way for me. Was it my fault? Certainly to a certain extent. A certain lethargy has always inhibited my actions. Perhaps, too, I have sought my own glory rather than God's glory. If God now wants to use me by just keeping me here I want to let myself be used that way. Our friends say that our very presence here has a stabilizing and encouraging influence. It certainly isn't much that we are doing. It is a very easy way, and the least that I can do. My furlough isn't due; I have no one dependent upon me. There is no work in America that someone else could not do better than I could. Everything points in the direction of staying here. I hope that during this time I may learn better how to pray.

There isn't anything particularly glorious or heroic about staying here. We just do the little everyday things; there are things that get on our nerves just like there always are any place. We need grace for the little things—when the guards eat our eggs and borrow our kerosene—when the cook doesn't get the dishes washed or the kitchen swept, etc. It has struck me anew as I have read the Easter stories of how Jesus was known by the way He broke the bread, by the way He pronounced Mary's name.

What the future has in store for us we do not know, but you in the homeland do not know your future either. If hard times are ahead we trust that God's grace will be sufficient at that time and that as the day so our strength will be.

I have been in Kai Chow for only a few months. I do not know many people here. Those four glorious months of teaching were over very soon, and my students scattered to the four winds. Miss Goertz has worked here a long time. She is much more capable and industrious than I am, but a first violin sounds better when there is a second one to accompany it.

If we may have only the assurance that our friends in America are communicating with us through the Father-heart of God we are satisfied.

(Written from Kai Chow sometime in May, 1942.)

WORDS OF FAREWELL

(Rev. Arthur Wenger who served three months in the Reedley Mennonite Church as an interne and nearly one year as an assistant wrote the following in a recent bulletin. Rev. Wenger goes to the Shafter Church.)

"When you welcomed me into your midst in June of last year, I felt as though this church was doing me a great service. As I reached the end of my service as an interne that feeling was much strengthened; now as I have come to the termination of my work with you I can only say that I am grateful to God and to you for the opportunity of serving with you in the work of His Kingdom, for it has been a great opportunity. As I have worked with Dr. Langenwalter and with all who belong to this fellowship I have learned many lessons which are not learned from books. The value which comes through contact with leadership so rich in experience and with individuals whose aim is to 'let their light shine before men' can probably best be realized by a person who faces the prospect of entering a work which is strange to him and full of pitfalls which await the inexperienced. This experience will always cause me to feel that you have had a very definite part in preparing me for the work which I am to undertake."

MENNONITE COLLEGES AND WAR-TIME PROBLEMS

A Statement of Position and Proposals for Action Adopted by the Conference of Mennonite and Affiliated College Administrators, Winona Lake, Ind.

August 7, 1942

Being by reason of our religious and our historic Mennonite convictions committed to the way of life taught and exemplified by Jesus as a way of love to all men and ministry to all human needs, and being accordingly conscientiously opposed to participation in war in any form as a violation of that way of life, we desire to set forth our common position on the problems which face our colleges as a result of the war and the needs, both present and prospective, resulting from it.

1. We propose to continue a strong Christian educational program with emphasis on a type of general college education which will strengthen Christian faith and character and equip young people with a basic philosophy of life which will help them to meet successfully the problems that await them as they go out into the present and the post-war world, and prepare them to render an effective ministry to its needs.
2. We shall continue and strengthen our peace testimony within our schools and churches, and elsewhere as opportunity may afford.
3. We desire to promote among our faculty, students, and constituency positive service to our local communities, to the nation as a whole, and to the world in this time of great need. We pledge ourselves, accordingly, to promote the following forms of service:
    - A. To recruit and prepare students and faculty for needed services which we can concientiously perform; and to cultivate the spirit of sacrificial ministry to human needs.
    - B. To promote giving to relief and reconstruction needs, particularly through the Mennonite Central Committee and its program.
    - C. To encourage support of the Civilian Public Service Program provided by the government and operated by the Mennonite Central Committee.
    - D. To support the sale of Civilian Bonds as made available by the government through the Mennonite Central Committee.
4. We find ourselves unable to acccept from the government assignments which would commit us to participation in the war effort, since this would require us to violate our consciences and deny the faith and heritage of the churches which sponsor and support our colleges. Specifically this means inability to participate in the following federal programs:
    - A. Recruiting and training men for any branch of the armed services as is required in the government's Enlisted Reserve program, under such plans as the Navy V-1, V-7, etc.
    - B. Promotion of the sale of war bonds or stamps.
    - C. Promotion of support of the war by any form of propaganda such as posters, chapel announcements, speakers, material in school publications, and the like.
5. At the same time we shall continue to cutivate a warm spirit of loyalty to our country, and a Christian patriotism which leads to devotion to the highest welfare of the land, and which we believe will lead to the finest possible contribution of our nation to the welfare of the entire world. We are devoted to the constitution, and the democratic traditions and institutions of our country, and shall continue to cultivate respect for and loyalty to our democratic heritage, and a desire to improve and strengthen it.
6. We propose to set up a training program for prospective workers in relief and reconstruction service, both at home and abroad, which can be offered to conscientous objectors who are willing to volunteer for service, provided arrangements can be made with Selective Service whereby men in such training can be assigned to such service either before or after induction into Civilian Public Service.
7. We appreciate the freedom of conscience vouchsafed us by our government, and we suggest that each college make its position known to its students and constituency, and to the government agencies involved, with a view to better understanding and greater appreciation of our position, in order that good relations with the government and our communities may be maintained, and our peace testimony as well as our general witness may may be more effective.
8. We anticipate that the position we are taking may bring heavier burdens upon our colleges than in peace time, and therefore solicit from our churches increased support in counsel, in finance, and in prayer, that we may continue to serve well our young people and our churches, and may increase rather than reduce our usefulness.

ACTION

It was moved and passed that we authorize the creation of a committee of representatives of all Mennonite Colleges desiring to participate in the civilian service training program, whose duty it shall be to formulate more specific plans to present to the colleges; and that we instruct this committee to work with and through the Mennonite Central Commmittee and the National Service Board for Religious Objectors in arranging for the program. This committee shall be known as The Committee for Civilian Service Training in Mennonite Colleges.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

PART-TIME MINISTERS

The Christian church has always had a shortage of well-trained, capable, devoted, resourceful Christian ministers. Today the situation is simply more acute. The Mennonite Church, at least certain branches of it, feels this shortage very keenly. When one church fills its pulpit it usually does so at the expense of another congregation and thereby causes another vacancy. The larger, more wealthy churches have the greatest drawing power and they are the ones whose pulpits are occupied with a regular pastor. At the present time in the General Conference there are 20 vacancies and at least ten additional churches where ministers would like to retire but cannot until other pastors are found to take up their work. Most of the churches without pastors are small ones with memberships running from twenty-five to seventy-five. These churches are also frequently in outlying areas away from the more compactly settled Mennonite communities. The majority of the members are hard working farmers, skilled craftsmen, or laborers rather than business and professional men with larger incomes and possibly with more leadership training and executive ability.

In The Past

It has been an age-old custom for Mennonites to select their ministers from among their ablest men in the local congregations. Mennonites have always in the past, opposed a highly trained and systematically salaried ministry. This is still the custom in the majority of American Mennonite congregations. The reason for the traditional opposition has been a fear that a highly trained ministry would lead the people away from sound Christian doctrines and from the traditional Mennonite principles. They were afraid it would mean conformity to the world. These fears are not without foundation as is evident in these segments of European and American Mennonitism where higher training has been encouraged.

What Shall We Do?

It seems to me the solution to this problem lies not in going backward. I believe we should have an educated ministry but educated to the right things and trained for the purpose of serving the Mennonite Church so that she may fulfill her God-given function on this earth. Education is not bad in itself. It is good. It is the hope of the world if it is not misdirected education. The more education the better if it is Christ-centered, Biblically-grounded, and God-directed.

Why cannot ministers in our churches today be selected from the congregation? There are capable men in every Mennonite community. Men who may have had training in other lines, but nevertheless, capable, devoted, willing men. There are farmers who have been away to a Mennonite school for a year or two, there are school teachers, business men, mechanics, and some laboring men with a natural ability to teach and preach. With encouragement from fellow-members of the brotherhood and with strength through prayer such men might well bring life and power and hope to many a downcast congregation. Such men might prepare themselves more fully by taking a short course in Bible study, church history, and the method of preaching in one of our Mennonite Bible schools or colleges.

Even where ministers with a thorough Christian training are available the churches may not be able to support them on a full-time basis. In such cases it would be well for ministers to earn part of their living through some other means. We have many illustrations of this today. Some ministers operate a large farm in addition to their pastoral duties. Others have smaller farms where enough food can be provided to account for a good share of the regular budget. One minister, I know, runs a school bus, another works as a clerk in a garage, another is assistant editor in the town newspaper, still others are carpenters, painters, florists, orchardists, and school teachers. Part-time ministers do not easily become professionalized. They are constantly kept on the thinking and experience level of their parishioners.

"How Beautiful Are . . ."

By P. J. Friesen

"How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace." These are the words spoken by the greatest prophet of old. Isaiah chapter 52, verse 7.

There is still more room for the feet of those who are willing to carry this wonderful message to the mountains, to all the mountains, up to the highest peaks, so that all the world will hear it and all the nations shall listen and bow their knees before the Prince of Peace.

The prophet says, "Thy watchmen shall lift up the voice; with the voice together shall they sing; break forth into joy, Sing together." Let the Christian people sing. Sing the song of the angels: "Glory to God in the highest: and on earth Peace, Good Will toward men."

The fulfillment of God's promises will come. It is our privilege to testify for Christ, our Saviour and Redeemer, proclaiming this wonderful message of peace. Let us stand with heart and soul behind our young men in the C.P.S. camps, who are serving in the front lines to keep up these principles of peace and good will toward men. —Butterfield, Minn.

Why Should The Mennonite Church Support The Civilian Publi Secrvice Camps

By Emil J. Waltner

Civilian Public Service is a setup of the government for carrying on such work of national importance as reclamation, forestry, fire-fighting, sanitation, etc. This work is done under the supervision of government experts and under the respective departments of the government. Why then should the government not finance the entire program? This question is often asked by way of excuse. We may give several good reasons why the churches should support the C.P.S. program.

First among these reasons is the fact that we (the historic peace churches) have asked for this program and have been given the privilege of selecting our own staff to run the camps as an alternative for military service in the regular army. In asking for this program we have also assumed the responsibility of financing the program. This then is the first reason why the Mennonite Church should exert every effort to meet its share of obligation for this program. For four hundred years the Mennonite Church has opposed war and military service. Now that the government has so graciously given us the opportunity to put into practice what we have preached (or rather should have preached) all these years, we find it to be a sad fact that some of our ministers openly say we are not in sympathy with your peace program. With this attitude on the part of some of our ministers, we are not surprised that we have such a large percentage of Mennonite boys who are not interested in the C.P.S. program but have taken up full military service or service under the military supervision.

On the other hand, because of the Mennonite doctrine of non-resistance and the preaching of that doctrine some 1,200 Mennonite boys have chosen to do work of national importance under the Civilian Public Service program. These boys in C.P.S. camps are looking to the mother churches to back them up 100 per cent in the stand they have taken. This then is another reason why we should support the C.P.S. program to the limit of our ability. Twelve hundred boys are learning to appreciate as never before what the church really means to them. Twelve hundred boys, 1,600 boys or perhaps 2,000 boys, before we are through with this program, are going to be a mighty factor in the future of the Mennonite church. These boys are going to be the foundation of a United Mennonite Church, which through the years of dissension and indifference has split up into many different branches, and sad to say often over mere trifles. As our historian, Dr. Smith, states, "Even in periods of the most bitter persecutions they found time to argue over insignificant details of religious beliefs and human conduct which today would seem but mere trifles." Twelve hundred Mennonite boys are trying to put into practice a Christian living as distinguished from Christian idealizing, which has been going on for nearly 2,000 years.

If the Mennonite Church will not back up its boys in this war, we may not have the privilege of Civilian Public Service in another war or in a peace time draft. Before me I have an editorial from our metropolitan daily paper on a radio debate concerning the churches and war, in which the writer sums up his viewpoint in this sentence, "The position of the conscientious objector is so wholly invalid that we can see little occasion for its continued tolerance." Judge Mayer, in imposing sentence upon Roger N. Baldwin, a conscientious objector in World War I, remarked, "It may often be that a man or a woman has greater foresight than the masses of people. And it may be that in the history of things, he who seems to be wrong today, may be right tomorrow—but" he adds, "with those possible idealistic and academic speculations a court has nothing to do." Now it is precisely with these "idealistic speculations" that the conscientious objectors of history have had to do. That they were sincere, that they were not cowards, even military prejudice has in part conceded.

Another reason why the Mennonites should support the C.P.S. program is that the government is doing everything possible to make this program a success. At a recent conference of camp directors, Colonel Lewis F. Kosch, Chief of the Camp Operations Division of Selective Service, expressed appreciation for the cooperation given the government by the Mennonite Church in working toward a solution of the total problem, "It has been a pleasure, I assure you," he said when commenting on the past relations with the Mennonite groups. And none other than Eleanor Roosevelt, the wife of President Roosevelt, Commander-in-Chief of the Army, when she was asked the question recently, "How do you think our boys who have gone to war and risked their lives should treat conscientious objectors after the war?" gave this answer: "I should think that the boys who go through the war and who believe in what they are doing, would have a respect for a conscientious objector who had an equally strong belief that he should not kill other people. We have put these conscientious objectors to work in this war. They are clamoring for more dangerous work. Some of them are already doing work which requires great courage but not the taking of another man's life. It would certainly seem a curious thing to me if a boy were not able to understand, having had deep convictions himself, that other people have a right to equally deep convictions and

By J. S. Hartzler, Goshen, Indiana

SEPTEMBER 19—"This one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Phil. 3:13-14.

It is not what a man forgets that sends him to the madhouse; it is what he can't forget. Man would make no progress were it not for memory. But to be able to forget wisely is an achievement. To think, to remember, and to work, these are the ways to prosperity and happiness. To remember a sermon or a great truth is not always necessary. The essential thing is the recorded result of that sermon or that truth in one's life. Results remain with us often long after that which caused the results has been forgotten. Good sermons, good books, great truths do something to us and within us, and it is this something that is essential.

SEPTEMBER 20—"But we all with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory even as by the Spirit of the Lord." II Cor. 3:18.

To resist change is one of man's great temptations. To "freeze" the status quo, either in matters social or spiritual, is ruinous. This world in which we live is not a stagnant pool; it is a flowing stream. Change in this world is here to stay. It is dangerous to make changes; it is even more dangerous not to make changes. The task of the church is not to resist change, but to direct the course in times of change. Churches, preachers, teachers, and business men fail when their chief interest is to resist change. How to change gracefully and properly requires more wisdom than to freeze the status quo.

SEPTEMBER 21—"What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him? Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honor." Ps. 8:4-5.

A greatly discouraged lady came to her pastor and said, "Pastor, I wish that I had never been made." Said the pastor, "My dear woman, you have not been made; you are in the making, and every experience in life, happy and unhappy, has something to do with your making." The essential message of the church is this, namely, that men need not remain what they are. Christ in human life means that in some mysterious way men may cease to be what they are and become what they should be. To see ourselves as we are is discouraging. To see ourselves as we ought to be is inspiring. What we may be is something like the Christ.

SEPTEMBER 22—"Ask and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you: for every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth: and to him that knocketh it shall be opened." Matt. 7:7-8.

The word "conclusion" implies the act of finishing something; it is the end of a process; a thing believed after investigation and reasoning. There are two ways of coming to a conclusion, namely, by "arriving," and by "jumping." The first requires thought; the second does not. The first requires effort; the second does not. The first is difficult, but usually right; the second is easy, and usually wrong. To "arrive" means that we have been on the way in the quest for truth; it means asking, seeking and knocking.

SEPTEMBER 23—"For we are laborers together with God: ye are God's husbandry, ye are God's building." I Cor. 3:9.

There are three ways of dealing with people, namely, by doing something TO them, by doing something FOR them, and by doing something WITH them, the last being the most satisfactory. To do something to people is usually not well received; nobody likes it. To do something for people is usually appreciated, and yet no thinking person is satisfied to have others doing for them constantly. To do things "together," cooperatively, both with God and man, this is the Christian way. No man is ever saved "alone." God with man, and man with God, this is the way of salvation.

SEPTEMBER 24—"As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God." Ps. 42:1.

To close the doors and windows, to draw the curtains, and shut out the fresh air and sunlight, and to stifle the body in an outgrown atmosphere is not fair to the man. The physical body needs the great out-of-doors. The soul of man is too big for this world; the doors must be opened, the curtains must be drawn, and the soul must be given breathing room above and beyond earthly things. The finite must have access to the Infinite. Precisely this is the work of the Christian faith, namely to open the windows and the doors to the Eternal. The soul of man can not live in the narrow traditions of man-made orthodoxies. The soul must be given access to the entire universe of Truth.

SEPTEMBER 25—"For whosoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." I John 5:4.

In the thinking of John "faith" and "victory" were synonymous terms. The Christian faith means victory, mastery, rather than "escape." The chiefs in our world capitols seem to think that shooting is the way to victory. Perhaps wisdom is more in evidence in the common people of all lands who love and desire peace; people, who, if they had their way, would adjust all international differences around the conference table rather than on the field of battle. The common people know that we can not shoot our way to victory and peace; they know that men must think their way through to victory and peace; they know that clear thinking, cooperation between God and man, and between man and man, are the ways to victory and peace.

SEPTEMBER 26—"They shall bring thee down to the pit, and thou shalt die the deaths of them that are slain in the midst of the seas." Ezek. 28:8.

Just 429 years ago today Balboa discovered the Pacific Ocean. A few days later he waded into its waters, drew his sword and declared that the King of Spain should hold possession of the South Sea and its coasts and islands "While the earth revolves, until the universal judgment of mankind." Because the Prince of Tyrus took the position that he was God, and assumed to sit in the seat of God in the midst of the sea, therefore God declared that He would die in the midst of the sea. Today the "Pacific" Ocean is anything but pacific. It may be that history repeats itself.

Why Should the Mennonite Church Support The Civilian Public Service Camps

that they should be respected."

Time and again we hear the question, "What if we would all take the position of the conscientious objector?" Even Mennonites ask this question. I would like to ask any Mennonite who feels that way, to ask himself this question, "What would be my personal history if my ancestors (parents or grandparents. had not decided to leave Russia when they were confronted with the question of serving in the Russian military machine or whatever country they came from, and had remained in Europe. The history of the Mennonites who remained in Russia will give you the answer. Thousands died in concentration camps on the steepes of Russia and in Siberia, and if you had escaped the Revolution you might be pioneering in the Chaco today, driving an ox team instead of a modern car, living in an adobe house with dirt floors, instead of a modern home with electricity and running water, enjoying all other advantages of civilization.

Rev. H. A. Bachman once used this expression when it was suggested that we close a certain Mennonite institution because of financial difficulties, he said in German, "Das waere aber ein Denkmal echt Mennonitischer Dummheit." (That would be a monument to real Mennonite stupidity.) The institution was not closed, but is a going concern today. We have in the C.P.S. program an opportunity to build a monument that will live far into the future of Mennonite history, or, failing to support it the C.P.S. camps would be amonument to Mennonite stupidity. Which shall it be?

We Are An Epistle

live to His honor and glory wherever they are and all times.

I think of these words as a reminder, because Rev. I. A. Sommer, many years editor of the Bundesbote, used these words when speaking to the students at Bethel College in 1905. I am sure Christians of today are in need of such a reminder as well as former Christians. May the Lord help us to be faithful unto death, that He can give us the crown of life, after life's journey is ended and the work is finished which He gave us to do.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION SUNDAY

The constituency served by Bluffton College has again been asked to observe the third Sunday in September as Christian Education Sunday. This year the day falls upon September 20. To help with the observance of the day Bluffton College has prepared an attractive church bulletin which has been made available to the churches free of charge. The president of the school requests prayer to the end "that the college may be directed into the right paths during these troubled days, and that students may be strengthened in faith and educated to be of greater service to Christ."

AFTER RETREAT WHAT?

*By Grace Moyer

As I sat on the steps of our cabin at the Intermediate Retreat watching the girls arrive, several mothers whom I knew said as they left, "Now see that she behaves." We did see that they behaved—just as one would expect of normal, healthy Intermediate Christians to behave.

But since retreat is past, the question on my heart has been, "How are they behaving now?" The test and proof of our religious life is what we are and what we do when we are not at retreat, not attending church service, not reading our Bibles, not kneeling in prayer.

The divinely inspired letter which Paul wrote to the Philippines would express beautifully the concern of retreat leaders for each young man and woman who attended a retreat this year. In Paul's words, they might say, "Be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world; holding forth the Word of life."

Retreat has been the quiet hour that has given us the inspiration needed to carry on another year of Christian service. Naturally there is not as much time in each day to devote to Bible study and meditation as there was at retreat, and of necessity we must mingle and work with those who are not Christian. Here is our opportunity to hold forth the Word of life.

Speaking about a Christian life seems important to some people, but that is all the further they ever get. A neighbor reminds us often that she reads her Bible daily, and that the Book is prominently displayed in her living room. But its teachings are sadly lacking in her living. Her vicious gossip is the cause of much disruption in the neighborhood. She speaks about Christian things, and yet falls far short of Paul's command to "let your conversation be as it becometh the Gospel of Christ." If a retreater wishes to shine as a light in the world, his language must first be clean and pure, and free from gossip and slander.

Christian living can develop only from Christian thinking. It is sadly true that we may often commit grave sins in our minds, although we do not commit them outwardly. Paul had the right idea—to fill the mind so full of good things that there is no room for bad. His formula is, "Whatsoever things are true, honest, just pure, lovely, of good report, think on these things."

In Philippians 4:9, Paul states plainly a command for each one of us. "Those things which ye have both learned, and received, and heard, and seen in me, do." Retreat gave us much fine Bible instruction; our leaders were hid behind the cross, striving to show forth Him who "being found in fashion as a man, humbled Himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." But what we received is of no avail if we refuse to apply it to our own lives. We have got to become doers.

If retreat is to serve its fullest purpose, each one of us must be able to say, "For to me to live is Christ." To some young people pleasure is life; others literally live to eat; some regard personal success as the paramount ingredient in life; wealth and fame lure many. But each of these idols must be laid low and Christ set upon the throne to reign supreme. If we are not thorough in our emptying of self, our Christian living is marred with failures. These come, not from a lack of innate abilities, but from a refusal to yield our wills completely to Christ. The resources for successful Christian living are available to each of us; they are ours to claim through faith. When we are completely under divine power, then is our Christian living truly victorious.

God grant that we as a united Mennonite youth may say, "For to me to live is Christ!"

IN THE MAIL

Henderson, Nebraska

Dear Rev. Weinbrenner:

We enjoy The Mennonite much, and our Junior C.E. makes use of the program material. . . . Our society meets every other Sunday. Therefore we use only two of the outlines given for one month. The outlines on the life of Paul . . . were so rich in knowledge . . . that we used all those lessons. We extended them over a longer period of time. . . . We had map study in connection and also worked out some kind of contest on the missionary journeys of Paul. Our Juniors have gained knowledge and interest in the life of Paul as well as interest for the work of the C.E. in general. We are now following the outlines of Jesus as given sometime ago. With it we use flannelgram characters. Thus we try to make the life of Jesus more impressive. We do not have time to use all the outlines given for C.E. We use other material alongside with that of The Mennonite. . . . The Junior Messenger is also used for some programs. All the Mennonite outlines are saved and if we see fit to use them sometime later we do so.

Yours in the service of the Lord,

Mrs. Theo. Schmidt

Five Points for Young Converts

Five things, if remembered, will help you each day;
Obeyed, they will keep you from going astray;
Though Satan may tempt you and trials betide,
You surely will conquer, and in Christ abide.

"Keep looking to Jesus," He can never fail,
And walk in His footsteps in every detail;
The world's vain allurements will vanish from sight
By "looking to Jesus," your Saviour and Light.

"Read Daily Your Bible," if you would be strong
To witness for Jesus and overcome wrong;
"The Author," "the Book," and "the doer" abide,
But they who neglect it will surely backslide.

"Pray Without Ceasings." This will bring you to Him
Who cleanses and keeps you a victor o'er sin;
There's nothing so great that our God cannot do.
And nothing so small but He'll undertake too.

"Confess Him to Others," be bold for your King
To those who are lying in darkness and sin;
What help can you better to all recommend,
Than this blessed Jesus—the needy one's friend?

"Do something for Jesus," He did all for you;
Your joy find in willing His sweet will to do.
So seeking to please Him through life day by day,
His presence shall gladden each step of your way.

NOT WASTED

A young woman, who was a great lover of flowers, had set out a rare vine at the base of a stone wall. It grew vigorously, but it did not bloom. Day after day she cultivated it and watered it, and tried in every way to coax it into bloom. One morning, as she stood disappointedly before it, her invalid neighbor, whose back lot adjoined her own, called over and said: "You can't imagine how much I have been enjoying the blooms of that vine you planted." The owner looked, and on the other side of the wall was a mass of blooms. The vine had crept through the crevices and flowered luxuriantly on the other side.

There is a lesson for every Christian here. So often we think our efforts thrown away because we do not see their fruit. We need to learn that in God's service our prayers, our toil, our crosses are never in vain. Somewhere they bear fruit and some hearts will receive their blessings and joy.

SENIOR DEPARTMENT

STEWARDSHIP IN THE USE OF TIME AND TALENT—Matthew 25:14-29

I. Worship Service: 1. Songs: "A Charge to Keep I Have" No. 214, "O Jesus, I Have Promised" No. 212. 2. Reading of scripture passage, prayer, and leader's remarks. 3. Mission hour—extracts from mission letters, or dramatization, "The Spirit of Sacrifice" Cost is five cents. 4. Offering for foreign missions.

II. Leader's Introduction

God has given to everyone the gift of time and of some talent. Talents vary, but all of them can be used to serve God and men. Some have a strong physical body and can do much to produce material wealth or stand the strain of exacting labor in social service work; others have a keen mind and the ability to think deeply, and they are to help others understand the world in which we live and to the inventors and leaders of thought in various fields; others have gifts of music or talent for art. A talent is a gift of trust and means responsibility. One talent has relatively the same chance of increase as five. Philips Brooks says, "This quiet, commonplace man, the two-talent man, ought to be interesting, because he represents so much the largst element in universal human life. The average is by far the most numerous man. The man who goes beyond the average, the man who falls short of the average, both of them, by their very definition, are exceptions. They are the outskirts and fringes, the capes and promontories of humanity. The great continent of human life is made up of the average existences, the mass of two-talented capacity and action."

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks: 1. Lip Service insufficient, Matthew 7:21-23. 2. Fruit-bearing, a test, Matthew 7:16-20. 3. Diversity of spiritual gifts, I Corinthians 12:1-18. 4. Stewardship in use of time, Ephesians 4:16, Colossians 4:5. 5. Stewardship in use of opportunity, Galatians 6:10.

IV. For Discussion: 1. How can time be used wisely? What part of the day should be given to work, to recreation, to rest, to study, to sleep? 2. What does it mean to be stewards in the use of our talents?

V. Facts for Study:

One of the things that is important in life is vision. Here, too, we should be stewards. If God graciously grants us vision, understanding, insight, outlook, we should use it, not bury it. Mennonites have the responsibility to share their vision of the fact that the peace principle is bound up with the very core of Christ's teaching of the Fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of man, the value of personality, of redeeming, forgiving love. We have been guilty of burying and hiding this insight, and need to repent of doing so. But repentance does not only mean saying, "I'm sorry", it means doing better.

We should be stewards, too, with our understanding of the way of living as "the simple life." Honesty and sincerity, frugality and industriousness should not be buried with our fathers, but as we use them they should increase and grow among us and come to be shared with others.

VI. Illustration: "She Hath Done What She Could"

A woman, who in her early life worked in a New Hampshire mill, accepted the salvation that Christ offered her. In later years this woman, commonly known as Minnie, came to live in our town. She was not as cultured as some. In fact she picked beries and did house cleaning for her living. Minnie could not sew and when the women of her church met for such work, she would say, "I can take the dishes out of the cupboard and wash them and clean the cupboard." This she would do.

The other night I heard the chairman of the trustees of our little country church announce, "I have a check from the estate of Ellen A. Gokie," which was Minnie's real name. Minnie had given the sum of $3,339 to our church, which means that as long as this church stands this woman will contribute annually the sum of approximately one hundred dollars. Minnie did what she could and through industry and good habits was able to make a substantial gift to the cause she loved. We need more people who will do what they can.

INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT

Summer Experiences

We suggest that this be an informal meeting of reports on various activities engaged in by your members. Make it informal so that it will not become tiresome. Each member should come prepared to tell of some interesting activity of the summer. Some suggestions are:

1. Reports by those who had the privilege of attending a retreat.
2. Reports by those who attended vacation Bible school or other types of summer schools.
3. Reports by those who attended C.E. conventions.
4. Reports by those who may have had the chance to travel to some place near or far. Perhaps they may have snapshots to show.
5. Reports on interesting activities engaged in at home.

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT

INTERESTING THINGS WE DID THIS SUMMER

I Cor. 15:58, Gal. 6:9

"A Summer Review"

Many of us have helped in our homes this summer. This has been a blessing to us and our parents. We have learned to do many things we never did before because of the shortage of labor. Some of you boys handled machinery, tractors, and implements, which became a real lesson to you in safety, speed and a real aid to your father. Many of us have lifted burdens in many ways. As we worked in our homes we learned more about father and mother and cooperation with those about us. I think we appreciate more what our parents have and are doing for us. We become real companions to those we work with.

Perhaps some of us live in homes where not all are Christians. If we live in such a home, it is our duty and privilege to testify about Christ in our home. It is the duty of every boy and girl to show before the others in our home the love, gentleness, kindness, and thoughtfulness of Jesus. We must be kind and forgiving.

The Question Bee

1. How might Bible Reading become a summer activity for Juniors? 2. What influences do we cast in our summer church attendance? 3. How can you bring the gospel to others? 4. Have you visited any hospitals or old people's homes, and what benefits did you receive or give?

The Prayer List

(a) Regular church attendance (b) Concern for those less fortunate than we are (c) Love for work (d) Making use of every opportunity to tell others of Christ.

A Valuable Purchase

When John Wanemaker was eleven years old, he purchased a Bible. In later years he said of this purchase, "I have made large purchases of property in my time, involving millions of dollars. But it was as a boy of eleven years, that I made my greatest purchase. In the little mission Sunday School, I bought a small red leather Bible for two dollars and seventy five cents. I paid for it in small installments. Looking back over my life, I see the little red Bible was the foundation on which my life was built. It has made possible all that has counted in my life. I know it was the most important purchase I ever made!"

It is better to say, "This one thing I do," than to say, "These forty things I dabble in."

JOSEPH: AN EXAMPLE OF FORGIVENESS

Gen. 45:1-15, 47:11, 12; read 45-50

Joseph Reveals Himself, vss. 1-4

The climax of the story of Joseph comes in our printed lesson. When he heard Judah's pathetic and deeply sincere plea (our last week's lesson) he could no longer conceal his identity from his brothers. He commanded all his servants to leave the audience chamber (vs. 1) so that he and his brothers could be alone as he made himself known to them. This scene was too sacred and too intimate for any others to see; neither would they have understood the significance of it. Some scenes in life are too sacred for outsiders to witness. Joseph was overcome with intense emotion as he uttered three startling words, "I am Joseph." Only small natures are ashamed to shed tears. This utterly unexpected announcement in their native Hebrew tongue and the immediate inquiry about the father startled the brothers. The effect can be better imagined than described. They had seen him only as an Egyptian ruler. Now he spoke to them in their own language and as their long-lost brother. They were "troubled at his presence"—a strong word in the Hebrew. They were frightened and afraid that Joseph might now take revenge on them for their evil deed. The guilty soul of the sinner fears the presence of God. His conscience troubles him.

Joseph hastens to quiet their fears with kind and affectionate words (vs. 4). He asks them to come nearer for a heart-to-heart talk and fellowship. How vividly they now realized that Joseph's dreams—which they had so detested—were not an idle fancy, and that God brought about their fulfillment. God overrules the evil designs of men.

Joseph Forgives His Brothers, vss. 5-15

Joseph assured his brothers that he held no ill-will, no grudge against them. He showed a magnanimous spirit, a lofty type of forgiveness. He asks them not to grieve nor to further condemn themselves for what they had done. He was convinced of their genuine repentance (42:21). He attributes all to the providence of God (vss. 5, 7, 8). He reveals his sincere faith in God. He believed that God had a plan for his life. He felt that God had sent him to Egypt for the definite purpose of preserving both Egypt and Canaan in this time of famine. This however did not in any case sense at all excuse their wicked deed in selling Joseph. He forgave them, consoled them, but did not condone their wrong-doing. Wrong-doing is usually a deliberate act of the will and against better knowledge. These words of comfort and encouragement were designed to still the fears of the brothers and restore their sense of family relationship with Joseph. He recognized the hand of God behind all that had taken place—an evidence of devotion and faith. Joseph made ample provision for his father, his family, and all his flocks (vss. 9, 10). The part of Egypt best suited for supplying their needs, was to be their dwelling-place. Jacob was to be well rewarded for coming down and being near Joseph. Joseph assures them that he is indeed speaking to them in person and in their language, just as he did in his youth. He kissed all his brothers, an evidence of his genuine forgiveness. This too would allay their fears for vengeance. The way was now cleared for a friendly talk about the things that happened during the years of their separation. Joseph dealt with his brothers in a large-hearted manner and his father's old age was serene and beautiful.

Magnanimous Living

Webster defines this as, (1) "great of mind; elevated above what is low, mean or ungenerous." (2) "dictated by or exhibiting nobleness of soul." Joseph reveals all of this in his mode of life. He returned good for evil. He helped and nourished those who had cruelly ill-treated him. He lived high above the plane of hatred and revenge. In his high position he saved both the Egyptians and his own relatives from starvation. His sympathies were broad and his faith in God was strong. His secret of success was in his faith in and fidelity to God. God helped him to the end of his life. "He left to future generations an example of integrity, of industry, of filial and brotherly kindness, of forgiveness and of faith in God, such as make his name stand out as one of the most worthy of imitation in all history."

What will enable us to forgive those who have greatly wronged us?

What punishment did Joseph's brothers reap as a result of their sin in deceiving their father?

How did the brothers show their appreciation for Joseph's forgiveness?

CPS Camps

Camp Statistics

On August 21, 1942, a total of 3,961 men were in Civilian Public Service camps. These men are accommodated in forty-two camps or functioning units administered by Friends, Mennonites, Brethren, and Catholics.

A total of seventy-three (soon to be increased) are on detached service. Thirty-eight of this number are on farm service, seventeen on administrative duties, and eighteen on other forms of detached service.

Two units have a total of forty-two men in hospital service and eleven men are in Puerto Rico doing rehabilitation work among the native peasants. In the Public Health Service at Crestview, Florida, there are seventeen men and at the Federal Research Center at Beltsville, Maryland, forty-one men now in service.

Detached Service

With a rapidly increasing number of boys assigned to Civilian Public Service, it is the intention of the Mennonite Central Committee and the other administrative agencies to place as many boys as possible on some form of detached service. By detached service is meant: (1) such out-of-camp service as dairy or hospital work that the government approves. This form of detached service provides maintenance for the bays: board, rooms, medical care, and work clothing replacement. Any financial returns are placed in a fund to be used in relief work. (2) Service in administrative offices of the C.P. S. program.

To date, detached service has not been opened widely due to a combination of difficulties in procedure. Prospects at present indicate that in the future this form of service will expand. Assignments to detached service are made on a voluntary basis. Before any boy can be assigned to detached service, he must first spend at least two months in a camp during which time he can prove his ability to be a cooperative camper and demonstrate his understanding of the implications of the non-resistant position.

The Service of Canadian C.O.'c

Around seven hundred C.O.'s are now in Canadian camps provided for such boys. Eighteen of these camps are in British Columbia where fire fighting has been the camp project and according to reports, a strenuous one. A few camps are in Alberta and one is in Ontario.

The first C.O.'s from the Mennonite Church to join the Civilian Fire Fighting Corps have arrived in England. Concerning the possible work of such boys, Brother John E. Coffman stated in a letter of July 30 from England that in his opinion there would be numerous opportunities for constructive service that will express the conscience of the Mennonite boys.

Camp Briefs

In August a total of 117 boys arrived at Mennonite camps.

Brother Mark Moyer, campee at one of the farm-units near Hagerstown, Maryland, has been transferred to the Akron, Pa., office to assist the increasing secretarial work.

Brother John Reimer, campee at Denison, Iowa, is now assisting in statistical work at the National Service Board office in Washington.

Concerning Dependents of C.O.'s

We note in recent assignments to C.P.S. camps an increasing number of men with dependents. Government has thus far made no provision for their support. This, therefore, rightly becomes the concern of the family, the congregation, and the whole brotherhood. The Mennonite Central Committee spoke as follows at its May 30, 1942, meeting and suggested a recommended procedure:

> "It is our conviction that it is the responsibility of the church to provide aid for needy dependents of men in C.P.S. camps who cannot be cared for by their own families, and that assurance should be given to men facing the draft that the church will provide for this need to the utmost of its ability. We believe that this is primarily a responsibility of the local congregation and the general body to which it belongs and accordingly ask our executive secretary to take this matter up with the M.C.C. cooperating groups through the M.C.C. members and report back to the M.C.C. his findings.
> "The function of the M.C.C. in this matter should be to see that all cases of need are brought to the attention of the proper church officials and cared for and to provide for cases which cannot be cared for otherwise. A register should be kept by the executive secretary of the M.C.C. of all cases of dependency and how they are provided for."

From this one notes: (1) The feeling that the churches want no one to feel forced into military service against his conscience for financial reasons, (2) A clearly outlined channel of procedure for anyone confronted with such a problem,

All of our camp directors are informed of this position and the procedure in regard thereto. New assignees are being informed as we get their notice of assignment. Anyone needing counsel or help along this line or knowing of one in need of such, as per procedure outlined in M.C.C. action noted, is urged to contact the M.C.C. secretary, Akron, Pa.,

STRANGE BUT TRUE

Some folks will not listen to a preacher who uses notes, but they will not miss one note of the singer.

The best type of music is the note of victory.

Speaking of one's own humility transforms it into pride.

As long as one's testimony is a force it will never be a farce.

Before you speak out in public be sure the public wants to hear.

A good manager is one who can make a profit on criticism.

Discouraged folks instead of lifting must be lifted.

A rain of sorrow always follows the free reign of sin.

Often a mans' testimony is cool because his religious experience is shady. —Gospel Banner

Report Of The Women's Missionary Societies Of The Middle District Conference

Held at Summerfield, Ill., On August 17, 1942

At 3:30 p. m. following the afternoon sessions of the conference the women met for their annual business session under the leadership of Mrs. Harvey Lutz, vice-president, who presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. A. S. Rosenberger. During the devotional period Mrs. Sommers of Pulaski, Iowa, read the scripture lesson and led in prayer. Missionaries present with the group included Mrs. P. J. Boehr, Mrs. A. M. Lohrentz of China, Mrs. F. J. Isaac, and Dr. Ella Bauman from India.

Folowing the routinle reading of customary reports, an interesting account was given of money contributed and work done for Bluffton College through the newly organized Women's Advisory Board. The missionary societies of the three cooperating conferences have to date sent in a total of over $600 for this project.

Mrs. A. M. Lohrentz, president of the Women's Missionary Society of the General Conference, gave a brief resumé of the objectives of the two cents per member pension fund, and each delegate was urged to ask for increased interest in this project in their local societies.

A question put before the house, asking whether the young girls of the churches could be represented in the conference session of the Missionary Society to create greater missionary interest, resulted in the appointment of the following committee, whose object it shall be to make investigation of such possibilities during the coming year and report at the next session. The committee consists of Mrs. Waldo Hofstetter, Mrs. Clovis Oberli, and Miss Martha Suter.

Mrs. G. T. Soldner was in charge of the display by the Literature Committee during the conference and read a report for that committee prepared by Mrs. J. S. Schultz. Each society is again to be assessed five cents per member for this work.

Election of officers resulted in the following appointments: president, Mrs. Forest Musser; vice-president, Mrs. Cora Widmer; Program committee, Mrs. A. C. Schultz.

The public program at 8:00 o'clock on Monday evening was rendered in the following order:

Congregational Hymn	led by John Boehr
Devotions	Mrs. P. J. Boehr
Chalk Talk	Marguerite Sprunger
Missionary Address	Mrs. F. J. Isaac
Music	Summerfield
Missionary Address	Dr. Ella Bauman
Congregational Hymn
Remarks and Closing Prayer	Mrs. A. M. Lohrenz

The offering received at this service was sent to the home and foreign mission treasuries.

Mrs. Howard Gilliam, Sec.

CORRESPONDENCE

WOODLAND MENNONITE CHURCH

Warroad, Minnesota

"Call unto me, and I will answer thee, and shew thee mighty things, which thou knowest not." Jer. 33:3.

Rev. and Mrs. Arthur Ortman and sons returned home from the Northern District Conference the 13th of June, bringing with them Miss Adeline Ortman who was to teach Bible school here for the next two weeks. Rev. Arthur Ortman gave a summary of the conference, Sunday, June 14. On June 19 the sewing club met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Thiessen. Mrs. Arthur Ortman gave a report of the sewing club meeting of the conference.

From June 15 to 26 Bible school was conducted by the Misses Adeline Ortman and Margaret Harder. A program was given by the children, June 26. "Train a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it." Prov. 22:6.

July 4 the annual sale of the sewing club was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Isaac. The same day, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harder from Butterfield, Minnesota, arrived here for three nights of services.

On July 14 Rev. and Mrs. Ortman, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Thiessen, and Mr. and Mrs. John Fast left for Alsen, North Dakota, to attend funeral services of Nick Friessen, who died in an accident. The deceased was a brother of Mrs. Ortman and Mrs. Thiessen.

Rev. and Mrs. Thiessen and family from Floodwood, Minnesota, spent August 2 in our midst. Rev. Thiessen conducted services in the forenoon and evening. Now at a time when the world is in turmoil and war those who have put their trust in Jesus have nothing to fear for:

Jesus never fails, Jesus never fails;
Heav'n and earth may pass away
But Jesus never fails.

MIDDLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The First Mennonite Church of Summerfield, Ill., was host to the fifty-fourth session of the Middle District Conference held August 16 to 18 this year. The meetings opened on Sunday morning with all delegates and visitors assembling for the Sunday School lesson. The lesson topic, "Isaac, the Man of Peace," as presented by Rev G. T. Soldner, was a very fitting one to draw our attention to the importance of keeping an attitude of peace and non-resistance in a world of selfishness and strife.

A missionary and communion service followed the Sunday School period. This service was conducted by Rev. Elmer Basinger, pastor of the Summerfield church. Rev. J. E. Amstutz spoke on home missions centering attention mainly on the Canadian work. He pointed out some of the services that are rendered to the Mennonites in Canada, and especially to the smaller isolated groups who cannot sustain themselves without some help. Rev F. J. Isaac, just recently returned from India, continued with the mission theme. He stressed the importance of bringing the Gospel of Christ to the poor and outcaste people of India.

In the afternoon Dr. Harvey Bauman, also just back from India, spoke on mission work as seen from the viewpoint of a doctor. He made it very evident that the need for this kind of service is great. Also he pointed out how through this ministry, the door is opened, so that they can bring to them the story of God's love.

Dr. Henry Fast then gave an inspiring message on our Mennonite heritage of peace and non-resistance, and he pointed out the numerous reasons why we should uphold this heritage through our support of the C.O. position and the C.P.S. camps.

Sunday evening was given over to the Young People's Societies. Rev. F. J. Isaac was the guest speaker, using Luke 19:13, "Occupy till I come." as a basis for his message.

Rev. P. J. Boehr and Rev. L. Metzker led in the devotional services of the conference. Rev. A. C. Schultz, president of the conference, gave the conference sermon on Monday morning. Rev. Schultz outlined the characteristics of a living church, saying that it must be a believing church, it must be a witnessing church, and it must be a working church. Having these qualities or characteristics, it will make a definite impression and have an uplifting influence where it serves.

The conference was fortunate in having Rev. W. B. Weaver of the Central Conference to give a series of sermons at the Monday and Tuesday sessions. Rev. Weaver spoke with deep conviction, and his sermons were a source of inspiration and came as a challenge in these days of unbelief and conflict. Rev. Weaver spoke on the following topics, "I Believe in God," "I Believe in Man," "I Believe in Jesus Christ," and "The Faith We Declare."

On the program given by the Women's Missionary Society on Monday evening, Mrs. F. J. Isaac and Dr. Ella Bauman, brought to the audience many interesting stories and experiences from the mission field in India.

Another feature of the conference was a panal discussion on the subject, "Challenging Factors in Our Fields of Service." Leaders were asked to speak on the various fields of service including religious education, foreign missions, home missions, peace work, and peace education, relief, rural church work, and church unity.

Rev. A. C. Schultz was chairman of the various business sessions of the conference. At these sessions the reports of the various committees and organizations were given. These reports summarized the work that has been done in the past year; also they brought out some of the problems and difficulties that stand in the way, and presented some resolutions as to the ways and means of furthering the work. Reports were given by the Conference Trustees, the Peace Committee, the Education Committee, and the Seminary Committee. Also there were reports on the work of the Young People, on Bluffton College and on Home Missions.

Rev. A. C. Schultz was re-elected as president for the coming year. The conference voted to accept the invitation of the St. John's Church, Pandora, Ohio, for next year's meeting.

Rev. M. C. Lehman was the guest speaker at the closing session. He brought a vivid picture of the confusion and the famine and death that reigns in Europe. He told of relief work in Germany and Poland, and conveyed the hope of the Mennonites in Europe as they look to the Mennonites in America for help and leadership when the war is over.

"Vain Repetitions"

One little girl habitually prayed when asked, "For all we eat, for all we wear... we thank thee, Father!" One little girl habitually said about many things on the table when urged to eat them, "I don't like them," and "I don't want them." Thanks had just been given to God for food on the table. A plate of hot, brown muffins was passed. Immediately the small girl refusing a muffin boldly announced, "I don't like them." An older person at the table turned to the little girl and said, "After all, we thanked God for this food, didn't we?" For several moments the child sat speechless with eyes wide open fixed upon the speaker. She respected God, but she just hadn't connected the food on the table with the giving of "thanks" for it. Her own thanks were fervid and all-inclusive as far as words went. But the words and actuality didn't touch.

How true a picture this is of the prayers of many who are older! God is asked to bless the Sunday School, but it is entirely possible that the lesson wasn't studied by the one who prays. Thanks may be returned to God for the privilege of worshiping unmolested. Yet such thanks lose some of their importance when considered in the light of tardiness, choosing one of the seats fartherest back, neglecting to sing, and letting the thoughts stray during the sermon. The minister may beseech God to bless the worship. However, what can one expect if that has not been the prayer of his heart during the week? Father Brown may voice in prayer his firm belief that God's fatherly care is sufficient for all that the day may bring. However, if he becomes very much upset when he finds the neighbor's cattle in his corn, his prayer becomes somewhat less genuine. Words have rather definite meanings as testified to by the dictionary. However, when we use them they may not represent that which is really in us.

Jesus warns against "vain (empty, meaningless) repetitions." Our life needs to be as fully yielded to God as the words of prayer profess that it is. "The fervent prayer of a 'righteous' man availeth much."

Training Girls for Community Nursing

By *Mrs. Ursula Frantz

(Read at the Conference on Mennonite Cultural Problems, Winona Lake, Indiana, August 7,8, 1942)

In presenting this paper, I take courage from the thought that the religion Christ came to proclaim is not dependent upon bigness. William James, philosopher, says, "I am against all bigness and I am for the small invisible forces that work from individual to individual, stealing in through the crannies of the world like so many rootlets, yet rending the hardest monuments of man's pride, if you give them time."

Science recognizes the infinitude of the little. Christ preached it: the mustard seed—the leaven—the cup of cold water—the one talent—the widow's mite.

Thirty-one years ago the Mennonites planted a mustard seed in the form of a twenty-bed hospital near the outskirts of what was then the city of Beatrice, Nebraska. The elder of the congregation, the Reverend Gerhard Penner, and his no less zealous members were inspired to pay tribute to their Lord for having safely guided the destinies of His peoples through forty years of living in America, and elected to build the hospital that it might serve as a living memorial.

A Deaconess Sisterhood, a local organization, was established to provide a Christian nursing service. The practical and theoretical course conformed to the state standards and the "Diakonie" was taught by the Oberschwester.

The only expansion of hospital facilities took place in 1921 when the Sisters' home was built and the Sisters' quarters in the hospital were converted into rooms for patients use. Notwithstanding its thirty-bed capacity, the daily average of patients is near twenty-five, and the average number of admissions per year is not less than 750. However, we believe that if a tuberculous patient statistically contacts nine others and exposes them to infection, by the same token our 750 patients contact nine others, and the possible influence exerted by our Deaconesses could easily reach a yearly total of over 4,000 people. Think of the amazing growth of this mustard seed.

Mennonite Deaconess Home and Hospital, Beatrice, Nebraska

Daily some of our sisters receive greetings from a former patient whom they attended or whose father or mother were tenderly ministered to; or the patient himself says that he was sent to our hospital by a relative who happened to know the sisters. Many who have been confused about God, have come to know Him through a simple expression of their kindly service.

As our blessed Savior himself came into the flesh "not to be ministered unto but to minister," as the apostles willingly laid down their lives for their fellow-men, as Christian missionaries and pastors since that time have unselfishly spent their energies and talents to bring the Word of Life to dying men, so have our Deaconesses acheived greatness in the sight of God by serving in the sight of men.

Until the fall of 1930 our hospital conducted an accredited three-year school of nursing, admitting Christian young women whether they planned to enter the Deaconess work or not. At this time, however, state regulations required our third year students to spend twelve months in affiliation with a larger hospital offering a greater variety of clinical material. This imposed a hardship which we chose not to survive, and so in 1933 the school of nursing was closed.

As a nation we were in the midst of a depression; professional nurses far exceeded the demand, and the continuance of our school would have been hazardous. Three years later the economic tide turned again and our over-supply of graduate registered nurses dwindled to an alarming degree. During this period the subsidiary worker group came into existence, and for about four years these nurse aids were the solution to all of our nursing problems.

Perhaps it was the demand for more experienced bedside workers in both home and hospital, or the desire of our nurse aids for more bedside work, or a combination of many factors which finally influenced us to lay plans for a training school for hospital workers. It was not our intention to train substitutes for graduate registered nurses, but rather to train workers in a small hospital to serve the smaller communities.

Since Beatrice is a typical mid-western county seat with a population of 10,000 and located in the center of a rich farming district, we were convinced that geographically, at least, we were ideally located for a training center. Secondly, there are few small hospitals which have the two-fold advantage of having a Deaconess Sisterhood in connection and an adjacent Mennonite Community of some 600 souls. With the consent of the Sisters and the approval of our Board of Directors the training school idea matured, and the first class of six students was enrolled April 1, 1940.

The objective of the course is to provide community bedside nurses whose training fits them for a semi-professional Christian service. The length of the course is twenty-four months and includes experience in all of the departments of the hospital—medical, surgical, and maternity wards, besides work in the operating and delivery rooms. It must be understood, however, that all of the departments of our hospital are under the supervision of a graduate, registered nurse Sister who assists in training each student in addition to looking after the welfare of her patients.

Although the emphasis is placed on the practical work, students are required to attend classes either during the day or in the evening after the day's work is over. The following is copied from the record of one of the students who completed her course April 1, 1942.

29 hours of anatomy and physiology taught by a local high school instructor.

35 hours of materia medica taught by a staff physician.

10 hours of obstetrics taught by an obstetrician.

16 hours of ethics taught by the superintendent.

67 hours of Bible study and bedside devotions taught by the chaplain.

6 hours of Deaconess history taught by the class sponsor—a Sister.

10 hours of physical education taught by the high school physical education teacher.

20 hours of standard Red Cross first aid course taught by the Red Cross approved instructor.

60 hours bedside nursing taught by the superintendent and the Sisters.

In practical work she has completed:

5 months of household management and simple bedside nursing. (Continued on page 12)

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

LETTER FROM JOHN THIESSEN

Jagdishpore (Basna)
Via Raipore, C. P. India
April 1, 1942

Dear Members of the Foreign Mission Board:

Fraternal greetings from us in the troubled Orient. By the grace of God we can still write this report in quietness in our home. However, when this report will have reached you conditions may be entirely different. Though international conditions are far from what one would wish them to be, yet spiritual conditions go on in a refreshing and encouraging way. For this we thank God heartily. Though we also want to thank Him for the judgement that has come upon the world. It shows that God still stands up for righteousness, and that the wages of sin still are death.

The work in our department with the school children has gone on normally this quarter (January, February, and March, 1942). Children and young people respond to the appealing spirit of Christ. We had a representative of the "Children's Mission" .in India with us during the first week in February. Rev. Das, the representative, gave very good practical messages to the young people and children. Several evenings he showed lantern slides from Pilgrim's Progress, and from The Life of Daniel. He also showed some New Testament slides. We also had a representative of the India Temperance Union with us, a Mrs. Nathan. She also showed lantern slides, showing the result of the sin of intemperance.

In connection with the above I am glad to report that the beautiful lantern slides on the Life of Christ, supplied to us by friends in the West Swamp Church area, have done a fine piece of work already in the field of religious education. Those slides are very clear and teach a wonderful lesson.

The physical work connected with the school is also going on quite well. The industrial shed is nearly finished. The young fruit garden is also growing well. The young orange trees look fine. The well which was made from school funds failed us in not giving enough water for the gardens of the school. So we are digging another one from relief funds. This seems to be successful, and poor Christians have a chance to earn their daily bread.

This brings us to the problem of the poor. This awful poverty is draining our nerve strength. We are so glad that the M. C. C. has graciously responded with help. We carried on relief work with personal tithing money and any other bits of resources we could lay hands on, before this help from the M. C. C. came. We just had to. Poverty is too depressing to leave it outside of our attention.

In the family we are well. From our boys in Bluffton we receive good news, for which we are very happy. Eleanor is again in North India in school. Muriel and Dorothy are at home with us. The baby grows normally.

CHRISTIAN HOSPITAL

Champa, C.P. India

April 21, 1942

Dear Brethren of the Mission Board:

The first quarter of this year has been a very busy time. The retreat in Mauhadih gave us a very good start. The Holy Spirit was marvelously at work during those days. On January 5th the evangelists and Bible women prepared for camp and went into tour direct from Mauhadih. Touring was punctuated by the Indian church conference in Basna just like the Japs have punctuated many plans in the past months. After the conference early in February all the workers went into tour again and stayed out until it was time to come in for Easter week. Three of the evangelists attended the Madkughat Christian mela (convention) early in March then went direct into tour again. Three evangelists and one part time worker are still out in camp, although the thermometer has registered 106-108 F. for eight days now. It must be hot in tents, but we praise the Lord that the workers are willing to be out.

Nine different centers had been chosen which served as foci from which many villages were touched. Gospel portions and tracts have been sold, 173 gospels, six New Testaments, one Bible, 165 song books, 167 tracts, and five Gospel portions were sold. May God's blessing accompany His word according to His promise! Of the above 389 were sold by the evangelists, 88 by the Bible women, and 40 in the hospital One woman from the Hindu community and two girls from the Christian community were baptised during the quarter. There are quite a few enquirers, but their motives are still too temporal and worldly.

The budget cut will indirectly influence the evangelistic work. Even though we try to cut elsewhere than the evangelistic account it means that very close figuring has to be done, and part time evangelists can no longer be employed for the current budget year. The small extra allowance which the workers are allowed when in tour due to extra cost involved by having two cooking places, etc. will have to be discontinued, which may mean disgruntled workers. But the Lord will provide!

The hospital shows almost parallel records with last year for this date in spite of the fact that there have been two successive poor harvests and budget cuts did not allow us to give any more free medicines than previously.

Bhagyawati Bisahu, one of our nurses, had to be hospitalized the middle of January because of pulmonary tuberculosis. She is improving and efforts are being made to get a free bed for her in the Pendra Road sanatorium. Dr. Mary John, who has been with us since July 1, 1934, has resigned and will leave May 1st. We have been fortunate in getting an application from Dr. Joanna Rewani, a Christian, who has ten years' experience. She will start her work May 1st. We feel fortunate because in these war times doctors are being paid such high salaries by the government that it is hard to keep doctors on mission pay. We had left this matter to the Lord and had not advertised. He is providing! We had immediately thought of cancelling our hill leave for this hot season feeling that no successor could be obtained in so short a time during war times. Now Mrs. Bauman will be up to take the children out of boarding May 1st, and I will follow later if possible.

Sincerely,

—H. R. Bauman

In the Mail

I was interested in your article, "Ministerial Interneships." I think that your point is well taken and that you have your finger on an important necessity for our church.

I suppose I was especially interested in the article since I was taking a special course this summer in the University of Michigan Hospital under the auspices of the Council for Clinical Training for Theological Students. This course gave a diploma in "Theological Interneship."

You may have read somewhat about this type of training, since the Saturday Evening Post of July 25, 1942, carried an excellent article concerning it entitled, "Minister's In White."

The training lasted eleven weeks, of which time was spent in the hospital working in cooperation with nurses, and doctors in behalf of the patients. The first half of our eleven week period we spent five half-days a week working as an orderly. This gave us an opportunity to earn our board and keep. At the same time it gave us a natural contact with the patients, doctors, and nurses. We would work five days on one ward and then shift to another. This gave us a very wide contact in the hospital and gave us opportunity to observe all kinds of diseases and their treatment. At the same time it gave us a partial understanding of the treatment of sick people, what is and what is not to be done. It took away from us the feeling of strangeness, which so many receive when they go into a hospital. During our five-week orderly period, we picked out five patients with whom we thought we would like to do some intensive visitation work. The purpose of this was not to go in and see the patient and to do all the talking, but rather to visit the patient, let him do the talking and we the listening. It was our aim to learn to understand the patient thoroughly, to be sympathetic with him, and to help him to understand for himself the blessings of a life in Christ. In this process we spent hours and hours by the bedside of various patients. We have found that in our attempt to understand sick people we are better equipped to understand well people. During the summer we also attended classes taught by the doctors. In case study seminars we discussed the causes of the troubles which people get into. I have felt that this training has been very worthwhile.

But to get more particularly to the point of your article. I think the average Mennonite student in a theological seminary would appreciate it very much if our church did have some kind of a setup as you suggested. Though I had three years of preaching experience in the Fairplay Church near Peabody, Kansas, while in college, I still do not feel that I am adequately equipped to take over a church.

Many of the churches in New York City offer ministerial students the opportunity to serve as minister's assistant. This is good, but unless we have something positive to offer in our own church. I am afraid that the opportunities which other churches do offer will be a severe temptation to young men from our own denomination. I would like to see some kind of a positive solution to this problem in our own church. I think that when you suggest a ministerial interneship you are on the right path.

—A Mennonite Student for the Ministry

ARE YOU THERE?

"Are you there?" is what one feels like asking of those General Conference churches whose names appear in the Year Book but never or hardly ever in our church papers. The conference wants to know about them, however. They are a part of the conference. Surely, in each church there is someone who is capable of writing interesting jottings. They may need some encouragement from the minister. Think of how much you enjoy the jottings from other churches. Won't you give others the joy of reading jottings from your church? If your church is one that has not been heard of for a long while, won't you, dear pastor, see to it today that someone will report? Give us something good to read. —rw.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

MENNONITE SMUGNESS

A good deal has been said about the assets and the advantages of the rural community as a desirable environment in which to practice Christian brotherhood. A good deal more remains to be said on this point but I do not want to lead anyone to think that communities are wonderful, glorious, and good just because they are rural. Nor do I want to have anyone think communities are exemplary, morally perfect, and sinlessly Christian just because they are composed of people who happen to have the name "Mennonite" attached to them.

The Sin of Self-Satisfaction

There are some marvellous Christian virtues to be found in all Mennonite communities, but there are also some disappointing shortcomings. This point is made impressively clear by a friend of mine who is a Mennonite minister in the heart of one of our Mennonite communities. He writes, "May I suggest that the great problem with our people (and the people of this conference) is provincialism, smugness, self-satisfaction and narrowmindedness?" This is a rather severe indictment, but I believe it is brought with all fairness and justice to the truth. There are many other communities where the charge is just as true but where the ministers are not all as willing to examine themselves critically and confess their shortcomings before God and men. To such as these Isaiah says: "Woe unto them that are wise in their own eyes, and prudent in their own sight!" (5:21).

Smugness is Un-Christian

An attitude of smugness and an air of self-righteousness have no place in the Christian community any more than they have in the individual Christian. The feeling that our way is the right way, the true way, and the only way, and anyone who differs from us is either very peculiar or very worldly, is surely unlovely and uncharitable. It is a sign of narrowmindedness, ignorance, and intolerance all of which are contrary to a Christ-centered life spiritually mature and thoroughly immersed in the love of the heavenly Father.

Concern For Others

No Christian community, Mennonite or any other, can afford to look upon itself with smugness or complacency, nor can it look upon its non-Mennonite neighboring communities with an air of superiority or upon the wickedness of cities and city people with disdain. It is the duty of Christian communities, as of Christian individuals, to examine themselves critically, confess their shortcomings, with God's help seek to strengthen and improve their Christian character, and humbly, obediently strive to serve God and man. Of Mennonite communities it should be said, "By their fruits ye shall know them," but the fruits should not be attitudes of self-righteousness and provincialism but rather a living vital faith in the way of Christ. The faith ought to be backed up with generous deeds of mercy to a non-Christian world, sacrificial sharing with those who are in want, and voluntary suffering for the sake of the way of love we profess to believe in.

SIXTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Linscheid of Arlington, Kansas, celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary Sunday, August 30, 1942. The celebrants had the pleasure of having all their children at home for the occasion. They are Miss Elizabeth Linscheid of the home, Mrs. A. B. Schmidt, (Katharina) and Mr. Schmidt, Tuscon, Arizona; Mrs. C. O. Dailey, (Emily) and Mr. Dailey, Manhattan; Mr. and Mrs. Otto P. Linscheid, Arlington; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest J. Linscheid, Newton; Theodore Linscheid of the home; Dr. and Mrs. Leo G. Linscheid, Hutchinson; Miss Otillie Linscheid, Wichita; Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Linscheid, Wichita; Mr. and Mrs. John F. Linscheid, Hutchinson; Dr. and Mrs. Harold E. Linscheid, Burlington; Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Linscheid, Sylvia. The immediate family includes furthermore twenty-one grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Linscheid were married sixty years ago in Galicia, old Austria. Soon after their wedding Mr. Linscheid left for America to be followed by Mrs. Linscheid a year later. They first settled in Hodgeman County, Kansas, and then moved to Arlington.

Many friends and relatives from far and near came for the celebration. After the services Sunday morning the close relatives and out-of-state guests asembled at the Linscheid home for a sumptuous dinner. At three o'clock the following program was given at the church across the street from the Linscheid home:

Congregational Singing; Invocation, Address and Presentation of Gift from Church by Rev. George Kopper; Cocal Solo "The Good Shepherd," Edith Mae Reimer (Linscheid); Reminisecnces, Edward Linscheid; Vocal Solo "The Old Rugged Cross," Gene Linscheid; Piano Solo "Prelude in C. Sharp Minor," Eleanor Linscheid; Address, A. B. Schmidt; Vocal Solo "Praise to the Lord," Mrs. Ernest Linscheid; Closing remarks by the chairman, Otto P. Linscheid; Benediction, Rev. George Kopper.

At the close of the program a reception was held at the Linscheid home. Sixty years of happy wedded life is a long time to look ahead, but to think back over the years, is a short life.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By J. S. Hartzler, Goshen, Indiana

SEPTEMBER 27—"No man can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye can not serve Gad and mammon." Matt. 6:24.

The story is told of a man who went staggering down the street. The police officer arrested him, thinking him to be intoxicated. The man protested, saying that he was not drunk, that he was only dancing. Two bands were playing, the one up, the other down the street. The one was playing "Home, Sweet Home," the other "Yankee Doodle." The fact is the man was trying to dance to both tunes at the same time. Some church people are trying to dance to both world and church at the same time. Churches trying to dance to both war and gospel music find it a bit embarrassing, if indeed, not impossible. We can not serve God and mammon.

SEPTEMBER 28—"I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work." John 9:4.

Just how big should a man's purpose in life be? Should one be able to "finish" his work? Speaking of his own work Jesus said, "It is finished." But can I finish? Have I the right to undertake only that which can be finished in life? Perhaps I should begin in time the work that requires eternity to complete. A purpose that ends in the cemetery is hardly Christian. May immortality be conditioned on my beginning in time that which carries on beyond the grave? One of the most satisfying things in life is never to see a day in which we have done all that we wanted to do.

SEPTEMBER 29—"After these things were ended, Paul purposed in the spirit, when he had passed through Macedonia and Achaia, to go to Jerusalem, saying after I have been there, I must also see Rome." Acts 19:21.

By this time our boys and girls are well on their way in their school work for the year. A little learning, someone has said, is a dangerous thing. It is true. Frequently pupils and students go only far enough in their quest to see approaching and inevitable problems; they do not go far enough to see them through. The only satisfactory and honorable way out of any problem is out ahead. St. Paul purposed in his heart to see Rome even though death was waiting him there. Out ahead often means loneliness, criticism, persecution, and even death. Out ahead with God is better than retreat with the masses.

SEPTEMBER 30—"Then there were two thieves crucified with him, one on the right hand, and another on the left." Matt. 27:38.

It is interesting to note how men die. Three men were crucified, the man Christ Jesus, and the two thieves. The one thief died IN sin; the other died TO sin, and Jesus died FOR sin. The unrepenting men died in his sin; the repenting man died to his sin, and Jesus died for the sins of the world. When Jesus advised men to follow Him He doubtless meant that we should take up our cross and follow Him. Among other things this would mean that we die to sin and for sin, not in sin. Judas died in his sin. Saul of Tarsus died to sin. Jesus died for sin.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, . . . teaching Them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." Matt. 28:19, 20.

One of the chief responsibilities of the Christian is to teach. Through teaching the Christian message is spread to others. Naturally our first obligation is to our families and to those in our home communities. From there the responsibility extends to all people in all parts of the earth.

The family is the first and primary unit in Christian teaching. No amount of effort can fully compensate for the lack of Christian education in the home. This is a responsibility which parents cannot delegate to others; it is their first duty to their children.

The local church and Sunday school bear the next responsibility. Hundreds of ministers and volunteer workers are giving sacrificial service in teaching children in the local churches. These early impressions are lasting, and the church can ill afford to save in effort and money in the religious education of youth.

There was a time when the church also controlled the so-called secular, or week day education. That control over the elementary and secondary school is now almost completely gone, and the religious emphasis has consequently largely disappeared. Only in the college does the Mennonite church still have control of education.

That this control be maintained is important. The church needs the school for the education of missionaries and ministers, of whom there is now a marked shortage. It needs the school to develop leaders for the local church as well; leaders whose college experiences have strengthened their religious convictions and prepared them for more efficient work in the church. But the church also needs the college to teach Christian faith, practice, and ideals to serve as guides in the search for and the use of truth, in all vocations of life. Education without these controls can be dangerous. Knowledge can be used for good purposes or for evil, to make men free or to load them with heavier burdens. The truth makes free only when governed by Christian principles. "IF YE CONTINUE IN MY WORD, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." (John 8:31, 32). Only the CHRISTIAN college emphasizes this important part of education.

HOME MISSION WORK

Dear Friends:

I shall endeavor to give you a picture of our work here in Reesor, Ontario. It is now fifteen years that I am laboring in this church. I do not feel that I have accomplished great things, but I believe that the Lord has stood by me in all my many tasks.

The field of my labors changes from time to time, but the general tasks remain unchanged. Occasionally some of our people move away. At this writing we are 23 families and about 103 people.

We are so located that we still need to keep up the two small churches where I serve regularly every Sunday. In addition I give catechetical instruction to our young people. I also seek to cover some more general themes as these pertain to spiritual life. The accompanying picture is our Young People's or C. E. group.

The most important task of a minister is the personal work. Of course, there are other types of work, such as visiting the sick, the aged, and also attending to funerals. It is always a joy for me to be able to help such suffering souls and direct them to the Light of the world.

There is an active Women's Missionary Society, led by Mrs. Lepp. These women gather every week during the winter and hold their meetings and do their work. A most helpful part is the Annual Mission Program prepared by the women.

The Sunday School work is under the direction of the Brethren A. T. Wiens and H. Rempel. Severe winter weather sometimes causes all schools to be closed for a season. However, the school under the direction of Brother Wiens has been able to continue all sessions. The attendance at this school is not very large, but we praise God for this blessing. During the summer both schools continue their sessions regularly.

A point of note is that our day schools are under the direction of the two Sunday School workers. In this case, these two good helpers wield a very great power over our children in that they direct their secular as well as their religious instruction.

With Brotherly Greetings, H. P. Lepp

Report by Rev. J. J. Esau

During the months, May, June, and half of July, Rev. J. J. Esau, our blind Evangelist, Bluffton, Ohio, labored under the direction of the Home Mission Board in the Canadian provinces. The following is a summary of the work and activities as he submitted it to the Home Mission Board. We feel sure that everyone agrees that Brother Esau was a very busy man all the time. May the Lord bless all the efforts and all the seedsowing.

In Ontario: visited 11 churches; preached 21 sermons; gave 8 talks to young people; made 63 house visits.

In Manitoba: Visited 40 churches and Mennonite groups; preached 59 sermons; gave 32 talks to young people; made 103 house visits.

Special occasions: 1 Message—School Festival, Gretna, Manitoba; 2 Messages—Song Festival, Steinbach, Manitoba; 1 Message—Canadian Conference, Winkler, Manitoba; 6 Messages—Youth Conference, Steinbach, Manitoba; 6 Messages—Young People's Retreat, Rosthern, Saskatchewan.

A PRAYER

"Teach me, Father, how to go
Softly as the grasses grow;
Teach me, Father, how to be
Kind and patient as a tree.
Let me also, cheer a spot,
Hidden field or garden lot—
Place where passing souls can rest
On the way and be their best."

THE MEANING OF OUR CIVILIAN PUBLIC SERVICE TESTIMONY

Whether the peace churches may like it or not, there is a considerable amount of publicity being given to them and other conscientious objector groups. The C. P. S. camps dotted over the country have called the attention of thousands of people to the fact that such non-conformist groups exist and present something of a problem.

Often the newspaper stories that feature C. P. S. are not at all accurate in reflecting the true spirit and meaning of the program. Even those stories which are tolerant and complimentary do not present clearly just all that our church and country has come to see in this "testimony by work."

What are some of the values of Civilian Public Service which both church and state have come to realize in this joint effort to solve a mutual problem?

I

The Meaning to the Government

For the government it is perhaps safe to say that on the whole the C. P. S. program has furnished a satisfactory solution to a rather unusual problem. A democratic government such as ours is committed to the tolerance of minority groups of which the conscientious objector is one. Yet in war-time even a democracy must become virtually totalitarian, and this makes very real the question as to what is to be done with the men who cannot, for conscience sake, take arms. C. P. S. has answered this problem of our government and, it is commonly believed, in a way far more satisfactory to all concerned than in World War I.

Not only is the military branch of our government seeing a solution to a problem in the C. P. S. program, but other branches of the government are happy also in this program. The acute shortages of man-power, felt in the Soil Conservation Service, the Forestry Service, and National Park Service are being relieved, if only a little, by the several thousand able-bodied young men in C. P. S. camps who, according to official reports, are giving splendid service. This willingness on the part of the conscientious objector to perform the menial tasks well—be it post-hole digging or planting trees—has been the chief factor in permitting the program to expand into different forms of service.

But there is another value to our government and state which C. P. S. is giving. As mentioned before, ours is a democratic government that is committed historically and legally to the freedom of the individual conscience. There is, however, an unmistakable trend for modern states to become more and more an end in themselves; more and more can we see the individual with his freedoms (heretofore taken for granted) becoming submerged by the rising tide of statism. While the totalitarian state is most highly developed in Europe, it is not required of one that he be a profound student of political science to see that in our own country there are trends in the same direction. It is also apparent that the war which our country is prosecuting with much vigor is hastening these trends. If our democracy is to remain alive, it will need to continue to recognize minority groups. The conscientious objectors, by gaining legal recognition, may be rendering a service of untold value to the American way of life and to all the world by keeping aflame in a somewhat stormy night the torch of individual freedom.

Numerous leaders in American religious, social, economic, and political circles have recognized this service which the sincere conscientious objector is rendering. While they do not share the view of the conscientious objector, they are strong advocates of his right to be dealt with in a tolerant way. They see very well the value of conscience. One such person has said: "It is not the man who follows the dictates of his conscience who is a menace to the Republic; it is the man who doesn't."

To our national life, then, Civilian Public Service has meaning: (1) By the intrinsic value of the work program itself. (2) By making the preservation of individual rights an actuality in our American nation and thereby keeping alive the great democratic ideals.

II

The Meaning of the Church

If the Mennonite Church in her various branches is going to continue to meet the monthly budget of $40,000 or more for her share of the Civilian Public Service program, then it is expected that the Church sees great value and worth in this undertaking.

From a legalistic angle and in terms of logic, should not the government carry this financial load since it. and not the Church, has drafted the men? In this age of materialistic values when everyone seems to be seeking personal advantage and must see financial returns for every dollar expended, then the answer will be "Yes." Why, then, has our Church said "No" so emphatically and cheerfully raised all the needed funds? Might one say it is because she believes so profoundly in the words of Jesus: "And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain?" Many persons, in the government and outside of it, have been amazed when they learned of a group of people who sent representatives to Washington in behalf of a cause but did not desire federal funds for operation, instead virtually requesting the privilege to raise the money themselves.

What has our Church seen in Civilian Public Service that makes her so willing to assume this burden? First, and perhaps foremost, this program stands as a sincere testimony to the historic Mennonite principle of nonresistance and all that it implies. It is not necessary here to review the Mennonite experience

Are You Building on Sand

By Maxine Zihlman *

"And everyone that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand: And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it."

Each one of us has been given a great responsibility. And that responsibility is to build a house known as our life. We have two ways of erecting this great structure. It can be a temple filled with the "glory of God," one that stands when the storms of life come and one that will stand forever or we can build our house on sand and the cheap things in life.

There seems to be in this day so many, many things to attend and so many modern ways of getting there that we have a tendency to push Christ out of our lives. Our daily duties take so much effort and time that it is easy to put these tasks first and neglect our spiritual duties. Even on Sunday's—The Lord's Day—there are so many things that are more attractive to us and draw us from attendance in church.

Should we lower our ideals just a little and go to a Sunday night movie, or elsewhere when there is church just because that is what someone else does or because the "crowd" wants us to? Do you feel the pressure of that crowd and think the rest go, or the rest do that so why can't I? Maybe even on the Sunday evening you are asked to do your part in the service. This is failing in our church duties and pushing our very own duties onto someone else. Also when we do this we forget that someone may be looking up to us as an example and thinks that everything we do is right. So if we build our lives on sand there is a chance of someone else being misled, and we are not only unfair to ourselves but also to others.

If every member of the church were exactly like me what kind of a church would it be? Would it be a church that is well-attended and a benefit to every member, or would it be a half-attended, non-cooperating group? Ask yourself this question. What kind of a church would our church be if every member were just like me?

These are a few ways of building on sand, and the sand foundations just won't stand the knocks of life.

We are told that the houses along the seashore are hit the hardest during a storm due to the fact they have sand foundations which are washed from under them. The people who build their characters and lives in this same sort of way have a habit of crumbling too, when winds and storms of life come.

FAITH'S FOUNDATION

Lucy D. Chilgren

In these days of doubt and fear,
When all the things we hold most dear
Are crumbling into dust;
We lose our courage, hope and trust.
We pray, bewildered, for an anchor sure,
Something to keep our faith secure;
A soft voice speaks above the world's alarms;
Fear not, for "Underneath are Everlasting Arms."

So it will be much wiser to build on Faith's Foundation.

PACIFIC DISTRICT NEWS

Aberdeen, Idaho:

On the morning of July 18 thirty-seven young people of the Aberdeen Mennonite C.E. left with their pastor and his wife, Rev and Mrs. Phil. A. Wedel, and Rev. and Mrs. Paul Wenger, for a two-day retreat in the mountains. On the second day twelve more people joined the group. Eldon Harder was their camp director, and Henry D. Becker was in charge of all the music. The theme of the retreat was, "That I May Know Him," Phil. 3:10. The program was as follows.

Saturday

	Dinner
	Recreation
5:30- 6:30	Supper and clean-up
6:30- 7:15	Vesper—"That I May Know Him Whom to Know Is Life Eternal"—Rudolf Moser
7:15- 8:15	Bible Hour—"The Holy Spirit"— Dr. Wedel
8:15- 9:30	Fun Hour
9:30- 9:45	Closing moments—Ruth Wenger

 In the summer of 1941 Maxine Zihlman gave the above talk at a banquet of the Young People's Retreat at Wayland, Iowa. Prof. B. Bargen of Bethel College contributed the manuscript.

10:15 Lights Out

Sunday

6:30 Rising Bell
7:15 Morning Watch
7:30- 8:00 Breakfast
8:00- 8:15 Devotions—Florence Wiebe
10:00-11:00 Bible Hour—"Soul Winning" Rev. Paul Wenger
11:00-12:00 Morning Service—"That I May Know Him as My Guide and Friend" Carl Wenger
12:00 Dinner
Recreation
4:30- 5:30 Open Forum—"Christian Courtship and Marriage"
5:30- 6:30 Supper
7:30- 7:15 Hymn Singing
7:15- 8:15 Evening service—"Thta I May Know Him and Make Him Known"—Willard Wiebe

"We young people enjoyed God's magnificant out-of-doors, the hikes, soft-ball, horseshoes, and sleeping under the stars to the fullest extent. But much more we enjoyed the blessings of Christian fellowship, and the challenging, heart-stirring messages, given by Rev. Wedel, Rev. Wenger, and the young men, which helped to bring us closer to our Saviour. Truly, we learned 'to know Him better.' "

Program

"Ready" was the theme of the program given by the True Girls of the Aberdeen Mennonite Church Sunday evening, August 9. The program included musical numbers, reading, and two messages—"Ready to Go" and "Ready to Stay." The offering taken at the time was divided and sent to Miss Elizabeth Foth of the "Red Hook" District Mission in New York City and to the leper work in India.

Socials

The Young People's C. E. of the Aberdeen Church has enjoyed several socials this summer. The "Retreat Echo" social was held on the Frank Wedel lawn. An evening of fun and playing games preceded a watermelon bust. Pictures taken at the retreat were shown, and everyone told which had been the most enjoyable part of the retreat to him or her. Another social event was the party given at the home of Betty Horsch by the missionary committee. After playing games, refreshments of popcorn and doughnuts were served. Following this short program based on the theme, "Harvest," was given.

Anniversary

About 200 relatives and friends gathered at the Aberdeen Mennonite Church on Friday evening, August 14 to help Mr. and Mrs. Willie Harder celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary. The guests enjoyed a short program in the auditorium after which they were served a delicious supper in the basement.

MENNO CHURCH, LIND, WASHINGTON

Since it is impossible for the people to drive to church both Sunday morning and evening, the evening services have been dispensed with for the duration. But the young people were not willing to give up their C.E. and pre-prayer service, so they are meeting at 9:15 a.m. Their willingness to get up earlier in order to keep their C.E. services should encourage the rest of us.

At School

Four of the Lind young people plan to attend college or Bible school this winter. Marie and Viola Franz will attend Bethel College; Edna Franz will go to the Bible Institute at Los Angeles, and Alvin Franz to Whitworth College.

ONECHO CHURCH, COLFAX, WASHINGTON

Sixteen of the Colfax Mennonite young people attended the Washington Retreat held at Whitworth College, near Spokane, July 3-5. A member of their church devoted his truck to furnish transportation for the group on Sunday. All reported a worthwhile time and hope for another retreat next year.

C. E. Rally

On August 2 twenty-four members from the Junior and Senior C. E. attended the interdenominational Whitman-Latah District C. E. Rally at Thorton, Washington. They received the attendance plaque which was given in consideration of both number present and milage covered in coming to the rally. For the past months Donald Aeshliman has been serving as song leader for the group, and at a recent executive meeting Marjorie Aeshliman was made vice-president of the district.

(The above items were sent in through the Pacific District Conference Young People's Committee Chairman, Phyllis Claassen, as all Y. P. news items will be sent.)

A GRAND OLD HERO

Would you like to know a grand old hero? Then read this story of Chrysostom before the Roman emperor, who had threatened him with banishment if he still remained a Christian.

"Thou canst not, for the world is my Father's house; thou canst not banish me," Chrysostom replied.

"But I will slay thee," said the emperor.

"Nay, thou canst not," said the brave Christian, "for my life is hid with Christ in God."

"I will take away thy treasures," threatened the emperor.

"Nay, but thou canst not; for, in the first place, I have none that thou knowest of. My treasure is in heaven, and my heart is there," was the reply.

"But I will drive thee away from man, and thou shalt have no friends left," continued the Roman.

"Nay, and that thou canst not," once more the noble Christian answered, "for I have a friend in heaven from whom thou canst not separate me. I defy thee; there is nothing thou canst do to hurt me."

Was he not a grand Christian hero?

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

A. S. BECHTEL

October 4, 1942

FAITH IN CHRIST AS OUR PERSONAL SAVIOR

Acts 16:13-15 Rom. 5:1-11

The aim of this quarter's lessons is, "To help the learner achieve more effective Christian living in personal experience, in family relationships, and in and through the Church." There are various aspects of religion, but first of all it has to do with our personal relationship to God and with our personal living. This lies at the foundation of all else. Spiritual achievements are attained by people individually, and not as families or groups. The faith that leads to salvation is a personal matter. God's response to the soul is likewise personal. Peace with God is a personal experience. Death overtakes us as individuals, and each one must give a personal account to God. It is very fitting that the first lesson of this series should be concerning "Faith in Christ as Our Personal Savior." These lessons are for learners, and that includes all of us. Faith is the beginning of the Christian life and there our study begins.

First Convert in Europe, vss. 13-15

Paul and his company came to Philippi and on the Sabbath sought out the meeting place of the Jews for worship. There were too few here to build a synagogue. Here Paul preached the first gospel sermon heard in Europe. Prominent among the worshipers was Lydia, a proselyte to Judasim of the class called "God-fearers." Evidently she was well-to-do. She was responsive to Paul's message and constrained Paul and those with him to partake of the hospitality of her friendly home.

The Nature and Results of Faith, vss. 1-11

"This portion from Romans is one of the rich passages from Paul's writings and brings to us the very heart of the gospel." He expounded his doctrine of "justification by faith"—Paul's great contribution to Christian teaching—in the two preceding chapters. Now he speaks of some of the results which follow a personal faith experience. Faith in Paul's writings means more than intellectual assent. Saving faith is the trust of the repentent sinner in Christ as his Savior from sin. Such faith is a personal yielding to Christ and a personal venture upon Him, fully trusting that He does forgive, even now, as He has promised. By faith we appropriate to ourselves God's salvation which He has provided.

Paul stated the method by which justification through faith was made possible (Rom. 3:21-26). Now he states some of the results of the experience. Through faith a man is declared righteous—justified —pardoned before God. This involves self-surrender. The sense of guilt is gone and there is peace with God and rest and quiet of soul—a sure evidence of a spiritual change. The child of God possesses a calm and trustful temper of mind. There is also glorying, rejoicing in the hope of heaven, through Christ our Savior (vs. 2). This begets in us a new spiritual atmosphere, a triumphant spirit. We may even rejoice amidst tribulation (vs. 3). Tribulation enriches the character and produces steadfastness and solidity in the one who endures it in the right spirit. Paul was convinced that God would stand by him in all his tribulations. Through the experience of testing, the Christian discovers what he can bear and do through grace. This promotes courage and strengthens the hope—a confident conviction—of final victory, of enjoying God's favor here and hereafter. God endows us with his love which is shed abroad in our hearts by the Spirit. It is the foundation of constant hope.

Before men received the Spirit, they were unable to live as God required, unable to work out their own salvation through keeping the Law. Christ's death is the supreme proof of God's love. We were sinners, yet Christ died for us. Such love had never been seen before by the world. God's unlimited love, which saved us when we were enemies, shall complete its work and preserve us to the uttermost. We shall be saved, both here and hereafter, by Christ's resurrection and continued life. We need and have a living Savior, who can do something for us now. It is our duty to accept this reconciliation or atonement. The faith which saves may operate anywhere and at any time. We are saved by believing God and his Word. Such faith honors the Savior.

How can one rejoice in tribulations?

Why are our own good works not sufficient to save us?

How large a place do our feelings have in the matter of our salvation?

✓ ✓ ✓ ✓

God must not be expected to do for us what we can do for ourselves.

The man who lives only for himself could not be engaged in any smaller business.

7 months of medical and surgical nursing.
6 months in care of mothers and babies.
2 months in the operating room.
2 months in the delivery room.
1 month of vacation.
1 month in home nursing.

At the end of this period the student is qualified to perform all nursing procedures which she will be required to do in the small community hospitals or as a bedside nurse in the home.

At no time have hospitals of our size been able to secure the services of the desirable type of graduate nurse for general duty, partly because of a lower cash salary and mostly because of the lack of social opportunities. So, when difficult nursing procedures were required, these graduates were usually more inadequately prepared to perform them than are our two-year students who are trained to meet local requirements.

The course was viewed with conflicting opinions. Some considered it a glorified practical nurse course, others considered it as a lowering of the National League standards for nurse training, and some looked upon it as a practical solution of our problem which is the shortage of skilled workers in the small hospital and the small community. After the two year trial period, we are happy to say that our staff doctors, as well as our townspeople, wholeheartedly endorse the school. Calls for our graduates have come from many different community hospitals; in fact, we cannot supply the demand.

Locally, our students perform home nursing service under our strict personal supervision and for this service the hospital charges a fee of $1.00 per day. Convalescent cardicas, flu patients, illness due to old age, mother and babies, and many other types of cases have made use of this service.

Over a period of two years experience, we have made some observations which we would like to share with this group. As previously mentioned our training school places emphasis on Christian service and uses modified principles of the Deaconess school to guide us. These principles include plenty of honest toil, a regimentation of habits, and discipline in Christian thinking. To our surprise, these young students crave direction and a goal. Innately the modern glamour girl is the Mennonite Maid of yesterday. She derives satisfaction from being a Girl Scout because she may perform her good deed daily. The delicious exhaustion following honest toil has been denied her, so she turns to twirling the baton for exercise and excitement. She is in the Valley of Jehosophat—the valley of decision—and many of them are waiting to follow courageous souls.

Written in a "Letter to My Son" by a soldier's mother is this challenge to youth, "Comfort is a drawback and not an essential to the virility of man . . . Men get their strength and their delight in building, not enjoying. So fear the future not at all. If the new generations have built a new world, what then? It may be impoverishment in the material sense of the work, but it will be spiritual adventure in the greatness of living."

Boys and girls need to be spiritually prepared as never before for the ordeal of the next few years. Training of minds and bodies will not be enough to have them come through the war unembittered and to make a just peace without vengeance. Their soul need to be fed and disciplined. To them the church must maintain its distinctive service of ministering in a Christ-like way—of inspiring them with faith and hope and courage—and of offering a haven to the spiritually stranded.

As a branch of the Church our hospitals can in a practical way serve as a haven for young women seeking to live a useful Christian life and thus mutually benefit both the Church and its young women. There is a great need of women workers for parish work, for the teaching ministry in Church and Bible schools, for day nurseries, for youth organizations, and for institutions caring for people of all kinds.

We understand that young men of the Mormon Faith pledge two of the most productive years of their life to the church in the capacity of missionary or other work in whatever field of labor needs them—not for high salary but as a contribution to repay the church for the privilege of having been guided to maturity by its principles. That is the sacrifice demanded by parents and children alike by a faith we do not choose to imitate.

Another glowing example is the Salvation Army whose maximum salary for the Captain and his wife is $10.00 per week for each plus lodging and a car. Food, clothing, gas, auto repair, and all other incidentals and utilities must be paid for out of this salary. Surely no one can say that they work for gain, and yet their bond of fellowship is one of the strongest.

I have mentioned these examples of sacrificial labor in response to those who say that to be a Deaconess requires too great a sacrifice. As a professional associate and observer rather than as a member of this group of Godly women it is not unseemly for me to dwell on the virtues of being a Deaconess and secondly to propose the establishment of a Guild of Christian Service women in connection with our training school for community nurses. The Deaconess principles would be the basis for this association of workers, and would be modified to allow for the greatest possible extension of true Christian service.

May I mention some of the Deaconess principles? The Deaconess is a Christian woman (unmarried or a widow without children) who from love of her Savior and gratitude to Him, desires to serve Him especially among the poor and needy, and who, in order to carry out this vocation, has voluntarily joined a Deaconess Sisterhood. She makes no vow, but having been trained for this work of the Church, it is expected that she will devote her life to it. This work consists of labor in hospitals, orphanages, homes for the aged, teaching in parochial and Bible schools, day nursery work, parish work, etc. Eligible young women are preferably between the ages of eighteen and thirty-five, of good health, practical ability, preferably high school education, and a sincere Christian spirit.

The Deaconess calling embodies a two part training, one is vocational, the other spiritual. With her training in both fields she may minister to the bodily and spiritual needs of her patient and thus achieve a success not otherwise possible.

I have observed that the young women in our training school have manifested an eagerness to learn the true meaning of Deaconess work. They have for the two years of their course associated closely with our Sisters and have come to know that a life whose inner spiritual lamp is aflame is a force that has no equal. Many of our Sisters have spent twenty-five years of continuous service in our institution, and the students have come to admire their strength of purpose and influence their lives exert on those around them.

These students have shown an interest in establishing a modern Deaconess order to perpetuate the Deaconess ideals and have been enthusiastic about the classes we have given on the Deaconess work and calling. Should we not encourage our young women to take this step? It is the equivalent of the C. P. S. training for our young men and would equip a girl for the many tasks of reconstruction awaiting the woman of tomorrow.

To further study the feasibility of such an organization a Deaconess Research Committee was appointed by our Board of Directors. A tentative plan has been considered, and to assist them in their work they have asked me to present the following questions to you for discussion:

1. Should this Christian Service Guild be a local organization or should a movement of this type be considered a conference project, or is there an organization of Mennonite women who might be interested in this as both a war and peace time activity?
2. Should membership be limited to Mennonites or should it be interdenominational?
3. Should a retirement plan include a Mother House and allowance, or a cash endowment only, or should there be no retirement plan?
4. Could returned missionaries be engaged as instructors in this training school or should the training be a part of a college curriculum?

(This paper was submitted for publication by J. Winfield Fretz.)

Weeping Water, Nebraska

By Allen Stehman

Location

Thirty-five miles south of Omaha and thirty-five miles east of Lincoln, lies the little town of 1,150 population, Weeping Water, Nebraska, home of Civilian Public Service Camp No. 25. This town has derived its name from an historic incident in which the Indian women wept on the banks of the river for their warriors who did not return.

About the first of May of this year eleven boys from Camp Henry, Illinois, arrived to prepare the evacuated C. C. C. camp for its opening on May 15. On that day ninety-one boys made their debut. To date (August 1) the total has reached 144 campees. The geographical distribution of boys finds 89 who come from Kansas, 23 from Illinois, 11 from Iowa, 11 from South Dakota, 2 from North Dakota, and one from each of the following states: California, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Oklahoma, Oregon, and Pennsylvania. Of the boys, 90 per cent are Mennonites, there being twelve branches of Mennonites represented, with the General Conference Mennonites in the majority, having a total of fifty-five. (Old) Mennonites are second with thirty-five. Eleven other denominations are represented.

This camp site would be a splendid place for a park. A small river winds its way on one side; a large steep hill is on another side, with the town to the northwest, the camp being just outside the city limits. Tall, shady oak and elm trees shade the campus and provide a playground for frolicking squirrels and singing birds. A shady nest-shaped bowl provides a beautiful out-of-doors classroom. Eight parallel lines of dormitories lie on the south of the private lane; on the other side are the government office, staff office, hospital, library, dining hall, wash house, and two cottages for the staff and their families. To the east at the end of the lane are the garages for the government trucks and the several shops. Below and next to the river are the ball diamond, croquet ground, and tennis courts.

THE MEANING OF OUR CIVILIAN PUBLIC SERVICE TESTIMONY

of the past in regards to the nonresistant witness. It may be well to point out that in this crisis a quite different element enters into our testimony. I refer to the positive aspect of our testimony and the fact that Mennonite youths can be true to the Mennonite peace tenet and not be thrust into prison and be branded with the stigma of bad citizenship and unpatriotism.

So eager is the Church to testify to her nonresistant principle that she gladly proves her sincerity to the government and country by investing thousands of dollars in a program to implement this faith.

As the Civilian Public Service program continues, however, many people have come to see in it unexpected and unforseen benefits. Besides the witness to the world of our devotion to Christ's testimony, there are values which our church—the boys in camp and the folks at home—have come to see in this program.

To the Mennonite boys in camp, Civilian Public Service has come to mean an untold number of things, e. g., during the open discussion of a camp prayer meeting a quiet, heretofore almost expressionless, boy arises and states that camp life has meant more to him than he ever imagined it could. He cites the friendships formed and the opportunity to gain deeper insight as to why he is where he is.

Another boy makes a new discovery through the study of the Core Course. He becomes intensely interested in the heritage of the Mennonites—discovering for the first time the content of this great heritage. Henceforth he will not need to apologize for being an adherent to such a faith.

Still another boy has gone to camp rather hesitant about the value of such an "indirect" witness. His only hope is that of being transferred to another kind of service as soon as possible. However, after several months in camp he becomes so impressed with what he has learned by fellowship, work, and play with fellow campers that he does not desire to transfer until some time in the future. A graduate of a Mennonite college, he comes to understand as never before, the profound implications of the Christian nonresistant way of life.

So one might go on and on. Music, Bible, study, games, work, friends—all these bring to every boy who desires to gain them, a host of enriching experiences. Countless boys are learning that camp life is more than eating, sleeping, and working. Camp is more than a place to stay between the occasional visits home. The whole experience is not to be regarded as an interruption. It is a stepping stone to higher personal attainments. Necessary and unwanted, to be sure, but nothing to be a source for complaint and frustration. A recent camp paper has expressed editorially the sentiment that camp must be a place to prepare for greater service to be rendered when the war is past. So great will the need then be for service that it is doubtful, the editor continues, if the duration in camp will be long enough to prepare adequately for the great task ahead—whatever it may be.

For the Mennonite congregations in all branches there can be seen genuine rewards. Where is the congregation which has not felt a deeper interest in its young men since it is paying for their support in camp? Ties between the home churches and the boys are stronger (or could be) than perhaps ever before. The occasional gifts which individual members or Sunday School classes make to boys in camp have perhaps done more for both donor and receiver than either realizes.

Then there is the satisfaction and reward to our Church which comes through the greater sense of unity which this cooperative enterprise has brought. Camps consistently report that boys of all the different Mennonite branches have come to acheive a genuine respect for each other despite differences in background and training. The study of the Core Course, by taking the boys to the original source of Mennonitism, has shown many a boy that perhaps his particular branch of the Church could profit not a little by a reversion to the early Mennonite tenets. From many boys has come expression of genuine appreciation for what they have gained from learning to know boys of the different Mennonite groups. Not the least of the values of the Mennonite Civilian Public Service program is the deepened sense of unity that in the future will characterize the Mennonite Church.

If our beloved Church will continue for centuries more, perhaps, some future nonresistant groups will find inspiration and confidence as they study the way in which the Mennonite Church in World War II sought to give expression to Christ's command to "render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's." May the Lord bring to the Mennonite Church a growing awareness of her present opportunity to serve God and country.

HOW TO IMPROVE

Are you one who regularly or occasionally contributes to The Mennonite? Would you like to improve your contributions? Check over the following suggestions, for they may help you. 1. Always double-space all typewritten material. 2. Type or write on one side only. 3. Use unruled paper eight and one-half by eleven inches if possible. 4. Do not use more capitals than suggested by good English usage. 5. Spell out the names of states. 6. Spell out every number of less than three digits. 7. Leave out all unnecessary words and ideas. 8. Check your contribution carefully for all mistakes before you send it in. 9. Report all news events immediately after they happen. 10. If at all possible do not permit your contributions to be longer than four or five double-spaced pages. 11. Put the heading of your article in a few words. —rw.

EASTERN DISTRICT SECRETARY'S NOTES

Napier—It may be of interest to the members of the conference to learn why the parsonage at Napier is called "Tulls Hill parsonage". Years ago a family by the name "Tull" lived on the hill, and in 1777 the entire family was massacred by the Indians. The remains of the log house are just across the way from the parsonage and therefore the place is called "Tulls Hill". Many folks of the east and some farther away, at one time or another, visited and undoubtedly wrote in the autograph book of Geraldine Kaltenbaugh. She was an invalid and had been ill for the past twenty-three years and was bedfast for the past six years. She had a radiant Christian testimony, and in spite of her pain, was always cheerful and happy in the Lord. She died August 8, aged thirty-one years. Her pastor, the Rev. George D. Greger, officiated at the funeral and brought a message of comfort from James 4:14, "What Is Your Life?" We extend our sincere sympathy to Mrs. Kaltenbaugh and the family.

Allentown—The Ladies Aid Society recently pur- a beautiful new pulpit Bible for the church which is greatly appreciated. One of our young men who had a perfect Sunday School attendence for many years is now a student at Bluffton College. While we miss Watson Skinner in his accustomed place in our school and the choir, we wish him success. Edward Eisenhard is a student at Lehigh University.

Lansdale—The members of Grace Church prepared and served the dinner at the Mennonite Home for the Aged at Frederick on Saturday, September 12. The speakers for the anniversary program were the Rev. Sylvan S. Lehman, president of the Eastern Conference, and the Rev. Paul Stoudt, pastor of Quakertown Reformed Church.

Deep Run—The Christian Endeavor Society sponsored its second annual campfire service at Hunsberger's grove on Sunday evening, August 30. Mr. John E. Fretz, a leader of young people in the General conference was the special speaker. Musical numbers were rendered by the local society. The Young Women's classes of the Sunday School donated a Bible marker and new offering plates to the church recently..

First Church, Philadelphia,—The members and friends of the church are exceedingly happy that Miss Whilhelmina Kuyf, a member of the church, has arrived safely from China. At a reception held for her on Saturday August 29, she was presented with a purse of over $150.00 and a friendship quilt consisting of 600 names. On Sunday September 6, the Sunday School had a brief dedicatory program for the cabin "Wilhelmina" built at Men-O-Lan which came as a complete surprise to Miss Kuyf.

East Swamp—Rev. Harold D. Burkholder, pastor will resume his studies at the Reformed Episcopal Seminary in Philadelphia, beginning September 17. During the past month Dr. Ella Bauman was the speaker at the Women's Missionary meeting and Dr. Harvey Bauman addressed the meeting of the Men's Brotherhood. The pastor and family were "mumps" sufferers seccently.

Bally—Dr. Elmer E. S. Johnson celebrated the fortieth anniversary of his ordination as Elder on Sunday, August 30. He has been pastor of the Hereford church for about twenty years. During the week September 6 to 13, Rev. Paul R. Shelly conducted special services in the Stirling Avenue Mennonite Church, Kitchner, Ontario, of which his brother Rev. Andrew R. Shelly is pastor. Rev. Andrew Shelly was ordained as Elder on Sunday afternoon September 13 with his brother and Dr. E. S. Johnson officiating. These young men are the sons of Rev. and Mrs. Elwood S. Shelly of Pennsburg. Pa., and are members of the Hereford church.

Secretary's Record—Several weeks ago I stated that recently Dr. Johnson came across the first official record book of the conference dated from 1847 to 1884. While the secretary and Dr. Johnson looked over the book in the Perkiomen Library, where it is being kept, we discovered that the book contains the Constitution and the By Laws of the Eastern District Conference, signed by all the ministers in the Eastern Conference from its beginning in 1847 to 1884 with the exception of Albert E. Funk. The first name to appear is that of Abram Hunsicker of Collegeville, builder of Freeland Seminary. This school was later discontinued by the Mennonite Conference and went into the hands of the Reformed Church, changing the name to Ursinus College. The last name to appear is that of William H. Oberholtzer. In this record are more details than appear in the printed copies of the Conference Minutes from 1847 to 1884. The last six pages of the book appear in what obviously was the hand writing of Brother C. H. A. van der Smissen, who is still living.

Historical Meeting of Conference—At the request of the Publication and Historical Committee of the Eastern Conference our next Workers Conference will be a historical meeting. It will be held in the Germantown Church the latter part of October. The exact date will be announced later. The tentative program as planned by Dr. Johnson and the secretary is as follows. In the afternoon, paper—"Observance of the Sixty-sixth Anniversary of the Admission of the Germantown Mennonite Church to the Eastern District Conference" by Rev. Howard T. Landes, pastor of the Germantown Church. Another Paper by the Rev. Freeman H. Swartz entitled, "Sevenieth Anniversary's." In the evening Dr. Johnson will speak on "Notable Events in American Mennonite History through 150 years—1702 to 1852." This meeting should be of interest to all Eastern District Conference members. Howard G. Nyce

VOLUME LVII NORTH NEWTON, KANSAS, SEPT. 29, 1942 NUMBER 38

THE DIFFERENCE

Two young men enter college at the same time and with the same ability to learn. Equal opportunities lie ahead of both for the next four years. Both are looked upon as "college students" by those who know them. Those who meet both on the first day of school, perhaps, have no reason to regard one as different from the other in the matter of scholastic standards.

Four years pass. Those who know both students observe a marked difference between the two. The one stands near the top of his class. He is known by his fellow students as a "scholar," who greatly delights in absorbing new facts, who fixes them thoroughly in his mind, and who applies his knowledge in all the activities in which he engages. He is admired as a thinker. The grades of the other student put him near the bottom of the class. His classmates know that he possesses the ability to learn well. However, they realize that there is not in his mind a large body of knowledge, thoroughly fixed, and well-expressed in whatever he does. They are not altogether certain whether he will pass the final comprehensive examination.

Two young men publicly accept Christ as Saviour and Lord at the same time, are baptized and received into the church. Equal opprotunities for spiritual growth lie ahead of both. Both are received as Christians. On the day of baptism no one, perhaps, has reason to regard the one as different from the othre.

Four years pass. Those who know both as Christians observe a marked difference between the two. The one stands out in the church as a young man of deep spirituality. His fellow-members know how eagerly he searches in the scriptures, how clearly he has in mind all the teachings of Christ, and how thoroughly he applies those teachings in everything he does. He is loved for his Christlikeness. The other, however, is not regarded as one whose words would count for another who was dying. The brethren in the church know that through the grace of God he could be a much different person. However, they sense that he does not hunger for the truths of the Bible, that he doesn't mind being hazy about the teachings of Christ, and that the teachings of Christ permeate his daily activities so little, that strangers would find it difficult to determine whether or not he was a Christian. The brethren are not very certain in their hearts of how he will face God's comprehensive examination.

Why the difference between student and student and between Christian and Christian? The use of the mind. Is not that the answer? One student made excellent use of his mind, the other didn't. One Christian let the mind of Christ operate in him. He permitted it to lead him into all the implications of Christ's teachings. The other Christian neglected the mind of Christ, let it lie idle in him, and refused to let it lead him into all truth. If the mind of Christ is in you, use it. —rw.

A Nickel or a Quarter

Everek R. Storms

A quarter for the ball game,
  A quarter for the show,
A quarter for the hockey match,
  Every time I go;
A quarter here, a quarter there,
  A quarter left and right,
But just a nickel for the Lord—
  I wonder if it's right.
A quarter for some chocolate bars.
  A quarter for some pop,
A quarter for some gasoline,
  To take a little hop;
A quarter spent for this and that,
  A quarter every night,
But just a nickel for the Lord—
  I wonder if it's right.
A quarter isn't much to me,
  A drop within the pot,
But yet when Sunday comes around
  A quarter seems a lot;
So when they pass the plate to me
  At church on Sunday night,
I only put a nickel on—
  I wonder if it's right.
If God Himself should pass the plate,
  I wonder what I'd do;

I think I'd put a quarter on.
Perhaps a bill or two;
To spend the quarters for myself,
And then at church some night,
To give the nickels to the Lord,
It surely isn't right.

RELIEF

OUR WORKERS IN ENGLAND CONTINUE TO WORK AND PLAN

From Brother Peter Dyck in Birmingham, England, a number of interesting things appear in a late letter, dated August 28, 1942. He mentions meeting a Brother Schantz, one of the first of the Canadian Fire Fighting Corps who visited "The Woodlands." He also tells of plans and ideas for resettling refugees now in England after the war.

But nothing his letter contained was of more interest than the following summary of monthly activities for July, 1942:

July 1-5—General activities in and about Birmingham, with one visit to "The Woodlands."

6—In London I meet our two Mennonite Canadian nurses, Edna Hunsperger and Elfrieda Klassen.

7—John Coffman, the two nurses and I motor to Wickhurst Manor for the day.

8—Leave London for Birmingham with two nurses and several bales of clothing in car.

9—With our nurses to "The Woodlands" where we meet John Coffman.

11—Conference with certain local and German Refugee pastors concerning the scheme of providing a college or home (spiritual) for German Refugee pastors.

12—John Coffman, two nurses and I motor to N. Wales to visit our nursery for convalescent children. Had a royal welcome at "South Meadow."

13—Visit to Liverpool and conference with Miss Finchett of the Liverpool Child Welfare Association, regarding placing one of our nurses (most probably Elfrieda Klassen) in "South Meadow." Miss Finchett would gladly have them both, but we feel that one ought to be further south, if possible at "The Woodlands."

15-25—A ten day's stay at "The Woodlands" assisting generally in the day's work. At this time there is especially a lot to do because one after another the staff of ten take a fortnight's vacation. On the whole, things at "The Woodlands" are running very smoothly.

26—Motor to Buxton and Scheffield with intentions of making new contacts in these areas for our relief work.

27—Met several people who doubtless will prove to be very valuable contacts if and when Scheffield needs assistance. Also made contacts for clothing distribution and left one bale of clothing.

28—Have the privilege and honor of attending Friends Yearly Meeting in York for three days. Many interesting topics are discussed; peace testimony is reaffirmed; relief work is reviewed; tribute is paid to our relief work in this country; and I had the opportunity of making still further contacts, all of which are necessary in case of renewed air distresses.

As Another Winter Approaches in France

An August 15 letter from Bro. J. N. Byler suggests that relief work in France is likely to be difficult because of the problem of securing foodstuffs. It is refreshing to note, however, that for some time at least the Mennonite relief program is assured. For one of the colonies and the cantine Bro. Byler states: "We were able to buy dried and tightly packed vegetables for soup once a day for six months for both the colony and cantine."

Arrangements with the city of Lyon are such that relief by our workers can continue to the many school children of this French city.

"Clothing for Relief"

A new folder by the above name has been issued by the Mennonite Central Committee and copies of it may be obtained by writing to the Akron, Pa. office. The folder, in word and picture, gives information and suggestions for all those who desire to help in this ministry.

During 1941 over $50,000 worth of clothing was received by the Committee. The response for 1942 has been even better and it is hoped this will so continue. During the summer months over 6 tons of clothing was shipped to the Clothing Depot of the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania.

AWARENESS

God—let me be aware.
Let me not stumble blindly down the ways,
Just getting somehow safely through the days,
Not even groping for another hand,
Not even wondering why it all was planned,
Eyes to the ground unseeking for the light,
Soul never aching for a wild-winged flight,
Please, keep me eager just to do my share.
God—let me be aware.

God—let me be aware.
Stab my soul fiercely with other's pain,
Let me walk seeing horror and stand,
Let my hands, groping, find other hands,
Give me the heart that divines, understands,
Give me the courage, wounded, to fight,
Flood me with knowledge, drench me in light,
Please, keep me eager just to do my share.
God—let me be aware. —Miriam Teichner

NEW JAGDISPUR CHURCH BUILDING

When we came to Basna in January 1941, one of the first necessities that we could see was the need of a new and large church building. The first Sunday when we attended church the house was far overcrowded—many of the middle school boys had to sit on the platform. Beside this building being too small we could see that the walls were badly riddled by white ants—that ever-present pest in India.

We found that even then well developed plans were under way by which a new building should be built the next year. By now that "next year" has come and nearly gone. With it has come the new church located very near the site of the old church house and on church owned land.

The plan of the building is almost that of a Capitol T. As it now stands only the main part is constructed. The reason for planning it with those two wings is because the Jagdishpur congregation is a growing one. The main part of the church is now sufficient to house the congregation but we are looking forward to a time when they will need a larger house of worship. All the necessary arrangements have been made in the construction of the walls by which it will be possible to attach the wings when the time comes to do so.

The new church house faces the west. The inside of the church is very simple. The floor is a plain earth floor. We hope soon to be able to put in a cement floor. The platform is a two-level platform. The first level which is 9 inches high extends across the entire width of the front end of the building. The second level is 18 inches high and about twelve feet long and is situated in the middle of the front. This second level, of course, is for the pulpit and will be used only for worship services while the first level is for the rendering of Christmas programs, etc. Just back of the platform—built onto the east end of the building is a little room which will serve as the pastor's study.

I can speak for all Indian members, as well as for all missionary members of that congregation when I say that we are very thankful to God and to you who contributed so generously to making this church building possible.

The other building need which has been realized this year is that of a house for an Indian doctor. I cannot go into detail about this. Suffice it to say that it is a small three roomed house with two bathrooms and a kitchen unit, just the right kind of a house for an Indian doctor and his family. So here again we wish to express our appreciation to God and to all of you who made contributions. —H. R.

Divine Love

"The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." Gal. 5:2.

Love is that which sees something in you after other eyes interested have grown dim with the strain, and blinded by the obstacles.

Love is that which finds the precious after all others have grown weary of searching.

Love is that which holds on after others have let you go, and still follows you after you have succeeded in tearing yourself away.

Love is that which answers the discordant for the hundredth time with the same harmony, only with more sweetness than at the first.

Love is that which gives more after it seems to have emptied all treasures and exhausted all resources.

Love is that which in correcting encourages, in reproving gives hope.

Love is that which, though superior to all, graces the occasion by humble serving.

Love is that which sings to the key, and keeps the harmony when all others are discordant. Love is that which, being reproved, buffeted and contradicted, comes back with an armful of flowers and fragrance that would grace a rose.

Love is that which being testified against, puts the best construction on the action of its opponent.

Love is that which gives its possessor a disposition that makes him pleasant and delightful to live with.

Love is that which though being crucified prays, "Father, forgive them."

Love is that which lifts you and makes you feel worthy of its companionship.

Love is the secret cause of all joy, peace and happiness, and of life itself.

Love is not known by any certain song it sings, or any particular garb it wears, but it is revealed and manifested in every ramification of life, and leaves its footprints on every road it traverses.

"Love suffereth long, and is kind; love envieth not; love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked; but rejoiceth in the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Love never faileth." I Cor. 14:4-8.

QUARTERLY REPORT OF THE ALBERTA COMMUNITY CHURCH

Portland, Oregon

April 1, to July 1, 1942

This report concludes the second year of our service in this field. The Lord has been very gracious unto us. We enjoy our work and have had many rich experiences in Him. It is through His Grace that we can submit another favorable report. Our church attendance and financial response are indeed gratifying, as you will see on a separate sheet. The following are some of the special activities that have taken place during the past quarter.

April 5—Easter Sunday. The Easter season this year brought with it its usual activities and blessings. Three young people upon their confession of faith and after a period of instruction were baptized and received into our church membership. In the evening the choir presented a song-story cantata, "From the Palms to the Lilies." It was a very impressive service.

May 3-10—National Christian Family Week. Our continued emphasis has been, "Christ in the Home." There is a great need for family altars and the open Bible. This, I believe, is one of the most important phases of religious education. We are happy to report that several new families are attending our church services and that there is a growing interest in family fellowship and devotions among our people. During this week we had an "Old-Fashioned Family Supper" in our church basement on Wednesday evening.

June 15-29—Daily Vacation Bible School. Mrs. Hilding Anderson and seven other ladies of our church conducted a two-week school. A total enrollment of seventy-four children responded to their fine efforts which was quite an increase over last year. The school was conducted with marked orderliness and effective Bible teaching. At the close a very fine program was presented to a packed house of parents and friends the result of which has been noticed in our Sunday School attendance. In the basement were tables loaded with an unusually fine display of hand-craft articles which the children had made. I feel that our ladies are to be commended, first for their willingness to give of their time, for all were house-wives, and secondly, for the effectiveness in which they accomplished this fine work. May God richly bless their efforts.

July 5—Business Meeting At Vernon Park. It seems as though it has become a custom to have a pot-luck dinner, whenever we have a business meeting in our church. We feel more congenial and are in better spirits after having enjoyed a good dinner which our ladies provide for us at such occasions. At this meeting which was held at a near-by park we heard reports from the various officers, attended to several business matters, and had an election to fill several vacancies. All of the reports were very encouraging for the first six months of this year. Please note that our church treasurer has transferred $145.00 to our church building fund and that he has sent over $180.00 to various conference projects. Our Sunday School and the Women's Missionary Society have also made several contributions to the Emergency Relief Fund.

Gratefully yours in His Service, I am

REV. AND MRS. WELTY AT ALTOONA

Rev. and Mr. Delbert E. Welty, Wayland, Iowa, will be the leaders in the Memorial Mennonite Church Altoona, Pa., beginning with October 1st. Their new address will be 2204-11th Avenue, Altoona, Pa.

The Home Mission board kindly asks the prayers of all mission friends for these new workers and also for the church.

FIELD BROADENS

Miss Elsa E. Grantland, Paint Rock, North Carolina, reports of her work. She says: "Five new public schools have opened doors for Bible teaching, in addition to the two of last year, making seven public schools and two Sunday Schools. I thank Him for permitting me to go into these five new schools with the Bible. This will permit me to reach 375 pupils and eleven teachers each week."

She reports further that she must travel 150 miles each week to get to all her appointments. Let us pray that the Lord would so lead it that she need not interrupt the work on account of gas or tire shortage. After all, to save souls is the most important task on earth, and that is Miss Grantland's endeavor. In her letter she reports of three teen-age girls where she taught Bible last year in the schools that were born again recently. Praise the Lord for these new converts. They need your prayers that they might remain faithful.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

The high cost of modern funerals adds undue fear and worry to the grief that naturally accompanies death in a family. Untold numbers of bereaved families have struggled for years with unnecessarily heavy debts incurred at a time when members of the grief stricken family were in no mood to wrangle over financial matters. All too often funeral directors have taken unfair advantage of such a situation and sold a funeral service way beyond the bereaved family's ability to pay.

Sense of Values

The modern practice of having expensive funerals is simply one more reflection of our materialistic standards of value. We have measured success in life so much by the dollar sign and the externals of this world, that when we come to express our final respects to our departed ones we simply carry our materialistic standards to their logical conclusion. We think we are honoring the dead by buying the most expensive casket, the most elaborate funeral service, and the most conspicious tomb stones we can possibly afford. Why do we do it when we believe in the spiritual life in the world to come? Why do we do it and at the same time profess to believe in a genuine life of Christian simplicity? The answer, I believe, lies in our misguided sense of values. As in many other avenues of our lives, we have blindly followed the customs of the secular world.

Why Not Organize?

In times past Mennonites have organized mutual aid societies to meet a great variety of their needs: life insurance, fire and storm protection, shipping and stock breeding societies, hospitals, old folks homes, creameries and grain elevators. Why not organize a mutual burial society? Our Canadian Mennonites have seven such societies at present. Our Amish brethren engage their own casket maker and pay for embalming service but other than this have no expense. Their services are unceremoniously simple.

Others Have Done It

In the middle west, chiefly among Scandinavians, there are more than twenty-five burial associations. The more than 7000 member families save from one third to one half of funeral costs. Funerals for which private undertakers charged from $500 to $700 were supplied cooperatively for an average cost of $212. In a recent year nine burial societies in Minnesota handled 231 funerals at an average cost of $186. Mennonites are settled compactly by communities and could easily undertake such a venture. Positive action in this area would not only result in reducing exorbitant funeral costs, but it would enable Mennonites to determine more readily the type of service which would express and reflect our philosophy of simplicity and the spiritual values of life.

"The Kingdom of Heaven is at Hand"

Editor:

I am glad that you spoke to us on "Love" and "Tolerance." Surely this is an important matter to Christians who are "waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, who shall also confirm you unto the end, that ye may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ."

. . . Personal concern over this problem and over how I might help others causes me to welcome your help in getting at the "root problem." I agree that it "is to get man to yield himself to God."

Meditation on the subject brings to light that God is not satisfied with anything less than "righteousness hallowed by love." This falling away from love is a sign of the times. I know that the faith of our fathers included concern over two things, especially, which are lacking today in any faith which substitutes tolerance for love. When they were tempted by worldly things, their first thought was "what would the neighbors think?" and their next thought was "What if the end of the world would come and find me so doing?"

When I read the book of Job I never fail to see how angry God was over the way Job's friends tolerated His servant Job. Here is our perfect example of how tolerance can not "help live" as only love can do. Their tolerance did "degenerate into carelessness about right and wrong." Job needed help, but they just sat there and argued.

But they didn't have God-fearing Job deceived a bit, and he was right when he said, "To him that is afflicted pity should be showed from his friend, but he forsaketh the fear of the Almighty."

If we have been taught the Jesus way, we know a better way. Christ's good neighbor policy consists of doing good to all for the joy that is in it from doing God's will.

Love makes the time pass quickly. Love, not tolerance, makes us love His glorious appearing, and love makes us wish and hope that He will indeed come quickly.

Two days from now, September 10th, is our twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. These years have passed almost too quickly. The coming years will also pass quickly. Will you pray for us that they will not pass too quickly leaving us "unprofitable servants?"

CPS Camps

Camps Begin Fall Educational Program

With the approach of autumn, camps are beginning the first quarter of their "academic year" by setting a revised educational program into action. In the new program the Core Course on Mennonite history and principles will be offered in one quarter which consists of a three months' period. Other basic courses are Bible Study and First Aid.

Depending on campees' desires and available teachers, the various camps will offer courses in crafts, music, foreign languages, public speaking, agriculture, typing, bookkeeping, etc. Teachers will be supplied largely from the camp staff and also from within the camp groups themselves.

"Welfare" Visits to Campees

Bro. Amos Horst, Chairman of the Advisory Committee of the eastern camps and Bro. M. C. Lehman, Assistant General Director, recently paid a visit to the Beltsville, Md. camp which is engaged in work for the Federal Research Center. This camp is cooperatively administered by Quakers, Brethren, and Mennonites. The 15 Mennonite boys were interviewed and with the help of Brethren Horst and Lehman arrangements were made for their religious life and educational activities.

On Sunday afternoon, September 20, Bro. M. C. Lehman plans to meet with the 20 Mennonite boys who are on detached farm service in Wisconsin. The meeting will take place at Beaver Dam and will be an occasion for the boys, scattered on farms over Dodge County, to enjoy a get-together.

Canadian Civilian Service News

A committee has been appointed to take care of the work involved in providing for the dependents of young Mennonite men in the Canadian C.O. camps. . .

Bro. E. J. Swalm has been appointed to tour civilian camps in western Canada in a spiritual ministry to the boys. Bro. Harold Sherk is serving in the same capacity in eastern Canada. . .

The brethren who have been sent to England for fire-fighting work are Clayton Schantz of Preston, Ontario, and Cecil Cressman of Kitchener, Ontario.

Camp Briefs

A car of 39 boys from Fort Collins and Colorado Springs camps (both in Colorado) left for Belton, Montana on September 15. On September 22 two cars of 39 boys each will entrain at Chicago. These cars will be filled by boys from eastern and mid-western camps. . .

Bro. Walter Unrau from Placerville, California, camp is being transferred to the Belton, Montana, camp where he will serve as business manager. . . . .

Bro. Jesse Harder will be transferred from Colorado Springs to Belton, Montana, and will assume the work of educational director. . .

As of September 10, 1942, a total of 4,196 men were in the 45 C. P. S. camps which are administered by the four agencies: Quaker, Mennonite, Brethren and Catholic. 1,627 of this total were Mennonites.

Campee Passes Away

On September 3 Curt Dyck of Corn, Oklahoma, and campee at Colorado Springs camp, passed away after a period of illness caused by a brain tumor.

A member of the Mennonite Brethren Church, Bro. Dyck entered camp on March 10, 1942. A memorial service was held in the camp on the morning after the body was shipped to Oklahoma. Bro. Dyck's death is the first one to occur in our Mennonite camps.

New Camp Papers

Recently three new camp papers have made their appearance.

The Howard Nursery Views published by C. P. S. camp No. 40 at Howard, Pa., is a bi-weekly paper and has a subscription price of $1.00 per year.

Poudre-Canon News is the camp paper of the Fort Collins, Colorado, Camp No. 33. It is published bi-monthly and costs $.75 per year.

Weeping Water News Drops is published by Weeping Water, Nebraska Camp No. 25, and is available to subscribers at $.50 per year.

Friends of the camp program who have special reasons to be interested in any of these camps will want to subscribe for the respective papers.

The New Camp in Belton, Montana

On September 15 a carload of 38 boys will leave Colorado Springs and Fort Collins camps for Belton, Montana. They will be followed a few days later by cars with boys from mid-western and eastern camps. The camp will engage in fire-fighting and reforestation.

Bro. Wilbert Nafziger of Harper, Kansas, and former relief worker in Spain, will serve as camp director and Sister Nafziger will fill the place of camp matron and nurse. This camp is the first of several camps to be opened within a few months in the western part of the country.

Camp Briefs

Bro. Lloyd Hess, campee, has been appointed assistant and educational director at the Henry camp in Illinois. . .

Bro. Orin Beechy, campee, is being transferred from Medaryville, Indiana, to the Marietta, Ohio, camp where he will be assistant and educational director. . .

On August 28 the Denison, Iowa, camp passed its first anniversary.

PEACE SECTION NOTES

Civilian Government Bonds

Quite a few of our people seem to be misinformed concerning the service charge on Civilian Bonds. A service fee is charged by the Fiscal Agent, (Provident Trust Company) at the rate of $1.00 for each subscription of bonds for each individual subscriber. This does not mean $1.00 for each bond, unless each bond is registered in a different name.

For example, if John Doe wishes to subscribe to a $500 bond for himself, he should forward $500 for the purchase of the bond plus $1.00 service charge. Likewise, if John Doe wishes to subscribe to $250 of Bonds (for which he will receive three(3) bonds; one at $50 and two at $100), he should forward $250 for the purchase of the bonds plus $1.00 service charge, not $3.00. Quite a number of orders have come in with remittance of service charge on the basis of $1.00 per bond rather than $1.00 per subscription order. This necessitates the return of the extra fees by the Provident Trust Company, making added work and expense.

Subscriptions received at the offices of the Provident Trust Company up to September 11 from our M. C. C. constituency, totaled $76,160.

Information available from the Treasury Department indicates that it will be two or three weeks before a suitable issue of bonds will be available to which our funds can be subscribed.

Occupational Questionnaire

A survey is being currently made of man power available in certain fields of skilled labor. In the questionnaries being circulated, there is nothing to compromise our Christian position. It is simply a survey of certain skills and professions.

In at least one section of which we know the next step has been taken, vix., "Application for Employment" have gone out. Our church leaders were alert and immediately investigated the purposes and implications of this "Application." In the resulting correspondence and contacts John J. Carson, Director of the U. S. Employment Service, was finally reached personally. The position of the Conscientious Objector was most courteously considered.

According to his statement, the purpose is to determine the availability for employment of these persons filling out the questionnaries who indicate qualification for certain occupations. He says that there is no intention of persuading C. O.'s to engage in work which conflicts with their principles.

He further grants to C. O.'s the privilege, when filling out the "Application for Employment" or any questionnaire which they may receive from the U. S. Employment Service, to indicate thot they are not available for employment in any activity which contributes to the war effort. He concludes that this procedure will enable the Employment Service to obtain an idea of the pattern of the total available man power without infringing on the rights of anyone.

DO YOU "JUST BELONG"?

By R. S. Burkholder

Are you a faithful church member,
  The kind that's noble and strong?
Or are you satisfied to be,
  The kind that "just belong?"

Are you a hypocrite in Church,
  Do most anything that's wrong?
The day will come when you will find
  'Twas not enough to "just belong."

Be honest, faithful, and sincere.
  Be nice, and good as you appear.
Sin you may hide from man part time,
  But ne'er from God, the One divine.

Treasure in your heart this little song;
  "A tree's not known by the label it wears,
But by the fruit which it does bear."
  Others soon know if you "just belong."

Do you take an active part
  To help God's work along?
Or are you really pleased to be
  Like those who "just belong?"

Go to church, sincere and brave,
  And help with heart and hand.
To be a member does not save;
  You must obey our Lord's command.

If a member you are and fail to be true,
  Spurning the right instead of the wrong;
When life's is o'er 'twill be said of you,
  There is no hope; you "just belonged."

Beware, my friend! There's an eternal day;
  If you would join the heavenly throng,
Be what you profess to be, and say
  It's not enough to "just belong."

Think it over, brother, sister,
  You well know the right from wrong.
Are you on the way to heaven,
  Or where all hypocrites belong?

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Gerald Stucky, New York City, N. Y.

OCTOBER 1—Love is......never selfish, I Cor. 13: 4-5, (Moffatt).

"Love is intangible, but unexpressed soon dies. Love grows when a sacrifice is made, a service rendered, or a gift presented. Love delights in expressing itself toward the object of affection. Have you ever wondered why deeply religious people often give so freely? Their religion may be intangible, but the expression of it is far from intangible. Time, service, and money are to them not something to be selfishly conserved and spent upon personal considerations, but to be used for others as God makes the way plain. The tangible expression of religion in channels of worth-while God-directed activity lifts religion out of the realm of meaningless feelings into the realm of stimulating and satisfying adventure." —Selected.

OCTOBER 2—"......greater is he that is in you, than he that is in the world." I John 4:4b.

Everyone wants security. Security is needed for happiness, success, mental and social stability, and for all adjustments in life. To be secure is to have a feeling of ease, of rest, and of confidence in the situations in which we find ourselves. Unfortunately the world is being traversed by multitudes who are insecure, for Isaiah's statement is still true, ". . . the wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt. There is no peace, saith my God to the wicked." What a contrast is the security and peace that we have in Christ. He is greater than all of life's problems, temptations, sins—yea greater than he that is in the world. His grace is sufficient for us.

OCTOBER 3—"If we confess our sins," I John 1:9.

A covered sin is a festering wound which effectively saps the blessing of God out of an individual's life. It is a poison which increasingly permeates not only our spiritual life, but frequently also radically effects our mental and physical life. It is the termite which eats the joy out of the Christian experience and is the hidden rock which dulls the edge of a living, vital testimony for Christ. On the contrary, a sin confessed, i. e., uncovered, is the Eternal's road which leads to forgiveness and cleansing. Confession of our sins restores our fellowship with the Father and repairs the communication lines which sin had broken. This is the avenue which leads from darkness unto light, from defeat into glorious victory.

OCTOBER 4—"I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day," Rev. 1:10a.

Geographically separated from his beloved friends, and generally isolated from the world, St. John, as was his habit, turned the thoughts of his heart heavenward. And as he was in the Spirit, he was met by God, escorted to the throne of heaven, and shown the unspeakable beauties of the splendor of the Lord and of his Christ. And it was on the Lord's Day. It was the habit of the early apostles to set aside this day in special honor and commemoration of their Lord. The failure of the twentieth century Christian to be in the Spirit on the Lord's day has hindered the Lord in showing him the depths of the riches of God. "This is the day the Lord hath made, let us rejoice therein and be glad."

OCTOBER 5—"And he (i. e., Zacchaeus) . . climbed up into a sycamore tree to see him:" Luke 19:4.

Grandstand Religion! From the grandstand it is easy to observe, to praise, and to criticize. From that vantage point one can analyze, discuss, and reveal the psychological maladjustments of the men and women in the field of religious battle—but one can never really understand the meaning of life, the heartaches and needs of the masses, the strength of identity, the sorrow of defeat and the great joy of victory until he comes out of the grandstand and becomes one with the masses below who are living life and religion experientially. When Zacchaeus came down out of the tree, he immediately was identified with Jesus, he was filled with Joy, his life was transformed, and he was at peace with God and man.

OCTOBER 6—"Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God:" I John 3:1a.

A child of the king—with all the privileges, opportunities and responsibilities pertaining thereto! What an inestimable honor we have been granted in our adoption into the first family of the universe. No longer are we orphans adrift on the sea of life without home, parent, or family—rather we have a home which is heaven, a Father who is God, and a host of brothers and sisters in Christ Jesus. But what a responsibility has become ours. As a child of the King, we must live as a prince; we must live the life which is becoming of a child of so great a King. Such a life brings blessings untold. "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is."

OCTOBER 7—"Son, thou art ever with me, and all that I have is thine." Luke 15:31.

"What riches God has for us if He could only trust us with them! It must be very heartbreaking to Him to long to bless us, His children, and realize that He just can't do it. We have not yet grown up spiritually—so the fulness of His power, which raised Christ, must be in large measure withheld. The words which the father in the parable of the Prodigal Son spoke have been with me this winter: "son, thou art ever with me and ALL that I have is THINE." They are worth pondering."—E. C.

The Oregon Retreat was held from August 14 to 16 at Turner, Oregon. The theme of the retreat was "Christ for the Crisis" based on Col. 2:6, 7. We will accept these words as a guide in our Christian life if we are firmly rooted in Christ. If we are built up in Him we will be able to meet the crisis in our life and in the present day.

Mrs. Paul Wenger taught the class that discussed the vital problems that young people face in the present world with its chaos. One question was, "Why doesn't the Church do something about the present Crisis?" The answer was, "So many of the churches have lost their testimony by disbanding their prayer meetings which are the life and powerhouse of the Church."

Rev. Paul Wenger taught the class on "The Purpose of the Church." Two main purposes were given: following Christ and witnessing.

Miss Etta Davis taught the high school group. Her subject was "Child Evangelism."

Sunday afternoon a good, old-fashioned Saengerfest, directed by Rev. Homer Leisy, was held. Sunday evening the retreat was closed by a short talk by each of the instructors. "Blest Be the Tie" was sung and Psalm 19:14 repeated.

Rev. D. J. Unruh of Pratum was the dean, and Rev. Arnold Regier of Portland was recreational director. There were 46 young people in attendance at the beginning of the retreat and 108 at the close Sunday evening.

Reedley, California

On July 31 three carloads of the Reedley young people went to the Wish-iah Sanitarium at Aubery to give a short program for patients. From there they drove to the C. P. S. Camp at North Fork where they joined with the campees in a supper-sing after supper in camp. The boys had a taste of camp life by spending the night in the dormitories, while the girls went on to Bass Lake and stayed in Lelia Galle's cabin. On the way home Sunday afternoon, the group stopped at a C. P. S. "spike" camp and gave a program for the boys there.. They returned home in time to see the pictures shown by Dr. and Mrs. P. A. Penner at the evening church service.

After the evening services August 30, the Reedley Church had a short program to give expression of appreciation for Rev. Arthur Wenger's work among them and wishes for God's blessing upon him as he begins his work as pastor of the Shafter, California, church.

JANEY'S COMPOSITION

by Elaine H. Sommers

Wait up, Janey," cried Nola as she rushed down the hall with the "Complete History of the United States" under her arm.

"Why, hello, Nola! If I'm late I guess I won't be the only one," laughed Janey. "Are you ready for that oral examination?"

"Oh," groaned Nola, "why do you have to bring that up? I can't even remember the date for the War of 1812." Both of the girls laughed.

They made quite a contrast as they walked down the hall. Janey was dressed in the simple garb of the Mennonite people,—her chestnut-colored braids wound neatly around her head and her face always seeming rather thoughtful and serious. Nola, on the other hand, dressed like a modern co-ed with blond curls flying in every direction could hardly be serious a moment. Yet these two girls were friends in spite of their many differences, for Janey in patterning her life after the life of the Great Friend realized that the first step in leading a person to Christ is to be her friend.

"Here we are," announced Janey, opening the door, "Miss Johnson's history room."

"Ding-ding-ding," rang the bell.

"Whew," whispered Nola as she slipped into her chair on the second row, "that's what I call a close shave, another minute and we would have gone to the office for a tardy slip."

"Please stop this talking," Miss Johnson tapped on her desk with her pencil. "The bell has rung." She cleared her throat. "Now for our lesson. Who can explain to us the provisions and significance of the Compromise of 1850? Jane Miller."

As usual, Janey knew all the answers and outshone her classmates (even Jack Wilson) in the oral examination. "It's really a pleasure to have her in class," thought Miss Johnson, but aloud she said, "Now your assignment for tomorrow. Although we are now studying an earlier period in the history of our country, we as a history class are also very much interested in present-day events. So, for tomorrow, I am asking each one of you to write a composition entitled, "How

I Personally Can Aid in This War Against Japan and the Axis Powers."

Janey stared out of the window. Just then the bell rang and the students forgot about books for a minute as they scrambled off to third period classes. But Janey didn't forget. In fact she thought of that history assignment throughout the remaining part of the day. She was still thinking about it when school closed.

"Please stop off at my house for a little while," Begged Nola as the girls walked home from school. "Peggy and Barbara are stopping, and we want you, too. Don't we, girls?"

"Yes indeed!"

"Oh, please Janey!"

"We certainly do!" rang the chorus of school-girl voices, for all of the girls liked Jane. She had such winning ways and was so pleasant and thoughtful.

"I'd love to," smiled Janey, "but I really must go home and help Mother. Bye! I'll see you all tomorrow." They had reached the end of the block and the girls parted.

"Why did I say that?" thought Janey. It won't be time to start supper for another hour yet. Well, I couldn't tell them how much I've been thinking about that history composition. After all, they just wouldn't understand." Jane stared at the sidewalk and walked on mechanically, oblivious to her surroundings. "It isn't that I don't believe in the Biblical principle of nonresistance. No indeed! I believe that war is wrong and that true Christians can take no part in it at all. It is directly opposed to the teachings of the Master. Yes, I believe that with all my heart! Neither do I want to be disloyal to the church. It's just that this is no time to be indiscreet. After all, there is no sense in subjecting my belief to unnecessary ridicule. Let's see," she mused, "about my composition. Of course, I won't say I'm for the war, but I don't have to say I'm against it either. I'll just make some very general statements like 'Today our country needs people of courage. I can be courageous and thus aid my country.' Oh, I'll fix out some sort of a composition all right even if. . . ."

"A penny for your thoughts, Janey."

Janey jumped. "Jack Wilson! You startled me."

"Do you realize you walked right out in front of Mr. Brown's car? He actually had to stop until you got across the street!"

Janey blushed. She was rather confused as she answered, "I—I was just thinking."

"About what, Jane?"

Jack had always liked Janey. All through high school they had been rivals for the highest test grades. "You can't tell by looking at her what is going on back of those big brown eyes. She almost makes me want to become a fellow of Christ, too," thought Jack.

"Come on, Janey, fess up. What were you thinking about?"

"If you must know, Jack, I was thinking about that composition we are to have for history tomorrow."

"I don't hope you are going to hold to that silly, impractical Mennonite idea of turning the other cheek."

"But it isn't silly or impractical or—" burst out Jane.

Jack wouldn't be interrupted. "Really, Jane. As intelligent as you are, you don't have to hold to that antique idea just because your father and mother and grandparents believe it. This is the twentieth century! Don't defend such a thing just because you are a Mennonite. Think for yourself!"

"Oh, but Jack." Jane's voice was low and muscial. The words tumbled out quickly the way they always did when she was excited. "Nonresistance isn't just something the Mennonite people invented. It is a teaching of Jesus Christ. I don't believe in it just because my ancestors have always believed it. To me it is a personal thing. I want my whole life to show forth the teachings of Jesus, and didn't Jesus say, 'Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you?' "

Jane explained fully just what the Bible itself teaches on this subject.

The two walked on in silence for some time. It was Jack who finally spoke. "Well, here's the Wilson residence. Good-by, Jane. I just want to tell you that this little talk has given me a different slant on the subject."

Jane held her head high as she walked on home briskly, for her mind was made up.

The next morning she handed Miss Johnson her composition. In it she had stated frankly, firmly, and concisely, her convictions on war.

"You may use this period as a study period. I will read your compositions and hand them back to you tomorrow. I would advise you to make use of this time." Miss Johnson directed the last line to several boys on the back row who were at that moment throwing pins at the globe to see which one could hit the North Pole.

She had graded exactly fourteen papers when she came to Janey's. "Jane Miller, may I see you after class?"

After the bell had rung, Janey lingered on behind. She went up to the desk. "You wanted to see me, Miss Johnson?"

"About your composition, Jane," she smiled. "I can't agree with you in your belief but I certainly admire your courage in stating it at a time like this. Perhaps you would tell me more about your church sometime. I'm very anxious to know more about it.”

“I’d love to, Miss Johnson.” Jane’s voice was full of enthusiasm.

As Janey walked out of the history room, she felt very much ashamed of the composition she had intended to write. She would never again miss an opportunity to witness for the Lord. This might be a chance to lead Miss Johnson to Christ.

“What if I had done it?” she said half to herself and half aloud.

“Done what, Janey dear?”

“Oh, hello, Nola!”

LOYALTY TO CHRIST

Mark 2:14-17, John 6:66-69, Phil. 3:7-11

“Loyalty” is an honorable word, and the spirit and conduct for which it stands are held in high regard. Sometimes individuals, organizations, and even governments have demanded loyalty to unworthy purposes. Loyalty has been demanded when it resulted in injury to personality, even in the commission of moral wrong. The loyalty which Jesus asks of us is on a higher level. His demands which are wide in scope are yet very reasonable and bring to us unsurpassed satisfaction.

Loyalty and Obedience, Mark 2:14-17

Loyalty to Christ involves obedience to His commands and pre-supposes a desire to know them. When He said to Levi—Matthew—“follow me,” loyalty required his leaving a quite profitable business and to go forth to a very uncertain future. The call of Levi may appear to have been sudden, and his prompt acceptance may appear to have been hasty. He must have heard of Jesus and his teachings before this meeting. Jesus was boldly challenging the social prejudices of his day, when He called a tax-collector to be a disciple. Levi was sincere in his loyal response. He honored Christ before his friends—“publicans and sinners”—in making a feast in his house to which he invited Jesus (vs. 15). He wanted his friends to meet and hear Him. These irreligious people had never heard Jesus speak. The critics were there trying to discredit Him (vs. 16). He did no wrong. He was violating their man-made traditions. These self-righteous critics considered themselves whole. Jesus told them that His mission was to those who were morally and spiritually sick and needed Him. He ate with them that He might help them. Loyalty to Christ demands of us that we seek to bring others into touch with Christ, invite the non-church-goers into the church.

Loyalty When Many Forsake Christ, John 6:6-69

A crisis had come in Jesus’ ministry. A period of rejection set in. Jesus spoke of Himself as the “bread of life” and demanded seemingly hard requirements (vss. 60, 61) which gave offense to many. They lost courage and they “went back.” They were not ready for all that was involved in loyal discipleship. Christ’s claims and demands still offend many. They do not believe that He was God’s Son. They do not believe that his death was an atonement for sin. They do not believe in his miracles as recorded in the Gospels. They WILL NOT trust Him for their salvation.

Peter gave three reasons for their continued loyalty to Jesus. 1. No other teacher could mean to them what He had meant. 2. His words had quickened them into new life, even eternal life—a present possession of the believer—and they believed his words. 3. They were sure that He was the Messiah. Loyalty requires that we maintain our faith and walk with Him, no matter what others may do. Neither will we hesitate to let others know where we stand.

Loyalty and Self-Sacrifice, Phil. 3:7-11

In this marvelous lesson passage Paul reveals his complete devotion and loyalty to Christ which has entailed great sacrifices. He had prided himself in his zealous Judaism and his former prospects (vss. 5, 6). He gave up all these for Christ. He no longer trusted in them as they meant so little to him now in comparison with Christ. His life of comparative ease was changed to a life of toil. He wrote this letter while a prisoner in Rome. He has no regrets. He trusts only in Christ with whom he maintains a close intimacy. Christ means everything to him now. He has sacrificed all that he might labor for Christ who is now the center of his life, the object of his trust, the fulfillment of his hope (vss. 8, 9). Eternal fellowship with Christ in the world to come was now the goal of his desire. He was eager to experience the power of the risen Christ in his life now—“victory over the flesh, the assurance of immorality, and a quickening of the whole moral and spirtual being.” (Jas. A. Robertson)

The story of Christianity is the story of loyal sacrifice under persecution. We are shaped by the objects of our adoration; we become like that which we admire.

How may we reveal our loyalty to Christ in our daily work?

How will a really loyal Christian feel and act toward the “publicans and sinners?”

How much am I willing to sacrifice for Christ?

Civilian Public Service Camp No. 25

Weeping Water, Nebraska

By Allen Stehman

Work Program

Our work program consists of soil conservation. This program is supervised by the camp superintendent and his staff, employed by the government. Five days a week and a half day on Saturday, covered trucks take the crews of men out to their respective places of work for the purpose of conserving moisture and keeping soil from washing away. Building terraces on steeply sloped hillsides, widening and sloping water channels in fields to slow down the water so it can't carry so much soil, seeding the channels and slopes, changing fences and building fences around fields which involves grubbing of trees and cutting hedges, building diversion ditches to control the flow of water, building contour lines on hillsides to preserve moisture and to keep the soil from washing, and planting of trees for wind breaks and along drainage areas are the projects which enable the farmers to do better farming. In one emergency case thus far, in which a tornado frolicked and devastated an area eight miles from the camp, one week of work was directed to clean up in that area.

This is the work of the project men, while thirty-four of the campees have their work on the camp working as janitors, kitchen force, office force, carpenters, shop men, infirmary attendant and night watchman.

Education

All work and no play might make us dull boys, but with the educational, recreational, and religious activities available, we have no time for idleness. Our educational program offers us a variety of subjects; many avail themselves of these opportunities. The following courses have been offered, some of which are completed: "First Aid" (Standard Course), "Truck and Tractor Driving," "Soil Conservation" and "Foreman Training." The following classes have just started or will soon begin: "Core Course" (Mennonites and their Heritage), "Rug Weaving," a hobby of many fellows, which others are interested in learning, "First Aid" (another section of the Standard Course), "Photography," "Wood-Work," "Forest Fire Fighting" and "Band." During the winter months more classes requiring specific study will be offered as then the nights will seem longer and the weather will be more inducive to class work. Probably some high school and college credit courses will be scheduled. With these opportunities at hand to supplement our work project, we can broaden our program to the benefit of each campee.

Recreation

Does recreation find a place in our program? Definitely, yes. Letter writing finds itself at the top of this list. Some, however, may wish to consider it as part of the work program. The enjoyment and satisfaction of receiving mail is so great that if the writing of letters may not be called recreation, then surely the receiving of letters is re-creating our minds. In our Recreation Hall are three ping-pong tables. The buzz of bouncing balls with players trying to get nearer to the top in the Perpetual Ping-Pong Tournament, may be heard in the evenings. The tables are kept in constant use. Between Dorm 4 and Dorm 5 are two sets of stakes for horseshoe. Competition is keen, and interest runs high with one tournament having been played and another progressing. A sport which involves many, being played several nights per week including Saturday evening, is that of softball. We have had some exciting games such as Kansas vs. Illinois, Kansas vs. Non-Illinois, Single vs. Married Men, Young Men vs. Older Men and Overhead vs. Project Men. One Dorm Tournament has been completed. Now games being started are badmington, croquet, volley ball, and tennis.

Religious Life

Why are we in a camp like this? Yes, we are C. O.'s but primarily we are Christians who try to live the life as exemplified by the Master in the New Testament and we feel that we could not do so by taking part in militarism. The religious activities are a vital factor of our camp life. On Sunday morning we meet in the dining hall—a chapel is under construction in the library building—at 9 o'clock for our worship service. Our Camp Director, Erwin C. Goering, is in charge of the church service. Often times we have visiting ministers traveling in behalf of our camps who bring us the message. At 10 o'clock Sunday School, with a campee superintendent in charge, begins. We assemble into three classes for discussion of the lesson. In the evening we have some kind of Bible Service, sometimes a program with speakers, other times with a sermon by a visiting minister. On Wednesday night we have our weekly prayer meeting which shows a favorable attendance. The fellowship and blessings received from these prayer meetings are very vital to our spiritual life.

We have talent in music as shown by the two choruses and several quartets. Chorus "A" is composed of twenty-eight members and is directed by Mrs. Goering. Mr. Wiebe, Educational Director, directs Chorus "B". Special numbers by a chorus or quartet are features of most the religious programs.

Camp Staff

Necessary in maintaining our camp and keeping its order is our camp staff, which the Mennonite Central Committee has very efficiently chosen. Mr. and Mrs. Goering, our director and matron, came here from Kansas. Mr. Goering received his A. B. at Bethel College, Newton, Kansas. He taught three years in rural school and two years in the Walton High School at Walton, Kansas. In the summer of 1941 he attended Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Illinois. Mrs. Goering also is a graduate of Bethel College and acquired her Master of Music at Sherwood Music School in Chicago, Illinois. During the last four years she has been Music Instructor at Bethel College. Mr. Wiebe, educational director, has his A. B. from Greenville College, Greenville, Illinois, and his M. A. from the University of Illinois, Urbana, Illinois. After teaching one year at Tabor College, Hillsboro, Kansas, he served as principal at Baxter School near Pueblo, Colorado. He, with his wife and little daughter, Dotty Jean, live in one of the campus cottages while Mr. and Mrs. Goering live in the other. Serving as Business manager is Donald Gundy, campee, a talented ex-salesman, and graduate of Bluffton, College, Bluffton, Ohio. Keeping us well-nourished and fed is our dietician, Miss Selma Rupp, from Moundridge, Kansas, who for five years was the cook at Bethel College.

The attitude of the fellows toward the camp life varies some, but on the whole they can be commended for the spirit of cooperation and good quality of work. We are here at this type of camp by our choice. It is a school whereby we may teach the world through our lives what we find Christ taught through His, and, we, at the same time, are preparing ourselves for a better service to our God, our home, our churches, and our communities when our school here ends.

THE WAY OF PEACE

By R. W. Galle

The angels and multitudes praising God did not mean, "Peace of arms" nor peace from wars but an altogether different peace. Peace of men's hearts and souls. Peace of men's hearts from the terrible darkness that they had lived in, not knowing whither they were going without the light and saviour, Jesus Christ. And to bring peace of heart to all believers for the things yet to come upon the earth. Before Jesus left this world to join again the Heavenly Father He said in John chapter 14:27, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." There was no way to have this peace before Christ came. Not until He left this world and went back to glory and sent the comforter, the Holy Spirit, could all men know the truth and have peace of heart. As Christ's first coming brought and brings peace to men's hearts to as many as accepted Him as their personal Saviour and only then by the assurance that Jesus is mine. I John chapter 5:11-13 and John chapter 20:31. But these things are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Son of God; and know that you have eternal life. . . Only then will his second coming bring peace upon earth as men desire by His word. And He shall rule them with a rod of iron and on his thigh a name written King of Kings and Lord of Lords. Rev. chapter 19:11-16. Then men will war no more and they shall beat their swords into plow shares and their spears into pruning hooks. This will all happen in the beginning of the Millenium, the thousand years of peace. Christ Himself says there will be wars and rumors of wars in the twenty-fourth chapter of Matt. "And after all these things come to pass then shall the end be. That generation shall not pass away until these things be fulfilled." Never has there been a time like this in all the world. It is a sure sign that the end time is near because of all the false cults and creeds predicted: heresies, scepticism and radicalism in the world.

In contrast to the foregoing statement it is interesting to note what the Prophet Joel has to say for the latter day preparation for war. I feel assured that the time will come within the next generation to see these scriptures filled literally. Joel chapter 3:9-16. Some of these things are happening before our very eyes. Watch and pray for the time is at hand. This portrays the last great battle of decision, the battle of Armageddon. Are you going to be there? You need not be if you take part in the first resurrection, which takes place in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye. If you are looking for His second coming and trust in Him for all your soul's salvation you will escape the terrible wrath of God that will begin at the point of tribulation. And you will look down from Heaven with Him instead of at Him and you will not ask the rocks and the mountains to fall upon you and hide you from the wrath of the Lamb, as will those who will not be caught up in the air with Him by not believing that He is coming back again.

People say there will be a peace again. Oh yes; there may be a short peace again like always and there may not be. And if there is one, it will not be for long. Each new peace will be shorter and more falsifying, more dastardly, and more deceiving than the last. They have all been false and always will be until the Lord brings in His Righteous Kingdom. The heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked: who can know it? The sermon on the mount was not spoken to the world at large, although perhaps multitudes were listening as Christ taught His disciples the blesseds. And in not one instance does He emphasize one more than the other. They are all very important. The sermon on the mount has no message of salvation to the lost sinner. It is for confessing Christians only. Blessed are the peacemakers, including the world peacemakers. Thank God there are peacemakers to hold the world at bay at short intervals. We need peacemakers among Christians as much as any place and where they righteously belong to keep order and peace among ourselves first as Christians to whom the Sermon is expressively written. Christ knew the awful condition the world was in from the beginning on to His time. For all had sinned and come short of the Glory of God and lived in darkness, and had left God. The world was in chaos as today. There was no more peace among God's so-called people in general than there was in the heathen or Gentile heart. There will never be peace upon earth until Christ comes. There can be a perfect peace in the heart in the midst of all trials and tribulations when you let Christ really come into your heart. Anyone who cares to have this peace can have it by yielding himself completely to God's will. Not what man is trying to bring out by his Social Gospel but through Jesus Christ our Saviour. Then you will not fear for the things that are yet coming upon the earth.

Worth Protecting

"When man began his conquest of the world, he found most of the land covered with some species of vegetation, and in our country, at least, most of it was covered with virgin forests—great weather-scarred veterans covering the lush acres of America. In these forests man and beast could find concealment from enemies, refreshment from the sun, shelter from the cold, and protection from the storm. Food and shelter were offered to any creature in need, and there was enough for all.

"But man came with his herds and his plow. To his needs he added his luxuries, and to his luxuries he added his greed. The more the land prospered the more demand there was for land; consequently the trees had to give way to the saw and axe.

"Along the rich bottoms of the Ohio, walnut groves worth a king's ransom were burned at huge log rollings to make room for corn. Along the Shenandoah, virgin forests of poplar and white pine were burned to make way for cultivation. Along the banks of the Mississippi, millions of board feet of Heart Pine—a priceless heritage—were burned to clear land for cotton, cotton, and more cotton.

"The great tragedy, however, lies in the fact that we have not yet learned our lesson. Today we are still slashing, burning, and destroying with a mania bordering on the insane—if we consider the viewpoint of the future of America.

"Our utter indifference to forest conservation and use borders on the criminal. We as a nation have about one-twelfth of the world's population, using one-half of all the wood cut in the world. Will our citizens become awakened to the fact that our forests belong to the nation, and should be wisely used for the benefit of all; or will we continue our prodigal destruction until some day America is finally stripped of her trees? America has been the most blessed nation is history with available forest products. Are we capable of learning to conserve in time?"

The Loyalty of a Christian

I pledge undying allegiance
To GOD, the Father of all men, who is worthy of my highest loyalty,
whose sacred name I will always reverence,
whose holy will I endeavor to do;
To Jesus Christ, the Saviour of mankind,
who says, "Seek first the kingdom of God," pray, "thy kingdom come. . . on earth," forgive—take up thy cross and follow me;
To All members of God's one great family,
of every tongue,
in every clime,
on every shore,
I will seek to become a true brother,
a faithful friend,
a humble servant.

BETHESDA MENNONITE CHURCH

Henderson, Nebraska

Greetings to all in the name of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ with Rev. 12:11.

In the Mennonite published August 9th the editorial dealt with the subject "There Is Power In The Blood." How we rejoice in the truth of this message. In these days men's hearts are failing them for fear. Men over this whole earth are looking for power, power for victory, power to crush the enemy. When we think of the powerful artillery, the powerful air corps, and the powerful navies that have power to crush millions of lives but have no power over Satan, man's greatest foe, then our hearts are turned to the verse mentioned above, "for they overcame him (Satan) by the blood of the lamb and the word of their testimony." This power cannot be shaken by Satan. Thank God that each individual may experience this power in his own heart.

If we as C. O.'s who already have gone and as those who are still at home have been redeemed by the precious blood of Christ, then we cannot fail, not now nor in death because our power is in the blood. But if we reject or neglect redemption by the blood of Christ our failure is inevitable, both now and in death.

Thirty-six boys, who are members of our church, have gone to camps. Twenty-nine went as C.O.'s. Our prayer and support are following them. May God keep them in the hour of temptation.

We are also thankful that fifty-nine souls confessed Christ, received baptism, and were received as members this spring.

Our Sunday School suffered the loss of Mrs. P. H. Janzen, who was our S. S. superintendent for the basement classes and also leader of the senior ladies chorus, when the Lord took her home on August 13, 1942. —Alfred Peters, Corr.

SHOWERS OF BLESSING

In the midst of the rainy season which has just passed, God opened to us the reservoir of His love and sent us also spiritual showers of blessing that have left the soil of our hearts mellow and waiting before Him as a field, having received fresh waters, waits before the sun for new growth. There must be growth after rain.

Blessings from the heart of God cannot be pressed into a few brief paragraphs of print. When God in His mercy leans down to speak to us. When His Spirit rests upon the worshipers of a brief Sabbath hour, when He calls young lives to His service, when He speaks a benediction on a life that has served Him well, when He challenges to more earnest living, when He admonishes, forgives and saves—how can a page of print retell such wonders of His love?

This We Would Share:

Sunday morning, August 23, Rev. J. N. Smucker spoke to us on The Christian Life As A Way. Perhaps it was because we knew we would not hear him again so soon, that our hearts received the message well. The term by which the followers of Jesus were first characterized was that they were those "of the Way." Would to God that we were still pointed out as such—that our very living could be plainly seen by others to be the Way, an altogether different path than the usual one which the world was walking. Rev. Smucker pointed out to us that now, as never before, the world stood in need of the Way of Life for it walked the Way of Death. We are reminded of the admonition of Christ: "Let your light so shine before men that they may see."

Sunday evening, August 30, Sister Frieda Kaufman spoke to us on "These Forty Years," for this year marks the fortieth year of her service as a deaconess. The joy of her face, as she briefly sketched her life history, was witness to the satisfaction of heart that comes to those who freely give their lives as vessels to the divine Servant of God. Her heart overflowed with Thanksgiving for the goodness of God who had led her these forty years as He had led the Children of Israel, Duet. 8:2, 3: (1) that he might humble thee, (2) to prove thee, (3) that he might make thee know that man doth not live by bread only but by everything that proceedeth out of the mouth of Jehovah. Of her it is true: "Jehovah thy God hath blessed thee in all the work of thy hand; he hath known thy walking through this great wilderness; these forty years Jehovah thy God hath been with thee; thou hast lacked nothing." Duet 2:7.

Sunday morning, September 6, was the ordination service for Walter H. Regier who had received a call to serve the Friedensthal Church of Tampa, Kansas. Rev. J. E. Entz, Rev. A. Warkentin, and Rev. A. E. Kreider served at this occasion. Paul's words of advice to the youthful Timothy were also spoken to this candidate for the ministry in the Church of God. It was a holy moment when by the laying on of hands of all ministers present, the young man was set aside for special service unto God. After the ordination Rev. Regier spoke a few words on "My Grace is Sufficient." Yes, if it wasn't that we could launch out for service unto God on the mighty waves of His grace, we would hold back, for, of ourselves, what could we do?

The Friedensthal members had joined us for this morning hour and after the service the relatives and close friends of Rev. and Mrs. Regier and their church members assembled in the basement of the church for the noon meal.

There have been showers of blessing,
Showers of blessing, I know
There have been seasons refreshing,
Seasons that bid us to grow.
Souls that have drunk from the fountain,
The fountain of God's ceaseless love,
Speak of His excellent greatness,
Sing to the Mercy above.

With Greetings from the First Mennonite Church,

HOW FAST?

How fast should a hymn be sung? Our answer is that it should be sung a little faster than some congregations sing it and about half as fast as some others sing it. A hymn is a prayer or a confession of faith. It should be sung in a natural, easy style so that the worshippers will enable to enunciate the words and sing them with the spirit and the understanding. To rush through a hymn is a silly performance—about as meaningful as to repeat the Lord's Prayer or the Twenty-third Psalm at a lickety-split speed so as to exhaust the breath and to lose the meaning of the words in a cloud of dust. Sing and pray naturally and without affectation. This advice holds for the rate of speed as well as for the tone of voice. Think of the words as you sing. Let the music wing your prayers to God. A hymn is not sung for show or for a demonstration of breath control. It is prayer and praise. Do not race along as if God were impatient or as if it were your last chance to get through it. —Rev. Lester Hostetler

IN MEMORIAM

JOHN BIXLER, 1867 to 1942, was born in Putnam County, Ohio, and lived in this region for over fifty years. His wife and one son preceded him in death. He is survived by one son Milton and two brothers. He was a member of the Ebenezer Mennonite Church, Bluffton, Ohio.

MRS. ABRAHAM SOMMERS, née Dinah Basinger. November, 1873 to July, 1942, was married in 1896. Together with her husband she reared a family of twelve children and later mothered four grandchildren. She was a very consecrated mother and ever ready to seek the welfare of others and especially the Church. She was a member of the Ebenezer Mennonite Church and formerly of the St. John Mennonite Church near Pandora. Eleven children mourn the loss of their mother.

LETTER FROM OUR PEACE COMMITTEE

(Dated August 31 and sent to all pastors)

Less than two years ago there was no Civilian Public Service. In a few more weeks there will be sixteen well organized camps with their staff of administrators and workers scattered over the United States from coast to coast. These staffs are administering the life of over 1600 young men—more than in all of the Mennonite schools put together. We cannot yet tell what the spiritual possibilities of the religious education program in each of these Mennonite-administered camps will have for these young men of the future Mennonite church. But surely something very important is taking place in the lives and thinking of these young men that will bear good fruit for the future church.

This program costs the fifteen Mennonite groups cooperating under the Mennonite Central Committee $40,000 per month, or $480,000 per year. There are about 120,000 members in these fifteen cooperating bodies. This in itself is an inspiration. This means that every member in these fifteen groups should pay $2.00 as his or her share to keep the C. P. S. program working for the next six months beginning with August 1, 1942. Some of the Mennonite groups are ahead of their quota per membership. Our conference is $23,000 in the arrears. We have done well when we consider the number of churches which have done their share. But we could do much better if each would keenly realize its obligation, for there are those who have given little or nothing.

With the encouragement of the president of our conference, Dr. C. E. Krehbiel, the Peace Committee is sending out this personal appeal to every pastor that if his church has not raised the stated quota that he confer with the officers of his church and learn what steps can be taken immediately to raise the amount needed. We will need to impress our people with the fact that we are living in no ordinary times and that we are FACING AN EMERGENCY. THERE IS A FAITH AT STAKE for which our forefathers suffered martyrdom. Our people have never failed in meeting their obligations. We believe when they once realize the importance of this God-given opportunity to witness for Christ they will not fail now.

PEACE COMMITTEE OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE

A REQUEST

Editing the Mennonite Year Book takes the help and cooperation of many individuals. Will everyone who can, kindly aid in supplying the necessary information. We aim to get a complete list of all ministers of our conference, new and old, and their addresses. We also need a complete list of General Conference and district conference officers, the setup of the local churches, their organizations and officers of the same. So please, help your different secretaries to gather the information. The persons concerned are often too modest to give their own names and state their offices. So, please, help us make the records complete. It is quite essential. We would much appreciate having this information in our hands befor October 24. Gerhard Friesen, 700 East Broadway, Newton, Kansas.

The Use of the Bible

Our method of approach to the Bible often determines the profit that we will receive from its study. The following ten suggestions may help in this.

1. Study the Word of God first hand and rely not too much on what commentators have to say.

2. An interview with God in the quiet of the sanctuary of prayer will prepare our minds and open our spiritual eyes to see the way of life more clearly, consequently we should study prayerfully.

3. The Bible is unique, it is not a book, but the book. As man is among animals, so is the Bible among books, different not only in degree, but in intrinsic quality. It is in a class by itself, not comparative but superlative. Other books may contain man's thoughts about God, but the Bible contains

God's thoughts of Himself and His thoughts about men.

4. "All scripture is given by inspiration of God" (II Timothy 3:16); therefore we should approach it as it actually is, the inspired revelation of God to man, and the authority on everything that pertains to the relation between man and God. For Christ Himself the Old Testament was authority; how much more should we accept the entire Bible as our final authority.

5. Approach the Bible as a spiritual book, remembering that spiritual things must be spiritually discerned, "for the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit" (I Corinthians 2:14 in R. V.).

6. Approach the Bible with an open mind, and avoid the attitude of looking for proof for your beliefs, since rationalization has been the pitfall of many a truth and a labyrinth for the truth seeker. The most effective key for understanding the Bible is a surrendered heart, a consecrated life, and a spiritually inclined mind in keeping with the words of Christ, "Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes" (Matt. 11:25). Yet we should not disparage reverent scholarship, for the consecrated scholar can glean many times more from the scriptures than can the ignorant.

7. A willingness to obey is another essential requisite for the most profitable study of the Bible. The words of the Master in John 17:7, "If any man willeth to do his will, he shall know of the teaching" (R. V.), evidently indicate that the door to an understanding of God's Word swings on the hinges of a willingness to obey.

8. The declared purpose of the Bible is to make bad men good; good men better; and better men the best it is possible for them to be. "It is a book of God for the man of God, to thoroughly furnish him unto all good works." Do not find fault with the Bible because it reveals to you your faults, as the woman who smashed the mirror because it revealed her freckles, rather remove what in your life is not in accord with its teachings. Only conformity with its precepts will make possible the proof of its beauty and its power.

9. Avoid stumbling over difficult passages that you cannot understand. Feed on the precious truths that you do understand and in due time your understanding will increase. What at first seemed difficult, will in response to prayerful, persistent study under the guidance of the Spirit often become a gem of truth that brings both joy and comfort to your soul.

10. In our attitude to the Bible, as in all other matters, we will be entirely safe if we follow Christ; of whom we find that He accepted the Scriptures as the inspired Word of God, as final authority in matters of doctrine as well as in matters of duty and service.

Definitely set aside some part of the day for the express purpose of studying the Word of God. Such a resolution should be made and kept by every Christian that hopes to grow in spiritual matters. Probably the best time is the "Morning Watch," before one enters upon the duties of the day. Others prefer the hour before retiring at night, but the danger of slighting this important spiritual activity is greater at that time. Often very busy people find time for an hour a day for this purpose, others employ less time; for effectiveness it should however not be less than fifteen minutes used exclusively for this study. A good program is to open with an humble request asking God to enlighten you to understand His will from the Scriptures studied, then follow with a period of concentrated study, and close by again thoughtfully appearing before God with the central thought of the passage clearly in mind.

(The above quotation is taken from the booklet, Mennonites and Their Heritage—Life and Service in the Kingdom of God by P. C. Hiebert. This is one of the booklets used in the "Core Course" which all Mennonites in Mennonite C. P. S. camps are required to take. Four booklets of the six planned are off the press, and you may get them for twenty cents each from the Mennonite Book Concern, Berne, Indiana. The price is lower in larger quantities).

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

SOME OF THE FIRST EXPERIENCES DURING INTERNMENT

By Wilhelmina Kuyf from China

In making any kind of report about our field and work for the periods since December 8, I find myself very much handicapped, partly because we were confined to our courtyards after that date, and this lasted six months.

On the morning of December 8 I happened to be at Nanlo, where we (Mrs. Shang, the Bible woman and I) had just spent a very rewarding five days. Our baggage was packed on wheel barrows and the bicycles pumped up and ready. Suddenly three determined looking men, not in uniform, came up and announced that we were not to go, but were to be sent back to Taming. I asked them why. They repeated all they had said, adding that we were to hurry. For a moment I had a sinking feeling, and prayed hastily the prayer I was to pray often, "Lord let me meet whatever this may turn out to be, like a Christian." We mentioned to the guards that we had not yet eaten our breakfast, and that Mrs. Shang had left her warm jacket, and the breakfast behind. They sent over for the food and jacket, and the hot millet comforted and warmed me, but poor Mrs. Shang did not get much down. We were cold, and they brought in a tiny charcoal fire, and we were able to warm our feet. Seven trucks soon left for Taming, and we went along on them, taking even our bicycles along after arguing some about it. We were all taken to the Mennonite Mission house at Taming, including some of the Nazarene missionaries, making a total of eleven people.

They asked us whether we wanted to go home. We said, "No, we want to stay and preach the Gospel." "Afterward," was the remark.

That night as we knelt for our devotion, there was a tremendous sense of helplessness apart from God. But we were comforted then and through the days ahead by the unfailing faithfulness of God. We sang the great old hymns of the church, "O God Our Help in Ages Past," and "A Mighty Fortress is Our God," "Jesus Lover of My Soul," etc. The Bible, too, then seemed more especially written than ever for folks in our position.

The Bible school, of course, had to disband, but afterwards the teachers arranged to teach the graduating class in their home, so that at least that group of students might be prepared for further work. Some of them, in spite of attractive offers of jobs elsewhere, have turned to the work of shepherding the Christians in their own village, without definite promise of support, and found joy in it.

During the Chinese new year season the evangelistic bands went out as usual, but only those on foot. They reported that in some places folks said, "What, are you still preaching that Jesus, when His white followers are virtually prisoners?" Others said, "It's a shame those foreigners (we Americans) can't get out and do their regular work; they preached a good doctrine, didn't hurt anybody, and really went out of their way to do good." Our contribution to the work at this time could only be renewed prayers that each of the Christians who went out might give a good testimony.

Gradually work began to go on more regularly for the Chinese Christians. Instruction classes were held, and as some one in Kaichow said, anyone who came to study the Christian doctrine now, really meant business, there were none with ulterior motives. On April 5, a class of nine was baptized at Kaichow, and at Ch'ang Yuan, (in spite of the bitter treatment of the church there), eleven believers were added to the body of Christ. At Tung Ming there were five. The Women's Auxiliary at Shao Chuar financed an instruction class, and some of the folks who had studied there, continued their work at Taming, and were part of the class of eight that were baptized there. Because of unsettled conditions, some of those who were accepted, could not get to Taming, on the day for baptism. It may be they will be included in the next group. At Schwang Ching there were three who publicly took their stand by baptism. Stories of the conversion of these folks make thrilling reading, and show that God's Holy Spirit works in these times too.

Each Sunday we used to ask about the attendance at the church service at the south suburb in Taming, and always got the answer, "It was packed." The fearful of heart don't come, but there are many who have the courage to face community and family disapproval, because of the new life they have in Christ Jesus. (Note: The south supurb chapel is not nearly so large as the city church).

Our Chinese friends assured us of their constant prayers for us, and we continually reminded them that the Church of Christ was bigger and more important than any one of us. We reminded them too of an excellent sermon that young Mr. Ting, the evangelist of the Taming church, preached in November; Jesus Christ is the head of the Church, not the foreign preacher, nor the lady missionary, nor the minister, just Jesus Himself, and we all are parts of His body."

One's thoughts go back to tested co-workers, over the whole field, but to tell of individuals and their stand would make too long a report. However, in summing up, it might be said that affairs of our mission continue in the hands of the Chinese organization, with a new general committee as follows:

Chairman: James Liu
Secretary: Rev. Li Kuang Ming
Treasurer: Rev. Wang Wan Chu
Other members: Rev. Chang Ching, Rev. Sun Ch'ung Sheng, Wang Jui T'ing, Tsao Chien Ch'un, Li Ching Hsien, Rev Yang, (pastor of the Kaichow east supurb church).

They appointed four overseers or superintendents:

Ch'ang Yuan and Tung Ming area	Rev. Liu
Kaichow area	Rev. Li Kuang Ming
Tsingfeng and Nanlo area	Tsao Chien Ch'un
Taming area	Rev. Sun Ch'ung Sheng

The committee has not planned to use any women in paid work, but all over the field they are standing by. Way down in Ch'ang Yuan, Mrs. Chang Jui Te has promised to stay and the people of the church say that while they have food, she will have too. In order not to be a burden, Mrs. Chang has a small business, which she hopes will supply funds for clothing, and yet will not divert too much time from the work.

Mrs. Hsieh and Mrs. Kao at Tsingfeng have decided that all money given to the Widows' Home will be saved for repairs, and that they will eat what the Lord provides. They are being much used in His service.

Mrs. Hsu and Mrs. Shang at Taming go out faithfully to encourage and help the former students, and the Taming area Christians. Mrs. Shang also goes to more distant places on her bicycle, with the evangelists, or by herself.

Local church groups make themselves responsible for their own leaders, in some cases, but one has the feeling that conference loyalty, as expressed by contributions for conference activities, will be a long time coming.

Many of the Chinese, just before I left, gave me greetings for the board, and the constituency at home, and all said so earnestly, "Ask them to pray for us, we don't know what is ahead." As I look into my own heart, and realize what a bulwark your prayers for me have been, and are, I covet for our Chinese brethren in the faith the same 'high tower'.

MRS. CHIA K'O I—"THE RIGHTEOUS" OR "THE UNWORTHY RIGHTEOUS"

(Name given her by her friends).

By Aganetha Fast

Dear Mrs. Chia K'o I came to the China General Conference Mission early in its history. Through the death of her husband she was left destitute with her little son and so was driven to beg for alms. Though lowered to a beggar's life, she would not permit herself and her little boy to lower their moral standards. The professional beggars do not only allow themselves to get filthy beyond description, but they actually put forth efforts daily to look their worst in filth and rags in order to induce people to give either by sympathy or in disgust. Daily she would take her son to a pool by the wayside to wash herself and the child before they started out on their humilating task. This also led her to the gate of the mission. Her intellectual face, her cleanliness, and her dire need aroused the attention of the pioneer missionaries. They could well use a woman to help with the home duties so as to enable them to give more time to the many women callers who came daily.

Mrs. Chia watched the children, and did other minor tasks while the missionary lady conversed with the women. During this time she also learned to read. Her lesson book was the Bible. She gave her heart and life to the Lord and became a great inspiration to all who came in contact with her, missionaries and Chinese alike. The illness and death of her little son was a great sorrow to her, but through this experience she was enabled to be a great comfort to the missionary family, who similarly lost a little son of his age a few years later.

Mrs. Chia was the first native woman worker of our mission in China. She soon endeared herself to all the missionaries by her cordial humble ways, by her earnestness, her sincerity, and her understanding heart and mind. Whenever she was not out calling in the villages, her home was like an oasis in the wilderness. Daily we found her room and yard crowded with women who sought her help and counsel. Some years ago, she had what might be termed a breakdown. During her extreme weakness it seemed we would lose her before long, but she rallied, and though she has approached the age of seventy, she now again energetically enters into all the responsibilities of the mission work. Mrs. Chia will walk for miles to visit a needy soul or stay out for weeks at a time living among her people in the villages to preach to them about the Saviour she loves so dearly.

Her request as per her letter: "Please intercede for me in a special way, that I might always have the strength to glorify the Lord."

—Foreign Missions: Rev. Charles Allen Clark says in the Presbyterian, "There would be no Christian Church on earth if it had not been for missionary work . . . Some friends have suggested that possibly God has allowed the work in Asia to meet this setback in order that we might be forced to pay more attention to the 'Neglected Continent' of South America. Scores of the released missionaries have been sent there, and the work is booming. Our board will send thirty new missionaries to Colombia alone this coming year. Brazil is asking for one hundred . . . up until almost today the Bible has been prohibited in South America by order of the Church. Colporteurs trying to sell it have been put in jail. Bibles have been burned in the market places by order of the priests . . . .

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

HOLDING OUR OWN

In practically every large American city in the north and in hundreds of smaller non-Mennonite communities one can find from two or three to several dozen Mennonite families who were once active church members in the local communities. There is no reason why we should continue to look upon such individuals and groups as lost to the Mennonite Church. To do so is to admit that there is nothing to be done about it, and I for one do not see any good reason for such a fatalistic and hopeless attitude. Individuals who leave the home communities are not like birds escaped from a cage forever lost to the Mennonite Church, unless she allows them to be lost.

What Shall We Do?

First of all we should like to see every effort made to find opportunity for expression of their basic interests in the local community. But if that is impossible those going to the cities and other non-Mennonite communities should be encouraged to organize fellowships in the new communities. Two or three or a dozen families can organize effective fellowship groups anywhere simply by meeting in private homes. These groups can meet regularly every week or two if not on a Sunday morning, then on Sunday afternoon or evening or on one evening during the week. At such times Mennonites from various communities and sections of the country can become intimately acquainted with each other through periods of worship and wholesome fellowship. Out of this may grow churches or congregations, but that is not as important as the continuation of regular meetings for the purpose of Christian fellowship and worship. Many of our present churches had their beginnings in a small group meeting in homes. Our forefathers met almost exclusively in homes during the early days of the Brotherhood as did the early Christian churches in Palestine and the Mediterranean world.

What Has Been Done

I attribute not a little of my present interest in the Mennonite Church to my membership in such a fellowship for over three years in the city of Chicago. At the meetings, which were always held on Sunday afternoon and evening, the programs consisted of simple devotional services, Scripture reading, prayer and singing and then a discussion. Frequently a visiting brother led the discussion of a topic of interest to the group, more generally it was led by a member of the group. The discussions were always on topics of a religious nature. Attendance averaged about thirty for the three-year period. Out of this group new friends were made, a deeper appreciation of the Mennonite Church was discovered, the meaning of true Christian fellowship was freshly manifested, and best of all, those who shared in these religious meetings were drawn more closely to the heart of Jesus Christ.

This particular group was composed chiefly of college and university students, but there were three times as many Mennonites in Chicago who could have formed several additional fellowships. At one time close to a hundred Bible institute and university students met at the First Mennonite Church for an Easter communion and fellowship service. What has been done in Chicago can be done in other places. The home churches can help by making membership in a Mennonite Church so meaningful that those leaving the local community will want to organize or join a Mennonite Fellowship as soon as possible.

"NOT RICH ENOUGH TO BE A C. O."

The editorial, "Help for Wives of C. O.'s," brings to mind an equally serious problem. We recollect hearing the expression, "I'm not rich enough to go into a C. P. S. camp." Since the monthly allowance of $1.50 to $2.50 has been withdrawn, the personal income of some of the young men in camp is nil. The inability to purchase necessary personal effects naturally looms large. Clothing begins to grow thin toward the end of the first year. Shoe soles wear out quickly. They would like to write more letters, but each stamp costs 3c. A Colorado camp paper suggests a young man's dilemma:

DEAR DAD:

GUE$$ WHAT I NEED MO$T OF ALL. THAT'$ RIGHT. $END IT ALONG.

YOUR $ON, C P $ PAUL

Sensing this need our congregation designated that the September 6 Sunday School offering be divided equally and sent as a gift to our young men serving in C. P. S. camps.

We wish to let you judge the extend to which this was appreciated. The following are excerpts from letters received during the past week:

"It surely feels good to know that all of you are standing back of us."

"It naturally helps to alleviate the acutely flat condition in which our pocket books are found most of the time."

"They (the home churches) know that the campee needs a certain amount of money for personal things and that he will be assured of these needs even if he has no income or reserve of his own which will make it easier for him to remain in a C. P. S. camp or will eliminate the financial question entirely from the mind of the man making his choice of service before he goes to camp."

"We know that the prayers from the home church are necessary, and help us beyond measure. We know also that sometimes prayers must be accompanied by action."

"The idea won favor with the rest of the boys and they said they wished that their churches would do the same." —Walter H. Dyck

The Way to Peace

By R. W. Galle

For you know in whom you have put your trust. If you have no more Bible knowledge than that you have heard from the pulpits in a good many churches, God have pity on your souls. Read it for yourselves; it is for you.

It is a marvelous heritage to be peace minded and try to abolish that hellish enemy war. Also to try to live by the sermon on the mount and to lay down your life if need be. But would it not be far more profitable to lay down your life for the cause of Christ? Wearing it out presenting the true Gospel? Is it not one's duty to make the world a better place in which to live as a Christian and have a yearning passion for lost souls and to evangelize it? All for the honor and Glory of God, which automatically would stop greed, hatred, evils, and so forth.

Would you allow me to warn anyone who is not enlightened that it is an altogether different subject to allow oneself to be wrapped up in some peace movement sponsored by Christians and non-Christians including cults and creeds of various breeds thinking they might abolish war? We have no grounds whatever to try to usher in any kind of world peace as to its elasticity. It is both foolish and unscriptural to expect a permanent man made peace. Naturally, most all men including officers that make war would like to have a peace loving world so as to prevent the useless senseless murder and destruction of our loved ones. But more pitiful and sad is the thought of the ones that are blown into an eternal hell not knowing in life where they are headed for, all because of Christians laying down in contentment satisfied with their own selves not telling others of the saving power of Jesus Christ. Do you think the world would be better off in a continued peace without the peace of God and allow it to wallow more and more in sin and debauchery than ever even as now and do nothing about it as usual? How much headway have we made when we have had the opportunity? Have we done our little part to go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to your next door neighbor? You know, to the other man we are at the other end of the world. Surely to bring about the peace of God, souls would have to be born into the kingdoms of God. Born again not in the flesh, natural, but in the Spirit, supernatural. Certainly no one like Gandhi and others (Gandhi a non-Christian not once believing that Jesus Christ was Diety) could ever hope to bring in peace of any kind since Christians have failed in their efforts to bring in world peace. And while his hobby is that of making some ancient and ancestral image to worship or not believing in killing some animal for food for fear he may be killing his grandmother, to think that Christians would dare to link the name of Jesus Christ, God manifested in the flesh, with Gandhi or any other kind of a non-Christian movement and associate their names with such as their co-workers, is preposterous. In Isaiah Chapter 57:20-21: "But the wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt." There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked. It is good work to work toward world peace but don't build any hopes on it.

Christians, don't sell your Denominations. People are not interested. Sell them Jesus Christ without money and without price, and you will reap a bounteous harvest. Teach the wayward soul the way of life eternal; the way of the cross that leads home. Teach them of the One who paid the debt of sin for all, and if only one soul is saved you have gained the whole world and more. And a multitude of sins is covered for Christ took all our sins upon Himself on Calvary by his own blood he purchased us. My friends, you are bought and paid for with the price of blood and no other way.

Folks are trying man's way, clean up the outside, build a new character, have good morals and tell folks to strive to lead a Christian life. Live a life that they may follow your example. Then when you think they are ready, present Christ.

You might just as well try to tell a pig not to go into the mud as to present Christ in this fashion. You can clean a hog up on the outside, brush him, put a blue ribbon around his neck, keep him in your parlour for any length of time and then turn him loose and the first mudhole he sees he will wallow in it with content. Let us contrast the picture and use a sheep in place of a hog. You will find the sheep may step in the mud but its very instinct hates the filth and with all effort gets out of the mud and doesn't get in that same place again. So it is with a true Christian who is cleansed from the inside by the precious blood of the Lamb. You must be born again. Nicodemus, a highly educated ruler of Israel, knowing the Old Testament, failed in his self satisfied life to recognize Christ as the Messiah until he was born in the spirit putting the things of the world behind. He came to himself.

No, thank God, man cannot clean up from the outside and leave the inside a whited sepulcher. Otherwise he would boast what he could do (which he does anyway) by works of his own efforts and work out his own salvation by works of good deeds to others. For by grace are you saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: Not of works, lest any man should boast. Ephesians chapter II 8-9.

Man someday soon will try to build a world of peace on the Christian doctrine of love, on the principles of Christ, the brotherhood of man. Man is trying to bring about a Federal Council of Churches and some day that will be completed, only to the bitterment of the true church, which will then be taken out by Christ. The Holy Spirit being taken with the church who now dwells in the true church. The apostate church will then be left to reign but without Christ. Man is trying or talking about bringing in a United States of the World and I believe some day it is going to happen. Then they will cry Peace, Peace, and there will be a short peace. They will say, now we are all brothers. Christians, so-called Christians and non-Christians alike will have a mock peace and will say, "See, we told you we could bring in peace." But, beware, then there will be sudden destruction! No, there will never be a peace as the world terms it. For only the Son of God, the King of Kings, when He appears, which according to the scriptures is very close indeed, even at the door, when He appears in the air with His Holy angels will bring peace as He establishes His righteous government on the earth. People of the world will soon be looking very earnestly for a man with brains. In fact they are looking for one now. He may be in the world today, a superman. What a terrible delusion when professing Christians find themselves with a man of brains to bring about a world peace and realize that he is the Anti-Christ. And when they get this man of brains to run the world, they will wish they did not have him. For he will be a dictator of the worst degree and will make Hitler and Stalin appear as a mere shadow. He will make people bow down to worship him. They will have to have the mark of the beast on their forehead or hand, that will be literally too, so they may be able to buy or sell, and to those that refuse he will have killed just as the decree that Nebuchadnezzar put forth in Daniel's time. Folks, look around you. Even now it is at the door. Can't you see it? If it were possible the very elect would be deceived.

My friends, we need to know more than the Sermon on the Mount. We need to go to Ezekiel, Daniel, Isaiah and Revelations and others for prophecy. To the four Gospels for Jesus Christ, the light of the world, the Good News. And to the inspired writing of St. Paul for the conversion of the soul of the sinner, and the acceptance of Jesus Christ as personal Saviour. We need to know the Old and New Testaments alike. It's Salvation, history, poetry, prophetic predictions, promises, hopes, joy, comfort, the experiences, assurances and rewards, too.

But until you know the others, the sermon does not apply to us or mean much. You may ask how to obtain these. You may get them by reading much, searching the Scriptures daily, and asking God in prayer always to lead. Like Timothy 2:15 and hearing and believing the Word. One that knows only part of the Bible or perhaps none is like a man that will sit on one end of a teeter totter and argue himself into believing he is balancing himself. One must sit in the middle and hold on both sides and then you will rock it nicely. So it is with the Bible, my friends. Won't you put Christ above everything else? Your business, your pleasures, your other Gods, money, pride, selfesteem, selfrighteousness, greed, selfsatisfaction and so on down the line. You cannot serve them both. Won't you give Him a perfect chance? Then watch how God will transform your whole life. You will know that He is able to keep that which you have committed unto Him against that day.

IN MEMORIAM

JOHN W. GALLE was born at Franklin, Iowa, October 7, 1862. He was the son of Jacob and Maria Krehbiel Galle, and brother of the late Anna Galle and P. J. Galle.

The rite of baptism was administered to him in his early youth by Rev. Christian Schowalter.

As a youth he accompanied his family to Moundridge, Kansas.

In 1891 he was married to Anna M. Haury. They were privileged to live together more than fifty-one and one-half years, having celebrated their Golden Wedding in February of 1941. This union was blessed with nine children.

In Kansas he was engaged in the milling business, as a merchant, postmaster and farmer at various times until he moved with his family to Reedley, California, in 1912. At Reedley he operated a ranch until his retirement a few years ago.

He joined the church wherever he resided and was a member of the First Mennonite Church at Reedley, at the time of his passing.

He leaves his faithful wife, eight children, ten grandchildren, and one great grandchild. These with his many friends will be both cheered and comforted by the deep and abiding faith which characterized his life.

His death resulted from a heart attack on the morning of September 9, 1942. Funeral services were conducted by Dr. J. H. Langenwalter on Friday, September 11. Interrment was at the Reedley Cemetery.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Gerald Stucky, New York City, New York

OCTOBER 8—"Let nothing be done through strife or vainglory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves." Phil. 2:3.

It is said of D. L. Moody, one of the foremost of all evangelists, that when he was on the platform with other preachers that he took the back seat, and was always pushing others to the fore. Not that he was not able to speak, or wouldn't care to speak, but in his humility he considered others superior to himself. Herein was virtue in that it is no great thing to be humble when one is brought low, but to be humble when one is praised—this is a great and rare attainment. As Ruskin writes it, and as Christ exemplified it, "the first test of a truly great man is his humility."

OCTOBER 9—"Only let your conversation (conduct) be as it becometh the Gospel." Phil. 1:27.

Colors that clash, music with discordant sounds, or sizes that misfit have long been distasteful and are things which we avoid. The trouble lies not in the individual color, but rather in the combination of that color with another which it does not complement. Even so it is in the Christian life. All things are lawful unto us, but all things are not expedient. Our conduct is to be such as is in harmony with the gospel, or such as "becometh" the gospel. If we love Him, we are to keep His commandments. And this is the commandment which He gave unto us, that we love one another even as He loved us.

OCTOBER 10—"And this I pray, that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge.." Phil. 1:9.

To be an ignorant Christian is but to manifest a state of spiritual poverty. A person who really loves the Heavenly Father and His Son also knows them. Love is the pathway which leads to knowledge. George Washington Carver, the great negro scientist, says that if we love anything enough it will give up its secrets to us. He learned to love the handiwork of God—the great outdoors, the products of nature, the flower, and possibly above all, the peanut. Because he loved the peanut and the God who gave the peanut, he was also given the secret of its possibilities. To really love our Lord is to abound in knowledge of Him.

OCTOBER 11—"Beloved, if God SO loved us, we ought also to love one another." I John 4:11.

God's love was an identification of the higher with the lower for the benefit of the lower. Such is the love we should have. We are to be willing to identify ourselves in love with the one who is outcast, the friendless, the publican and sinner, the man who is hated, the woman who has no friends, tac., for their benefit. It is easy to love those who love us; it is easy to love the lovely, the exalted, the popular—but that is not the way God loved us. Humility becomes an essential quality in our love for one another. Let us put our love not into words and vain talk—but into action.

OCTOBER 12—"Love envieth not. . . ." I Cor. 13:4.

It is the will of God that we be content with that which the Lord provides for us. The Christian should be able to say with Paul, "Whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content." Envy is the insidious germ which causes discontentment. Envy causes us to be uneasy and jealous at the attainments and possessions of another in accordance with the degree that we think our own happiness would be advanced by the addition of it. In spite of the fact that experience has shown time and again that the "grass on the other side of the fence" is not greener, we still desire that which belongs to others. The love of God brings us thankfulness and gratefulness for what we have in spite of what we have not.

OCTOBER 13—"That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection. . ." Phil. 3:10a.

E. Stanley Jones says that "This generation has been innoculated with a mild form of Christianity and is absolutely immune to the real thing." The mild form itself evidences itself in a superficial grasp of Christian ideals, ethics, and activities. It knows about Christ, but does not know Him as an experiential reality. To know Him is to be so identified with Christ that He lives within us as Savior and Lord. It is in this way that we become new creatures in Christ Jesus, and it is as a result of this that all things become new.

OCTOBER 14—"I thank my God upon every remembrance of you." Phil. 1:4.

In this little phrase in the beginning of Paul's letter to his friends in Philippi he pays them a subtle and thought-provoking compliment. Could our friends say the same thing of us? Can they say of us, "I am certainly glad to have him as my friend. He has shown me what the real things of life are, and what it means to be a Christian. When I am with him I feel like doing good and my bad thoughts go from me. When I am with him it seems that I learn to know God better. I always feel better after I have been with him. I thank God upon every remembrance of him." Just how do we influence others?

* * * *

"Lord, lay some soul upon my heart,
And love that soul through me,
And may I nobly do my part
To win that soul for Thee."

"We should so live and labor in our time that what came to us as seed may go to the next generation as blossom, and what came to us as a blossom may go to them as fruit." —H. W. Beecher

The California Retreat as It Impressed Me

The California Mennonite Retreat is one of the highlights of the year for me, and surely the high point of the summer. To be permitted to spend a week in the beauties of God's own creation and enjoy calm, peace, and quiet in the midst of a world at war, is a privilege indeed. When, on August 8th, we left our ordinary duties and climbed upward, we gained new heights in elevation, but also in our spiritual lives. We had good fellowship with the Lord and with man, along with good fun and good food.

We were especially privileged to have five of our missionaries in our midst. To fellowship with and listen to Rev. and Mrs. Paul Wenger and Dr. and Mrs. P. A. Penner from India, and Miss Talitha Neufeld from China, was an opportunity not often given us. To me the history of our mission in India took on new meaning when I saw one of its founders, and listened to the incidents which he related. Dr. Penner took us all to India for an evening, via the moving pictures which he brought with him.

Another high point was the daily Bible class led by Dr. A. Warkentin of Bethel College. It was encouraging and strengthening to join him in the study of the first part of the book of Romans. Every morning was climaxed by an interesting class in youth problems, also led by Dr. Warkentin. His analytic method of attacking a problem gave us a good principle to follow in our individual problems.

Music held its own place of prominence in the retreat, which I liked very much. At meal time, and especially at lunch, choruses rang through the air; at each meeting there was hearty group singing, as well as several excellent special numbers. The song festival of Sunday afternoon was one long to be remembered.

Recreational opportunities, fortunately, were plentiful, with great variety so that everyone might take part. Vespers and campfires were a fitting close for each perfect day. I am sure that God was glorified in the retreat, and trust that each one of us returned to the valley of daily living more Christ-like.

Wings or Weight, Which?

By Martha Beachy Nafziger

Delwood Miley worked the combination lock on his mailbox to withdraw the letter his keen eyes had spied inside. Mentally he was guessing who the sender might be—his mother, his sister Estelle, Jerry, Harold, Bert or any of a dozen others who wrote him while he attended Zion Hill College.

"Hooray!" His exclamation was muffled to a whisper, however, for classes were in session right off the very hall in which he stood. "From Uncle Charles, believe it or not!" The envelope was ripped open and the contents devoured in great speed.

". . . will be at Zion Hill on the fourteenth." The words literally struck Delwood in the face. Uncle Charles was actually to be at school next week! Delwood was a college junior but some days he felt frisky and undignified enough to be a high-school freshman and this was one of the days. This news was too good to keep to himself; he had to share it with someone.

Just then the bell rang for intermission and students came swarming into the hall, almost stampeding at the mailboxes. He saw his roommate approaching.

"Jim," he addressed him, "you've heard me speak of Uncle Charles Bowman?"

"From India?"

"Yes; he's to be here next week."

Jim's face lighted up with unmistakable pleasure. "Lucky nephew," he rejoiced and extended his hand.

"That's what I think," Delwood grinned back.

Jim passed his hand over his patent leather pompadour, then rested it on his hip. "I'm surely glad for you, old boy."

"None of my family has been to see me this year, and Uncle Charles,—well you know my opinion of him."

"Quite well, I believe."

The boys separated at that, Jim on his way to the mailbox and Delwood for the science building where his next class met.

Late Saturday afternoon Delwood enjoyed a game of tennis with Barbara Reedy. Several times this spring this had occurred. Babs was a refreshing sort of a person, friendly, and vivacious. Her dark eager eyes fairly snapped when she spoke, and she had the ability to make her companions feel important in her presence. One thing about her puzzled Delwood.

She had so little to say about spiritual things. Although she was usually present at all the religious meetings on the campus she rarely took part in any of them. He had been deliberate in choosing between Barbara and Elva Gray, the only two grls which he considered eligible for himself. Elva had not so striking a personality as Barbara, but she was refined, gracious, and intellectual, not the kind of girl one would call by a nickname. She had a natural air of sanctity about her; it shone out of her eyes and was evident in her speech, conduct and appearance. Elva topped the student list for participating in extra-curricular activities about the school, especially the religious ones.

Now Delwood tremendously enjoyed the game with Barbara. She was a keen play-fellow. Her wit and energy pepped a person up after one had studied hard and long. As they walked to the dorm after the game they passed Elva on the flagstone path with a Greek textbook in her hand. She smiled a friendly greeting to the two.

"Miss Studyhard," Barbara commented almost sarcastically after they were out of her hearing.

Delwood said nothing, but he wondered why this particular inflection. Elva was an A student; he admired folks who applied themselves and got good grades.

After leaving Barbara at the foot of the women's staircase he went to his own room and prepared for dinner. He continued to wonder about the remark Barbara had made concerning Elva. He had never publicly or otherwise shown any particular interest in Elva even though he had plenty of interest for her in his heart! How could two girls be so entirely different, and yet both appeal to him so much?

Often during the school year he had prayed about the matter. A few more minutes remained till the dinner bell. Jim, his roommate, was out; so Delwood decided to spend the time in prayer. He begged God to show him what to do in his difficulty. Should he discontinue his interest in Barbara in favor of Elva? Earnestly, he beseeched God to direct him. Suddenly, during his prayer the thought occurred to him to discuss his problem with Uncle Charles when the latter came to the school next week. This thought seemed so good to Delwood that he considered it a direct answer. He thanked God for it and arose.

But when Charles Bowman reached Zion Hill for a three-day stay it seemed that no one saw less of him than his nephew, Delwood Miley. Uncle Charles was usually invited off the campus for meals, and at other times students fairly swarmed around, so that a private interview with him was out of the question. Just when Delwood began to think he could have no interview at all with his uncle, that person said all out of turn,

"Delwood, one of the privileges I had looked forward to most in coming back to my Alma Mater was to spend sometime with my only nephew. Will your schedule allow you an hour off this afternoon?"

"It certainly will, Uncle!"

"This is what I have in mind. There's a point along the river," Uncle Charle's voice dropped to a low whisper, "we used to call it the 'Willows.'"

Delwood nodded, indicating his familiarity with the place.

"When I was a student here we often went there alone and in groups to pray and to spend time in meditation. The most important decisions of my life were made at that spot. . . I'll tell you more about it this afternoon. How early can you get away?"

"By 3:16."

Uncle looked at him. "Class ends at 3:15 I venture to guess." A jolly little twinkle lighted his blue eyes. "Where shall I meet you?"

"At the drinking fountain. I usually make a bee line for it after a class."

"Very well; I'll see you at 3:16."

Delwood rejoiced to see his uncle at the drinking fountain at the appointed time. Now for once they could be free and alone. They slipped out the back way and took the river path leading to the "Willows."

The "Willows" marked the junction of the diminutive little stream known as Spring Valley Creek and the Dewey River. Next to the river stood several large willow trees from which the point drew its name. Flags grew in the water and violets dotted the mossy banks. It was shady, cool and quiet. To be sure there were spots more beautiful, but few more sacred. To the students of Zion Hill this was a sanctuary rather than a recreational spot. Some college class in more recent years had graveled the paths and outfitted the place with rustic seats and benches.

"Reminds one of an old friend who has had a fresh shave and haircut," Uncle Charles tendered appreciatively as he beheld the improvements. "How good to be back,—back at the Willows!"

Then for several minutes no utterances were made. Instinctively Delwood knew that memories beckoned to his uncle from every foot of ground around them. It was a time too sacred to profane with conversation.

Presently Uncle Charles settled down on one of the benches and invited Delwood to share it with him. At once they began to chat on topics of mutual interest, their families, their church, their beloved school. Among other things Delwood shared with his uncle his convictions to be a foreign missionary and his present preparations for that work.

As Uncle Charles looked into the eager, hopeful face of his nephew he could see himself as he had dreamed and planned of his own life work twenty-five years before. He placed a hand on Delwood's shoulder and invoked God's blessing upon him. Then the elder man cleared his throat and in a voice low and reverent said,

"There is another matter of great importance. You are a normal young man and before many years you will want to choose a wife. A woman holds in her hands the power either to make or mar a man's career. Be sure to find the right woman. Entreat God to help you, and He will see that you make no mistake. The real God-chosen wife will take your work to heart as though it were her very own. She will inspire you as no one else can."

Delwood smiled. He had been trying to imagine how to begin talking about his problem. Now his uncle was opening the way and making it easier for him. "You are coming close to home," he said a little self-consciously.

"Is that so? I was not aware of it."

And then in detail Delwood explained the problem to his uncle. "I have felt led to tell you about it," he concluded, "though you and the Lord are the only ones who do know. Of course you will consider it confidential."

"Yes, certainly. I am reminded of my bosom friend, Clyde Summers," Uncle Charles began. "Two years we roomed together here at Zion Hill and many were the hours we spent talking and planning about our futures. After graduation I taught school several years until we were sent abroad. Clyde who was preparing to be a missionary doctor continued his studies in medicine in the meantime. We had cherished the happy thought of going abroad together. While I was here in school I sought the Lord's choice for me for a life companion. He graciously led me to your Aunt Elizabeth. We were married soon after I started to teach. A truer, more devoted helpmeet I could never have found by myself.

"But this is supposed to be Clyde's story," Uncle Charles interrupted himself. "Clyde went on to medical school. And it was during that time that he met a girl who pleased him well. Prudent and rational as he always seemed to be, I am still surprised that he ever lost his head over her as he did. But at any rate their friendship progressed. In time they were married. Apparently Clyde neglected to make clear to Elaine that his extensive preparation was to fit him to serve the church as a foreign missionary and that he expected her to share his calling. For when his training was completed and he was ready to go, she would hear nothing of it. She realized that Clyde was brilliant and that a wonderful future lay ahead of him. 'Let's stay here and make money,' she pleaded. What could he do? She was his wife. He could not go abroad without her. Finally he consented to her wishes. But with his chief aim in life defeated, Clyde was defeated too. He lost heart in his work. His conscience goaded him. And his covetous wife continually berated him for being a failure. His home was unhappy and his practice did not prosper. And Delwood, I firmly believe that ill-chosen wife was the root of the whole trouble. A woman can be wings or she can be weight to a man and Clyde's wife was absolutely a dead weight to him. When I think of how loyally your Aunt Elizabeth has stood by me and of how many sacrifices and hardships she has endured without even a murmur I know whereof I speak when I advise you to have the Lord choose the person to share your life on the mission field."

"What has become of Clyde?" Delwood wondered.

"He is no longer living. Last winter when he returned to the states we passed through the city where he lived. We stopped, intending to look him up. But from another source we learned that he died several months before, so poor that the business men of the community raised enough money to pay his funeral expenses."

Uncle pulled out his watch. "Our hour must be up—it's twice up, in fact!"

They rose and returned to the school. On the way Delwood said,

"You cannot know what this has meant to me, Uncle. I know not how to thank you."

"It has meant much to me also. I trust our little visit will help you to arrive at the right decision."

When they reached the campus, Uncle Charles proceeded to the dean's home where he was to be a dinner guest that evening. Delwood hastened in the direction of the dining hall; there was a new spring in his step and a new note of joy in his whistle for did he not know which maiden would be his missionary bride, the Lord willing it so?

C. P. S. MEN AND HEALTH WORK

CPS men are in the following hospitals: Alexian Brothers, Chicago; Williamsburg, Virginia; Staunton, Virginia; and Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Twenty-eight CPS men are cooperating with the Rockefeller Foundation by nursing lice on their bodies in a research on louse control. The ultimate objective of the experiment is the control of typhus fever which has already appeared in epidemic proportions in Europe.

The louse is the carrier of the dreaded disease and the hope of its control seems to lie in finding a substance to eliminate the lice. To that end a number of lice powders have been prepared and will be tested on these lice-infested CPS men.

SENIOR DEPARTMENT

Series for September; Stewardship

STEWARDSHIP IN THE USE OF MONEY AND MEANS—Luke 16:10, 11

I. Worship Service:

1. Songs: "O the Unsearchable Riches of Christ," No. 454; "We Give Thee But Thine Own," No. 213.
2. Reading of leading topic, prayer, leader's remarks.
3. Pageant, "Stewardship or Selfishness," at ten cents.
4. Offering for Home Missions.

II. Leader's Introduction:

How some people long for the day to come when they will not be asked to give any more. They are tired of it, the endless round of giving, and giving again. These people have not begun to comprehend that "Giving is Living." Jesus said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Giving enriches the heart, it satisfies, it brings joy and jest for living. Who would not want to give—his heart must be barren of sympathy, his eyes must be closed to the needs about about him, his ears deaf to the calls of the unfortunate. A gift gladly given and graciously received creates a bond between two souls. It is well worth while to put forth an effort to earn more so that you can give more, and if you give according to your means it is surprising how God often increases opportunities to earn.

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

1. What about tithing? Luke 11:42, Malachi 3:10.
2. Reaping according to sowing, II Cor. 9:5-8, 10.
3. Giving regularly, II Corinthians 16:2.
4. Using money as a means, unwisely, Lk. 12:41-44.
5. The rich young ruler, Luke 18:18-30.

IV. For Discussion:

1. What value is there in tithing? 2. What is the best method of giving? 3. In what ways are we to be stewards of all our possessions?

V. Facts for Study:

Tithing is one method of systematic giving. Many who have practiced it atest to its value. Those who have tried it will generally keep it up. Often a testimony comes in saying that God has literally made true His promise in Malachi, and blessed them materially.

Others say that tithing makes for very unequal giving, for a man with five hundred dollars income giving one-tenth of it has four hundred fifty dollars left, whereas a man with two thousand dollars income giving one tenth of it has eighteen hundred dollars left. Some few people with big generous hearts and generous incomes have made for themselves a definite allowance on which they live, giving the rest to the Lord—and are happy in doing so.

Some few, and I would include the deaconesses in this group, give the widow's mite—all they have, and the Lord's appreciation rests upon their unselfish giving.

Some still want to "give as the heart prompts" they say. "God loveth a cheerful giver" and they want to give as they are moved to "occcasionally." If these people would check up they would find, as a rule, that they give far less relatively than those who tithe, leave alone the other two groups we have mentioned.

What you give of your money and means is between you and your God, and He sees the "inward parts" and will bless the "little" if you can not give the "more" as you would like to.

VI. Illustration:

Why Give?

It is said that when Andrew Fuller went to his native town to collect for the cause of missions, one of his old acquaintances said, "Well, Andrew, I'll give five pounds, seeing it's you." "No," said Mr. Fuller, "I can't take anything for this cause, seeing it's me," and handed the money back. The man felt reproved, but in a moment he said, "Andrew, you're right. Here are ten pounds, seeing it's for the Lord Jesus Christ."

VII. Food for Thought:

Christ says, "To whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little."

Sunday is the golden clasp that binds together the volume of the week. —Longfellow

He that remembers not to keep the Christian Sabbath at the beginning of the week, will be in danger of forgetting, before the end of the week, that he is a Christian. —E. Turner

A world without a Sabbath would be like a man without a smile, like a summer without flowers, and like a homestead without a garden. It is the joyous day of the whole week. —H. W. Beecher

I feel as if God had, by giving the Sabbath, given fifty-two springs in every year. —S. T. Coleridge

I never knew a man escape failures, in either mind or body, who worked seven days in a week. —Sir Robert Peel

God's altar stands from Sunday to Sunday, and the seventh day is no more for religion than any other—it is for rest. The whole seven are for religion, and one of them for rest, for instruction, for social worship, for gaining strength for the other six. —H. W. Beecher

JESUS' FRIENDS—John 11:15; Mark 10:13-16

Memory Verse: "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you,"

This should be a meeting closely connected with our scripture story. Jesus had many friends, some of whom we know by name—Mary and Martha, Lazarus, The Disciples (especially John and Peter), the woman of Samaria, Nicodemus, Zaccheus, and the little children.

We are Jesus' friends if we do what He commands us to do. Don't we fall short in being a true friend, because we don't win souls for Him as he commands us? We don't give of our time and money as belongs to Him.

"Ye Are My Friends"

One evening Dr. R. A. Torrey was told that a minister's son was to be present in his congregation. This young man professed to be a Christian but did not live and work as a Christian should. Dr. Torrey watched for the young man, and soon saw him come in. At the close of the service, he hurried to the door to greet the people as they passed out. When this young man came, Dr. Torrey took his hand, and said, "Good evening, I am glad to see you. Are you a friend of Jesus?" The young man answered, "Yes, I consider myself a friend of Jesus." Dr. Torrey replied, "Jesus said, 'Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you'." The young man's eyes fell as he said, "If those are the conditions, I guess I am not a friend of Jesus."

The Question Bee

1. Which one of the disciples proved to be a wrong friend of Jesus?
2. Who were the friends of Jesus at the Cross?
3. Why was Nicodemus Jesus' friend?
4. Why should we be a friend to the despised?
5. How did Peter and John show themselves as special friends of Jesus?

The Prayer List

1. To make Jesus our best friend, 2. To make Christ attractive to my friends through my life, 3. Never to be guilty of ridicule when our friends stand for what is right.

GROWTH IN CHRIST

Luke 2:40, 52 II Peter 1:1-8

Growth in spiritual attainments, in Christian graces and fruits is highly desirable; yet it is necessary. Anyone who is a Christian will try to be as good a Christian as is within his power. His ambition will be to grow. If he has no ambition to become more Christlike, he is in a dangerous condition. Growth is a law of healthy life—physical, mental and spiritual. Arrested development is a tragedy, and especially so in the spiritual realm. Spiritually we need to grow as long as we live. Religion is the principle of growth. Our age puts much emphasis on "progress," pressing forward to the still better, constantly improving. Religion, Christianity is a principle of constant growth and progress. "Grow in grace," is Peter's injunction (Golden text). A variety of graces combined in one life, gives charm to Christian character when these blend in glorious harmony.

Jesus Grew, vss. 40, 52

These two verses are a brief record of Jesus' growth from small boyhood to manhood. Jesus was perfect in his humanity as well as in his deity. He was filled with wisdom, which always edifies. He consciously chose the right, which pleased God. He won the favor of God and man. His moral qualities of purity and unselfish sympathy attracted men. Our growth in Christ begins when we are born again, and it usually increases our wisdom.

Growth in Christian Graces, vss. 1-8

The second Epsitle of Peter seems to be addressed to the same readers that the first one was cf. 3:1). Peter was informed of a new outbreak of heresy among the Christians to whom he had written the first letter. The word "faith" has many shades of meaning. This "precious faith" (vs. 1) was the gospel that had been accepted by these Christians to whom he was writing. Like precious faith will produce like precious practice. Peter declares that he and his readers are on the same plane of spiritual earnestness and experience. God is just and impartial in providing the gospel for all who will receive it.

Christian growth involves an increasing knowledge of divine things. The word "knowledge" in the Greek is a strong one and implies an intimate and personal relationship with God and Christ. This will multiply grace and peace. Peter is speaking of experimental knowledge, a result of fellowship with Christ and of putting his promises to the test. Christ's power working in us makes possible a spiritual life and Godly living. This comes through a personal knowledge of Christ. God has given us all things that are necessary for the highest life. He gives all our ability to win the virtues that follow in the context.

Those who respond to the divine call and appropriate God's promises shall become, through an inward transformation, like God in their inner nature. Only by continual growth can the Christian attain that accomplishment. God has promised us so much. We on our part should be the much more diligent. The Greek word translated "add" means literally to supply, to supplement. God bestows gifts which we have to supplement by using them. Verses 5-7 suggest the picture of a master musician who adds voices until a splendid chorus singing in pleasing harmony has been assembled. God's gift of faith is to be evident by its fruit. Faith must be supplemented with courage, moral excellence. In addition there needs to be understanding and skill in Christian duty. Self-control should extend over the whole life, keeping every sense under proper restraint. To this the Christian needs to add patient steadfastness, persevering through all trials. Beyond this there should be a deep reverential piety, reverence for God, expressing itself in worship and in an obedient life.

Godliness and brotherly kindness—love of the brotherhood, plus love toward the whole human race, form the climax of the chain of Christian virtues. These begin with faith and end with love. They will lead us toward a fuller knowledge of Christ. The result will be progress in spiritual life. Increased knowledge of God increases our confidence in Him. Complete confidence in God is most important in the Christian life. The mark of a mature Christian is a strong faith in God. The more we grow Christlike the more we honor Him. Important means of growth are private prayer, family and public worship, witnessing for Christ, and personal work in behalf of others. In continued growth lies our safeguard against failure.

What must our youth be led to do in order to grow aright spiritually?

How well am I using God's means of spiritual growth?

What are some outward evidences of growth in grace?

AN OLD ROCKING CHAIR

A friend of mine had one old chair.
"What shall I do?" she mused,
"For clothes and stockings do get torn
When that old chair is used."

She started then to work with zest
With sandpaper, and lo,
Rough places thus were all made smooth
And did not even show.

As coats of paint were thus removed
We saw the grain of wood.
"How beautiful!" my neighbor gasped,
"It really does look good."

And so, friend, cares and trials come
Through days of loss and pain.
Why wish to run away from them. . .
For they bring out the grain.

—Helen A. Penner, former relief worker in France, has accepted the position of Assistant Dean of Women at Bethel College.

—Rev. Jacob Unruh writes, "Will you, please, put a notice in the paper to the effect that our address for the next several months will be 3218 Blossom Street, Columbia, South Carolina, instead of Kingman, Kansas, as in the past two years and a half. Having resigned as pastor of the Zion Church in Kingman I am now taking a two-year graduate course at the Columbia Bible College, Columbia, South Carolina. There are four other Mennonite students here."

—The Mennonite Ministerial Association of Freeman, South Dakota, sponsored evangelistic services in Freeman College Auditorium from September 20 to 27. Rev. P. R. Lange, Bible teacher in Tabor College, Hillsboro, Kansas, was the speaker.

—Spiritual Exercise: "Exercise thyself unto Godliness." I Tim. 4:7. "Everyone is exhorted to exercise, not only church members. For, without exercise life weakens and dies out. By exercise we discover often times hidden talents, or develop those we have. What talents have you to exercise? Singing, teaching, willingness to work, leadership or influence for good; use it and exercise it for Christ and for the Church."—Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

—Rev. Erland Waltner is a member of the Advisory Committee for the C. P. S. camp at Denison, Iowa. The committee recently met with the camp staff to discuss problems and improvements. Rev. Gideon Yoder, director of the camp for nearly a year, has resigned and will attend Friends University in Wichita, Kansas. Rev. Yoder also resumes his pastorate. Henry Guhr, graduate of Bethel College had to forgo a scholarship for graduate work in physics at Kentucky University when he was drafted. Brother Guhr served nobly as cook at Denison, although his ability and learning fitted him for mechanical work. Now he has gone to the Pauterxant Research Refuge at Bowie, Maryland.

—C. O.'s are concerned about a "moral equivalent to war." Isn't the Christian's fight against the devil with the Sword of the Spirit an acceptable one? Logically the experience of many in the C. P. S. camps should lead them into the Christian ministry, to give their life in one of the "highest types of service."

—Rug-weaving has taken hold of the C. P. S. camp at Denison. A report says, "By just walking through the dorms, I counted twenty-eight rugs in various stages of completion, several empty frames awaiting new ideas, and five completed rugs waiting to be sent away to thrill the hearts of mothers, wives, and sweethearts." The vegetable garden at this camp has already yielded more than $150 worth of produce. Not nearly all the main crops have been evaluated as yet. A large garden for a large number of men also yielded a description like this: "About May 10 when the lettuce and onions began to yield, work began in dead earnest. It is a real job to clean leaf lettuce, onions and the rest for one hundred men. It takes one man three hours to clean lettuce for that many people. One could go on at great length about shelling peas, stringing beans, husking roasting ears (40 dozen for a meal), cutting kraut, etc . . . Miss Yoder, with the help of the kitchen force, has canned 425 quarts of vegetables already. We made two barrels of sour kraut . . . We are taking care of at least four bushels of pickles a week now . . . Our potato patch should give us two hundred bushels as our share . . . Twice the garden was flooded, but lived through it . . . It has not all been drudgery . . . We all had a lot of fun watching the boys eating roasting ears, look at the plate, sigh and shake their heads."

—The Salem Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakota, was host to a Sunday School Conference on September 12 and 13.

—Rev. Walter H. Regier was installed as pastor of the Friedenstal Mennonite Church near Tampa, Kansas, by Rev. J. M. Regier on September 13. A full church listened to Rev. Regier give the installation sermon. At noon all enjoyed a meal prepared by the women of the church. The membership of this church is 116 according to the Year Book.

—The Bethesda Hospital and Home for the Aged at Goessel, Kansas, observed its twelfth annual Gift Day on September 24. Several sewing societies from surrounding churches served noon and evening meals. Choirs from various churches sang in the evening and the Goessel high school band played. Addresses on the work of the institutions were given in the afternoon and evening.

—Rev. Harold Gross of Freeman, South Dakota, who had planned to enter Garrett Biblical Institute, Chicago, this fall, has consented to join the faculty of Freeman Junior College. The position he will fill was formerly held by Miss Marion Wipf.

—The "South" Church, Freeman, South Dakota, plans to hold a series of meetings during Thanksgiving week it is reported. It was voted that Dr. A. Warkentin of North Newton, Kansas, be invited to conduct the meetings.

—"A small Indian boy from the Mennonite mission at Hoteville, Arizona, attended the rural school north of Elbing, Kansas, for two weeks recently. He is the adopted boy of Miss Mary Schirmer, missionary among the Indians, who spent some time with her relatives at Elbing and brought along her two adopted Indian children. Miss Esther Ratzlaff is the teacher in the Elbing school"—Mennonite Weekly Review.

—Dr. I. W. Bauman, who served as pastor of the Wayland Mennonite Church, Wayland, Iowa, this summer, has returned to his teaching duties at Bluffton, College. The Wayland congregation was served by the Rev. Willian Penner family until this spring when they left to take charge of a two-church parish in Maine.

—Rev. and Mrs. J. B. Ediger, missionaries among the Indians at Clinton, Oklahoma, attended an Ediger-Martens family reunion at Buhler, Kansas, on September 2.

—The Hoffnungsau Sewing Society, Inman, Kansas, recently was glad to have Miss Mary Schirmer from Arizona as a visitor.

—The First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas, heard Dr. P. A. Penner give a sermon on "Broken Hearts" on the morning of September 13. In the evening Dr. A. Warkentin spoke on Romans 1:17-19.

—Rev. John Bartel of Delft, Minnesota, recently conducted revival meetings in the Zoar Mennonite Church, Goltry, Oklahoma. Rev. J. W. Bergen, a member of the Western District Peace Committee, is the pastor of the Zoar church. Its membership is 286 according to the Year Book.

—West Zion Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas: At the Sunday School business meeting held on Sunday afternoon Alfred Meyer and J. Warren Regier were re-elected as superintendents. The young married people's Sunday School class had dinner Sunday in the church dining room. Forty-eight were present. Curt Siemens, superintendent of the Moundridge High School, is the teacher of the class. The membership of the West Zion church is 300 according to the Year Book.

—Of Dr. C. H. Suckau's eye operation it is reported, "Although the recovery is rather slow and the patient must continue to rest, there are encouraging signs that vision will be restored. The other eye has profited by the long rest and is much stronger than formerly.

—Berne, Indiana: "Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Habegger, natives of this community and now missionaries to the Cheyenne Indians in Montana, brought their children here last week. The two youngest, David and Lois, will attend Berne high school and Helen and Esther will continue their studies at Bluffton College. Rev. and Mrs. Habegger spoke at the Wednesday evening service of the Berne church.—A number of definite decisions for Christ were made during the young people's conference of which Dr. Vance Havner was speaker.

—Rev. E. J. Neuenschwander, sons Elbert and Gordon, of McPherson, Kansas, accompanied the former's son and daughter, Elmer Jr. and Anna to this state (Indiana) where they will be students at the Fort Wayne Bible Institute. The family was reunited with Mrs. Neuenschwander who had been to Detroit, where another daughter had become the mother of a daughter, Karen Susan Richert.

—Corn, Oklahoma: "From Sunday morning, August 23, to the following Friday evening, the Bergthal congregation was privileged to have with them Dr. A. Warkentin of Newton. Twice a day for the entire week we could enjoy the inspirations which only such meetings and such an able teacher can bring. We hope that the Doctor's service will long remain available to the colleges and churches of our conference." —H. A. Unger

—Sichar Mennonite Church, Cordell, Oklahoma: This church had its annual S. S. picnic recently. A short program was rendered after the Sunday School. After the sermon by Rev. Menno H. Kliewer the group went to a small creek not far from the church and enjoyed a dinner. After an afternoon of visiting Mrs. Walter Foth led the group in singing choruses. The church membership is listed as 93.

—A Wheat Memorial has been erected in Newton, Kansas. On it are these words, "Commemorating entry into Kansas from Russia of Turkey Red Hard Wheat by Mennonites, 1874."

—Please, renew promptly your subscription to The Mennonite. You can be of great aid to the publication work of our conference by taking care of this important matter. One unpaid subsciption multiplied by many more soon runs into a large figure of money that is very urgently needed in these days of higher printing costs.

—"Mennonite Rural Life" is the heading of a very delightful and profitable page now appearing once a month in the Mennonite Weekly Review. The page's editor is J. Winfield Fretz. Associate editor is Melvin Gingerich. The first page appeared in the Septeber 17 issue. This page definitely helps to fulfill a need of the Mennonites.

—Bethel College: Brother Charles Kauffman, curator of the museum, and Brother P. J. Wedel, Registrar Emeritus, have spent many hours cataloguing all the specimens in the museum. The cards indicate where each specimen came, how it was obtained, and where it may be found in the museum.—Dr. R. C. Kauffman spoke at a community meeting held in Goessel in connection with the opening of the schools.—Dr. J. Winfield Fretz filled the pulpit of the Tabor church while Dr. Richert was gone to Nebraska and Minnesota.—The chapel services are again under the direction of Prof. A. E. Kreider. All students have been assigned seats and regular chapel atendance is required.

—Dr. David Eitzen, former pastor of the Immanuel Mennonite Church, Los Angeles, California, and now on the faculty of the University of Southern California, writes a weekly column in the Mennonite Weekly Review called, "Clasping Hands with God."

—Oklahoma Bible Academy, Meno, Oklahoma: On September 14 the enrollment stood at sixty-four. The teaching staff of Rev. Paul Kuhlman and Rev. Rubin W. Jantzen, who teach in the Bible department; Rev. August Schmidt who teaches the social sciences and history; Miss Anna Regier, English Instructor; Mr. Gerhard Neufeld, mathematics and science teacher.

—Your church bulletin helps to make good news in The Mennonite. Won't you see to it that it is sent in if that isn't already being done. A number of churches which use bulletins have not yet made a practice of sending them in. You like to read about others. Remember that others like to read about you.

—First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California: A committee has been appointed to arrange for the entertainment of C. P. S. campees who come to visit. Brother D. C. Krehbiel, brother of the late Rev. H. J. Krehbiel, is chairman. The catechism class meets on Saturday afternoon.—Mention is made in the bulletin of the golden wedding anniversary of Rev. and Mrs. S. S. Baumgartner of Portland, Oregon.—Speaking of the restricted driving that is coming, the pastor suggests, "Meetings of some kind could be held at 9 a. m. Others in the early afternoon with a lunch for those who cannot go home because of distance in between. A vesper service might take the place of the evening service. Committee meetings and practice meetings could be held sometime during the day on Sunday thus making fewer trips necessary during the week."

—Rev. David Wedel, Statistician of the Western District Conference, should have all the necessary reports by this time. If some pastor has not sent in his reports, he should do so right away.

—Rev. P. K. Regier is teaching in the Henderson, Nebraska, high school. The pupils of this school system are mostly Mennonites.

—Of about sixty young people who have gone away from Mountain Lake, Minnesota, this fall to attend school, the following ten have enrolled at Bethel College: Lola Mae Regier, Eugene Dick, Adeline Quiring, Harold Buller, Abe Wiebe, Edna V. Buller, Erna Fast, Esther Ruth Schroeder, Donald Isaac, and Jacob Friesen.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

CRYING IN THE NIGHT

There were seven mouths to feed. The head of the house has been doing evangelistic work in Janjgir Tahsile, rural India. He is receiving $3.60 per month. In normal times this would have been sufficient. For prices were low, food was cheap, and his cash income was supplemented by his rice fields and his garden.

But now, alas! For two years crops have failed. The surplus stored up by the rich dwindles away. Prices soar. The hungry stomachs of children cry out for food. What can he do?

In his straightened circumstances he sold his only remaining ox. It was his draft animal, a dwarf at that. Its mate had died earlier in the year. The cash tided him over for two months—then again there was crying in the night. Again hunger pinched. His largest calf went next, then the youngest and last calf. In the meantime he had to borrow all seed rice, and at exhorbitant rates, as well as the labor to plow his fields. In the meanwhile hopes of his getting on a self-supporting basis dwindle away. What is our word in this situation?

Nehemiah earns about $1.50 per month as watchman. In addition, he tries to run a passanger transport cart from the railway station two miles distant. This is a precarious enterprise, and, with fodder scarce, it is an expensive source of income.

"What are you going to do with this corner bit of land, brother?" I asked him. It was about fifteen feet long and nine feet deep. He replied, "I've sold it to a shop keeper for his shop for $9.00." Wishing to encourage gardening, and seeing in this very plot of land garden and food possibilities for hungry India, I asked in dismay, "Why did you sell it?" He replied, "What else could I do? I was dying of starvation."

Many of our Hindu neighbors eat one or less meals per day nowadays. This is no full meal at that, but a mere snatch of rice with or without salt. This is not living. It is not existance. It is sub-existance. Two years of crop failure. Cholera all around. Marketing stopped. Trade almost at a standstill. The tightest time of the year.—These things cry out for relief.

In normal times I insist that the Christian community must be integrated economically in its Indian setting. To fail to do so is to warp character and to loose a most potent opportunity for the spread of the gospel.

But during abnormal times, with war, cholera, repeated crop failure, exhorbitant prices for basic food stuffs, a very very hot hot season when shrubbery and trees withered away and wells ran dry, and the tightest time of the year at hand, what then?

To send relief during these times is Biblical, is Christian, is Mennonitism. To use it in work productive is not character deteriorating. And when these abnormal times pass away, and normal times come again, Indian Christians must again find means of livelihood in their own Indian setting, and not parasitically live off foreign missions. Then we will have bigger tasks on hand than being managers of coolie labor gangs. —S. T. Moyer

HARD TO BEHOLD

During the daily routine some features are pleasant to observe; others threaten to undermine the joy of life and work, if it were not for the undeniable promises in His Word. The effects of the two-years crop failures drastically press home. Just a few incidents, scores could be related.

Two consecutive days a boy with a distressed face frequented our door repeatedly. Upon inquiry he replied, "Mother and I have not eaten a bite! I am so hungry, could I beg for something to eat?" The mother earns five cents a day; rice sells for three cents a pound; both need two lbs. daily, equaling six cents without peppers, salt and a tiny bit of vegetables. Daily a debit balance registers. The shopkeepers are seriously pressed on all sides and refuse to sell on credit. Before sufficient is accumulated to purchase, several days fly by. The mother likewise felt the pangs of hunger. How they relished this given meal with the tiny baby in her arms!

Last Sunday a Christian brought his Hindu wife to be baptised. She had sought this opportunity for some time. He became a Christian more than a year ago. The good woman wore no clothes but just a few dirty rags insufficient to cover the most necessary portions; the husband had likewise wrapped rags about him. To her a loin cloth was given. The three children from five years down to seven months should be blessed. All were completely naked. The two older ones were supplied with small pieces of cloth to cover the loins, the youngest, however, blessed unclothed. The middle child suffered frightfully from a carbuncle-like sore in his upper leg. Poor thing! The family has nothing. Oh, how shall they live? It is actually surprising that they somehow manage to exist. The children were much undernourished; their faces told the story.

A peep was made into an evangelist's house. The flock of children whining about for food. Not a kernel of rice, not a drop of milk to depend on; the mother was sick and weak. A few pieces of money were given to purchase rice, but, alas, so expensive, "What is that among so many?" The mother finally dragged herself to our door, telling that for three days nothing had come between their teeth. She barely had said that, weakness overwhelmed her; if not grabbed, she would have dropped on the stone veranda. A little milk now is shared for the baby daily. How shall growth and strength prosper? This family of eight how shall they with $3.00 monthly exist—can one say live? Insufficient for food, nothing to replenish the rags while apparel calls for a double or triple price!

May the reader not think these lines were composed with an unburdened heart, nor permit within even some reproachful thoughts against such distressing stories and why they are reiterated in the papers. One sits at a decked table while others starve, retards even the appetite, or how to face the haggard ones. A child of Christians succumbed to starvation in our field. "Oh, Lord, forgive where the hand has not opened sufficiently to ease someone's condition!"

RELIEF

CONSTRUCTING THE CHACO ROAD

With the cooperation of the Mennonites of the Fernheim and Menno colonies, Brother Vernon Schmidt is proceeding with the construction of a much-needed road on the boundary between the two colonies. The colonies jointly are donating the labor, while the Mennonite Central Committee is providing some funds for a grader and other needed equipment.

Brother Schmidt remarks in his August 21 letter: "Orange trees here are blooming good, so if there is no more frost this winter, maybe they will have a good crop of them here. It is too dry yet to do any planting, and too early too, so it is a good time to be working on this road."

A GLIMPSE OF THE MENNONITE BIBLE SCHOOL IN THE CHACO

Village No. 7 of the Mennonites in the Chaco in Paraguay is the Seat of the Bible School of which Brethren Bernard Wall and Nicoli Siemens are the teachers.

Dr. John R. Schmidt's letter of September 3 tells of a visit which he and Vernon Schmidt paid to this school. A total of thirty-seven pupils are enrolled, and according to Dr. Schmidt, are happy and appreciative of their opportunity.

Quoting from Dr. Schmidt: "The course of study calls for five hours each day with new subjects every hour. Subjects taught are Bible, Bible History, Characters of the Bible, Biblical Geography, Mennonite History, and German grammar besides short topics and singing."

Canet Plage, France

Dear Friends at home:

Just what news from our home would you be interested in today? I believe you might enjoy an account of a day that comes about twice a month—the time when we exchange children whom we have kept during a couple of months for new ones from the camp. We had such a day last week. I shall describe it to you as being a typical one.

The returning group numbered ten, and included an assortment of ages and types. Several of the big boys—Walter, Alberto, and Adolph—were fortunate enough to have warm clothes to wear and some left over to pack in their small bags. Little three-year-old Leopold also had a midget-sized knapsack thrown over his shoulder. Along with them were the four Masso sisters who had no clothes except what they were wearing, and even at that they were quite scantily dressed. Only the smallest one was wearing a coat, and Marie's toes were peeking from the tips of her cloth sandals. In their hands were clutched the toys they had received for Christmas—nothing more. But all of them looked well and strong. I accompanied this little tribe to the train station a couple of blocks away where I gave them into the charge of a camp nurse who was just arriving with the new group. After giving good-by kisses to those returning to the camp, I started back with those who were arriving at the convalescent home. When we entered the gate, there was the whole colony lined up to see who were the newcomers, for often among the latter they find friends or brothers or sisters. However, before they had time to get together, the strangers were given their dinner and then were whisked up to the bathroom to be washed and examined; in the process those who had lice lost their hair. Although most of them soon found a companion; one little boy who felt quite alone began crying for his mother. A few kind words and friendly gestures sufficed to comfort him. And so ended another population change in our home.

By this time all of them have become familiar figures about the place. The experiences of returning a group to the camp is always a bit difficult, for one wishes that it were possible to keep all who come and still continue to take in new ones. But we are glad for this system whereby we can multiply the number of those to whom we can give our witness of Christian love. At the same time we can feel sure that we are serving those who really need help. We earnestly desire that at all times our lives may manifest the spirit of Him who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me."

With sincere greetings to all, Lois Gunden

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

THE RIGHT SIZE CHURCH

What is the numerical size of a Christian church at which point it can do its work most successfully? At the present time churches vary in size from a few dozen to several thousand. Among Mennonites churches range in size from a small group of fourteen in Maryland to the large Mennonite Church in Amsterdam, Holland, with over 7,000. The answer to the question raised depends on what one's conception of the Christian Church is.

Early Christian Churches

The early Christian groups were small in number, but they knew what it was "to be all with one accord" daily ministering to one another's needs. They knew what it was to experience the visitation of the Spirit together, to be branches of a common vine, to partake common meals together, and to look forward to dwelling together in the Father's house of many mansions. The size of these early Christian groups was such that it permitted intimate relations one with another such as those found in the ordinary family. No wonder they were of one mind and of one spirit. When the members of a Christian fellowship know one another, lift one another up in prayer, feel responsible before God for one another, then when they meet together for worship they are truly "the body of Christ" through which the deepest working of the Spirit can operate.

The Communion of Saints

Now it is this very pattern which Mennonites originally sought to mould on. Believing in adult baptism, they conceived of themselves as a "Communion of Saints;" as a lay-body of those in whom the indwelling Christ is at work effecting mighty spiritual changes. Those who joined Mennonite fellowships were touched on every side of their lives. Membership in such a body resulted in a genuine feeling of membership in the body of Christ. It meant security, satisfaction, and solidarity in as great a measure as it could anywhere be found on earth.

To-day

In 1906 the average size of the American Mennonite Church was 90; in 1916 it was 94; in 1926, it grew to 106; and in 1936 the average size was 125. This clearly indicates the growing size of Mennonite churches. In some branches of the Church have come other changes, among them that of a paid minister, paid choiristers and organists. To pay for these it has been necessary to solicit larger memberships and large memberships have in turn required the building and maintaining of huge and expensive buildings. This trend in size of churches along with numerous other characteristics illustrates how we are imitating the pattern of Protestant churches in general rather than the early Christian brotherhoods and the Anabaptist fellowships. It is the genius of Mennonites to be small vigorous Christian bodies rather than large groups with half the members socially inactive and spiritually unmoved.

VACANCIES FILLED

In case of occurring vacancies in the organization of the General Conference, the constitution provides that the conference officers fill them by appointment till conference meets again.

In accord with this the following appointments have been made and accepted: Brother Walter Gering, Moundridge, Kansas, will serve on the Business Committee in place of Brother Edgar Toevs, who has resigned. Brother J. N. Smucker, Bluffton, Ohio, will serve on the Peace Committee, representing the Middle District, in place of Brother H. T. Unruh, Hillsboro, Kansas, who has moved from that district to the Western District. Brother Unruh will serve in place of Brother E. L. Harshbarger, deceased. Brother Elmer Basinger, Summerfield, Illinois, will serve on the Committee on Doctrine and Conduct in place of Edgar Toevs, who has resigned.

May the Lord richly bless these brethren and all others who are serving Him in the various boards and committees in these times of stress and heart searching. —C. E. Krehbiel, President

HOME LIFE

"This ideal of the home as the real center of life for the members of the family is one that is worth cherishing and cultivating today. One thing is evident, that unless parents definitely plan to make their home the center of family life, it will hardly be such a center in this modern day when so many outside attractions and interests tend to move the family's focus of interest outside the home itself. The principle of the simple life needs to be carefully cultivated in the interest of keeping up the traditional Mennonite emphasis on a vital and effective home life. Parents and children can well afford to forego many outside interests and activities, such as clubs, athletics, amusements, outings, and so forth, in order to make home more attractive for all members of the family."

(Edward Yoder in a booklet used in Mennonite C. P. S. camps).

We are living in a time when reverence has almost become a lost virtue. Modern literature has no reverence. Nothing is sacred. Social life, the hallowed things of religion, God Himself, are all alike dragged out and exposed to the gaze and jest of Main Street. We are told that our age is franker than those that have gone before. It is not so much frankness as superficiality. Irreverence is the sign of a shallow mind. —Stuart Nye Hutchinson

EVANGELISTIC MEETING, FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

The First Mennonite Church has been planning and praying for weeks for a fall campaign in evangelism. Rev. J. J. Esau, blind evangelist, Bluffton, Ohio, has been engaged to conduct two weeks of services, covering three Sundays, October 18 to November 1. The congregation is asking for an interest in your prayers for a rich and abiding spiritual ingathering. Rev. and Mrs. Erwin Albrecht, 1500 West 72nd Place, are laboring here.

Three goals have been set up to be reached: First, a deepening of the spiritual life and a greater willingness to cooperate in the religious work among the members of First Mennonite Church.

Second, it is the earnest hope to reach many of the friends and neighbors in our community who are unsaved and outside of Christ. It is our hope and prayer that many might be touched and that they might respond to the call of Christ.

Scattered Mennonites in Chicago Invited

The third hope of the church is to make these meetings a rallying point for the many Mennonites who come from General Conference and other churches to come together for spiritual fellowship, consecration, and mutual encouragement in these meetings.

This might be the occasion for pastors who have members in Chicago to write a personal letter to them and encourage them to come to these meetings at the First Mennonite Church, 73rd and Laflin Streets. Remove a live coal from the rest on the hearth and it soon cools off. Kept together, all will remain warm and shed a radiant glow of warmth and comfort to those in the room. Even so individuals and lone-standing Mennonite families, fare likewise. It is, indeed, a tragedy to know that many from our churches go to the large city for work and there often become lost in the mass of people—lost to the home church very frequently, lost to the city church where they would be very welcome and needed to help—lost to Christ and His Cause all too often.

Mennonites rally to one of the churches of your faith! Rally to these evangelistic meetings! Evangelistic Esau is widely known as a sane and earnest preacher of the Gospel of Christ. For more than three months this summer he was constantly holding meetings in our Canadian Mennonite Churches with success. The call for salvation and consecration will be made. Is there anyone who does not need to respond?

May the Lord bless the efforts to attain the three goals for His glory and for the good of many souls.

Yours for a spiritual ingathering,

—A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

Take Thou My Hands

Take Thou my hands and lead me, O heav'nly Friend,
Until the end of day and eternally,
I cannot walk alone, ev'ry step attend,
Where thou wouldst go or tarry, there would I be.

In Thy rich grace enfold thou my fainting heart—
A quiet spirit yielding in joy or pain;
Lord, to Thy weary child e'er Thy strength impart,
When dark, the way unknown, Saviour, lead, sustain.

Though I feel not Thy strength, though the night descend,
Still Thou wilt bring me home, Thou wilt near me be;
So take my hands and lead me, O precious Friend,
Until earth's journey ends, and eternally.

—The Marietta, Ohio, C.P.S. camp paper states, "One of the most active committees in our camp is the Religious Life Committee. . . Since there are many religious services in one week, the quantity of the work is very great. Consequently the group must meet frequently and must have a carefully organized work schedule." It is the aim of this committee to use every campee in some religious service.

A LIBERAL OFFER to NEW SUBSCRIBERS

New subscribers to The Mennonite can now have this Official General Conference weekly paper from NOW UNTIL JANUARY, 1944, for only $1.00. This Christian denominational paper should be in every Mennonite home, so that it can be read by both young and old. It is of special interest to Mennonites at this time, because it brings regularly the latest information on the draft and news from the C.P.S. camps and relief work carried on in Europe under the direction of the M.C.C.

Please, subscribe now and obtain the benefit of this liberal offer. An order blank will be found on the last page of the paper. Address all orders and payments for The Mennonite to the Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Gerald Stucky, New York City, New York

OCTOBER 15—"Dead flies cause the ointment of the apothecary to send forth a stinking savour: so doth a little folly him that is in reputation for wisdom and honour. Eccles. 10:1.

A hundred virtues may be obscured by a simple prominent vice. The best character is weakened and is often made unstable by a single careless habit. An otherwise excellent Christian testimony is often made of non-effect by foolish and inopportune words spoken in unguarded moments. The grace of God coupled with eternal vigilance alone can overcome the inclinations of the flesh and the sinful desires of the human heart.

OCTOBER 16—"Then came the disciples to Jesus apart, and said, Why could not we cast him out?" Matt. 17:19.

Man is ever perplexed at his failures. His never ending surprise at his own weakness amidst seeming strength is one of the most significant and pathetic sights in human history. And what makes the situation still more pathetic is that the only lesson he learns from history is that he learns nothing from history. How then can we overcome failure— how shall we learn to cast out hate, greed, lust, and war if not by the power of our own will? "This is the vitcory that overcometh the world, even our faith, who is he that overcometh the world but he that believeth that Jesus is the Christ the son of the living God?"

OCTOBER 17—"Do all things without murmurings and disputings:" Phil. 2:14.

Murmurings and disputings are acts of the tongue brought about by a condition of the heart. If we would not offend in this way it will be necessary that we have the right attitudes within us. We do not paint the pump in order to get clean water from a well, but rather we clean out the well. It is an endless job to endeavor to have clean water in a river if the fountain of the river is polluted. Yea, it is an impossibility. No doubt, the Holy Spirit was correct when He recorded in the book of James, "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body." The perfect control of the tongue is indicative of a clean heart, a heart cleaned by the blood of Jesus Christ.

OCTOBER 18—"And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." Gal. 6:9.

Jacob A. Riis once said, "When nothing seems to help, I go and look at a stonecutter hammering away at his rock, perhaps a hundred times without as much as a crack showing in it. Yet, at the one hundred first blow it will split in two, and I know it was not that blow that did it, but all that had gone before." In the Christian life we have not been promised immediate phenomenal success in all things that we undertake to do, nor instantaneous answers to all of our prayers, but we may be assured that if we are faithful we shall reap that which we have sown.

OCTOBER 19—"I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God who loved me, and gave himself for me. Gal. 2:20.

In each heart there is a cross and a throne. If self is on the throne of our heart, then Christ is on the cross. If Christ is on the throne, then self is on the cross. It is only as Christ sits on the throne that we begin to realize the fullness of the Christian life. In His presence and guidance our lives become integrated, purposeful, useful and blessed. When self is on the throne, defeat is certain, but with Christ on the throne the ultimate victory is certain. Truly it should be with us as it was with one when he said, "I would a thousand times rather be losing now in a cause which will ultimately win, than be winning now in a cause which will ultimately lose."

OCTOBER 20—". . . . the tongue is a little member and boasteth great things. Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth!" James 3:5.

God has given us two eyes, two ears, but only one tongue to the seeming intent that we should see and hear more than we should speak. A young couple that lived in the time of old dobbin were one evening coming home from a social engagement in their two-horse carriage. Having only been married a few weeks they had found some of the places a little steep and had occasionally found themselves quarreling. As they rode along in their carriage they watched their two horses slowly wend their way up the steep and rocky hillside and finally reach the top in safety. "You know," said John, "if we would work together as our two horses did going up that hill we should be able to mount any hill or trouble that confronts us." "Yes," replied Mary, "Maybe we could if there were only one tongue between the two of us."

OCTOBER 21—"forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Phil. 3:13b, 14.

Aughey writes, "What a blessed thing it is that we can forget. Today's troubles look large, but in a week they will be forgotten and buried out of sight. Says one writer, 'If you should keep a book, and daily put down the things that worry you, and see what becomes of them, it would be a benefit to you.' " But not only are we to be able to forget our anxieties, it is equally important that we forget our successes so that our eyes may not be clouded by them as we face the future, but rather let us continuously seize the opportunity of the day that thereupon we may build the successes of tomorrow.

FACTS ON MENNONITE EDUCATION PAST AND PRESENT

The early leaders of the Anabaptist Movement (which later became the Mennonite Church), were not only men of religious fervor, but also men of high scholarly attainments. Their scholarship as well as their spirit helped to make the early Mennonite Church what it was.

The first book in America on the art of teaching was written by a Mennonite, Christopher Dock. The book was called Schulordnung and was printed in 1770 after the author's death. Many of his ideas closely resemble educational methods which today are considered modern.

Ursinus college in Pennsylvania has become a strong school in the Reformed Church. It was first called Freeland Seminary and was founded by Abraham Hunsicker, a Mennonite, in 1869. It was his hope that in time the church would adopt that institution as its own. Instead, the brethern of the church, with less vision than he, not only refused to recognize the school but excommunicated him from the church.

John F. Funk, another pioneer in Mennonite education, was one of the leaders in starting Sunday schools. In 1864 he also started the publication of the Herald of Truth." In its pages he expressed teaching methods which seemed to be very ahead of his day.

One of the first institutions of higher learning organized by the Mennonites was the Wadsworth School, located at Wadsworth, Ohio. The life of the institution was short, lasting from 1868 to 1878. Our own Rev. Fretz is one of the few remaining students of that school.

Today there are about twenty Mennonite schools and colleges. In 1938 a study revealed that there was a total enrollment in these institutions of about three thousand.

The percentage of Mennonites attending these schools and colleges is increasing. Especially, is this true of Bluffton and Bethel. This would indicate a growing interest of Mennonite young people in education and in Mennonite institutions of learning.

Our leaders in Mennonite education are considering the possibility of establishing a Mennonite seminary to train ministers. It is believed that if we are to understand the "Faith of Our Fathers", as well as the tasks for today, we must have our own institutions to train our ministers.

The war is adding an additional burden on our colleges in the way of decrease in enrollment and higher operating expense.

If all this is true, what then?

The story of Mennonite education from the beginning until now is one of hardship and sacrifice. It will continue to be so if Mennonite education is to go on. Does it pay? Is it worth the price? Is it a concern of mine?

If we are to answer in terms of interest-on-the-investment, in terms of hard, cold dividends, perhaps it does not pay. But if we are to answer in terms of human personality and spiritual values, we say it not only pays but it is absolutely indispensable. —Bulletin, Deep Run Mennonite Church, Deep Run, Pennsylvania.

THINGS WE CAN'T AFFORD

We can't affort to win the gain
  That means another's loss;
We can't afford to miss the crown
  By stumbling at the cross.
We can't afford the heedless jest
  That robs us of a friend;
We can't afford the laugh that finds
  In bitter tears an end.
We can't afford the feast today
  That brings tomorrow's fast.
We can't afford the farce that comes
  To tragedy at last.
We can't afford to play with fire
  Or tempt a serpent's bite.
We can't afford to think that sin
  Brings any true delight.
We can't afford with serious heed
  To treat the cynic's sneer;
We can't afford to wise men's words
  To turn a careless ear:
We can't afford for hate to give
  Like hatred in return;
We can't afford to feed such flame
  And make it fiercer burn.
We can't afford to lose the soul
  For this world's fleeting breath;
We can't afford to barter life
  In mad exchange for death.
But blind to good are we apart
  From thee, all-seeing Lord;
O, grant us light that we may know
  The things we can't afford.

Mountain Lake, Minnesota, Y. P. Retreat

The 1942 Young People's Retreat, which was sponsored by the three General Conference churches of Mountain Lake, was held in the Bethel church in Mountain Lake, on August 23 to 26. Over a hundred young people registered during the retreat.

The theme of the retreat was "The Consecrated Life." Rev. Walter Dyck of Beatrice, Nebraska, gave us two very inspiring messages on Monday and Tuesday evenings, dealing with the theme of the retreat. His messages were entitled "Consecration, God's Side" and "Consecration, Man's Side."

The motto chosen for the retreat was "Not I, But Christ," and this motto was the theme of Rev. Erland Waltner's heartsearching message to us on Sunday evening, the first evening of the retreat. This motto was very deeply impressed upon our hearts during the entire retreat by our various teachers.

We began each day of the retreat by having chapel. Students of various schools spoke to us during chapel. Mr. Arnold Fast of the Moody Bible Institute spoke on John 3:0 "He must increase but I must decrease," Mr. Ben Rahn of Bethel College spoke on II Cor. 5:9-15 in which he pointed out to us motives for Christian service. The last morning Miss Emma Linscheid of the Northwestern Bible school discussed II Tim. 1:12 "That ye may know."

Our regular classes were filled with spiritual food for our souls. Rev. Albert Schultz of Butterfield was in charge of our Bible Study class and in this class three very important subjects were explained to us. They were "Regeneration," "Justification," and "Sanctification." Rev. Walter Dyck's subject for this day classes was, "What Does It Mean To Be A Christian?" Rev. Erland Waltner gave us two messages on practical Christian work entitled, "The Winsome Life" and "Problems and Methods of Evangelism." The young women of the retreat were under the instruction of Mrs. Erland Waltner during our divided group discussions. She chose the two subjects "Women God Chose For Crisis" and "Women God Chose For Humble Service." Missionary Aganetha Fast of China led the discussion on missions.

On Wednesday afternoon a "retreaters" picnic was held in the park near the Bethel Church.

Officers were elected to plan the retreat for next year. Jacob Friesen was elected as our president.

For the last evening of the retreat we gathered at the lake shore. A very impressive service was held with Rev. Dyck as the leader of an "open forum" discussion. He also was in charge of the candlelight service.

Our hearts are filled with gratitude and thanksgiving to the Lord for the showers of blessings He bestowed upon us during our retreat. May we remember and pray that the motto of the retreat may be true in our lives, "Not I, But Christ."

The retreat theme chorus bears the testimony of the retreaters:

I am crucified with Christ, at the cross of Calvary,
Still I live, yet not I, but Christ in me,
And the life which now I live shall for Jesus only be,
For I live by the faith of the Son of God,
Who gave Himself for me.

Civilian Public Service Camp No. 31

Camino, California

By Arnold Claassen

Snowline Civilian Public Service Camp No. 31 is situated at the foot hills of the Sierra Nevadas, ten miles northeast of Placerville, California. It covers an area of approximately 8 acres and is also an abandoned CCC camp with a capacity of 200. Since one barrack is used for storage by the Forestry Service, the present capacity is 150. The immediate surroundings of the camp include the tall Pondarose Pine, Cedar, a few Oak, besides the homes, tourist camps and service stations found along Federal Highway 50 which passes our camp. The camp is quite well equipped with buildings including five barracks, of which one is partly used as chapel and the remainder in inhabited by the kitchen force. Along the north ends of the barracks is the mess hall and kitchen and next the washroom and laundry to the west. Going around to the south is the director's home and back east are the office, assistant director's and dieticians quarters, the recreation hall, hospital, and library. A barber shop is also found among the buildings and is often used by a graduated barber and other amateurs among the campees. Down the slope to the south are found the Technical Agency's quarters, truck sheds, tool house, and a soft ball diamond.

The camp site is neatly marked off with crushed rock walks, lined with rocks which have been white washed. Beside the rocks, irises have been planted. The grounds are neatly kept by Robert Oswald and his helpers. Garbage cans have been placed in various places to prevent scattering candy wrappers and other litter about the camp grounds. We also have a concrete tennis court, a volley ball court, and horseshoe stakes. The latter have had many a shoe hurled at them since the tournament began July 14.

Our work is wholly with the U. S. Forestry Service in the El Dorado National Forest which covers about one million acres. There are three major groups from the main camp working on projects.

One group works at the Pacific Ranger Station. Their work includes road building, maintenance of station grounds, office, electrical and telephone work.

The second group works at the Institute of Forest Genetics. The purpose of this institution is to develop faster growing and higher quality trees to use in replanting burned-over areas. So far, the work has been mainly caring for seedlings which have required careful pollination, starting, and transplanting. This care includes pulling and hoeing weeds, watering, building backfires, and even scattering grasshopper poison in the wee hours of the morning. Much laboratory work is required in connection with this project and some has been done by a few campees, but more of that is expected to be done during the rainy winter months. Incidently, this is the only institution of its kind in the country.

The third group works at the Forestry Service Warehouse in Placerville. The work here is mechanical, washing and greasing Forestry equipment, carpentry, and caring for tools.

In addition to these projects, a few men do various types of necessary work about the camp including kitchen, laundry, janitor, care of tool house, office, camp maintenance, etc. And 45 of the boys are equally distributed in three spike camps located from 30 to 60 miles from the main camp. The purpose of this is to be better prepared to combat fires anywhere in the El Dorado National Forest which is our job under the "Rangers" and "Fire Guards" should fires occur. Fortunately, thus far we have not had any real forest fires to fight, but the fellows are not having a vacation in the absence of them. They eliminate fire hazards i. e. burning brush, etc., fall snags, build roads and repair telephone electric lines, and fences. Practically no complaint is heard from the boys at the "Spike camps" except about the mail situation, which is very irregular—often only once a week.

The campees hail from eight middle west and western states in the following numbers: Colo. 10; Calif. 53; Okla. 23; Neb. 17; Ariz. 4; Utah 2; and Wyo. 1.

The educational program had its beginning in the middle of June. Two First Aid classes were started with approximately twenty members in each class, some of which have dropped out. We have a two hour class period once a week and a total of twenty hours of class instruction is required in the courses. It also involves a test given by a local Red Cross Chapter. Each of the classes is conducted by a licensed First Aid instructor who is also a campee.

The camp also has a wood-working shop equipped with a lathe, circular saw, jig saw, band saw, and other tools. Two evenings a week, those interested may work in there under the supervision of one of the two campees, who are experienced in that type of work.

Those interested in photography meet on Friday evening and receive instructions on film developing and photography in general from a campee. We have a dark room, which is equipped with necessary equipment for film developing partly given by the M.C.C., and the remainder was given or made by the campee who has chosen photography as his hobby. Many of the fellows find developing their own films both interesting and economical.

The educational program is expected to be enlarged during the winter months with some Bible study, etc. It is under the supervision of Bill Ramseyer, the Assistant Director.

The formal education of the campees varies from less than the eighth grade to nine years of college.

Various hobbies are practiced by the fellows. Photography as was mentioned, stamp collecting and quite a number of different musical instruments are played, such as violins, guitars, accordians, piano, mandolin, mouth harp, trombone, etc., we have a quartet, which has sung outside once. We also have a chorus which practices each Friday evening.

The recreational activities are of quite a wide range. The horseshoe tournament has many enthusiastic participants. We have some softball games between dorms on Saturday afternoons and volley ball games between dorms in evenings. In addition to these we play tennis, badminton, ping-pong, checkers, and chess. Hiking has also proved to be an enjoyable sport for some.

In one end of our recreation hall we have a camp store. Here such necessities as soap, shaving goods, writing materials, and films, soft drinks, candy and ice cream are sold. It is usually quite a popular place during its open hours after supper until 9:45 on week days and 10:30 on Saturdays. We have just recently changed it into a co-op. As many as possible of the campees are encouraged to invest the small amount of $1.00 which is one share. This we expect to prove both interesting and practical.

In order to sustain us in the Christian faith religious emphasis is present in camp. The blessing is asked before each meal by one of the campees. After breakfast each morning a staff member or a previously notified campee leads in the devotions. The regular Sunday School and church services on Sunday morning and the Christian Endeavor in the evening and the mid-week prayer meeting are conducted so as to benefit all the campees if possible. The Sunday school teachers and Christian Endeavor officers have thus far been elected for one month periods in order to give as many as possible an opportunity to undertake the responsibility.

Our director, Rev. H. H. Brubaker has been a missionary to Southern Rhodesia, Africa. Mrs. Brubaker is a registered nurse, who faithfully lends her hand in that capacity. She also serves as matron. The Brubakers have two children; Ronald 12, and Edna 8. As was mentioned, Bill Ramseyer is the Educational Supervisor and is the Assistant Camp Director. He is a graduate of Bluffton College, Bluffton, Ohio, and was a Y.M.C.A. worker in Chicago just previous to his coming here. Mrs. Ramseyer, also a graduate of Bluffton College, is our efficient librarian.

Miss Florence Aurenheimer, a former teacher in California schools, is our dietitian.

Rudolph Lichti from Reedley held an office job in a garage previous to his coming to camp and is now business manager.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

STEPS TOWARD THE SOLUTION OF THE ALCOHOL PROBLEM

Eccles. 10:17, Amos 5:21-24, Rom. 14:19-21, II Cor. 6:17, I Peter 4:1-5

Our lesson topic is of great practical importance. It will do little good to deplore the drink evil so long as we fail to do something about it. Merely passing good resolutions will not solve the problem. Serious-minded people should consider carefully and prayerfully what ought to be done and what may wisely be done under prevailing conditions. Our lesson text contains excellent suggestions concerning the conduct of the child of God. Paul warns us against any conduct which would cause others to stumble. He urges us not to touch any unclean thing. Peter reminds us that the Christian should not find his pleasure in revelings and kindred vices. The first step in solving the alcohol problem is for Christian people to form the habit of personally abstaining from all kinds of strong drink. They will profit personally and will set a righteous example before others.

Righteous Character Necessary

Leaders who indulge in intemperate feasting and revelry (Eccles. 10:16) are a deteriment to a nation. Noble kings, princes, leaders are a blessing to a land. People of good moral character usually eat regularly and temperately so as to gain needed strength. Sacrifices, formal, and outward worship will be useless to secure God's favor so long as people persist in gross sins. There is no substitute for true heart worship. Righteous character alone counts. The music and song of the people of Amos' time was insincere and objectionable to God (vss. 22-23). Formal worship, without the Spirit, is abomination to God. Justice and righteousness, so much neglected and forgotten, was then, and is now what God wants.

The Christian's Personal Example

Paul summarizes vss. 16-18 in vs. 19. Christian duty is mutual building up of character. "Inconsiderate use of 'liberty' may lead to pulling down" (Maclaren). Christian obligation demands our abstaining from some things which might otherwise be allowed, if our indulgence tends to harm or mislead another. We are our brother's keeper. We may not satisfy our own desires in utter disregard of our influence on others (vs. 20). The Christian who drinks alcoholic beverages may be, and most likely will be, a very serious cause of stumbling.

The Christian should renounce everything which he sees to be morally or spiritually defiling (vs. 17). God is holy, his children should also be holy, separating themselves from that which is evil. Separation from sin is necessary for fellowship with God. True Christians are separate unto Him. This must be moral and spiritual. Christians have to live in the flesh but not to the flesh. They should have the same mind Jesus had. Suffering of itself will not take away sin; but a willingness to suffer patiently is an evidence that Christ has come into the heart and that it has been freed from sin. When a Christian is living as he should his life silently condemns the sinner, and he may speak evil of him. The world does not understand how the Christian life of self-denial can be a life of happiness.

Educating the People

In democratic countries progress toward the solution of the alcoholic problem will depend much on public sentiment. Public sentiment will be greatly moulded by propaganda and by education. So long as people do not see the alcohol problem as very real, there will be no attempt to solve it. If they think drinking is harmless or practically so, especially moderate drinking, they will naturally feel that it is nobody else's business what they drink, or what is being sold by the liquor dealers. It is of utmost importance that people should know and admit the facts. Many states require the teaching of the effects of alcohol upon the human body in the public schools. This is a primary step. Much teaching needs to be done in the home, and here example far outweighs precept. Our United States is seeing a steady increase in excessive drinking in almost all groups from adolescence onward. America does not seem to realize the seriousness of the drink enemy in her midst. If all professing Christians were truly Christian, they would run the liquor business out of the country in a short time.

CPS Camps

Information about Canadian C. O.'s

In all there are over twenty-five camps in Canada for the 850 Canadian conscientious objectors. Nineteen of these camps are located in British Columbia, four are in Western Provinces and one is in Ontario. (The above figures do not include the Doukabours who have separate camps.)

Around 700 boys are doing work for the Forestry Service and 150 boys are in National Park work. A few boys have gone to England in the Canadian Fire Fighting Corps (Civilian), and a number are in training in Ottawa at the present time.

Reconstruction Work by C. P. S. Boys in Puerto Rico

The Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration is the government agency under which Civilian Service Camp No. 43 is now serving in Puerto Rico. The camp consists of carefully chosen men who are qualified to assist in laboratory work and in doctor's offices, as well as community welfare projects.

Brother Elmer E. Hartzler is a member of this unit which is administered by the Brethren Service Committee. Brother Hartzler in a recent letter describes the remodeling of a barrack into a hospital, tells of the Spanish classes which the boys attend, and in general gives a picture of real service being rendered to an impoverished community.

Spare Time Earnings of Campees

Following is a minute of a recent Executive Committee meeting of the Mennonite Central Committee:

"The problem arising out of campees earning money in spare time was discussed. The Executive Secretary reported that thn Weinoa Lake Camp Directors' Meeting felt that a statement of policy from the M. C. C. would be helpful. After considerable discussion it was moved and unanimously passed that the question as to the advisability of encouraging or discouraging such work should be left to the camp administration to be decided in light of the need and the effect on public relations and as to whether it fits in with the regular work and camp program. In the matter of remuneration for such spare time earnings, it was decided that at least half of the income should be turned over to some public purpose either within or without the camp—the details of this to be agreeable to the camp and also the camp administration. This applies only to the spare time work during camp residence and does not apply to furlough time."

Camp Briefs

236 boys arrived at Mennonite camps during September. . . .

Mrs. Roy Wenger of Smithville, Ohio, has been appointed dietician at Colorado Springs Camp.

Sister Marie Groening will transfer from Colorado Springs, where she has been dietician, to the Hill City, South Dakota, camp when this camp opens.

Released September 30, 1942

New Hospitals Open to Mennonite Boys

Two state hospitals have recently been approved as institutions eligible to use C. P. S. boys on their staffs. A mental hospital at Wilmington, Delaware, and also at Hastings, Nebraska, will receive contingents of C. P. S. campees. The former will receive boys from the Sideling Hill and Howard camps in Pa. and the latter from the mid-western camps in Denison, Iowa, and Weeping Water, Nebraska.

Emergency Farm Service Approved

The United States Employment Service is the government agency under which C. P. S. campees can now do emergency farm labor in communities adjacent to the damp. This work is done during the regular work hours and is carried on within the confines of a fifteen mile radius of the camp. The work is voluntary on the part of the campees and is limited to the particular form of labor which the U.S.E.S. certifies as being of an emergency nature.

This new provision is recent, and to date only a few of the C. P. S. camps have been affected by it.

Appointments to Camp Staffs

Dieticians: Sister Ellen Zimmerman, Harper, Kans., to Belton, Montana; Sister Clara Vogt of California to North Fork, California; Sister Laura Blosser, Columbiana, Ohio, to Luray, Virginia.

Business Manager: Brother Leon D. Lugbill, campee, Luray, Virginia.

Nurse-Matron: Sister Elsie Rempel, Hillsboro, Kansas, to North Fork, California.

Educational Directors: Brother Elmer Ediger, campee at Colorado Springs to Weeping Water, Nebraska; Brother Roy Wenger, Smithville, Ohio, to Colorado Springs, Colorado.

Camp Briefs

Hill City, South Dakota, is the site of a new camp to be opened by the Mennonite Central Committee in the Black Hills region of that state sometime in October. . . .

Brother Robert Kreider, for the past year Educational Director at Colorado Springs, is being transferred to the Akron, Pa. office where he will assist in the effective administration of the educational program of the Mennonite C. P. S. camps. . .

On September 25, 1942, a total of 122 boys were scheduled to arrive at Mennonite camps.

CIVILIAN GOVERNMENT BONDS

We would like to emphasize some further points of correction in filling out the Subscription Orders for Bonds. Please use the full first name and not an initial. If only the initial is used, it is necessary to write to the subscriber asking for his full name before the order can be entered. In the case of a wife making a subscription, she would use her own first name. For example, Mrs. Mary Smith rather than Mrs. John Smith.

Postcard receipts for subscriptions are sent directly to the individual subscriber rather than to the treasurers or representatives of the groups. The representatives of Provident Trust Company have agreed that they will write a letter to such treasurers, listing the names registered with the appropriate amounts, which will serve as receipt to the treasurer, if that is desired. May we suggest that church treasurers, when sending in subscriptions for a number of people, should ask for such letter of recognition from Provident Trust Company.

Subscription orders to date from our M. C. C. constituencies have reached a otal of $108,400.00.

WAR, ON CHRISTIAN PRINCIPLES

One of the conditions of the Treaty with Mexico, it is said, is that any future war which breaks out between the two countries shall be conducted on Christian principles. Now we all know that this is an age of progress, and all sorts of improvements are taking place in all sorts of matters; but WAR on Christian principles is certainly the latest, and, if carried out, we think it will prove the greatest of all.

Just imagine it!—we think we can see the two armies drawn up in battle array. A fair field is before them; the ranks are formed—the positions are taken—the great guns are unlimbered. Gen. Scott is just about to give the order to FIRE—when an Aid comes up and respectfully reminds him, that "the war is to be conducted on Christian principles," and that it will not do to fire. "Very true, very true," says the Commander-in-chief; "but what are they? I have read Vaubaw, and Scheiter, and Turenne, and Coehorn. I have read the lives of the old conquerors, and have studied the campaigns of the greatest soilders, and I have never happened to come across these principles in any work upon the military art. Do you know anything about it, Colonel?"

"No."

"Nor you, Major?"

"Nor I either."

"I really don't know how to begin; I suppose it would not do to shoot. Suppose we send for the Chaplain."

The Chaplin arrives,—"Do you know anything about this fighting on Christian principles?"

"Oh yes; it is the easiest thing in the world."

"Where are the books?"

"Here," and the Chaplin takes out the Bible.

"Really," says the General, "we ought to have thought of this before. It is a bad time to commence the study of the tactics when the enemy is right before us; but I suppose we are bound by the Treaty. What is the first thing, Mr. Chaplain?"

"Thou shalt not kill. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

"But these are not neighbors. They are Mexicans."

"The same book tells us, a little further on, that the opportunity to do good to a man makes him our neighbor."

"Will you go on, Mr. Chaplain?"

"Love your enemies. Do good to them that hate you. Pray for them that despitefully use you. If a man smite you on one cheek, turn to him the other."

"But while we are praying for the Mexicans they will be firing into us."

"No! they are bound by the Treaty also. It works both ways."

"Then what is the use of our arms?"

"This is all provided for in the same book. Beat your swords into ploughshares and your spears into pruninghooks."

"Then I don't see as there is anything for us to do here."

"Nothing, unless you send over and ask Santa Anna if he needs anything in the way of medicines, or provisions, or clothing. I rather think the Treaty requires this of us. And I don't know but we ought to send them a few school-masters, for I understand that they are shockingly ignorant people."

"But how do you ever know which party conquers in this fighting on Christian principles?"

"That is the great beauty of it—BOTH SIDES CONQUER. 'He who condescends the most, remains the victor still;' and there are never any killed or wounded."—The Moral Almanac.

A MINISTER'S LIST

A list of a few of life's beautiful things was once prepared by a group that believed God spoke through the simple, everyday manifestations about them. It referred to such lovely things as dancing waves in sunlight, smoke curling upward from a chimney, feathers in a pigeon's wing, sweet clover in blossom, a happy child asleep, the smile on a tired mother's face, love light in a young father's eye's, etc.

This list inspired someone else to think of some of life's beautiful things which a minister might wish to record out of his own experiences with his flock: a sincere handclasp, steady eyes of confidence, an unexpected act of appreciation, regular letters from an understanding church treasurer, expressions of true respect, evidence of spiritual hunger, tenderness of children toward their pastor, plain, old-fashioned courtesy, undemanding friendship, eyes that light up with understanding during the sermon, concern for the upkeep of the parsonage, the restraining, inspiring influence of a good wife, etc.

To this short and incomplete list, let the reader make additions.

GIVE AS HE GAVE

Give as the morning that flows out of heaven,
Give as the waves when their channel is riven,
Give as the free air and sunshine are given,
Lavishly, utterly carelessly given.
Not the waste drops of thy cup overflowing,
Not the faint sparks of thy hearth ever glowing,
Not the pale bud from June's roses blowing,
Give as He gave who gave you to live.

Pour out thy life like the rush of a river,
Wasting its waters forever and ever,
Through the burnt sands that reward not the giver,
Silent or songful thou nearest the sea.
Scatter thy life as the summer shower's pouring.
What if no bird through the pearl-rain is soaring?
What if no blossom looks upward adoring?
Look to the life that was lavished for thee!

Give though thy heart may be wasted and weary,
Laid on the altar all ashen and dreary,
Though from its pulses a faint miserere
Beats to thy soul the sad presage of fate;
Bind it with cords of unshrinking devotion;
Smile at the song of its restless emotion;
'Tis the stern hymn of eternity's ocean;
Hear, and in silence thy future await.

So the wild wind strews its perfumed caresses,
Evil and thankless the desert it blesses,
Bitter the wave that its soft pinon presses;
Never it ceaseth to whisper and sing.
What if the hard heart give thorns for thy roses?
What if on rocks thy tired bosom reposes?
Sweetest is music with minor-keyed closes.
Fairest the vines that on ruin will cling.

Almost the day of thy giving is over.
Ere from the grass dies the bee-haunted clover
Thou wilt have vanished from friend and from lover.
What shall thy longing avail in the grave?
Give as the heart gives whose fetters are breaking,
Life, love, and hope, all thy dreams, and thy waking.
Soon, heaven's river, thy soul fever slaking,
Thou shalt know God and the gift that He gave.

Rose Terry Cooke.

ASTOUNDING FACTS ABOUT TOBACCO

Our annual tobacco expense would build four Panama Canals.

A leech is instantly killed by sucking the blood of a habitual smoker.

Insurance companies estimate one-third of all loss by fire to be due to tobacco.

The tobacco habit was begun in America and has extended to practically every nation on earth.

Two thousand American boys begin the habit every day.

Our annual tobacco bill amounts to about twenty dollars per capita in America.

One million nine hundred thousand acres of American land are used to produce tobacco.

In Russia, Turkey and Persia, the use of tobacco has been at times punishable by death.

Babies have been killed by breathing the tobacco smoke with which a smoker filled an unventilated room.

Prussic acid is the only substance more poisonous than nicotine.

Tobacco has been known to produce a nervous condition similar to delirium tremens.

Six Canadian insurance companies find the mortality rate of smokers to increase about the same as that of drinkers. —The Searchlight

CORRESPONDENCE

BETHEL MENNONITE CHURCH

Winton, California

Dear Mennonite readers and editor: Greetings in Jesus name, and God bless you all. May Psalm 126:3 encourage us all to hold on and work for the Master until victory can be ours through Jesus Christ.

We are happy to announce that on July 26, last, we had the pleasure of receiving into the fellowship of our Bethel Mennonite church by baptism the dear children Geraldine and Melvin Wiebe, who with their parents the Henry Wiebe's now live at St. Helena, California, but formerly lived near Hillsboro, Kansas. Brother Wiebe is at the present employed in Valajo Shipyards, working for Uncle Sam. The Wiebe's have attended our church a number of times, but he does not get off duty very often; otherwise they would attend more often. We are very happy, however, for what they have been able to do.

Our pastor and his wife have concluded a five weeks employment at Kingsburg, California, in the fruit cannery, and we are glad to have them back with us again.

On October 11th our pastor, Rev. J. P. Glanzer, and our church quartet, consisting of the brethren Kermit Dirks, Herbert Heppner, Leonard Yost, and Paul Koehn, intend to go to the C. P. S. camp at Placerville, California, to conduct a service for the boys located there. May God bless the effort is our prayer.

Our church group is going on as usual. The busy fruit season cut down our attendance somewhat, yet they did fairly well. Now the work will soon let up more, and the attendance will again increase. Cooler weather will soon start in, indicating that fall and winter are drawing near.

We discontinued our prayer meetings for about six weeks during the busy season, but we are planning to start up again beginning with October. The prayer meeting is one of the most necessary meetings to keep up the courage and working spirit of all members, praise God for that.

Our young people's meetings are fairly well attended on Sunday evening, and nearly all take part in the services.

We are planning on having some revival meetings this fall. We have not yet fully decided as to whom we will have as our evangelist. May God open the door for us. We shall report later on this subject.

—Noah A. Koehn, Corr.

FRIEDENSFELD MENNONITE CHURCH

Turpin, Oklahoma

This little group has been greatly blessed by the different ministers who have visited this church in the past. Now we have the privilege to report that a door has been opened, and we have a pastor of our own again. Rev. and Mrs. Marvin Eck of the Moody Bible Institute have accepted the call and will take up the work as pastor October 4. The church has planned an all-day program for them on that date. Rev. Victor Graber with his group from Kismet plans to be with us also. We are praying that God may bless his servant and make him successful in the service of the Lord. —Mrs. Jacob Koehn, Corr.

GRACE MENNONITE CHURCH

Enid, Oklahoma

Dr. P. A. Penner and Rev. Paul Kuhlmann were guest speakers at the special mission and thanksgiving service held at the Grace Mennonite Church, Enid, Oklahoma, on September 20. Dr. Penner preached at the morning service on "Christ Sufficient for Every Need of India." He told how the Indian's way of life would be completely changed—socially, politically, as well as spiritually—if he would accept Christ as his personal Saviour. The first part of the afternoon meeting was given over to the children. Several recitations were presented, and everyone joined in singing some choruses. Dr. Penner spoke on "Beauty for Ashes," telling about his work among the lepers of India. He stressed particularly the gratitude and reverence which is displayed by the Indians, specifically by the lepers because they have been rescued from a life that is worse than death. Rev. Kuhlmann spoke on the subject "Meet for the Master's Use." He emphasized the necessity of dedication to God, and the importance of accepting responsibility and faithfully discharging it. "The Power of the Cross" was Dr. Penner's subject for the evening message. He showed in a simple yet convincing way how through the power of the cross each one of us may have redemption. He spoke of the arresting power, the transforming power, and the impelling power of the Cross of Christ and pointed out that we all must experience every phase of that power.

Music for this celebration was furnished by the church choir at the morning and evening services. A male quartet from the Oklahoma Bible Academy sang during the afternoon.

A special feature which deserves mention was the prayer service, led by Dr. Penner, for Mrs. Harder who is still in the Western Oklahoma Sanitarium at Clinton. As an introductory statement Dr. Penner said that it is necessary for us to identify ourselves with those who suffer and those who need our sympathy. Only to the extent that we do this, can we be of help to them.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with flowers, potted plants, ivy, and fruits and vegetables, striking the note of harvest and thanksgiving. At noon the church members and guests enjoyed a basket dinner in the church basement.

Interesting guests at the evening service were Rev. and Mrs. P. V. Balzer of the Mennonite Brethren Mission in India and friends of Dr. Penner.

Such a day does indeed lead us to think on the many blessings which our Heavenly Father so richly bestows on us all. We are happy that Dr. Penner and Rev. Kuhlmann could spend this day of praise and thanksgiving with us, and we thank God for the thought-provoking and heart-warming messages they brought to us. The offerings which were received on this day were designated for home and foreign missions and relief. —Helen Hiebert Mueller, Corr.

Rev. and Mrs. S. S. Baumgartner

Golden Wedding Anniversary of Rev and Mrs. Baumgartner

The Golden Wedding Anniversary of Rev. and Mrs. S. S. Baumgartner was commemorated at the Alberta Community Church in Portland, Oregon, on September 27, 1942. It was a combined celebration with the Silver Wedding of their children, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Penner. It indeed was a festive occasion in which all of the Oregon Churches took part. Because of their loving and faithful service in their Master's cause, friends from far and near extended to them congratulations and best wishes for the day.

The Baumgartners served a number of churches in our Conference. Among these were the First Garden Church at Halstead, Kansas; the Emmanuel Church at Pratum, Oregon; and the First Church at Monroe, Washington. The greetings that were extended to them on this day from these communities reveal the heartfelt appreciation for their spiritual ministry. Rev. Baumgartner is always referred to as "father" of our Pacific District Conference. This tribute is rightfully given him. He, as a former member of the Home Mission Board of the General Conference, has had a hand in the founding of many of its churches. Though retired now from the active ministry, he is still vitally interested in all of them as an advisory member of the Evangelization Committee of this Conference.

The Baumgartner home is a lovely semi-bungalow situated in one of the beautiful residential districts of Portland. A spacious lawn and a beautiful flower bed joins it to the Penners' house next door. It is a cosy home, aways spic and span, and as one enters its threshold one is immediately greeted with a warm welcome and a hearty handshake. One can sense at all times the joy and the happiness that prevail in it. After many years of toil and service the Baumgartners are richly blessed in that they are permitted to spend their eve of life together and with their loved ones.

May we add another tribute to this jubilee couple at this festive occasion? Mrs. Regier and I feel as though we would like to express our appreciation and gratitude for that which they have done for us. When we were called to this field of service, we were total strangers in a far country. With the anxiety of a first pastorate bearing upon us we were welcomed by none other than the Baumgartners. They took us in and made us feel at home. Throughout these two years that we have been here they have always stretched forth a helping hand and have given us of the rich counsel freely. Though in a quiet and unimposing manner their influence is felt in our church at all times. I am sure that all of our younger pastors would join me in saying that it is a rare privilege to have a spiritual "father" and "mother" of that kind. May the Lord bless them and spare them unto us for many days to come. —Arnold J. Regier

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

Letter from the Browns

May 25, 1942

To The Foreign Mission Board,
Newton, Kansas, U. S. A.
Dear Brother P. H. Richert:

Many greetings in Jesus name! How glad and thankful we are, that it has become our lot in these trying days to be a witness for Christ in the very midst of turmoil. The dear Lord has kept us here for a very specific work. To the human eye it seems, that this work is now about completed; but who dare be the judge? We are entirely surrendered to God. Staying or going, both can be accepted with thankful hearts. In fact as He leads, so we will do. The organization is much further from what it was a year ago. However, there still are many problems to solve. The leaders often come to us with them. We advise them and pray over each problem and we pray for each person involved It is glorious to be right on the spot and share the burdens!

We now have full liberty inside the city. Everybody is kind to us. Our treatment is exemplary. It must be the prayers of the home constituency that find a marvelous answer here on the mission field. The Lord be praised for His goodness! We still are provided for a year or even for a longer time. Please remember us to all our relatives and friends.

Prayerfully yours,
H.J. and Maria Brown

Some More News

The Foreign Mission Board,
Newton, Kansas, U. S. A.
Dear Brother P. H. Richert:

Greetings of peace to you! It will interest you to know some more of the progress of the Christian work here on the mission-field. This spring a number of catechism classes have again been held. From among these inquirers, reports have it, some seventy people have been baptized and received into Christian fellowship all by Chinese pastors. A number of formerly salaried workers have volunteered free services, and thus instruction classes and revival meetings could be held in many places. The hospital and the school in the east suburbs are continuing work on a very small scale. The Bible School has closed, but the graduating class was not dropped but tutored on and graduated. The Annual Church Conference was held at K'ai Chow in the beginning of May. Both the Church Conference and the General Committee have revised their constitutions, so that they can go on without the participation of missionaries. The latter continues with nine members on it. It has now appointed four supervisors for the evangelistic work of the whole field. It is responsible for the use and upkeep of all mission property. It tries hard to continue the work even with the little funds at its disposal. We are more than ever convinced, that they must learn to take care of the work by themselves. The former large budgets from foreign sources must not be re-introduced. Missionaries should under the General Committee only assist, but have no financial responsibilities. They could help open up new places in this present field, or go to some neglected district and open up a new work by themselves. There is much to do, but we must not fall into the old rut. May God guide us in the right path!

Sincerely yours,
H. J. and Maria Brown

That He May Send Forth

These are some of the things which have been the burden of our prayer and efforts during this past year:

Four young men in special service training as Chelas.
Eight others on part and full time service in evangelism.
Twenty different campaigns of two or more weeks each.

Fifty seemingly sincere inquirers.

Eight hundred learning the word of God as non-Christians.

Experience tells me that one of the best ways to develop Christian workers is to do as Christ did: take young men into fellowship, work with them in all sorts of life situations. This I call a "Guru-Chela Fellowship." "Guru" means teacher. "Chela" means disciple, learner.

And so I have gathered around me a group of four young men. During the Six-week's Bible Course, they either teach or study Bible daily, or do both. On evangelistic tours they are members of the gospel teams, which work under close supervision, adjusting their lives to rural India, cooking their own food, exposing their souls to the Sword of the Spirit as they handle God's word. When I am confined to the mission station they come at sunrise, and work to sunset, at all sorts of work assignments.

Soon after we returned from America in 1939 I first met Laurence Das. He had failed in high school in a distant city. He had burnt midnight oil, not in study, but in the movie house! He had broken down in health,—and he claimed that his failure at school was due to poor health.

At first I demanded that he work with his father in the rice fields. This he did—contrary to local practise for some young men who had gone so far in school. Many considered themselves above that. He took the sickle in his own hands that year.

Then I took him as a flunky in my office and gave him a series of experiences in many kinds of work. At home and in the district his health always broke down and his daily wages stopped. He was very faulty in English, had failed in mathematics in school, and could not run the typewriter.

While others said he was a "bad egg" I have seen him over a number of "fool's hills." Three years have gone by. Now he very seldom is off duty due to sick leave. Last hot April, he was with a gospel team in the village of Jagmohan. Water was very bad. The hot hot nights made sleeping very difficult. Two gospel teams had laid siege with the sword of the Spirit upon that village.

When I made my trip for supervision, I never saw him in better health. He seemed to be enjoying life immensely. Last year and this year he taught in the Six-Week's Rainy Season Bible Course. He held the attention of his pupils better than some of those whose names are known in America,—from amongst our Indian co-workers. He has learned to typewrite. He can speak a good English, which fact opens his life to the wealth of spiritual and devotional literature from other lands. I have used him to manage labor used in relief funds, and in my judgement is the best man for this in the community.

He is one of four whose life we are intimately guiding. In addition there are eight others who are working in part time or full time service. But there is one thing which the Lord, and the Lord only, can do for these young men. That is to give them His anointing, and to send them forth into His service. Until Laurance Das dedicates his life to God, and God consecrates this life with fire from off His altar, his life will amount to little more than the altar of Baal without the fire of God. I Kings 18.

In Matt 9:38 we read, "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest that He send forth His laborers into His harvest." The Lord is the one to send. He is the one to call. He is the one to consecrate. Unless a man is called of the Lord, and has this burden of the Lord on his life, and is consecrated by Him, he just cannot serve Him.

I plead with you for Laurence Das, that through your prayers and mine, the Lord may call him, may send him forth, may consecrate him, that he may be a dedicated, consecrated, God-sent servant in a needy field, because the Lord has dealt with him. And what I plead for Laurance Das I also plead for Martin Luther Lader, Prabhu Din, Amritius Das, and others whom the Lord may send to me.

Our work in evangelism has shaken village after village. At least twenty young men from the villages would have taken baptism, if we would have permitted them to receive baptism in Janjgir. But the resulting social ostracism makes them think that then they will have to stay in Janjgir in a house we provide and earn money we provide at work we provide,—till at some indefinite date they get on their feet. We have steadily refused to take such. What should we do?

. Please pray for these twenty villages, especially for Suer, Marwa, Putpura, Kokra, Jagmohan, Katra, Mehenda, Udeband. Please pray for the fifty inquirors. Pray for us that the fire of God may fall on us afresh, and burn out the dross. —S. T. Moyer

EMERGENCY RELIEF NOTE

Dear readers of The Mennonite:

The M. C. C. has put out a clothing leaflet. I have just received the allotment for the General Conference churches or rather the Women's Missionary Societies. I am sending them out by parcel post to the ministers of the General Conference churches according to the list of names listed in our church periodicals. Should any church fail to receive their share, please, be free and ask for them.

We hope that the Women's Missionary Societies will again volunteer to gather the clothing and forward it to the Akron, Pa., Clothing Depot. The Lord will richly bless all those that take part.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

CHURCH LOYALTY

It is very often said that the Roman Catholic Church makes the claim that if she is given a child until he is eight years old the rest of the world can then have him and still he will remain loyal to the Catholic Church. I don't know if that popular belief is born out by the facts or not, but I do know from experience and observation that a Catholic child has an admirable loyalty and a reverence for his church.

It Is Not An Accident

That this statement is a fact can be substantiated by the hundreds of studies that have been made by various interested agencies. But it is by no means an accident that it is so. The wisdom of the ages has taught leaders in the Catholic Church to realize the tremendous significance of early childhood as the time to fix those indelible impressions that are most important and are to last a life-time. From the first day a child is born to the last day he lives, the Catholic Church exercises an influence over her members. As soon as a child is old enough to learn he is instructed in the doctrines of the church.

What He is Taught

Not only is he taught the theology of the Roman Catholic Church regarding the nature of God, Jesus Christ, the Holy Spirit, the Virgin Mary, and the various saints, he is taught church history. He is vividly impressed with the fact that his church is the only true Christian Church, all the others being heretics. He is taught that there is no salvation for any man outside the Catholic Church. Naturally these and many other instructions make an impression upon the plastic mind of a child. Is there any wonder the Catholic child is deeply reverent and loyal to his church?

Relation to Mennonites

If someone raises the question as to how this affects Mennonites and especially the topic under which this column is written, let me answer immediately. The Catholics have at the present time a powerful rural life organization. As I am writing this the Conference is in session at Peoria, Illinois. Its four primary aims are these: 1. To care for underprivileged Catholics now on the land. 2. To keep on the land Catholics now on the land. 3. To settle more Catholics on the land. 4. To convert the non-Catholics on the land.

These things are said not to frighten anyone or to arouse any ill feeling against Catholics. Bitterness and resentment and ill will have no place in Christian circles. But these things are said to make the readers of this page aware that if Mennonites want loyalty and devotion to their church they must begin early in the lives of their young people to instruct them. If they want to preserve their rural heritage they need first of all to become conscious that it is a blessed heritage and then make intelligent efforts to preserve it. It is rather an embarassing fact that men like Father Luigi G. Ligutti, secretary to the National Catholic Rural Life Conference, Dr. O. E. Baker of the United States Department of Agriculture, and Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, formerly director of the TVA, see a wonderful heritage and a way of life in Mennonite rural communities while our own people are only vaguely aware of it.

Our Historical Library

The Mennonite Historical Library has recently received valuable additions to its collection. Mrs. S. S. Haury and daughters, Susan and Elsa, gave a set of the second edition of Gottfried Arnold's great work Unparteiische Kirchen—und Ketzerhistorie, papers, letters and photographs of the late Dr. S. S. Haury to the Library.

Mrs. P. D. Gaeddert, North Newton, placed a diary and an old Bible into the collection. Both came from her grandparents and were kept in the J. B. Reimer home for many years.

Professor L. Hostetler dedicated a complete set of The Christian Exponent in two volumes to the library. We value this collection the more because only two more complete sets can be traced. This bi-weekly journal "owes its existence to a demand among many serious minded men and women of the Mennonite Church for an organ which will help them to understand and appreciate the historic principles of our Mennonite faith, which will discuss in a fundamental manner and from different points of view the present problems which are constantly engaging the minds and occasionally threatening the peace of our church people, and which will help us to understand our relation to society and see our opportunities. . . for service in the world."

So the editors introduced the Journal to the readers in 1924. The paper continued until September, 1928, and then was discontinued due to circumstances.

WANTED: SUCH A PASTOR

When a church seeks a pastor
They often want
The strength of an eagle,
The grace of a swan,
The gentleness of a dove,
The friendliness of a sparrow,
The night hours of an owl.
And when they catch that bird
They expect him to live
On the food of a canary.

Have a Heart in a World of Need

By Helen A. Penner

"You are an American?" was the query which a man directed to Brother Hoover as we were preparing to step off a train somewhere in France. He had probably noticed the colorful American Export tags on our luggage. When Brother Hoover answered in the affirmative he continued questioning him. "Why didn't you stay there?" he asked as if doubting his sanity.

Brother Hoover said, "I am the director of Mennonite Aid to children in France."

Then the man replied with much emotion, "You are very welcome here."

The attitude of this man is characteristic of the French people. The need is great and urgent. They need help and need it now. It is necessary that relief be distributed impartially. Much valuable time and energy of our relief workers would be wasted if it were necessary to investigate into a needy person's creed, race, or political sympathies before alleviating his suffering. It is the policy of the Mennonite Central Committee to relieve need, regardless thereof. That frees a worker for essential work. He need not investigate anything except to see that the need is genuine.

There are those who are dying for a little bit of love. It is lack of love that is the cause of so much suffering in the world today. Instead of love, hate, greed, selfishness, and ambition are gripping the hearts of men. "Let us love one another for love is of God and everyone that loveth is born of God and knoweth God; but he that loveth not, knoweth not God, for God is love." It is Christian love that should prompt our desire to help others. That is the reason why I think no other agency is in a better position to do relief work than the church. And what churches can and should help better han those that are founded on the peace principle!

In our Mennonite program of relief work we are definitely demonstrating that we believe in relieving human suffering, that we believe in Christian love as the law of life, that we believe every individual is precious in the sight of God, and that we not only believe in non-violence but in something more positive than that which we might call an "offensive" of good will, or perhaps, aggressive good will. We are doing constructive work which stands out all the more because the world at present seems bent on destruction.

In the light of the enormous need in the world, our work is only a drop in the bucket. But it is a drop. When one has been there and has seen for himself what we are doing, one is not likely to say, "What's the use." It is thrilling to see what comparatively better food, comparatively better living conditions, some care, and a little love can do for those children. When one sees children existing under horrible conditions, one can't help but say, "Let's expand our program, no matter what the cost, danger, and trouble." If one thinks of it in terms of one's own children or one's nieces and nephews, one is not likely to be indifferent. Those children are as adorable and lovable as our own kiddies. There were 1500 children in the Rivisaltes camp in southern France when I visited it last October and 160 of these were under three years of age. Those pale, pinched, emaciated, and frightened little faces, aged beyond their years, haunt one after such a visit. They have seen enough sorrow to last them a lifetime.

One day while I was in France someone was discussing relief work with us and he said, "Your work is different from the work of a certain other group; it has a heart in it." That was indeed a compliment. My prayer is that there will always be that Christian love prompting our relief work. It will go further and will have more lasting results. We are trying to ease the burdens of our fellowmen and trying to restore their faith in man and thereby to renew their faith in God also. Some of these people are finding a hell on earth when they are down and out, have lost faith in man, and can see no hope in the future.

Someone asked me the other day how this experience in relief had affected me. I answered, "If you mean whether I have changed my mind on our peace stand—I should say not, after I have seen what war can do. And if you mean whether I have more or less faith in God, I would say 'far more.' " Adventuring in faith does not weaken it, and one finds out things which are impossible to find out in any other way. What good is our faith if it doesn't work?

In our program of aiding war sufferers in France we are working in a number of different ways. At Cerbere we have a canteen where forty-five children are fed regularly, at Banyuls and Collioure, a distribution center gives out food to needy families of three small towns, at Canet Plage we have a convalescent home for sixty children from the concentration refugee camp near there. In Lyon and surrounding districts where Brother Byler and Henry Buller are working, we are helping needy children by feeding them at school. Brother Byler has estimated that about 35,000 were aided last winter. There is also some individual aid given. A new home for 120 children was opened last month near Lyon by our group if plans worked out. You can't imagine what good news that was to me, for when I left it looked as though we would not be able to expand our work for some time. In fact, it looked questionable that we

Today is the Day to Work

In John 9:4 we read, "I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work." Eccles. 3:1. "To every thing there is a season and a time to every purpose under heaven," telling us that there is a day to work and that a night is coming when no man can work. When Jesus said, he must work and that He was sent to do a certain definite work by the Father we can easily determine what that work was. In Luke 19:10 Jesus said, "The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." In John 3:16-18 we have further direction that He was not sent to condemn the world—for it is already condemned and lost—but that the world through Him might be saved. Verse 18 is clear on how to be saved. Read also John 6:38-40. This passage makes it very clear why the Father sent the Son. He did not come as Judge the first time, but as Saviour. He did finish the work He came to do at His first coming. He will come again, this time to do what He is assigned for the second time.

We also have a day in which to do our work. That day is from our being born again from above, until the day He calls us home or calls for us. Paul had his day, and what a day that was, filled with work. We have a glimpse of his desire in Roman 1:13-16 and again a statement as to the end of that day is found in II Tim. 4:6-8.

We as individuals or as a church, have a work to perform in our day. Jesus makes this clear in Matt. 28:19-20. We have been instructed in the message, the Gospel of God's grace in Christ Jesus. We are not to waste time on anything else, or try to use any other remedy, but go and tell the story of John 3:16. Roman 10:12-17 gives us the method of proclaiming God's message to the lost. It says in verse 16, "They have not all obeyed the gospel." This is true here in Albany, Oregon. All around us is indifference as to their own salvation. Interest is so much in money, pleasure, and other things. Many make accusations and excuses. Two outstanding accusations: First, the church has lost its message and has done as we read in Jeremiah 46:11—tried so many medicines that will not heal the poor and sick man. Second, the inconsistency of the church, confessing but not possessing. This I find in my visitation work, on the streets in restaurants, in business places, and in homes. Paul urges us in I Corinthians 15:58 to be steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord. Here we are encouraged that the work will not be in vain, therefore we will continue to tell the glorious story of the cross.

Grace Church Busy for the Lord

We cannot report many additions to the church, but we are not here to build up a large denominational organization but to faithfully tell the story. We find it is hard to win the lost for Christ and restore the backslider into fellowship with Christ. We are not expecting folks to come to church willingly until they are hungry for salvation and are truly born again. When the backsliding member is restored then he comes gladly.

This is not discouraging us; only it makes us sad to see men and women going on in their way to hell and to all our pleading say, "We will not."

Although the last months have been very busy months for our people with a gasoline and tire shortage felt, the attendance has had a turn upward rather than downward. The mid-week prayer and Bible study hour is enjoying a fair attendance during these busy days. We do not have so many young people here, but those that are here, are in church on Sunday morning, and they are here for both C.E. and worship service in the evening.

The repair work on the church building is going forward and the money for the same is coming in also. We thank God for the spirit of cooperation that is manifest in the congregation. Pray for us. Also pray for the contacts we have made among the lost and the backslidden. Every week I make new contacts, but do not lose sight of the former ones. This means much work, but we are happy in the work. We are anxious to work, for the night will soon come, not only the night of our individual life, but we believe the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ is near. We want Him to find us busy for Him.

Work in the Community by Albany Ministers

The ministers of Albany are realizing the great responsibility that is theirs in the army camp being so near with over 35,000 soldiers. They have been busy making plans how to meet this responsibility. We cannot cooperate with every program of the community, such as the entertainment of soldiers, but we will be ready to do all we can to win the lost for Christ and to build them up for Him. We also aim to help the Christian young men in the army to remain true to Him. Pray for us in all our work.

Yours in the Saviour's Service,

P. A. Kliewer

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Gerald Stucky, New York City, New York

OCTOBER 22—". . . when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly.. Matt. 6:6.

There are at least two kinds of closets. First we may withdraw into the secret corner of a private room and there shut out the confusions of life about us. This gives us physical privacy. But there is another closet. This closet is to be found in the secret recesses of our mind and heart. With little practice it is possible to withdraw into this room and enter into the presence of God, even though we may be in a busy street, on a train, in an office or shop. It is in this secret closet that we hear the quiet strengthening voice of God, and where we gain continuous strength for the tasks of life. That is the secret of Christian stability and poise.

OCTOBER 23—"And she brought forth her first born son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn." Luke 2:7

It was said by Moore, "Where there is room in the heart there is always room in the house." We always have time for that which we esteem the most important, we have money for that which lies closest to our affections and we have room enough for the idol of our heart. We are not told why the inn keeper found no room for Mary and Joseph and the child, but we need seek no further than the affections of our heart when we find no room for Christ in our daily lives.

OCTOBER 24—"Be still, and know that I am God." Psa. 46:10a

Jesus said, "Come ye apart and rest a while." He knew from his own experience that at times the most important thing that man can do is to take time to be still in meditation, prayer and rest. It is when our mind is at rest that the gates of our soul open to the inspiration and vision of God. Dr. G. Buttrick writes: "A little thing this stilling of the mind to reverence, this schooling of the will! A little thing to bring so vast a boon! The optic nerve is a little thing, but it gives us sun, stars, and all the wonders of the earth. Prayer is the optic nerve of the soul; we must not cut the nerve!"

OCTOBER 25—". . . lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven . . . for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." Matt. 6:20a, 21.

There is a law of love which is irrevocable. Every man is fashioned and molded by that which he loves. When he dies he goes to be with that society which he has sought and loved during his life time—we all know the way. Judas "went to his own place," having truly followed the law of spiritual gravitation. Again we become like that which we love, for that which we love we think about, and take into our inner self. Our love shapes our soul. How important it is, therefore, that we set our affection upon the things which are above, that we take Christ into our lives and make Him the object of our chief affection.

OCTOBER 26—"If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar." I John 4:20a.

Some say that the Devil is dead and that they don't believe in the Devil. If he is indeed dead, we wonder who has been in charge of his activities, for the same old things are being done that have been done for ages. He is not simply a being with glaring eyes, horns and a tail, but rather he is the personification of hate—our universal tragedy. We hate our neighbor, we hate our enemy, we hate the old order, we hate the New Deal, we hate our president. Really, if it seems to us that the Devil is dead, it is probably only because he is on a vacation while we are doing his work.

OCTOBER 27—"Fear thou not; for I am with thee. be not dismayed; for I am thy God: I will strengthen thee: yea, I will help thee; yea, I will thee with the right hand of my righteousness." Isa. 41:10 .

When the obsession of fear comes upon us, it appears to take control of all that we are and do. We see all events through its eyes, we cast all of our thoughts into its mold. We fear big things, but what is worse, we fear all manner of small things as well. To attack fear directly is poor tactics for it only makes us concentrate on our fears—and we bcome more fearful. Rather, take a positive attitude and concentrate on the fact that Christ is with us to overcome all fear. Pray for courage, and then thank God for it, for when we pray believing that we shall receive, then we shall indeed receive. With this faith we overcome the fear and the world.

OCTOBER 28—"Again I say unto you, That if two of you shall agree on earth as touching any thing that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven." Matt. 18:19

To agree means to harmonize, or more specifically, to synchronize. What is there that is more beautiful to the ears than a symphony orchestra, in which there are a large number of instruments, each instrument having a distinctive quality of sound, each playing its respective melody, yet all harmonizing for a common purpose? No two Christians are alike, yet each has his distinctive purpose and place in the sphere of the kingdom of God. Yet more, if but two of them agree, harmonize, in regard to anything on earth—we have the promise of the Father that He will grant their request.

Eastern Washington Y. P. Retreat

In spite of great distances and the tire shortage, the eastern Wash. Y. P. Retreat in July was in no way a disappointment. There were 62 attending throughout the Retreat, only ten less than last year's group which included all the Wash. churches.

The Retreat was held on the 168 acre, pine-studded campus of Whitworth College near Spokane, Wash. The dormitories, class rooms, pipe organ, athletic equipment and other facilities made it an ideal place for some real study and worthwhile activity.

The faculty was unusually fine. Several professors of the college took part in the Bible instruction, and as vesper hour and chapel speakers. We especially enjoyed the contributions of Dr. and Mrs. P. A. Penner, our guest instructors, and of Dr. J. H. Langenwalter who was on the campus during most of the Retreat.

The spiritual tone was high, climaxed by the Consecration Service on Sunday night. Nearly all who attended that service left with the determination to make the challenging Retreat theme, "To Study—To Grow—To Serve," a reality in their own lives.

CHARACTER DYE

By Prisca Delph

Allen raised his eyebrows in a puzzled look at the little lady rocking before the open fireplace.

"What do you mean, Grandmother, by us being 'redyed'? Surely you do not compare us with a piece of cloth or skein of wool?"

"Of course not, Dear," and Grandmother Wenton smiled dotingly on her only male descendant. There were other grandchildren, but through Allen alone would the Wenton name live on. She had steeled herself for this visit and she must not fail when he needed her most.

The pucker left the forehead as he returned the smile which had won him many friends. "But don't keep me in such suspense, Gran. Please explain your mysterious statement," and he placed his five foot eleven and one half more comfortably in the spacious old Morris chair.

Grandmother grinned. In spite of his height and twenty years, he was still "little Allen" to her. "Want a few cookies to chew on, for it takes me so long to explain anything, you know."

"You still remember my appetite," he laughed. "If they are your own make, I promise to listen the rest of the evening." He was going to say, till ten o'clock, but checked himself. The train would leave at ten fifteen. It would be easier for Grandmother not to know that their time together was limited.

After the cookie jar had been placed conveniently near the Morris chair, a pitcher of lemonade brought from the refrigerator, another log put on the fire, and not until then did Mrs. Wenton make any further referance to the subject.

As Allen watched her deliberate movements, the proud shoulders were slightly stooped, or did he only imagine that she looked older tonight? "Poor Grandmother, this war is affecting her, too. Oh, if only it were over and world conditions settled in peace." He was glad he stopped with her this last night and that they were alone. It would be something to think of when he would become lonesome at camp.

"Here, take this chair," he offered as he jumped to his feet. "It is very comfortable." She was ready to sit down again.

"No, I thank you, but I prefer my ladder back to give lectures in," she twinkled.

"I know it will be an especially good one since you have kept me waiting so long." It was like old times and he would be the little boy for just one hour.

Having adjusted the folds of her apron over her generous skirt she resumed her rag cutting. "You see I make rugs occasionally," she began.

Allen nodded. Of course he saw Gran was getting old; could her mind be slipping a little? She should not be left alone in the house.

"For each rug I have a pattern," she continued. "After choosing the pattern, I choose the colors. Sometimes the material is not the right color. Again some looks faded, and so I have to use the dye pot, or there would not be the harmony of colors I had planned."

Allen watched her from the top of a glass of lemonade. "Perhaps she is not dreaming after all," he told himself.

"I get a great deal of satisfaction from creating new patterns and color combinations. You know, Allen, it reminds me of life. God has a plan for the world, a pattern for each life. Each life like my material must have the right color to fit into the pattern."

"You're some philosopher, Gran," and helped himself to the fourth cookie.

"I find some materials absorb the dye immediately, while others have to be dyed and redyed, and a few will absorb nothing but black. So it seems to be with people. Some fit into God's plan so nicely; others have to be shifted around and helped; and still others cannot be used at all."

Allen set the empty glass beside the pitcher. Those strips look like waste, but under Grandma's deft fingers, they will be made into something useful and beautiful. He traced the pattern of the rug at his feet. Funny he had never thought before of the work and creative art used in a rug.

But Grandmother was talking again. "There are three basic colors in art. These are the foundations for all other colors and pastels. While the proper blending of these will result in white, the wrong proportion of one or more will result in some shade of black."

Allen was all attention now. "What do you take for the colors in life?"

"I like to think of red for the blood of Christ; yellow for gold or material things, and blue for the world and disappointments."

"Please go on," he begged.

"Without a Christian experience we cannot fit into the pattern God has planned for us. Then, too, in life we must make a living and so deal with material things. These alone would glare and exhaust one, but the red or Christian influence in our lives mellows it to a softer, warmer tone."

"But couldn't we do without the blue?"

"No, Allen; as vegetation needs rain to grow, so the Christian needs temptations and discouragements to make him stronger. Blue in art is used to give depth to colors. So in trying times we lean harder on Christ. Too much blue will result in black."

"But, Gran, how would you explain this process of dye?"

Grandmother waited until she had replenished the material in her lap, and the strips lay in an interesting pile in the box at her side.

"Remember that verse in the Bible, 'Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth?' I have been thinking that He looks down and sees the necessity of a different blending. Some folks become too engrossed in material things perhaps even hoarding money. So He sends a new experience into our lives or changes our environment. Or He may reveal through the Holy Spirit some new meaning in a verse from His Word. In this way I meant He redyes us."

"Oh, Gran," Allen cried, the light of understanding dawning on his fine youthful features, "is that what you mean? Then going to camp is not a punishment; it is only a preparation to help me better fit into God's plan for the world!"

"Yes, isn't it wonderful that He has provided our own camp so that our own dear boys can be under Christian influence and environment and not hindered in their devotional life and church fellowship?"

"Gran, you are a dear, and I can never thank you." He rose as the clock was striking ten, glad that it had waited until Grandmother had finished.

"That clock must have been speeding tonight. The hour slipped by so rapidly. I hadn't told you but I must leave Evansville on the ten-fifteen train."

"I will be praying for you," was all Grandmother trusted herself to say.

"Thanks, Gran, and I will try to absorb all the colors as He sends them. For I do want to have a perfect blending so as to fit into His pattern," he said tenderly as he kissed her good-by.

As Allen sped westward to new experiences, he carried not only new hope and courage in his breast but a new picture of Grandmother. She was still wrinkled and grey and a little stooped from trying experiences and disappointments. Through financial reverses and physical infirmities the yellow and blue had vied with each other to predominate. But Gran was true to her Lord and He had been faithful, and now in the sunset of her life there was a perfect blending with red predominating. The blue had given depth until that night there was almost a halo about her head. Like after the sunset there are a few faint streaks of red then all disappears in a translucent white.

"The process of dyeing is not pleasant, but when I think of what it did for Gran I know it is worth everything it costs," Allen old himself as the train stopped at his destination.

"BE SOMETHING GOOD"

If you can't be a pine on the top of a hill,
Be a scrub in the valley—but BE
The best little scrub on the side of the hill.
Be a bush, if you can't be a tree.

If you can't be a bush, be a bit of grass—
Some highway to happier make.
If you can't be a muskie, then just be a bass,
The liveliest bass in the lake.

We can't all be captains; some have to be crew;
There's something for all of us here.
There's work to do, and there's lesser work, too;
And the task we've to do is the near.

If you can't be a highway, then just be a trail;
If you can't be a sun be a star.
It isn't by size that you win or fail—
Be the BEST of whatever you are.

SERIES: OUR MENNONITE HERITAGE

The Beginnings of the Mennonite Church: Heb. 11:17-40

I. Worship Service: (1) Songs: "Now Thank We All Our God," No. 514; "Faith of Our Fathers," No. 154. (2) Reading of leading topic, prayer, leader's remarks. (3) Talk by pastor, "The Anabaptists, Their Life and Their Teachings." (4) Offering for C.P.S. work.

II. Leader's Introduction:

Dr. C. H. Smith says: "Menno Simons was not the founder of a new church, but merely one of the early leaders, perhaps the most influential among them in the early formative period. The term, Menist was first used in 1544 by Countess Anna of East Friesland, as a distinguishing title. Soon after this in both North and South Germany they (the Anabaptists) were often glad to assume this name because under that name they were better able to escape the consequences of the decree against the Anabaptists. . . . Menno and his co-workers were centuries ahead of their day on many of the great fundamentals of religious and civil liberty which today in America and the more enlightened portions of Europe are taken for granted, such as religious toleration, separation of church and state and the desirability at least of universal peace."

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

(1) Menno's faithful co-laborers: Obbe and Dirck Philip, Leonhard Boumens, Gillis of Aachen (see The Mennonites by C. H. Smith pp. 58-60. (2) Menno Simons, His Life and Work (see Sketches from Church History by C. H. Wedel pp. 65-68. (3) Persecution of the Mennonites. (4) Their Home, Church and Community Life in the Early Days.

IV. For Discussion:

1. Who were some of the earlier, outstanding leaders? What did they do?

2. Discuss the life and influence of Menno Simons. Simons.

2. Discuss the life and influence of Menno Simons.

3. Into what countries did the Mennonites spread? How did they fare in each of them?

V. Facts for Study:

The work of Luther and Zwingli as well as that of the Waldenses had done much to prepare the soil. Luther had translated the Bible into the German language by 1534. John Wyclif into the English quite a bit earlier. The invention of the printing press made it possible for the common people to gain access to the word of God. Luther's and Zwingli's aggressive stand against the evils of the Catholic church of that day had aroused the minds and consciences of many. Luther's painstaking work in the establishment of schools and education of the young, his small and large catechisms had wielded a large influence.

They all emphasized that salvation cannot be obtained through fasting and ceremonies but only through Christ. There were some points, however, on which the Anabaptists, from which the Mennonite group largely came, differed. The Anabaptists desired separation of church and state, emphasized in a special way through pity and holy life, humility in thought and deed, would not permit military service and the oath, believed in love and kindness as the way of dealing with fellowmen. Whoever fell into a sinful life was banned from the church. Out of such a background came the people who were our forefathers.

VI. Illustration:

Faithful Unto Death

On January, 1527, Felix Manz was drowned in the lake of Zurich. His hands had been tied over his knees, a stick inserted in between. His mother and brother called to him to hold fast to the faith. Just as the waves closed over him he prayed: "Father, into Thy hands I commend my soul." He was the first of a long line of martyrs who would rather die than be untrue to their faith.

VII. Food for Thought:

How much is the "Faith of Our Fathers" worth to me? What am I willing to do for it, or to suffer for it?

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT

MY FRIENDS—John 1:40-45

The Purpose

We want our boys and girls to be loving, kind, and pleasing, but we must be more concerned in pleasing the Lord than in pleasing man. We want friends, and want to be one, but we want to be careful not to invite worldly friends into our close company. We may do untold good to some boy or girl through our friendship, but also we may do harm. Our memory verse is this: "A man that hath friends must show himself friendly; and there is a Friend that sticketh closer than a brother."

How Friendships are Made

What a blessing we receive when we are a friend to the friendless, and to those who most need us! The Bible says, "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ." God wants us to be friends to the poor and needy and help them. Herbert Hoover was a great friend to the needy of Belgium, in sending food and supplies during the last world war.

But let us be careful, that when we make friends, that we don't make them without compromising Christ, or our convictions. Our school and business friends can be a real blessing or a curse to us if they draw us away from God.

How to Hold Friendships

"A friend sticketh closer than a brother." Are we fair-weather friends who stay close when all is well or suited to our likes. We must share in joy or sorrow, luck or misfortune. We must be the kind of friend who lifts up and does not tear down. Be one who encourages, be a friend, who will lay down his life for his friends. Of course we change, but we can have a friend in Jesus, who never changes. We want to be a friend, too, who does not grieve or forsake.

Jesus, Our Friend

"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." John 15:13.

"I am the Lord, I change not." Mal. 3:6.

"Having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end." John 13:1.

"I am a companion of all them that fear thee, and of them that keep thy precepts." Ps. 119:63.

For Beauty, We Thank Thee

For all life's beauties, and their beauteous growth;
For Nature's laws and Thy rich providence;
For all Thy perfect processes of life;
For the minute perfection of Thy work,
Seen and unseen, in each remotest part;
For faith, and works, and gentle charity;
For all that makes for quiet in the world;
For all that lifts man from his common rut;
For all that knits the silken bond of peace;
For all that lifts the fringes of the night,
And lights the darkened corners of the earth;
For every wide-flung window of the soul;
For every wide-flong window of the soul;
For that Thou bearest all that Thou hast made;
We thank Thee, Lord!

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

A. S. BECHTEL

November 1, 1942

THE CHRISTIAN VIEW OF MARRIAGE

Gen. 2:18-24, Matt. 19:3-6, John 2:1-5

Our lesson is the first of a unit of four upon "The Family," the Christian home. The subjects here considered are of truly great practical importance. The home is an institution in the plan of God for man, and contributes to his development and promotes his general welfare. Christ declared that God, at the beginning made man and woman, male and female, and provided for marriage. God also provided for the propagation and rearing of children in homes where they have the loving care of both parents. It is vitally important that our homes be of good Christian character so that the members may receive such values as they ought to receive. Dr. J. A. Huffman says in Youth and the Christ Way, "Every child has a right to be well-born, to have a heritage of physically, materially, and spiritually good things. The American youth has, on the average, a liberal endowment of the coveted good things. It is the Christ way in relation to our wonderful heritage that concerns us. The womanhood of America has many reasons for gratitude. There are few places in the world where women have the opportunity which is afforded them in America."

God Institutes Marriage

God endowed man with social capacities and longings. "His full powers can not be developed by physical and mental work alone." It is not good, it is not natural, not normal for any person to live withdrawn from associations with other persons. All that Adam's nature demanded for its completion, physically, intellectually, and socially, was to be included in the woman whom God created. In man's need, and in woman's power to supply that need lies the greater foundation for the divine institution of marriage.

God brought the animals to Adam and he gave them names. Valuable as some of these were and are now to man, none of them could satisfy man's social and intellectual longings. A help suitable for man must be on a level with him in feeling, intellect, and reason. Adam felt lonely and desired a suitable partner. God made a woman (vss. 22) to be man's counterpart and companion, to stand by his side as an equal in dignity and character. God intended that "woman was to be equal with man; under his arm to be protected; and near his heart to be loved." The bond of union between married persons is closer than that between parent and child (vs. 24). God's plan and design is for a unity of two persons in marriage and establishing their own home.

Christ's Ideals of Marriage

Christ's words in our lesson today are of fundamental importance. They teach that marriage between one man and one woman is a sacred and permanent relationship (vss. 5, 6) which man has no authority to dissolve. Christ recognized Gen. 1:27 and 2:24 as authoritative. Marriage is far more than a civil contract. It is a God-established institution and those who choose to enter into the marriage relationship are duty bound to abide by God's law relating to it. The Christian ideal is one of lifelong faithfulness to each other on the part of both husband and wife. They should be companions with similar ideals and aims. Together they should strive to make a truly Christian home and seek to rear children in a really Christian atmosphere; children who will be a credit to them and to the church. Much depends upon the choice of partners in marriage. The Christian ideal presupposes that both partners are Christians. A marriage can be Christian only to the degree in which both persons are Christians. Where Christ is not invited to bless the union, little Christian good can be expected.

In what respects should marriage be a partnership of mutual helpfulness?

What is the greatest obstacle to having a Christian home?

Why should reasonably good health be required of all persons who enter the marriage relationship?

SUBMISSION

Kenneth Robinson

I wanted to do great deeds of fame
 Something of worth for God;
I scorned the service that often came
 By walking where servants trod.

I craved the place where the highest sit,
 I wanted to do and dare;
But the job that needed the grace and grit
 Was ignored with the utmost care.

One day I sought the face of the Lord
 For the plan he had for me;
And I earnestly searched his precious Word
 To know what his will could be.

I opened my heart to hear his voice,
 And he searched me through and through:
And he showed me that my selfish choice
 Was neither wise nor true.

So I yielded all, and I really died
 To my selfish heart's desire;
And the carnal man was crucified
 In a Pentecostal fire.

Ah, now I cry, "Lord let me be
 But a cog in Life's great wheel;
Only help me work that the world may see
 The light of the Spirit's zeal."

I do not ask for the highest way,
 I'll walk where the servants trod;
I only ask that my path each day
 Shall lead me close to God.

Have a Heart in a World of Need

would be able to carry on much longer those projects we had started.

Those whom we are able to help are so grateful for everything we can do for them, and they realize that we long to help more but are often hindered in one way or another. In memory I can still hear the children at the Canet Plage convalescent home on Christmas Day shout in French, "Long live the devoted Mennonites, those who are with us, and those far away." Sometimes we could help with only a work of cheer or encouragement. The fact that we were there even helped.

"But what can we do?" I hear you ask. There are a number of things:

1. Keep informed.
2. Discuss this information with your family around the table.
3. Pray for the workers and the work.
4. Give liberally.
5. Send in clothing, new or used clothing that is clean and in good condition, to Mrs. M. C. Lehman, Ephrata Clothing Depot, Akron, Pennsylvania.
6. Write to those who are working over there. (Use airmail. To France, it costs thirty cents for half an ounce. Do not send a card signed by a number of people; a personal message means so much more).
7. Be willing to go if your services are needed.

In a letter from Lois Gunden written July 13, she writes that a shipment of clothing reached Lisbon and will be sent to Marseille by boat. What a day of rejoicing there will be when that clothing can be distributed in the camps and among the children at our home. Clothing such a big family was a problem not easily solved, as clothing is so strictly rationed in France. Those warm wollen things, and the shoes especially, will surely be appreciated when the temperature begins to drop. I hate to think of what conditions will be like over there this winter if more food and clothing cannot be sent over. Fuel is so scarce and one notices the cold much more when one does not have proper food and clothing.

Brother Orie O. Miller asked us what people thought of our going to Europe at a time like this. I told him that some thought we were brave; others thought we were crazy. Would I do it again? Yes, I would, and gladly. Relief work is different. Surely it is risky, dangerous, and uncertain, but so are many other things. It is not a fool's errand. There is a satisfaction and a joy in being there to do the actual giving. No longer need one's sympathies work off only as an emotion, but one can be busy going about "doing good." There is something to do and one's services are needed, and needed badly. People's lives are depending on one. It is a great responsibility but one is not doing the work alone. One is only a representative of the many folks at home who are interested and backing up the work with their prayers, time, and means. We have the promises of our Lord that He is with us. It was hard for me to leave my big international family of adorable children who usually called me "mademoiselle americaine."

In the sermon we heard on the boat on Decoration Sunday, Reverend Hermon, formerly of the American church of Berlin, said that if the Unknown Soldier could be resurrected today he would say, "This is not that for which I died."

Love is the greatest force, and it has penetrating and irresistible qualities that no other way of life has. Soon after I arrived in France I wrote an article that ended with the plea that a universal language be found and put into use soon. Love is the universal language. I do not mean that one whose actions are motivated by love will not be misunderstood at times, but love is a language that is more easily and more widely understood than any other language.

Ten Reasons Why Every Christian Home Should Have a Family Altar

1. Because it will send you forth to the daily task with cheerful heart, stronger for the work, true to duty and determined in whatever is done therein to glorify God.

2. Because it will give you strength to meet the discouragements, the disappointments, the unexpected adversities and sometimes the blighted hopes that may fall to your lot.

3. Because it will make you conscious throughout the day of the attending presence of an unseen, divine One, who will bring you through more than conqueror over every unholy thought or thing that rises up against you.

4. Because it will sweeten home life and enrich home life and enrich home relationship as nothing else can do.

5. Because it will resolve all the misunderstanding and relieve all the friction that sometimes intrudes into the sacred precincts of family life.

6. Because it will hold as nothing else the boys and girls when they have gone out from beneath the parental roof and so determine very largely the eternal salvation of your children.

7. Because it will exert a helpful, hallowed influence over those who may at any time be guests within the home.

8. Because it will enforce as nothing else can do the work of your pastor in pulpit and in pew and stimulate the life of your church in every activity.

9. Because it will furnish an example and a stimulus to other homes for the same kind of life and service and devotion to God.

10. Because the Word of God requires it and in thus obeying God we honor Him who is the Giver of all good and the source of all blessing.

THE GREATER GLORY

By Myra Brooks Welch

It's easy to die 'mid the world's applause
For a noble deed, with trumpets blaring!
It's the harder part to fight for a cause
And inwardly bleed with no one caring!

* * * *

So on life's endless river
Our deeds flow on and on,
To add their joy or sorrow
To men e'en when we're gone.

In future days and years,
Still far beyond our view,
I hope the seeds I've scattered
Will all be flowers! Don't you?

THANK GOD

Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ;" Eph. 5:20.

The right emphasis is very important. Underemphasize the amount of yeast and overemphasize the quantity of flour and the result is bread that is heavy. Some things need to be put at the center of life and not at its circumference. In playing crack-the-whip the tall, heavy, strong youth is put at the head of the line. From there he can make the whip crack. If not put there, the further down the line he is placed the less significant his strength becomes for cracking the whip. That which is important needs to be emphasized.

Undoubtedly, the Christians of Ephesus thanked God at times and for some things. Paul, however, is very emphatic about thanking God. He suggests that it be done always and for all things. The Christian is to be full of thankfulness; it is to be at the center of his life where it can be very effective. Paul knew that such thankfulness did something to and for people.

Thank God, and you will become more independent of outer circumstances. We can readily appreciate an exhortation to thank God for the good things of life, but an admonition to thankfulness for all things leaves us somewhat puzzled. However, if we believe in only thanking God for the good things which we can garner in from this world, then these very things tend to become dearer and dearer and more and more necessary to us. We become dependent upon them for our happiness. Then when the crops fail, or our health deteriorates, or the weather is something else than we wish it, the basis for our feeling of contentment vanishes. The foundation of outer circumstances is sometimes deep and broad, and then again it crumbles and sinks and sometimes it seems to disappear nearly altogether. It is a poor foundation for that feeling of contentment which is to be ever present in the Christian. Thank God also when the fires, the famines, the floods, and the storms of life rage against you. Increasingly you will be convinced that contentment is something separate from the everchanging circumstances which surround one. You will find thankfulness whelming up within you regardless of what outer conditions are like. You will be free from the outer aspects of life. Master over them you can say with Paul, "Not that I speak in respect of want: for I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content. I know both how to be abased, and I know how to abound: everywhere and in all things I am instructed both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound and to suffer need." Phil. 4:11, 12.

Thank God always for all things, and you will become more dependent upon Christ, your inner life. As we cease relying upon outer life, we begin to focus our expectations upon Christ, our inner life. He begins to mean more and more to us. We find in Him the sweetest and fullest contentment, which no one and nothing can take away from us. He is the one, sure, unchanging foundation for contentment. Regardless of what goes on about us, Christ lives within us. As we thank God always for all things we find it natural to say, "For me to live is Christ."

Outer conditions cannot either give us life or destroy it. It is the inner resources that count. Thanking God always for all things opens our eyes to them.

"If the church of Christ brings forth children from the doctrine of man, and not from God's word, she is not faithful unto Christ, and her children are not of his seed. Therefore may nothing else be preached in Christ's kingdom and house, the church, except her King and husband's own commands and words, according to which she and all her servants must conform. This command and word (I say), Christ commanded all true messengers and preachers to observe, as he spoke; Preach the gospel. He does not say, preach the doctrines and commands of man; preach councils and customs; preach glossy ordinances and opinions of the learned, but he says, 'Preach the Gospel,' and 'teach them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you,' Matt. 28:20."

RESOLUTION ADOPTED BY THE FRANCONIA (OLD MENNONITE) CONFERENCE, PENNSYLVANIA

at its session, October 1, 1942

"Statement Concerning the Dependents of Married Selectees"

Selective Service has made provision for the drafting of married men and single men who have dependents also. At the present time about fifteen or twenty per cent of the men called into C. P. S. Camps are married. Fortunately, the Franconia Conference has not had many married men called up to this time, but the prospects are for the number to be increased in the coming months. Draftees called in military service are assured of having their dependents provided for by the government, but this is not the case with the conscientious objector, whose dependents will receive nothing from the government.

Conference offers the following suggestions:

1. If the dependent is a wife only, she should be able to support herself by engaging in some line of work in some cases she may be able to live with either parental family and thus reduce expenses.

2. In case of a wife and children who need care, it may be possible for these to live with the husband's or wife's parents and share to a certain extent in home upkeep. In every case wherever there is need above what the dependents or their families can provide themselves, the church shall give the needed assistance.

3. When the church renders assistance to any draftee's dependents, it shall be administered by the deacon. The deacon shall carefully investigate each individual case and give assistance as needed. The deacon may draw upon the conference fund for this work (or M.C.C. fund if one is set up) unless the local congregations decide to draw upon its own poor fund.

4. As this critical war period continues the demand for self sacrifice will increase. It will become more necessary to live as the early church did, having all things in common. The sacrifice of the young men leaving home, giving their time without pay, calls for us to give more of our means to make it possible for the church to retain her testimony and practice the New Testament principle of Christ.

SOME FACTS ABOUT C.P.S. CAMPS

1. The average rate at which boys have been assigned to our M. C. C. camps has been 200 per month for the past five months. The present rate is closer to 300 per month.

2. Higher food costs have caused an excess over budget figures in the camp program of almost $2,000 monthly the last three months.

3. It is estimated by M. C. C. that the camp program will cost $170,000 the next three months.

4. The representatives that met in Chicago October 3, 1942, from all our Mennonite constituencies faced the fact that some radical adjustments will need to be made in some of the constituencies in fund raising to meet the required needs for the C. P. S. program.

5. It is therefore necessary to ask each Mennonite group to send the balance due for the six months period ending February 1, 1943, in to your treasurer by December 1, 1942. That is, the six months period has been shortened to four months.

6. The appraisal of the M. C. C. program will now be given to the churches for three months periods instead of six months periods.

7. The expenditure of the C. P. S. program is now about $14,000 per week. This means that we should send in our money as soon as at hand, even if it is twice a month.

8. Our balance due October 1, was $27,262.60. At that time it had not been paid.

9. The task we face is not hopeless. It is an emergency, but we can meet it if every church does its part.

10. To date Mennonites have subscribed to $185,000 worth of Civilian Bonds.

Signed, Ernest J. Bohn

WASTE

Forty thousand dollars is too much to spend on a funeral, of course. No one has hesitated to condemn the Frenchman who set aside that amount, as wickedly wasteful. But forty thousand dollars—when you think of it—bears no larger proportionate relation to his wealth that the average funeral expense bears to the wealth of the average family. The plain, everyday American family is open to the same condemnation as he. What the motive for it is, we can never be sure. It may be pride or a blind desire to make a testimony to the departed which will be recognized as fitting by the community. Or perhaps the grief stricken family places itself trustingly into the hands of the local undertaker and is too proud afterwards to admit that its trust was betrayed. In any event, it is true that thousands of family debts, which shut out effectually all the light of hope, have their foundations in a sickness and the funeral. The wound, which was deep enough at the time is re-opened with the painful payment of each installment of the funeral debt. Of all the money which is spent by Christian people, that which goes for lavish display at funerals approaches most closely to the pagan. But how many families have the courage to brave possible criticism from the community and insist upon a simple funeral! —Selected

DEDICATORY SERVICES

The Lorraine Avenue Mennonite Church, Wichita, Kansas, has set aside Sunday, November 1, for the dedication of the addition to its present building. Our church cordially invites its friends to attend these services, which are to begin at 10:45 a.m.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

EMPTY-HANDED?

Special evangelistic meetings receive quite some prominence in our Arizona missions. They are usually conducted in the fall of the year. The forenoon prayer meetings and Bible studies encourage and strengthen the Hopi Christians in their faith. In the afternoons they go out to preach in the various homes of the village or all gather to have a street service at some prominent place in the respective villages. The evening messages are for the unsaved.

We are glad to know that Rev. A. E. Kreider will be our guest speaker in the meetings here at Oraibi from November 1 to 8. In this connection we would earnestly ask all of you at home to pray very definitely for these meetings that the Hopi Christians may truly become more firmly established in the faith and that many Hopis, now still dead in trespasses and sins, may be saved.

It is now almost two years since such special meetings during which we saw such evidence of the Holy Spirit's work in the hearts of a few individuals. Rev. Bysegger from the Presbyterian Missions at Chin Lee, Arizona, was our guest speaker. With no street lights in these villages it is sometimes quite necessary for the missionary to take home some older person or a group of children after the evening meetings. The people had all gone home after one such meeting, and while Rev. Bysegger, our children, and I were in the church waiting for Mr. Suderman to return from one such errand, a twelve-year old Hopi boy, Johnny, came in. He had not been in the meeting. Maybe he heard the message in a dark corner of the entrance room, or under some window outside, or maybe not at all. But he looked so burdened. He was asked, "Johnny, is there something we can do for you tonight?"

"No," said he. But he lingered without entering into conversation with any of us.

So the question was repeated, "Isn't there something we can do for you, Johnny?"

Again he answered, "No."

As he still lingered he was asked, "What about the Lord Jesus Christ? Have you ever thought of accepting Him as your Saviour?"

"That's what I came in here for tonight," was his quick reply. What joy it was to lead him to the Lord with the open Bible, and to hear him pray asking the Lord Jesus to come into his heart! We accompanied him home to encourage him to make an open confession to his mother and father, who are both Christians. His mother was sitting at the table reading her Bible, evidently reviewing the text of the evening message. There was great joy in that home that evening. However, the father felt that Johnny was too young to be baptized and that he had better wait until he was older. Thus, becoming discouraged and also finding some of his comrades ridiculing him, he finally dropped out of services. Then on August 2 he was accidentally shot, though not killed. What marvelous grace of God to give him thirty-six hours in which to manifest anew his faith in Jesus Christ, to call much for prayer, and to reveal his love for the Word of God! We felt, however, that he had left so little testimony for Jesus Christ, so at the funeral service we sang as a duet the song, "Must I Go and Empty-Handed?" But right after the sermon, Jennie, an elderly Hopi lady and her husband Wm. Iotsqova accepted Jesus Christ as their Saviour, their daughter Marietta renewed her stand, and two backsliders also renewed their purpose really to forsake sin and follow the Lord. What a scene! There beside the lifeless form of Johnny stood Mr. Suderman and these souls now confessing the Lord Jesus Christ. What was it that moved these Hopis to turn to the Lord? The love and graciousness of Johnny's parents towards them, for it was their son who had accidentally shot Johnny. Not one word of accusation or criticism had fallen from either Johnny or his parents' lips. Non-Christian Hopis would react quite the opposite. Then while the audience passed by to take a last view of the departed, these two mothers sat together arm in arm weeping both tears of sadness and tears of joy.

On August 16 we had the first baptismal service in the enlarged church. It was a blessed day. At such services it is quite often that instead of just answering a "yes" to the baptismal questions the older Hopis weave a testimony around answers they give. Immediately following this service we also remembered the Lord's death in partaking of the Lord's Supper. Some thirty gathered around the table. Some Christians found themselves not ready to partake and remained in their seats. Do pray for them that they may again walk in such close fellowship with the Lord that they too may join us on such occasions.

How we yearn to see a "Turning unto the Lord" amongst the Hopis. 'Tis such a joy to see a few come; how much greater would be the rejoicing if more of them were coming! And surely that is possible with the Lord, for on the cross He died for the sins of the world and conquered Satan. Isa. 53:6 and Col. 2:14-15.

Yours for the salvation of the Hopis,
John and Mabel Suderman

DAILY DEVOTIONS

By Gerald Stucky, New York City

OCTOBER 29—"Mine eyes are ever toward the Lord; for he shall pluck my feet out of the net." Psa. 25:15.

It is not the severity of our troubles that is the source of human misery and defeat, but our inability or ignorance in knowing what to do with them is what casts us into the slough of despondency. When on that stormy night Peter walked on the sea toward his Lord, it was not the immensity of the waves that initiated Peter's sinking, but he began to sink because he had lost sight of his Lord. It is only as we turn our eyes upon Jesus, look full into His wonderful face, that the things and troubles of the world will grow strangely dim in the light of His glory and grace.

OCTOBER 30—"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." Rom. 12:1.

The greatest hours of our life are not the hours in which we have become the master of something, but rather the hours in which we have been mastered. When a great idea or a great piece of music overcomes us we step on the threshold of a great experience. But the greatest experience of life comes to a man when he ceases to demand the control of his own life and turns over his life to the mastery of Christ. Victory and joy in life come through surrender—when the one to whom we surrender is Christ. It is not what we have in our control that determines our destiny, but what controls us.

OCTOBER 31—"And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up." John 3:14.

It seems strange that our Lord should be likened unto a serpent—for a serpent is the symbol of Satan, of sin, and of death. Why then should he be likened unto a serpent? Because Jesus in His crucifixion did become the embodiment of sin, taking upon Himself the sin of the world. This He did that the power of sin might be destroyed and that man might be redeemed from the bondage of sin. Herein is the good news of salvation. Christ has paid the penalty of our sin, and now by faith in Him and His shed blood, we may have new life and the righteousness of God.

RESEARCH IN RELIEF PLANNING

In the interests of Mennonite relief work Brother Carl Kreider, professor at Goshen College, spent some weeks of the past summer in Washington, D.C., where he made a detailed study of food consumption in European countries: Netherlands, Germany, Denmark, and Norway. Brother Kreider also reports that he contacted officials of the various governmental departments and with them discussed relief problems from the Mennonite point of view and concern.

It is hoped that Brother Kreider's findings will prove fruitful in planning for further relief. There are, however, many problems in this connection which an uncertain future alone can unfold.

TO A BACKSLIDING CHURCH

Brethren, list to their hungry cry!
They're lost and helpless and about to die;
They're out in the cold with no one to care
For souls on the brink of eternal despair.

And it's not Africa's field that I mean,
Though their need is great as can clearly be seen;
But people about us—yes, right next door
Are drifting swiftly to eternity's shore.

You preachers and pastors, have you lost the vision?
Are you preaching for wages or good reputation?
Does your church have teas and banquets to pay
For the service you render them on the Lord's day?

Are your prayer meetings cancelled for lack of attendance?
Is there no one to pray for old time repentance?
If your church is cold then look to your heart,
Are you dwelling close to the Lord, or apart?

You people that go to church Sunday morn,
And term yourself Christians, have you been reborn?
Be careful to call yourselves Christians that way,
Unless you've met Christ and His likeness portray.

How many lost ones have you led to Him?
How many prayers have ascended for them?
Have you died to yourself so much, you can see
Others also need Jesus—not just you and me?

Brother, look to your heart this day.
Is there ought that prevents the Master's own way?
You folks that know of the Truth and the Way
Will be required for your fruitage one day.

Look at your life; examine it close;
Is it set aside solely for Jesus' own use?
Are you burning with passion for souls that are dead?
Or have things less important sort of gone to your head?

Get busy and pray! You church going folk!
Pray for God's mercies on yourselves to invoke.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

MENNONITES OR CHRISTIANS

Under the general title "Mennonites and Rural Life" I have been emphasizing Mennonite principles from week to week. It may seem to some that there has been too much emphasis on the word Mennonite and not enough on the word Christian. A few of the readers have intimated that the concepts "Mennonite heritage" and "Christian heritage" are two separate and distinct matters. Such criticisms, direct or implied, assume that when we speak of things Mennonite we are somehow thinking and speaking of only part of the Christian gospel, but not the whole of it. This, I believe, is due to an erroneous conception of the meaning of the term Mennonite.

Why A Mennonite Church?

When the term "Mennonite" is used in this column it is used to designate a particular kind or type of a Christian. It is assumed that all readers will know this fact, and for that reason it seems unnecessary to insert the word "Christian" before the word "Mennonite" each time it is used. There are over two hundred religious bodies in America today all claiming to be Christian. Roman Catholics, Seventh Day Advents, Mormons, and Jehovah's Witnesses all claim to be Christian; they all believe in God, they all accept the Bible and all profess to follow Christ, but all of them with varying degrees of emphasis and with different interpretations.

We must express Christianity in some particular form or through some particular agency that distinguishes our understanding of the Scriptures and our leading of the Holy Spirit from those who differ from us. This agency is the Mennonite Church. If it were not the Mennonite Church it would be one of the many other existing churches or perhaps a new one yet to be organized.

Opposition to Term "Mennonite"

Those who object to so much stressing of Mennonite principles may do so because they are not in accord with the church's teachings. By virtue of their nurture and training they may have come to accept religious principles and Christian interpretations that are at variance with the traditional Mennonite interpretation and understanding of what constitutes the Christian message. Such people, naturally, would not be happy at seeing Mennonite principles stressed. We all like to see those things emphasized which we have been taught to believe are most important.

Because our young people have been taught in so many non-Mennonite schools and so many of our older people have been influenced through the radio and magazines by non-Mennonite doctrines, it is no wonder that Mennonites often do not recognize Mennonite teachings when they hear them. It is an actual fact that the preaching and the thinking of many who call themselves Mennonites today is more like Calvinism, Lutheranism, or even some phases of Catholicism, than it is Mennonitism. A reading of Reformation history will reveal anew what were the beliefs that clearly distinguished Mennonites from those other believers.

The Important Thing

Mennonitism is not important for its own sake. It is important for the sake of God. Our membership in this church should mean that we have joined this band of Christians rather than any other because we believe it is God's will; we believe God revealed unto our forefathers the true conception of the Christian Church; that in this church we can best follow Christ and best help Him build the Kingdom of God. It is, therefore, incorrect to think in terms of Mennonitism OR Christianity. Mennonitism IS Christianity. It is Christianity of the highest, noblest, and purest kind that God through Jesus has yet revealed unto us.

The Light

"At evening time there shall be light." Zech. 14:7b

"Now we can see the stars." This was the jubilant response, of a London lad to his first "blackout" experience. Before this experience the dazzling lights of the city had blinded him to the beauties of the starry heavens. Again and again we discover that it takes the night time to show the stars.

Today the lights are going out around the world. Many believe that we are in the dim twilight of this age. Perhaps it is even later than we think. In the encircling gloom many people are losing their way. They walk in dangerous places and know it not. They are defenseless in the presence of the beasts who prey upon the travelers of the night. Oh, how we need light—THE LIGHT!

Christ said, "I am the Light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness but shall have the light of life." He is the Light needed by individuals and nations. He is the Morning Star which pierces the darkness of our personal "blackouts."

If our "black out" is due to adverse circumstances, let us look to Jesus who giveth the light of wisdom. If it is due to sorrow, let us look to Jesus who giveth the light of comfort. If it is due to loneliness, let us look to Jesus, who giveth the light of true companionship. If it is due to sin in the heart, let us look to Jesus, the lamb of God, who taketh away the sins of the world.

SCHOOL FOR ASSISTANT AND EDUCATIONAL DIRECTORS

From October 30 to November 22 a period of training will be given to fourteen Mennonite campees to prepare them to serve as assistant and educational directors in M. C. C. camps.

From October 30 to November 8 the campees will reside at Akron, Pa., where they will attend lectures and discussions. The lectures and discussions will be on Scriptural Non-resistance, History of Mennonite Non-resistant Practice, camp problems, camp finances, etc. The following brethren will lead the sessions of lecture and instruction: H. A. Fast, M. C. Lehman, Albert Gaeddert, O. O. Miller, Harold S. Bender, and Jesse Hoover.

For the remainder of the period the time will be spent in Washington, D. C., where with campees from Brethren and Friends camps they will become acquainted with the camp-government relationships and procedures. Following this they will be assigned to camps as they are needed to serve as assistant and educational directors.

Churcch Etiquette

1. Come early.

2. Never pass up the aisle during the reading of the Scripture Lesson. You distract others and destroy the effect of the Word.

3. If the sermon has begun, take a seat near the door, even if you are a prominent member.

4. Be devout in every attitude, the church is not a theatre. You come to worship, not to whisper, lounge, or sleep.

5. Be thoughtful of the comfort of others. Never make a haystack of yourself at the end of a pew and expect others to crawl over you to reach a seat.

6. Help strangers to find and follow the service in the hymnal. If they have no book, share your own with them.

7. Always remember that strangers are the guests of the church members. Treat them with the same courtesy as you would if they should visit in your own home.

8. Never put on your wraps during the last hymn—they will still be there after the benediction.

9. Never rush for the door after the benediction as though the church were on fire.

10. Remember at all times that you are in the house of the Lord. —Northwestern Lutheran

What is That in Thy Hand?

What in your hand are you holding?
Lord, it is only a rod;
Cast down, it may be a serpent,
A crawling, loathsome clod,
But lifted up, an instrument
That may be used for God.

What in your hand are you holding?
Lord just a day, or an hour;
Time may be lost, or be wasted
As a torn and crumpled flower,
Or it may shine with a glory
That reflects an infinite power.

What in your hand are you holding?
One talent, or five, or ten,
A fisherman's line, or a needle,
A hammer, a hoe, or a pen,
If our small tools be cast down, Lord
Help us to lift them again.

What in your hand are you holding?
Lord, it is only a rod
Used in a most humble calling,
Walking where many have trod,
Cast it not down for the devil,
Lift it up—use it for God.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Herbert E. Miller, Deer Creek, Oklahoma

NOVEMBER 1—"Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness." Matt. 5:6.

God's plan for sustaining our soul is by partaking of his spiritual food. No one can be a Christian without Christ, and no one can live as a Christian without having daily communion with him. We may have the habit of going to church, but have no hunger for God's Word. We may pray because a Christian ought to pray, but ours may be the prayer of the Pharisee instead of the publican. We may speak a lot to the Lord, but never let him speak to us. God needs strong spiritual men and women who feed their souls daily by reading and studying the Scriptures and praying to Him in humility and in faith. Once we taste his spiritual food we crave for it daily, for only by His strength are we able to give a Christian testimony in our home, our local church, in our community, or wherever we may be.

NOVEMBER 2—"Follow me and I will make you fishers of men." Matt. 4:19.

Jesus was ready to begin his public ministry on earth. He spoke the above words to men who became his disciples. It is striking to note that Jesus did not first present them with an outline or plan of his work. He asked them first to follow him. Then he said he would make them fishers of men. The emphasis is upon the word make. The disciples were all capable men, but they were not the kind Jesus could send out to proclaim his gospel. Jesus made them men of humility, of prayer, of faith, of compassion for others, even ready to lay down their life for Jesus' sake. Thus, if it seems difficult to be a Christian, remember Jesus is most willing to make us his followers if we give our life to him.

NOVEMBER 3—"Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son, and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ." Gal. 4:7.

In this verse is mentioned the highest honor God could bestow upon us, namely that of being his heir. We cannot earn this honor. God gives it to us through his Son Jesus Christ. To many this is a great stumbling block. They would like to have fellowship with God now and in eternity, but it would seem to them a greater virtue if salvation were earned and not received as a gift. This is, however, not God's plan of redemption. God gave his Son Jesus to be our Saviour. If we would have to earn salvation He could not have shown us his infinite love.

NOVEMBER 4—"I am the vine, ye are the branches: He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without me ye can do nothing." John 15:5.

Jesus states here the simple order of our relationship to him. The disciples were to understand that He was the source of the strength they needed to carry on his work. Jesus infers here that the branches, that is, Christians, have the privilege before God and the people of the world, to bear the fruit of the Spirit, such as love, joy, peace, and long suffering. We cannot bear such fruit unless we abide in Him. Jesus said, "Without me ye can do nothing." If we pretend to be Christian, but are not a "branch on the vine," can we testify of a Saviour's love and compassion to the lost? Can we speak of divine hope and assurance to those who are discouraged? Can we tell of the Saviour's comfort to those who are bereaved? Can we express faith in eternal life to those who are searching for the truth? Only by abiding in Christ can we become his true messengers.

NOVEMBER 5—"Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away. . . . Ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth." II Tim. 3:5, 7.

The apostle Paul describes in this chapter the different types of people to be found in the world. Verse 5 speaks of those who have a form of godliness, but deny the power of God which is necessary to live a Christian life. Such people are not Christians. They commit a great wrong by often influencing others to deny the power of God also. From such we are admonished to turn away. Though we may profit materially, intellectually, and socially by associating with such people, we do not profit spiritually, and may thus lose our own soul. Those who merely have a form of godliness are "ever learning and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth." The truth is that Jesus Christ is our personal Saviour and Redeemer.

NOVEMBER 6—"Therefore be ye also ready for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." Matt. 24:44.

God promised Abraham the land of Canaan for an inheritance. His people would be sojourners in another land for four hundred years and then they would come back to Canaan. God fulfilled his promise when He brought Israel out of Egypt back to the promised land. God promised a Messiah and when the appointed time came he sent his Son into the world. The Lord Jesus promised his disciples the Holy Spirit, and after waiting ten days the Spirit came upon them. When Jesus ascended into heaven the disciples were promised that he would come again some day in like manner as he ascended. This promise is yet to be fulfiled. It is a promise of much comfort and assurance in these trying days. We do not know just when He will come again, but the assurance that he will come gives us a living hope.

NOVEMBER 7—". . . where prayer was wont to be made. . ." Acts 16:13.

In a certain family it was the custom for each member to give a Bible verse at the breakfast table. After the meal they would all join hands and pray together the Lord's Prayer. A guest was very much impressed by this custom. Several months later the guest met the oldest son of the family at a university and asked him what he missed most now that he was away from home. The boy replied, "I miss most the handclasp at the breakfast table, if I could feel the close grasp of my father's hand, and repeat with them all the Lord's Prayer, it would begin the day right and nothing would matter then. The remembrance of those breakfast scenes at home stand between me and more than one temptation. It's what keeps me straight."

What I Owe My Minister

Reverence—I owe my minister reverent attention as the ambassador of God sent to teach me a better way of living.

Affection—I owe my minister affection, that he may be strengthened by the knowledge that the members of the church are with him in the bonds of holy love and unity.

Trust—I owe my minister trust, that he may be free to serve the church unhampered by faultfinding.

Generosity—I owe my minister generosity, that if his methods seem a little strange to me, I may not be narrow enough to insist that he shall change them.

Prayer—I owe it to my minister to pray for him each day that God may bless him and make his service a blessing.

Protection—I owe to my minister the protection of kindly silence by refraining from repeating in his presence the slander or unkind gossip that would burden him and prevent him from doing his best work.

Time—I owe my minister enough time to help in his work, when and where he needs me.

Encouragement—I owe my minister encouragement when vexations and annoyances make his work difficult, or when he feels discouraged.

Appreciation—I owe my minister a kindly word of appreciation when his ministry is especially helpful to me.

Consideration—I owe it to my minister not to interrupt and hinder his work with petty and unnecessary calls upon his time and sympathy.

Attention—I owe my minister the courtesy of attention when I go to church that he may not be annoyed by my careless actions.

Charity—I owe to my minister to overlook any trivial flaw or personal pecularity, such as a mannerism of speech or action, which in no way hinders his work.

Gratitude—I owe it to my minister to remember gratefully the many times he has helped me to bear some trial, the outpouring of his sympathy that strengthened and helped me in times of sorrow.

Remembering the nobility of the Christlike men who have ministered unto me, I feel that my debt to them is too great to ever be fully paid.

FACTS FROM THE W.C.T.U.

W.C.T.U. headquarters gives the following facts: We have one retail liquor license for every 300 residents; eleven saloons for every five churches; one tavern or liquor bar for every seventy-one homes; our booze bill for 1939 was $3,228,491,968. The entire national debt of $44,000,000,000 could have been wiped out with the money people have spent for liquor and liquor results since repeal.

TWO SELVES HAVE I

By Mona Hull Schroeder

One self would follow the glittering path,
The path of the smart and gay,
The path where burdens seem few and light
To carry along the way.
This self would wear the dress of style
And live a life of ease
Surrounded by laughter, wine and song,
And strive its friends to please.
This self would follow the cause of war,
As popular people do,
Ignoring the things men hunger for—
The things that are wise and true.

But another self cries out for life,
A life that is good and pure.
The path it must travel leads uphill
And burdens it must endure.
This self would send out a friendly ring
To encircle the whole wide world.
It would lead a mighty crusade for peace
With humanity's flags unfurled.
It would put itself, not others, last;
To its house keep an open door,
And whatever it has it would share
With the friendless, sick and poor.

Dear Father, today this prayer I ask,
That humbly, on bended knee,
I will somehow find and keep at last
The self I would bring to thee.

BE DIFFERENT

We admire those who are different, those whose character and life stand out above the crowd, those who do not lazily drift with the current of life but struggle against it to glorious and worthwhile achievements. Ah yes, in our hearts we know that it is quality that counts.

However, it is not easy to be different in this world. When in Rome there is great pressure upon one to do as the Romans do. Society punishes the criminal who lives below its accepted standards, but human society also generally relives the lonely prophet and the saint who live high above its popular ways. A leveling out process is going on this world which tends to make people think and act alike.

The great need is for individuals who are different from the average run of mankind. God wants a peculiar, a chosen people, men and women who are different in spiritual quality from the great mass. The need of the hour and for all time to come is not conformity to the customs of this world, but rather the transformation of men and women by God.

This is what Paul had in mind when he wrote, "You must not adopt the customs of this world, but by your new attitude of mind be transformed, so that you can find out what God's will is—what is good, pleasing, and perfect." Rom. 12:2 (Goodspeed)

Perhaps, deep down in your heart you are dissatisfied with the kind of person you are. That would be a good sign. There are too many people in the world who are satisfied with themselves. If they would ever consider God in all his holiness sufficiently, they might lose that feeling of self-satisfaction.

It is right that you should want to be different. God's glorious message as given in the words of Paul and otherwise is that you can be different.

You can be transformed into an individual whose power of mind, and feeling, and will is all centered around a great and holy purpose. Your life need not be one whose thought stream is sluggish, whose feelings are tainted by the impurities of your environment, and whose will is wavering. Your life can be abundant.

The first step in the transformation of anyone's life is the acceptance of Jesus Christ as Saviour and Lord. This is the step which Paul referred to when he wrote of the Romans as having a "new attitude of mind." They had turned from heathenism to Christ, yet there had not come into their lives that transformation for which Paul had hoped. You too may have accepted Christ, yet you may long to be different, long to be more thoroughly Christ-like. It is true that the first step is absolutely necessary. Before the professors of a college can teach anyone that individual must first possess a mind with which he can learn. The right kind of mind is absolutely essential for transforming anyone from a high school graduate into a college graduate. However, the possession of a good mind is no guarantee that an individual will be transformed in four years. More is necessary. That brings us to the second essential step in the transformation of one's life.

That mind dare not be idle; it dare not be lazy. It must operate; it must be used intensively. May this not be your key to a different, fuller life in Christ?

When you accepted Christ, He came into your life to live in and through you. The mind of Christ dwelleth in you. Follow out the implications of that very important fact. What is a mind for? To use. With the mind of Christ in you analyze all customs, all fashions, all habits, and all patterns of action which make up life as you know it and then determine whether they are the will of God for you. Let nothing escape being tested by the mind of Christ in you. With it examine your work, play, studies, friendships, deportment, dress, eating, and every phase of life. Be constructively critical, viewing everything not from the standpoint of science, as good as that is, but from the highest viewpoint possible, the mind of Christ, as revealed in the Bible and as operative in you. Do not rest until you can feel assured that every bit of your way of life is the will of God for you.

Use the mind of Christ in you in such a way, and you will be a transformed individual. You will be different from the person who uncritically accepts the customs of this world and as a consequence lives in spiritual medicority. You will be like Christ who continually sought to ascertain what God's will for him was.

We want to be different, yet often we are afraid to be. It takes courage. Christ found it so. There may be times when you will not care to participate in the ways of your associates, and they may consider you queer. Millions may rush past you bent upon a certain goal, but you may be one of the few who feels constrained to say "No!" Dare to be different. Dare to be true to the mind of Christ in you. Stand up for Jesus. Stand up for Him, if need be, alone. He stood alone. At first his friends forsook Him. Later they died for Him. The darkness of Gethsemane closed upon Him, but out of it came the Light of the world. Christ was different. You can't be Christlike without being different too.

When Will Mayo of the renowned Mayo Brothers as a boy once came home sick from smoking, his father asked him one qusetion. And tha twas, "Why did you do it?"

"Because the others did it," came the answer.

Said the old doctor to his son, "Will, never do things because others do them. Do them because they are right."

Use the mind of Christ in you, and then do things because they are right and for no other reason.—rw.

SUNSET

By Ora W. Graber

The setting sun drops low
Behind the western rim.
Its brilliant afterglow
Is fading . . . fading . . . dim.
As in the heavens above
The twinkling stars shine bright,
Out of his heart of love
God gives the peace of night.

My life some day must fade
As fades the setting sun,
Earth's cares aside be laid,
My earthly labors done.
I trust that there may be,
When my evening sun sinks low,
Lingering after me
A mellow afterglow.

Toward Spiritual Growth in Camp

As one lives with fellows in camp day after day, the real selves show up. Frequently one hears comments such as, "He's a real fellow," "He's willing to admit his mistakes," or "He's always willing to learn." We like to associate with a fellow because he has a humble, unselfish spirit. Unfortunately such comments would not hold true for all of us. But such a spirit is essential to peaceful living.

Such spirit is a product of our Christian thinking and belief. We must not merely appear humble but be humble. Those things we know, can talk about, can do, the good ideas we have are not of ourselves. "By the grace of God I am what I am." Our rich Christian background, the good books we can read, the inspirational teachers we can have, the privilege of having such good friends—are not things of our doing. But, "by the grace of God" we can avail ourselves of them. And if they are God-given then we must act in a spirit of holy obedience. We use our knowledge and opportunities in a spirit of deep humility lest someone reject that which is good because of our arrogance and selfish desire for recognition.

We Mennonites are members of a Christian minority. We hope that our witness will be acceptable and fruitful. So we must "watch and pray" lest we as a group are tempted to commit the sin of the "inner spirit." It is a danger of a group such as ours. We are very conscious of refusing to kill in order that we sin not outwardly. Do we think more highly of ourselves than we ought, that we are better than others?

As the publican we must sincerely and continually pray, "God be merciful to me a sinner." Let us repent as sinners in that we have conflict and bitterness within our own "peace-loving groups. Humbly we must admit we have much to learn in working together positively as a Christian brotherhood in all areas of our life. Often in our personal lives we allow the self-defending spirit "return an eye for an eye." If we are selfish "Hitlers" in our small spheres, how can we deserve more opportunities from God for making our "peace" witness?

We are interested in living more peacefully with other people in camp and in our home community. We are interested that the message of our group will be more widely accepted and lived. Often there are some things about us which detract from the truth of our gospel. So let us cleanse ourselves of selfishness and became lowly in spirit trying to learn from others. Then, in the power that comes with such continual repentance and humility, let us train ourselves to give the spirit of Christ full sway. Through Christ and His redeeming love radiating every detail of our life, even "the heart of stone can be melted." Editorial in Pike View Peace News

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

A. S. BECHTEL

November 8, 1942

CHRISTIAN NURTURE IN THE FAMILY

Duet. 6:4-9, 20-25 II Tim. 3:14, 15

Our lesson topic is "Magnifying Religion In the Home." The responsibility for this rests chiefly with the parents, and while the children are young, altogether with the parents. The example which they set is of the greatest importance. They educate their children morally and religiously by words, conduct, and association with them. Children are quick to imitate, so the first duty of parents is to be the kind of persons they want their children to be. Parents are responsible for the standard of conduct in the home, and for its religious observances, for family worship and grace before meals. A place must be made for family prayers and this should be made as vital as possible.

Old Testament Religious Nurture in the Home

The religion of the Bible is not for adults only. The Bible speaks in terms of experiences common to persons of all ages. It, however, makes a very impressive appeal to youth. The God of the Bible, of Israel—Jehovah—is one Lord, not many as the heathen think of their gods. He is the Absolute One and we are to love Him with the sum total of all our powers, bodily, mental and soul—with the whole of man (vss. 4, 5). The words of God are to be fixed strongly in the hearts of parents. so that they can properly instruct their children. God's word should be talked about in the home, for children will then feel that it is important (vss. 7). There are many opportunities for parents to teach their children. A time should be set aside for family Bible reading and prayer.

The words of God are to be kept constantly in mind, just as though they were constantly before the eyes (vs. 8). God ordained that His Word is to be taught in the family circle. The parents are to live their religion. The home is to be consecrated as a godly home. Parents are to be companions to their children. The home training is to be religious. God's law is to be the law of the home. The best teaching can be done when children ask questions, for then they are in a receptive mood. Children want to know. The Jewish parents were to tell their children what God had done for them in bringing them out of Egypt and into the promised land. Now He gave these laws to preserve them as a nation. Bible stories are particularly adapted to the religious instruction of children. These commandments (vs. 24) point the way to life and lasting happiness. Parents are to show the children that these statutes were not heavy and burdensome, but rather God's crowning mercy, given for our good in life here and directing our steps unto eternal life. If we obey God's commands He will approve of us and hold us as righteous.

Paul is encouraging Timothy in his difficult work at Ephesus, by reminding him of religious truths he had learned as a child (vs. 14, 15). Childhood is the best time to learn. It is the most fruitful time for religious nurture. Such instruction leaves an indellible impression on the heart of the child. Dr. Torrey says, "No other has such lasting results as work for the conversion of children. They are more easily led to Christ than adults. They also make better Christians as they do not have so much to unlearn as those who have grown older in sin."

Religion for the Young

Children need to be taught the need of a definite experience of God's forgiveness. Parents should be greatly concerned to have their children make a definite confession of Christ as soon as they reach years of understanding, and then encourage them religiously in all possible ways. Simple truths concerning God and Jesus can be understood in early childhood years. The first few years of a child's life, while so wholly under the influence of the parents, are very important in the formation of character. It is very important that parents make chums of their children, take them into their confidence, and talk over plans with them.

How would you describe a truly Christian home?

How does a Christian family's love and loyalty to God strengthen home ties?

Why has religious instruction of children in the homes declined so much in our day?

FAITH

"All who receive faith from God, receive a tree full of all manner of good and delicious fruit; happy are they who receive this gift of God, for it is more precious than gold, silver or precious stones; it is incomparable, he that obtains it, obtains Christ Jesus, forgiveness of sins, a new mind and eternal life, for the true faith, which is acceptable to God, cannot be dead; it must bring forth fruit, and thus manifest its nature; it works continually in love; walks willingly in righteousness; mortifies flesh and blood; crucifies the lust and desires; rejoices in the cross of Christ; renews and regenerates, quickeneth, makes free and gives peace in Christ Jesus. Behold, such a faith, I say, is the gift of God, Eph. 2:8. . ."

—Menno Simon

". . . a fruitless, powerless faith, such as is possessed by the world, and does not work by love, be it ever so learned, wise, eloquent, plausible and miraculous, still, it is in the sight of God unclean, dead and accursed. I Cor. 13:2." —Menno Simon

Christian Youth and the State

Melvin Gingerich

The period of the Middle Ages extends roughly from the year 500 to the year 1500. For centuries preceding the year 500, the Roman Empire had maintained law and order in the area surrounding the Mediterranean Sea, and for several hundred years Christianity had been tolerated. But the Empire weakened, and uncivilized tribes from the north overran its territories. Sometimes this period is called the Dark Ages because Christianity and civilization seemed to be suffering defeat.

During these dark years, many Christian leaders entered monasteries, or small religious communities, where they lived lives of rigid self-discipline and religious worship. Renouncing marriage, wealth, worldly pleasure, ambition or self-seeking, they spent their time in study, work, and prayer. Much can be said in praise of the devotion and services of these monks, as they were called, who have ever since that day given the world worthy examples of self-denial and devotion. But when all this is said, it must still be admitted that the monk in his sheltered monastery life had fled from the world. There may come times when only those who have completely withdrawn themselves from the society of the world may be able to speak out clearly against the sins of their age. But would these monks not have been better examples if they had lived normal Christian lives of deep devotion out among those who needed help? They have been accused of being essentially egotistic, concerned primarily with the salvation of their own souls and not interested enough in the problems that society at large faced.

Jesus neither withdrew from society, nor did He advise His apostles to do so. They went everywhere preaching the Word. They even associated with publicans and sinners. And the world in which Jesus lived was very sinful. One writer says, "The moral degradation of the period when Jesus lived has rarely been equaled and perhaps never exceeded in the annals of mankind." Surely if the wickedness of the world is a good reason for withdrawing completely from society, Jesus might well have followed the advice of Peter on the Mount of Transfiguration. There they could have built three tabernacles (booths) and spent their days in meditation and worship.

Is there any danger that we may fall into the same error of withdrawing too completely from society? We will scarcely become monks and retire to monasteries, but there is a possibility that we may try to make our communities little worlds in themselves and forget our responsibility to the larger world. Whenever we are interested in saving only our own souls and those of a small circle of friends, we forget that Christ taught us that all men are our brothers and our neighbors.

During a time of war, there is a tendency for us to assume that because our nonresistant position is unpopular, we should be very quiet in stating our convictions lest we draw persecution upon ourselves. We are tempted to hide our lights under a bushel. The time to preach nonresistance is during times of peace, some would say, but we must be realists now and not say and write the things we believe. It is true that we should always be tactful in presenting Christ's teachings, and we should always be considerate of the views of those who do not agree with us. And there may be many individual instances when it is better to remain quiet than to speak. But nowhere in the New Testament do we have any suggestion that certain portions of Jesus' teachings are to be suspended during a time of crisis. We dare not retire into our communities and hope that by remaining quiet concerning our deep convictions we may pass through the crisis unaffected by the great tragedy that has befallen the world. We may be entering a period of militarism that may last a gneeration or longer. If we are going to wait to preach a positive doctrine of good will to all mankind, including our enemies, until the crisis has passed, we may find that we have waited so long that we have lost the convictions we once had, (and perhaps the opportunity as well). We must be ready at all times to witness to our faith, and through the columns of our church publications we must constantly bring the message that Christians overcome evil with good.

TRIBULATION

"He who purchased me with the blood of his love, and called me, who am unworthy, to his service, knows me, and knows that I seek not wealth, nor possessions, nor luxury, nor ease, but only the praise of the Lord, my salvation, and the salvation of many souls. For this I, my poor, feeble wife and children have for eighteen years endured extreme anxiety, oppression, affliction, misery and persecution, and at the period of my life, have been compelled everywhere to live in fear and seclusion; yea, when ministers repose on easy beds and downy pillows, we generally have to hide ourselves in secluded corners; when they at weddings and feasts, pipe and beat the tambour, and vaunt loudly, we must look out, when the dogs bark, lest the captors be at hand. Whilst they are saluted as doctors, lords and teachers by every one, we have to hear that we are ana-baptists, hedge preachers, deceivers and heretics, and must be saluted in the name of the devil. In short, whilst they are gloriously rewarded for their services with large incomes and easy times, our recompense and portion must be fire, sword and death."

CORRESPONDENCE

BETHANY MENNONITE CHURCH

Quakertown, Pennsylvania

On September 20, at 7:30 p. m. we had our Mennonite Hymnary dedication service. The Ladies Aid and Missionary Society presented the books to the church. One feature of the service, which was much enjoyed, was a short hymn sing. Two verses were sung of each hymn selected by the congregation. The sermon by our pastor was on "Christian Education" and was based on Psalm 71:19-24. On September 28 we held our Harvest Home Service. There was an artistic arrangement of over one hundred jars of fruit and vegetables put up by the ladies of the church and a variety of other foodstuffs and flowers in abundance. On Monday morning this was taken to the Home for the Aged at Frederick. The service in connection with this was very helpful. It was opened with the good old chorales, "Now Thank We All Our God" and "Praise Thou The Lord, O My Soul." Some of us would have enjoyed singing them out of the Gesangbuch. However, the translations are very good and enjoyable. Rev. Neuenschwander's text was "The Seed-Bed For a Spiritual Harvest" and was based on Acts 16:30-34. I'll pass on a small part of the sermon.

To have a good grain or vegetable harvest the seed-bed must be prepared specially, and so it is spiritually. Too many people just join church without breaking up the hard ground of sin. That midnight song service of Paul and Silas was interrupted by an earth-quake which loosed the chains from their bodies. Then the jailor's question was, "What must I do to be saved?' The glorious answer was, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." Three important points are: First, family worship which is part of the seed-bed preparation. Being remembered before God in earnest prayer has a wonderful influence upon the children. A few scripture verses on this are Duet. 4:9, Josh. 24:15, Job 1:5, Acts 16:15, and I Tim. 1:5. Second, family tithing which is an important step in that preparation. Tithing is the acknowledgement of God's right to our earthly possessions. Third, family church attendance. Parents and children are drawn together in the same thoughts in worship. It thrills me to see a family, parents and children, come in and sit down together. By following these three points you will be preparing this seed-bed for a spiritual harvest. We closed the service with the hymn "Lord, Through Changing Days, Unchanging."

The whole service was taken down in short-hand by different members of the congregation and afterward transcribed and mimeographed. Copies were sent to our boys in camp and to one across the ocean. This, I believe, will be appreciated by them.

EDEN MENNONITE CHURCH

Moundridge, Kansas

Our second annual Harvest Festival took place on September 27. Rev. Ramseyer, a representative of the Northern Bible Society, spoke of the need of Bibles in the world today. Miss Helen Penner, who recently returned from unoccupied France where she had been doing relief work, told of her work there and the need for local support of relief funds.

The afternoon speakers were Rev. W. F. Unruh of Moundridge and Dr. J. Winfield Fretz of Bethel College. Rev. Unruh related some of his experiences as a missionary in India. Dr. Fretz emphasized the fact that we as Mennonites are living in the "Valley of Decision." Either we choose to serve God or the gods of respectability and state.

In the evening Dr. H. R. Schmidt of the Bethel Clinic showed and commented on several reels of motion pictures on relief work in South America. Three offerings for relief were taken during the day. A total of $2,875 was raised. May our Heavenly Father bless these gifts to the furtherance of His cause and the relief of many in physical need.

Rev. and Mrs. John P. Suderman, missionaries to the Hopi Indians of Arizona, were visitors in our midst on September 13. Rev. Suderman's visit was of special interest to us, since he taught school in this community some years ago. May we remember them in our prayers as they continue in His service.

BERGFELDER MENNONITE CHURCH

Mountain Lake, Minnesota

Benjamin J. Nickel, who has been studying at the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, Illinois, desired to be ordained as an evangelist from his home church. His request was granted on October 4 when he and his wife and her parents were here. It was a solemn occasion, and we all could definitely feel the spirit's presence. Our hearts were especially sensitive to spiritual things, because we had had a big revival campaign in our community for the past two weeks, held by Dr. Paul W. Rood, a nationally famous evangelist.

The congregation has been feeling the need for a written constitution for our church. At our business meeting this fall a constitution was read for approval. It had been drawn up by the ministers of the church under the leadership of Rev. Ewert, our pastor. It has as yet not been adopted.

Rev. Ewert and his family were using a poor car, and their need was laid by God upon the hearts of the members of the church. In a very short time enough funds were voluntarily donated to buy the Rev. Ewerts an almost new car. They expressed many thanks for it.

Last Sunday, October 11, the Lord's Supper was observed. Almost the entire congregation was in attendance, and we were greatly blessed.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Hillsboro, Kansas

Once again our church knows the joy of having with us one who ministers to our soul's needs from day to day. Rev. H. T. Unruh was installed as our pastor on September 6. He, together with Mrs. Unruh and their daughter Mildred, was taken into the church by letter on the same day. Rev. Hostetler of North Newton, who gave us the message of the morning and who was also in charge of the installation, impressed upon us both, pastor and members alike, the charge that was ours to keep. It is our duty and privilege to serve today, to watch and pray, and do the Master's will. Following the services a church dinner and social hour was enjoyed by all.

All too soon these happy moments of church life were to be dimmed by the unfortunate deaths, through drowning, of two of our members, Ernest W. Hiebert and Elvin Entz, son of Mr. and Mrs. I. P. Entz. This came as a stunning blow to the entire community. Before our new pastor spoke his first sermon to us as a congregation he was called on to speak words of comfort to hearts that were crushed and bleeding. "Ernie," as everyone loved to call him, was the grade principal in our Hillsboro Public Schools. Because of his love and understanding for boys and girls his companionship was constantly sought after. To them he was a friend and a pal. Not only did he win the respect and admiration of youth, but there was a warm spot in everyone's heart, young and old, for "Ernie."

He was active in the church, and often his rich voice blended with those of others to sing and brighten and cheer the moments of others. He was a devoted husband and a loving father to two children of tender age. An unsuccessful, but heroic, attempt to save the lives of two of his pupils, Elvin Entz and Merril Loewen, brought this unselfish life to a close.

Elvin Entz will be remembered by this community as a friendly, happy lad, by the church as a good Sunday School pupil, and by his parents and relatives as a loving and obedient child.

We know not why God has called our dear friends unto tears, but we pray that through it all they may see Jesus and experience the comforting strengthening hand of the Father.

Our hearts are filled with gratitude towards our Heavenly Father and a dear sister in the church, whose kind generosity has made it possible for us to purchase a lovely and suitable parsonage and home for our pastor and his family.

Under the direction of divine guidance and the able leadership of our pastor our church council and our education committee, our church—with its many branches, such as the Sunday School, catechetical class mid-week services, Christian Endeavors, sewing circles, Junior and Senior choirs—is endeavoring to do her share in building a better world. We are ever mindful of a four-fold duty, namely, our stand of non-resistance, missions, relief and our institutions of learning.

In the name of our pastor and our church I extend greetings to all our members who are scattered north, south, east and west and to our young friends in all of the camps. To you a "God bless you."

Sincerely,

—Mrs. Jacob Bartel, Corr.

IN MEMORIAM

MILTON K. STAUFFER, October 3, 1865 to September 29, 1942. Brother Stauffer was born near Krausdale, Pennsylvania, and was the son of Leonard and Elizabeth Kremer Stauffer. He married Emma Hellar who preceded him in death in 1937. Since 1884 Brother Stauffer was a member of the West Swamp Mennonite Church. The last months of his life he spent with his son Henry Stauffer at Gilbertsville.

MRS. LENA NICHOLS, 1880 to 1942. She was the daughter of Benjamin and Katherine Voth Koehn. In 1902 she married John Nichols, who with three sons, two daughters, and an aged mother survive her. Sister Nichols was a member of the New Hopedale Mennonite Church, Meno, Oklahoma.

WILLIAM JANTZEN, 1895 to 1942. Brother Jantzen was the son of John and Susie Ratzlaff Jantzen. In 1915 he was married to Katie Buller, who with four sons, two daughters, and other relatives mourn him. He was a member of the Saron Mennonite Church, Orienta, Oklahoma.

KENNETH JAMES KREHBIEL, July 26, 1939 to October 1, 1942. He was the son of Herbert J. and Esther Goering Krehbiel and was born at Newton, Kansas. His parents and three sisters mourn his departure. Funeral services were held from the First Mennonite Church of Christian, Moundridge, Kansas, with Rev. P. P. Wedel in charge.

EMMA JANE FULMER née Kratz, March 31, 1864 to August 22, 1942. She was a member of the first class which Rev. A. M. Fretz instructed for church membership. In 1884 she became a member of the Deep Run Mennonite Church. Later she joined the Perkasie Mennonite Church. In the meeting house of this church Rev. A. M. Fretz conducted the funeral service.

Mrs. ELLA M. SCHOLL, widow of Albert Scholl died at her home in Perkasie on September 28, 1942. Her age was seventy-six years, two months, and nineteen days. She was a member of the Perkasie Mennonite Church, and Rev. A. M. Fretz spoke on the occasion of her funeral.

CAMP BRIEFS

A recent graph of C.P.S. men in Mennonite camps indicates that for the seven months period of September, 1941 to March, 1942, there was an increase of 500 boys in the Mennonite camps. However, in the five months period from April, 1942, to August, 1942, there was an increase of 1000 boys.

On October 20 a carload of boys will be transferred from Medaryville to Hill City, South Dakota, for the opening of the camp.

Peace Section Note—Subscriptions to Civilian Bonds Total $206,000—A recent report from the Civilian Bond Committee shows that the civilian bonds have been purchased in 150 counties of twenty-eight states during August and September. During August $18,200 worth was purchased and during September the amount was $188,300 bringing the total to $206,500. Subscriptions by Mennonites for the two months totalled $183,150.

—Dr. J. E. Hartzler conducted a series of Bible lectures at the Zion Mennonite Church, Donnellson, Iowa, from October 11-18. On October 24 and 25, he lectured at the Civilian Public Service Camp at Marietta, Ohio. From November 6 to 13 Brother Hartzler is to give Bible lectures at the Bethel Mennonite Church, Fortuna, Missouri. From November 15 to 29 he is scheduled for the county wide preaching mission at Colby, Kansas. This is under the auspices of the county ministerial association.

—Rev. H. E. Nunemaker, pastor of the Zion Mennonite Church, Donnellson, Iowa, recently spent a week conducting special meetings in the Eicher Mennonite Church. "The attendance was very good and the interest was excellent." On October 18 the Zion Church observed the Annual Harvest Home Festival. A basket dinner and a fellowship hour followed the morning services. The afternoon service was sponsored by the Ladies' Missionary Society.

—Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: Rev. Harold D. Burkholder recently spoke on a Sunday afternoon at a special service sponsored by the Senior C. E. The offering received at this meeting will be used for Christmas gifts for boys in the C.P.S. Camps and in the U. S. Army.—A "Mennonite Heritage" course for adults is given on Thursday evening.—Rev. D. A. Schultz recently spoke at a German service held in the evening.—Bethel Hospital Sunday is to be observed on November 15.—A shipment of relief clothing weighed 530 pounds. The pastor says, "This is a splendid expression of our Mennonite principle of peace. In the spirit of Christ it is our purpose to help relieve suffering instead of helping to create suffering."

—Bulletin, Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Pratum, Oregon: The following is quoted in this bulletin from a letter by Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf and refers to our missionaries in the Phillipine Islands: "It seems that all the Americans are interned on the campus of the Santo Tomaso University, and that they run there a large self-governing community. They are using more native goods than before—expenses are kept down. Funds are made available through the Red Cross."—Edgar Nafziger, who returned home from the C.P.S. Camp at Placerville, California, for his sister's wedding, reported that he was well impressed with the camp and its management.—Rev. D. J. Unruh spoke at a Bible conference and young people's retreat of the Mennonite Brethren churches of Oregon on a Saturday afternoon when one of the regular speakers could not be present.—"Do you belong to the Lord's 10% club? Does not the world put us to shame in their earnestness in the military cause, and we who are soldiers of Christ are too often unconcerned about the cause in which we are enlisted?"

—The First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California, plans to have its All-Day-Church meeting on November 8. The day is for fellowship, a program of inspiration and information, and for a presentation of the proposed plans for the coming year. A suggestive budget will be considered. Printed reports of the church work will be available at the annual meeting to be held on December 6. "More people have been able to earn this year than for many years and the amount of their earnings has been increased for the most part. That gives occasion for hope that the work of the Kingdom of God will be remembered in accordance with our increased ability to give."

—Newport Mennonite Church, Newport, Washington: "Put all your trust in the Lord and lean not on your own understanding." Prov. 3:5. We were blessed with a good harvest. Mrs. J. Bergen, our senior member who injured her hip in spring, is able to walk again. Dan Dalke and David Bergen will soon leave for camp. Eldon Unruh is attending Bible Institute in Los Angeles, and Norma Kliewer is in Whitworth College in Spokane. The Abe Krehbiels have come to make their home here, and the John Fast family is leaving for Oregon.

—First Mennonite Church, Shafter, California: On the evening of October 13 the congregation celebrated the fifth anniversary of the dedication of their present meeting house. A banquet was arranged in the basement by the Ladies' Aid, and a brief program was presented. On October 11 the debt on this building amounted to $300.00. The hope was then expressed that this amount be paid by the time of the anniversary.

—Second Mennonite Church, Philadelphia, Pa. Rev. John J. Plenert of the First Church served the Second Church when communion was observed on October 11. The Book of Colossians is studied on Wednesday evenings.

—Dr. M. C. Lehman spoke on a Sunday morning and evening in the First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana, recently.

—Eldon Rich, former Sunday School superintendent of the Bethel College Mennonite Church, recently moved with his family to Lawrence, Kansas, where he is beginning his studies in the medical school.

—Bethel College ministerial students meet every Monday evening for a seminar. The first half of the period is devoted to a discussion of church problems and the work of the minister, and the second part is given to practice preaching.—Sixty-two students have been selected for a cappella choir this year.—The first edition of a Bethel Col- lege Choir Series, edited by Walter H. Hohmann, has been put out by the Bethel College Press, North Newton, Kansas. The name of the first issue is "O Pow'r of Love." Many of our church choirs will want to avail themselves of this choir music.

—The Men's Chorus of the Weeping Water, Nebraska, C. P. S. Camp rendered a sacred concert of inspirational songs at the Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas, on the afternoon of October 4. Mrs. Erwin Goering, matron of the camp, directed the chorus. Brother Erwin Goering, director of the camp, also made a few remarks. An overflow crowd of over 1,000 listened to the concert. —Harold H. Goering, Corr.

—Hebron Mennonite Church, Buhler, Kansas: Rev. and Mrs. J. P. Suderman, missionaries among the Indians in Arizona, were with us on September 20. On September 26 Brother Willis Rich spoke to the congregation in the interest of Bethel College. Mrs. J. J. Buller passed away after a lingering illness. The Wednesday evening prayer meetings are being held in the home of the pastor. Arnold Ediger is slowly improving after a tractor accident, which resulted in the amputation of his foot. —Corr.

—First Mennonite Church, Hutchinson, Kansas: "Your pastor (Rev. C. H. Dirks) is happy to be back home again after three weeks in Washington. A very fine vacation and pleasant visit was enjoyed. Special greetings were sent. . .to this congregation by the home church of Menno, Washington.

—Bethel Mennonite Church, Perkasie, Pa. Rev. Ward Shelly brought the message on several Sundays in September and October. Rev. A. M. Fretz is still pastor of his church. A note in the bulletin says, "A few years ago a conference resolution called for a 'Penny A Day' contribution for the college (Bluffton)—is that resolution still observed?"

—The daily devotional messages in this paper are for your use. Try them and tell us how you like them. Rev. Herbert Miller, who is editing them for November, is a graduate of Bethel College and a former student of Biblical Seminary, New York City. He is pastor of the Deer Creek Mennonite Church, Deer Creek, Oklahoma.

—First Mennonite Church, Allentown, Pa. Speakers at the special services from October 20 to 23 were: Rev. H. H. Tobias, Rev. F. B. Hertzog, Rev. Sydney Buxton, and Rev. Joseph L. Gingrich.

—An Eastern District Y. P. rally will take place at Souderton, Pa., on the afternoon of November 1.

Speak to Edify

Words can be like bombs; they can wreck structures built up through blood, sweat, and tears. They can fall as easily from the lips as a bomb plummets from the sky. Released from the bombrack of the mind they make havoc inevitable, if they are the kind which neither edify nor minister grace unto the hearers.

Sometimes rumors, which are not well-founded on fact, go about in our Mennonite communities. These rumors may deal with our C. P. S. camps, our colleges, churches, pastors, individuals, etc. They may be news, but very much distorted news. Sometimes these rumors may have had their beginning in something that actually happened. However, as the rumor passes over the lips of many it seldom gives a true picture of that which started it. The points emphasized in retelling usually color the whole picture. If all the bad points are stressed and none of the good ones mentioned, then the report is not fair. The emphasis given to the parts of a picture finally determine its total impression. Then too, as the rumor passes from lips to lips it often is added to, for human beings tend to be general in their speaking rather than specific. Perhaps, many rumors are not in line with the "yea, yea" and "nay, nay" teaching of Christ.

Paul says, "Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers." We are to speak with a purpose, and that it is to be a good, constructive one. To edify means to build up spiritually. Our conversation should support the worthwhile projects of our Christian brethren and not undermine them. Paul insists that we minister grace unto our hearers by what we say. This is an excellent test for conversation which tends to run in the rumor vein. When people become more forgiving, more loving, more brotherly by what we say, then we can feel assured that our conversation is in harmony with Paul's injunction.

If something or someone is rumored about, go to the source for information if you would get the facts. This is an excellent way for keeping the chain letters of false witnessing from going ever further and becoming ever more numerous. If we are rumored about we usually do not feel right about the help offered by those who dislike us, but we do welcome the help of those who love us. Let us never forget that ". . . we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another." Let us be as careful in what we say of others, as we want them to be in what they say of us. —rw.

Concerning Morale

By A Camp Director

Morale, according to Webster, means "that mental state which renders a man capable of endurance and of exhibiting courage in the presence of danger; the condition of a group as regards spirit, enthusiasm, discipline." Those who have occasion to serve in responsible positions in group leadership usually incline in the long run to the conclusion that (to paraphrase a modern saying) "when you ain't got morale, you ain't got nothin!" The "load" of administrative concerns and problems arises and falls inversely as the level of group (camp) spirit goes up or down.

In a C. P. S. camp there are a number of things which affect morale very definitely, such as an adequate work project, comfortable housing, good food, etc. Apart from these, though at times more or less affected by them, is a sort of general process of adjustment which the average camper or camp group passes through, consisting of three stages:

The first, a period of high morale. He is in a new situation. He is living among new fellows. He realizes that he has been singled out and placed more or less in the lime-light. He feels that he is standing for something worthwhile, which prospers only as he gives to it his very best. He is thrilled to feel himself a part of a movement that dares to support a minority opinion, but in which he fervently believes and for which he is willing to endure.

But in time the newness of the situation wears off. The unexpected freedom which surprised him when he first came, now is taken for granted as being quite within his rights. The self-restraint which he exercised under the spell of the newness and significance of his altered status, now feels the wear of time, and the novelty and thrill fade out. With his lowering morale he finds the daily round becoming less and less interesting, and with it more and more things not according to his liking or way of thinking. Not according that the trouble is mostly with himself; and thinking, on the other hand, that his view is entirely sane and reasonable, he is free to express himself accordingly and thus wields a negatively contagious influence on other members of the group.

Finally, as his experience widens and his knowledge of all the essential elements and aspects of camp life increase, he enters the third stage of a long and usually steady rise in "spirit, enthusiasm and discipline." This may continue over many months or even years. The first two stages generally last only a few months each. Staff members and seasoned campers usually rejoice that the second is no longer than it is.

As stated above, this is the experience of the average camper or camp group. Quite a number may escape it, but most of them pass through it. Knowing this may, or should, help each one to take stock more accurately of his own outlook and attitude, and thus be enabled to relate himself in a fully constructive manner to the C. P. S. life, spirit and program.

Profanity Dressed Up in Sunday Clothes

By Fred Beck, Condensed from The Evangelical Beacon

"If any man among you seem to be religious and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain" (James 1:26).

More than seventy-five per cent of Christians I know, and I try to make friends with the best, use one or more of the following expressions: 'What the deuce,' 'dickens,' 'darn it,' 'gosh,' 'golly,' 'heavens' or 'for heaven's sake,' 'goodness,' 'goodness gracious,' and 'gee.' There are many more which could be mentioned, but these will suffice to justify our subject. When you say "What the deuce" you are really saying, "What the devil." (See Webster's New International Dictionary).

"Dickens" is another euphemism for the devil. A euphemism as described by Webster is "a way of describing an offensive thing by an inoffensive expression."

"Darn," according to Funk and Wagnalls' Practical Dictionary means "to damn."

Webster defines "gosh" as a substitute for God used in oaths. Therefore, if we use this word we transgress the second commandment. "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain, for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh His name in vain" (Ex. 20:7).

"Golly" is another euphemism for the profane use of God and is recognized by language authorities as meaning God.

Many who throw up their hands in horror when they hear the word "hell" in an oath, repeatedly say, "Oh heavens" or " for heaven's sake," which is much worse, for it gets closer to God and his throne. "And he that shall swear by heaven, sweareth by the throne of God, and by him that sitteth thereon" (Matt. 23:32). Webster says that the phrases "for goodness' sake" and "goodness gracious" refer originally to the goodness of God. Jesus said, in Luke 18:19 "None is good save one, that is God."

"Gee," commonly thought of as slang, is listed in Webster's Dictionary with a capital letter and said to be "a form of Jesus used in minced oaths." Men who are authorities on etymology have traced these words to their origin. All disputes are settled by consulting the dictionary.

"And now, brethren, I wot that through ignorance ye did it" (Acts 3:17), and that very few have been guilty of "presumptuous sin," and therefore we hope and pray that this little ray of light on the subject may help many to reverence the name of Jesus and God.

But someone may say, "I don't mean it that way when I use those words." I gladly grant that very few mean it that way, but it is just as true that many unsaved people who use the name of God in vain do not mean it but do it from force of habit. "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain, for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh His name in vain." We take it in vain whether we dress it up in Sunday clothes or speak plainly. Certainly you would never think of taking the precious name of Jesus in vain.

"If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body" (James 3:2). "Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing. My brethren, these things ought not so to be" (James 3:10).

One asked me, "What can I say then if I can't use any of these words?" There are 400,000 words in the English language and I dare assert that ninety-five per cent of them would be safe to have on your lips when you are dying.

RESPONSIBILITY

I have a clean soft bed on which to sleep.
I have a table set with gracious things.
How can I pray the Lord, "my soul to keep,"
How can my heart lift up on joyous wings,
While there are those about me in the night
Who toss on filthy rags and cannot rest,
Who have no food or raiment, and no light?
How can I sleep unless I do my best
To ease and comfort them, and how can I
Be deemed a follower of the Christ until
I heed humanity's heartbroken cry,
And move to feed the hungry, heal the ill?
God help me keep remembering—help me see
How grave is my responsibility.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

The House Where God Lives

Quakertown, Pa.
40 S. Third St.

"The inhabitants shall not say I am sick: the people that dwell therein (Jerusalem) shall be forgiven their iniquity." Isa. 33:24.

It is a common expression heard from the people while working with the sick, "This the house where God lives." And also when the missionary comes on the scene they often are heard saying, "Here comes Bhagwan (God)." Like the disciples of old we reply, "We are men and women with flesh and blood like you are; we are not God." The difference in you and us is that we believe and serve and experience the love of God through the Lord Jesus Christ. To hear expressions like the above makes one feel very humble and urges one to greater efforts to be better representatives of Him whom one serves.

The thin, weazened boy was miserable as his father and uncle brought him to the dispensary late one night. The head was covered with cow dung and a dirty rag, but still the pus oozed out from the poultice. The nurses and I cleaned the wound when flaps of scalp as large as the palm of the hand fell off by themselves. The amazement was not short of fear for the lad's life as we dressed him. Upon inquiry we learned that the wound was of four months duration. The first question asked by the father was if the boy could become well. We assured him that he could if they stayed and obeyed our orders and had faith in the Lord who heals people. The party remained, and in two weeks the child had recovered enough to leave. They saw the work done by the staff with awe and wonder, and they listened to the songs and preaching of the gospel with interest. We believe they will allow the Light of the World to enter into their souls.

The tall, usually radiant, Christian man came in moaning and groaning. He ascribed his distress to a wrenched back of some months, hurt while lifting too heavily. He would be so troubled that the grandson was asked to creep up and down his back massaging hard as he crept along. Relief was only temporary if at all. In time not even drugs could control the pain and the patient became more distressed. Mental or spiritual disease was surmised. The man was approached to get to the root of the trouble. He finally confessed to some iniquity committed some years previous. After full confession and repentance had been made, then the light of the spirit was kindled, and he recuperated rapidly. From that time on he became again a busy happy witness for the Master who healed him.

The word is preached, taught, lived, and distributed through the hospitals in our mission field day and night. May the representatives allow themselves such discipline that God the Father, Christ the Saviour, and the Holy Spirit the Comforter be made manifest in all their doings.

Against Pride in Clothes

How proud we are! how fond to show
Our clothes, and call them rich and new,
When the poor sheep and silkworm wore
That very clohting long before.

The tulip and the butterfly
Appear in gayer coats than I;
Let me be dressed fine as I will,
Flies, worms, and flowers exceed me still.
Then will I set my heart to find
Inward adornings of the mind;
Knowledge and virtue, truth and grace!
These are the robes of richest dress.
No more shall worms with me compare,
This is the raiment angels wear;
The Son of God, when here below,
Put on this best apparel, too.

It never fades, it ne'er grows old,
Nor fears of the rain, nor moth, nor mould;
It takes no spot, but still refines;
The more 'tis worn the more it shines.
In this on earth would I appear,
Then go to heaven and wear it there;
God will approve it in His sight.
'Tis His own work and His delight.

—Isaac Watts.

LYING TO GOD

The minister's little daughter was never forgetful of her formal prayers, and had been allowed the privilege of adding any original remarks that she saw fit. One night in the very late fall, at the close of her prayer she added, "And, dear Lord, please send the beautiful snow to keep the little flowers warm through the winter."

Climbing into bed, she confided, "That's the time I fooled Him. I want the snow so I can go sliding with my new sled!"

That girl isn't the only one who lies to God in prayer. May we have a personal heart-searching, and ask God to deliver us from all efforts to lie to Him in prayer. Charles Finney once told a church they could not have a revival until the elders stopped lying to God in prayer. —Christian Victory

Things That Mar Family Life

Gen. 27:30-35 Matt. 5:31, 32 Luke 12:13-15

There are many things in this fast-moving age that mar family life. To the many the home has become merely a place to eat—a filling station—and to sleep. It is more pleasant to think of the factors which tend to make the family life happy. However, we need to face frankly the harmful influences that affect the homes of our nation. The three references of our lesson show harmful attitudes and deeds which can be remedied with the help of God. These things have their root in wrong thinking, in sinful desires.

Favoritism and Deceit

The background of our first lesson section includes chapter 27 of Genesis which tells how deceit and favoritism almost wrecked the family of Isaac and Rebekah. Theirs was not a happy home and family. It caused much distress to Isaac. It aroused intense hatred in Esau. It made it necessary for Jacob to leave home, and his mother probably never saw him again. Deceitful dealings and partiality will ruin the happiness of any home. Esau had sold his birthright to Jacob (25:33, 34), but when it became evident that Isaac was ready to give his blessing to him (vs. 4), Jacob and his mother conspired to get the blessing for Jacob by deceit. This blessing was really a prophecy and gave to Jacob the promises that were given to Abram and to Isaac. Esau yet hoped to receive the coveted blessing.

Isaac became greatly agitated when he learned that he had been deceived (vss. 33). This shows how great an importance he attached to the blessing. He believed he had given it to the wrong son. The blessing was divinely inspired and could go only to the right person. He saw, too, that the blessing once given, could not be recalled. Esau's bitter cry (vs. 34) reveals his great disappointment. He now seemed to value highly the birthright which he had so foolishly sold for a mess of pottage. Isaac did bless Esau (vss. 39, 40), but it was not the same blessing which Jacob received. Jacob's self-seeking broke up the family, just as it has broken up many homes since that day.

Deceit, infidelity, unfaithfulness on the part of husband or wife are other fruitful causes of broken homes. Haste in marriage and ease in securing divorces are prominent factors in marring family life. Jesus admits of but one justification for divorce—adultery (vs. 32). A true Christian will seek God's grace to bear patiently the imperfections of his marriage partner. God intended that husband and wife should be one and be faithful to each other until death. They who form the marriage bond in the fear and love of God and under His direction will never permit that which may estrange them to enter into their lives.

Selfishness, Covetousness, Luke 12:13-15

One came to Jesus with a purely selfish family problem (vs. 13) and wished to use Jesus' influence to improve his selfish interests. Apparently he was a younger brother who was dissatisfied with the distribution of the family property. Many family quarrels arising over a similar problem have been taken to our law courts. Jesus indicates clearly that His authority is limited to the spiritual realm (vs. 14). He did not interfere in temporal matters. He came to cure hearts of the covetousness which led to such family quarrels. Material things can never satisfy the inner heart of man. The spiritual things count for most in life. What a person is in his heart, is of greater value to him than what he has.

A selfish spirit greatly mars family life. It manifests itself in many ways. It frequently seeks to dominate the affairs of the home and to dictate what others shall do or shall not do. Such a spirit will inevitably mar the happiness of the home. The home is a divine institution and is "one of the most important units of the social order. It is the foundation and stability of the nation." It is the place where the child's attitudes are most powerfully formed. The Church should make great efforts to uphold high standards of morality and social life in the home. Only in the truly Christian home is a united family life at its best.

OUR HISTORICAL LIBRARY

It is a real thrill to see the number of friends of our Historical Library grow continuously. From different parts of the country people have sent in books and other material pertaining to the history and development of the Mennonites. Some have referred to such material in their letters, thus, informing us where it can be obtained. The library is very grateful for this interest, and those who work in it are much encouraged by each expression of it. These contributions show, also, interest in the ways of God among our people.

Much is being published during this time of emergency, about the Mennonites in general, and about the conscientious objectors and the Civilian Public Service camps in particular. These camps are one of the most unique and important experiments of the Christian world. Let us preserve every expression in writing about them which comes to our attention.

HOSPITALITY

When one reads accounts in histories, magazines and old books by popular writers and historians about Mennonites, one of the frequent references is to Mennonite hospitality. These writers are impressed with the generous and kindly treatment Mennonites as a matter of custom extend not only to their guests but to people who are perfect strangers. They think it is interesting and unique that there are still people who are so trusting and loving of all men that they gladly share the food and comforts of family and home with entire strangers.

Where is This True?

This somewhat romantic and idealistic portrayal of one aspect of Mennonite life when more carefully examined reveals that it is more true among the Amish and Old Mennonites than among the General Conference Mennonites and that it is more true of the rural than the urban people. And they might add that it was more generally true of a former day than it is at present.

The Ministry of Hospitality

There is need for a revival of Christian hospitality today rather than a decline of it. One of the distinguishing characteristics of an ardent Christian is, and should be, that of genuine hospitality whether in the home or in the Sunday meeting. Strangers in the home and visitors to the meeting are warmed by this manifestation of love. They are grateful for this open hand of friendship. The partaking of food together is one of the essentials of good fellowship.

I believe that more sinners could be saved if those of us who are concerned about their salvation would really care about them and love them enough to invite them into our homes and share with them of our spirit and our substance rather than confine ourselves to our much preaching whether from the "housetops." Jesus was not afraid to mingle with the lowly, the poor, and the sinners. We are not better than he. Jesus appreciated hospitality and so will those strangers to whom we extend it.

Hospitality is Biblical

Abraham was rewarded for practicing hospitality and among the early Christians hospitality is one of the most charming characteristics. Paul in Romans 12 admonishes his readers to "be unfailing in hospitality." In the Epistle to the Hebrews we are advised to "Let brotherly love continue. Do not forget to be hospitable to strangers, for by being so, some, without knowing it, have had angels as their guests." I Peter urges the practice of hospitality "without murmuring." In I Timothy we are told that to be a person in good standing involves not only proper bringing up of children but also "being hospitable to strangers, washing the feet of the consecrated, helping people in distress."

Mennonites should continue the practice of hospitality or revive it if they have discontinued it as a manifestation of genuine Christianity. The tendency to think we have to have an elaborate meal and all the frills of modern dining keep us from sharing the best food of all, that of fellowship in Christ. It is the amount of good will we show and not the amount of food we serve that determines genuine Christian hospitality.

MY TASK

I do not ask for mighty words
To leave the crowd impressed,
But grant my life may ring so true
My neighbor shall be blessed.

I do not ask for influence
To sway the multitude;
Give me a "word in season" for
The soul in solitude.

I do not ask to win the great,
God grant they may be saved!
Give me the broken sinner, Lord,
By Satan long enslaved.

Though words of wisdom and of power
Rise easily to some,
Give me a simple message, Lord,
That bids the sinner come.

A group of boys and girls may be
My God-appointed task;
Help me to lead each one to Thee—
What greater could I ask?

THE LARGEST CHURCH

The largest Protestant congregation in America, if not in the world, is a Negro church in New York City. It is called the Abyssinian Baptist Church. It makes tithing essential. It has 15,000 members, with more than 5,000 worshipers each Sabbath divided into two or three groups. Three pastors have charge. Each Monday night 151 Sabbath School teachers are required to take training courses properly to fit them for the work. The church has six large choirs. Two thousand people attend mid-week economic and social classes. They have a church building which cost $400,000, a Home for the Aged which cost $40,000. Their operating budget is $41,000 a year. There is no debt, and they always have money left over at the end of the year. Among its members are many educated Negroes with university degrees, many of whose names are listed in "Who's Who in America."

Brother Lehman Gives Favorable Report on Camp Tour

A recent report from Brother M. C. Lehman tells of his visit to mid-western camps. At each camp a survey was made of the camp problems: religious, educational, social, disciplinary, and dietary.

On the whole the camps are going well. Many boys are finding an interest in the camp educational program and respond enthusiastically to that core course, language study, music, and other classes. Health is generally good. Public relations continue favorable on the whole.

Brother Lehman feels that a great opportunity remains for campees to regard their stay in camp not as a misfortune but as an opportunity.

Camp Educational Program is Outlined

The educational program of the camps covers a wide variety of fields. Mennonite history, Bible study, first aid, music, languages, agriculture, arts, commercial subjects, and correspondence courses comprise the curriculum of study as outlined in the new Educational Director's Manual.

Besides these formal courses the manual outlines a recreational and social program of hobbies and wholesome activities. Recommendations for the camp library and suggestions for using visiting speakers are made in the manual. A special aim of the manual is to provide a guide for the camp educational director in order to meet the needs of a wide range of campee backgrounds.

The educational program desires "to make a permanent contribution to the campee's Christian experience and faith." All possible encouragement is to be given to the boys to prepare them for genuine usefulness both while in camp and afterward.

The manual which will serve as a guide in all the camps was compiled by Brother Robert Kreider, campee, who is assisting Brother H. A. Fast and Brother Harold S. Bender in the general administration of the educational program in the Mennonite camps.

Camp Statistics

A total of forty-seven Civilian Public Service camps are now functioning according to an October 9, 1942, report. Of this total the Friends and Mennonites each operate sixteen and the Brethren operate eleven. Two camps are Catholic-operated and two are cooperatively administered by two or more of the above agencies.

In all there are now 4,500 boys in the forty-seven Civilian Public Service camps. 1,975 are under Mennonite administration; 1,216 are under Friends administration; 1,103 are under Brethren administration. The two Catholic camps have seventy-one campees and the two cooperative camps total an enrollment of seventy-five. There are in all eighty-four boys on detached service: thirty-eight doing farm work in New York, Wisconsin, and Connecticut; twenty are on administrative duties; twenty-six are on other forms of detached service. There are also ninety-seven boys doing hospital work.

Camp Staff Appointments

Brother Paul Tschetter of Bridgewater, South Dakota, is appointed director of the Hill City, South Dakota, camp. Brother Oscar Wiebe, campee from Camino, California, has been appointed business manager of the Hill City camp.

The Galax, Virginia, camp will have Brother Francis Smucker as educational director and Sister Smucker as Dietician. Brother Roy Smucker, a campee from Howard, Pa., will transfer to Galax and serve as business manager.

Brother Phil Frey is again giving assistance to the camp program. He will help in the opening of the Hill City and Galax camps.

Campee Dies at Henry, Illinois, Camp

On October 8, 1942, Brother Wilhelm B. Flaming, campee at Henry, Illinois, since December 9, 1941, passed away as the result of an illness caused by a ruptured appendix and peritonitis. His home was in Hillsboro, Kansas, and he was a member of the Alexanderwohl congregation of the General Conference Mennonites. Funeral services were conducted at the camp by Brother C. A. Hartzler. —Compiled by Grant M. Stoltzfus, Released October 14, 1942

The Western District Conference Loan Library

The Western District Conference Loan Library is now in better condition to serve our churches than ever before. The Education Committee has added a considerable number of good books to the collection, and Miss Katie Andres has checked them and set them in good order for use.

The library has been used by many individuals, churches, and C. P. S. camps, but many more should avail themselves of the opportunities which it offers. Ask for a book list, and send your orders in to the Western District Conference Loan Library, North Newton, Kansas. There is no charge for the use of the books, but it is expected that the mailing be paid for. The present rate is three cents for a pound.

In many of our homes books are filling shelves and are not used any more at all. Frequently they are a burden to the house wife. Please send them to the Loan Library that they may be put into use.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Herbert E. Miller, Deer Creek, Oklahoma

NOVEMBER 8—"And the Lord called unto Adam and said unto him, where art thou?" Gen. 3:9.

The president of a theological seminary used to call the students together at the beginning of the new year and ask them to read the third chapter of Genesis. The way in which many of the students read the verse "Where art thou Adam?" prompted the president to make this remark. "You can never be a preacher. You read it as though God were a policeman, and unless you can read it as though God were a heartbroken father looking for a lost child, you can never be a preacher."

NOVEMBER 9—"And as they thus spake Jesus himself stood in the midst and said unto them, Peace be unto you." Luke 24:36.

After the resurrection two of the disciples went to the town of Emmaus talking over the things which had happened to the Lord. While on their way Jesus joined them, but he withheld his identity from them until he ate supper with them. They told their experience to the other disciples, and it was then that Jesus appeared to them all and said, "Peace be unto you." Anxiety, worry, and uncertainty destroy our soul and spiritual fervor. But the Lord Jesus speaks to us all, who listen to him, "Peace be unto you." Jesus is the author and finisher of our faith and is able to give us the necessary spiritual strength for each day. Truly, the greatest inward peace comes from having daily companionship with the One who saved us.

NOVEMBER 10—"Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel." Mark 16:15.

This is the great commission Jesus gave the eleven disciples shortly before his ascension. He gave them this commission because they knew what the gospel was which the world needed. The Apostle Paul later wrote, "For I determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified." I Cor. 2:2.

A missionary was once invited to a home. The host, in the course of the conversation, spoke of a highly cultured and influential man of the community. The missionary inquired whether this man was a Christian, whereupon the host, rather embarrassed, replied, "I have spoken often with the man, but never about salvation." The missionary replied, "I must see the man immediately and ask him if he is a Christian. If he answers, 'no', then I will preach to him." This is a simple illustration of not being ashamed of the gospel.

NOVEMBER 11—"And this stone which I have set for a pillar, shall be God's house: And of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee." Gen. 28:22.

Down deep in his heart, Jacob loved God. In this verse he expresses his response to God's love and care for him by giving the tenth. Jesus spoke of the Father's love and care for us, so that we need not live in anxiety. God has given us the privilege of being his messengers and laborers in this world. He accepts our voluntary, material gifts to carry on the spreading of the gospel and the support of Christian schools and institutions. Can Jesus speak of us at the close of each day, "Thou good and faithful servant?" A Chinese farmer gave a missionary fifty cents, saying that he had sold his wheat for five dollars, and this was the tithe for the evangelistic work. A few days later he gave the missionary twenty cents, saying he had sold his donkey and the twenty cents was not his, but the Lord's.

NOVEMBER 12—"But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus." Phil. 4:19.

"When sunbeams fade and shadows fall,
And every gate is barred,
God's providence can open all
The locks that go so hard.
When all that once was right seems wrong,
Yet hold this comfort fast—
There never yet was night so long
But morning dawned at last!
Minute by minute, hour by hour,
Endure, and hope, and wait.
Who knows what moment heavenly power
Shall set the crooked straight."

NOVEMBER 13—"The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." Jas. 5:16b.

God's power is at our disposal. But not every person can claim this power. God needs righteous men. Persons who have absolute faith and confidence in God's power, who take orders from God and carry them out. To become such persons we must be men of prayer, and be able to pray, "Thy will be done," though it may mean suffering and hardship for his sake. An old grandmother once told of God's answer to prayer. Another asked her how she explained that. She answered, "I don't. It does not need explaining. I just took the Lord at his word and He took me at mine."

NOVEMBER 14—"What things were gain to me those I counted loss for Christ." Phil. 3:7.

Baron Von Welz renounced his title and estates and went as a missionary to Dutch Guiana. His testimony was, "What to me is the title 'well born', when I am born again in Christ? What to me is the title 'Lord', when I desire to be a servant of Christ? What is it to me to be called 'Your Grace', when I have need of God's grace, help, and succor? All these vanities I will away with, and all else I will lay at the feet of Jesus, my dearest Lord, that I may have no hindrance in serving Him aright." To be a happy Christian we must simply give our life as gain for Christ.

IN MEMORIAM

KAROLINA STUCKY, Jan. 27, 1852, to Oct. 8, 1942, was born in Edwardorf, Wohlinion, Russia. She became a member of the Mennonite Church on March 21, 1865. In 1870 she married Andrew C. Voran. To this union were born fourteen children, eight of whom, together with her husband preceded her in death. As a young wife and mother she arrived in America in 1874. Each pioneer day saw accomplishments towards the building off a Christian community in which to rear her children. During childhood she had memorized many choice passages of the Bible, as well as sacred hymns. These were a great comfort when sight and hearing failed. Surviving are two sons: John A. of Pretty Prairie, and C. D. of Augusta; four daughters, Mrs. J. J. Voran and Mrs. Henry Voran of Kingman County, Mrs. H. D. Kopper of Hutchinson, and Elilzabeth Voran of Newton.

CAROLINA KAUFMAN VORAN, Nov. 18, 1868, to Oct. 2, 1942, was born in southwest Russia, Her parents were Peter and Mary Kaufman. In 1874 she settled with her parents at Yankton, South Dakota, where she later joined the Salem Mennonite Church. In 1884 they moved to McPherson County, Kansas, where they joined the Hopefield Mennonite Church. In 1886 she was united in marriage with C. J. Voran. In 1907 they made their home in Kingman County, where they were instrumental in the organization of the Bethany Mennonite Church, which Brother Voran served for eighteen years. She is mourned by her husband; five sons, Edward, Gustav, Henry, and Fred of Kingman County, and Philip of Kinsley, Kansas; five daughters, Anna, Lydia, Clara, and Esther of Kingman County, and Amelia of Gentry, Arkansas; two brothers, Ben Kaufman of Moundridge, Kansas, and Jacob Kaufman of McPherson; four sisters, Mrs. Jacob Stucky, Elyria; Mrs. J. D. Schrag, Moundridge; and Mrs. Jonas Goering and Mrs. Anna Schrag of Pretty Prairie.

JACOB J. GRABER, April 8, 1863, to September 28, 1942, was born in the Swiss colony in south Russia. In 1883 he came to America with his parents, and in 1887 he was married to Anna Graber, who now survives him. The Sunday Schools which he was instrumental in starting at Freeman, South Dakota, and at Starkweather, North Dakota, grew into church organizations. He taught a class in the church school nearly all of his life time. For twenty-eight years he was church secretary and treasurer.

JACOB MESCHBERGER, Nov. 18, 1857, to Aug. 25, 1942, was born at Berne, Indiana. At the age of twenty-one he was converted. Soon after this his pastor, Rev. S. F. Sprunger, asked for volunteers to do mission work among the Indians in Oklahoma. He entered the mission work at Darlington, Oklahoma under our Foreign Mission Board in 1882. The following year he was transferred to Cantonment, Oklahoma. In 1888 he was married to Dina Loganbill of Cantonment, Oklahoma. He worked nine years in the mission field. In 1892 he bought a home seven miles north of El Reno. In 1923 they moved to Upland, California. After four years they came back, and since then he lived on a farm near Calumet, Oklahoma. Survivors include the widow and seven children: Daniel, Stafford, Kansas; Rufus, Calumet; Silas, El Reno; Mrs. Zilla Wilkowske, Molalla, Oregon; Sister Zipora, Bethel Deaconess Home, Newton, Kansas; Ada, Calumet; and Lois, Pasadena, California. Funeral services were in charge of Rev. J. B. Ediger and were held at the Mennoville Church, seven miles north of El Reno. Rev. Henry Funck, a former pastor of the departed says of him, "Brother Meschberger was very much interested in mission work and contributed very liberally to it. A part of it was given to the Indians whom he learned to love while working among them."

RELIEF

GOOD NEWS CONCERNING THE CONVALESCENT HOME

A recent letter from Brother Joseph N. Byler gives an encouraging picture of the convalescent home at Canet Plage in southern France. Quoting from Brother Byler's letter:

"Our convalescent home at Canet Plage is doing a good work. They have been able to buy most of their supplies locally the past month and are therefore saving our other stocks for winter. There is very little than can be purchased ahead for the winter. We did place an order for some dried vegetables such as carrots, turnips, and spinach to be used mostly in soups. If our order is filled we will have sufficient for soup once each day at both the colony and cantine for six months. This should tide them over the winter months when these things are not on the market."

RELIEF PLANS FOR THE WINTER AHEAD

The following paragraph, taken from a letter by one of our relief workers in France, shows the concern of our workers for the relief program as winter approaches:

"We are doing our very best to get a relief program under way that can do the most possible good under the present scarcity of supplies. It is simply impossible to buy up stocks of food to give out. We want to adapt our help to the situation as it is, so that during the coming winter we may be the means of relieving as much suffering as possible. This we believe is your plan for us on the field and all of us together want to be faithful in the task that is ours. We appreciate your support and confidence and solicit your continued prayers as we work together in the relieving of suffering."

Unstable Woman

by Ruth King Duerksen

Albert Harding selected the sunny side of the bus and chucked his bag quickly out of the way. It was a beautiful fall day, with just of the winter twang to make one enjoy the generous sunshine. The late asters in the victory gardens, by the wayside, were sending out their last flowers. He pulled out his watch as the bus started on its way; one forty-six. The bus was a few minutes behind schedule. "If it would have been on time I would surely have had to wait for the next one. I'm glad I made it—or am I?" he asked himself with a start as if suddenly remembering something extremely unpleasant. He looked about himself troubled and helpless and then, as if trying to cast his thoughts away, he turned his attention to the other passengers on the bus.

Just across the aisle were two girls giggling and whispering behind their handkerchiefs. They looked at Albert with extravagant boldness. "Silly girls," he muttered as he looked away, "it's probably their first bus ride, or maybe it's just an adventurous spirit that makes them lay down their reserve." Ahead of him were an elderly couple, nervous and agitated with the swiftness of the trip and the giggles of the girls behind them. Once he heard the old man say, "Now Mother, they are not laughing at us. That's just the way girls act at their age." Albert looked farther down toward the front. There he spied a country lady with her market basket. Doubtless she had gone to the city to do her shopping. She held her basket carefully in her lap. "Looks just like the basket Mother used to put the eggs in when she took them to town," Albert commented with a sudden smile that made his face handsome. Then he settled down to a few reminiscences.

He wished that he hadn't been such a mischievous little fellow when he was a lad. Both Mother and Father were gone, but if they were living they would be proud of the man he now was. They would approve of the work he did in the city. They would appreciate his promotion in the business. They would love his two little boys just as they had loved him. They would adore his little wife, Faith—or would they? He sat up straight in his seat. He forgot about the giggling girls, the nervous couple, and the farm lady, and a heavy frown sat on his forehead. "They would have adored the Faith that used to be, but not the changed wife," he remarked sententiously. Then he startled nervously and glanced around timidly. He was not sure whether or not he had spoken out loud. How silly for a young business man to be talking to himself, or was he getting to be an old fogy as Faith has accused him. Mentally he began to take inventory of himself and his family. They had all been so happy together in their little house in Rosedale. He had been successful enough in business to be respected by his fellow townsmen. He and his wife had been faithful Christians and enjoyed the fellowship of their church. The boys had been like diamonds in their lives: bright and sparkling. His wife had been so sweet and satisfied. Yes, satisfied, he was perfectly sure of that, until she got mixed up in that literary club. At first it seemed such an innocent thing and a pleasant and cultural asset to her life, but now, why now it had almost stripped her of her past lovely self. It had robbed her of the love and motherliness that had been showered upon him and the boys. "Oh, if only Mrs. Adams hadn't dragged her away to the city to other clubs and social functions it would never have happened. Now she is so dissatisfied and so impatient with everything in Rosedale." Albert was sitting with his chin in his cupped hands and his elbows on his knees. He knew his eyes were misty with tears, but he did not care. He did not care about anything, except that he wanted Faith to be changed back to the little wife and mother that she used to be.

The bus came to an abrupt stop at a little depot in Rosedale. Albert, with an impatient jerk, drew his traveling bag from its resting place and started slowly from the bus. "I wonder if Faith and the boys are here to meet me. Hope it's just the boys," he added timorously. He climbed out of the bus behind another passenger. By the door he spied Faith waiting impatiently. After a hasty word of greeting to her husband, who had been gone for the week, she complained, "But your bus is late! And me, with so many important things to do."

"What's up now, wifey?" Albert asked tenderly, hoping that she would at least reward him with a smile. His hope was in vain.

"We're having company for the week end, and it seems that everything is going wrong." Albert scowled. Why of all times must there be company for the week end?

Faith interpreted his scowl immediately. "Now Albert," she complained, "don't you dare be difficult!"

"It's just that I'd like to have a little time with my wife and boys," he explained as he helped her into their waiting car.

"Oh, Albert, you're so silly. You'll be having your family, and company, too."

"It's the company, too, that brings the objection," he responded, not even asking who the guests might be. He was sure they were none of his friends.

"Please, please don't be so tragic about it. Just because I have learned to know some really wonderful people from the city, you needn't try to keep me from having a tiny visit with them. Why these folks are well-known people. It is Mr. and Mrs. Strauss. He is a composer of note, and his music is the rage of the city," Faith ended with an exultant sweep of her pretty white hand.

"Where are the boys?" he asked anxious to turn the conversation.

"At home where they belong!" came the impatient answer. "They have been such little pests that I have sent them to bed for the rest of the afternoon."

"But Faith," protested her husband in alarm, "I've promised the boys a hike through the woods this afternoon."

"Your promise will have to be withdrawn, for they need to be punished!" she spoke emphatically. "Besides, there is company to entertain and I am counting on you to come out of your stiff shell and be a host to the Strausses."

They were turning into the driveway and Albert made no further comment.

The visitors were even more trying than he had imagined, but for his wife's sake he tried to be a congenial host. They were decidedly bored with him. Mr. Strauss spent most of the evening at the piano tickling the ivories with a modern swing, while Faith sang through his cheap compositions.

"Oh, it's just wonderful, wonderful," gurgled Mrs. Strauss, lifting her glasses that dangled from their black cord, and looking through them at Albert. Albert met her glance but for a minute, for he felt that her eyes were taking an x-ray of his mind. He nodded his head nervously, wishing he were upstairs with his boys, Max and Teddy.

The tolling of a village church bell startled Albert from his sleep the next morning. Not a soul in the house was stirring, yet. A few lazy clouds passed before the early morning sun and their shadows played nervously upon the bed. Albert saw that the time was drawing late, so he hurriedly called his wife.

"Time to go to church?" she yawned mockingly. "Who intends to go? I'm sure I do not, and I'm sure our guests would scream if they had to sit through a service. Come on, Albert, be a sport and climb back into bed like a good fellow. I'm dead for sleep," and she closed her eyes to the conversation. He, her husband, reached out his hand to rouse her, but he pulled it back from mid air. He had decided differently. Quickly he dressed and then called the boys. Soon the three of them were in the kitchen finding breakfast for themselves. The boys were hilarious, for the prospect of a morning with their father was tonic to their blighted souls.

At early noon Faith was standing impatiently in the doorway of their generous cottage, when she spied her husband with his two sons coming home from church. She was angry that Albert had taken the boys to the morning service. As she watched them draw nearer her anger turned to jealousy, as she saw their radiant faces and felt the gay lilt that edged their laughter. The boys were never that happy with her, she thought. Then for an instant there passed before her mind a scene from earlier days. There had been times when the four of them went for a gay frolic in the woods, with the clear crystal stream to cool their perspiring brow, or a steep hill to reduce their energy. She held to that vision, for it seemed precious to her. It stirred an ember within her that had not been kindled for sometime. She was about to call out to them gladly, warmly, when a sudden exclamation drove the greeting from her mind.

"Goodness," gurgled Mrs. Strauss coming up behind her, "don't tell me that your husband and sons have been out for a morning walk already?"

"For a walk!" Faith ejaculated. "No, not for a walk; they attended services at the church this morning." She turned quickly and walked rudely away, leaving her guest alone, to her surprise. Faith sought the solitude of her bedroom. She stared frankly into her mirror and looked at herself. "Am I a fool to get taken up with these people?" she asked herself. "Am I getting out of it what I want?" Her blue eyes looked back at herself. They seemed shallow and empty. Was it of her that Albert had said, "Your pretty eyes speak honestly; they tell me what you are. They tell me that you love the things I love." Faith peered close, but there was no character in her eyes now. "I'll quit this new way of living," she told herself; "I'm going back to Albert and the boys." She lingered for one more look at herself and caught a glimpse of her lips that were now painted an enticing red, and she weakened a trifle. "I do have pretty lips," she murmured, "but Albert doesn't like them this way." Then her eyes lifted to her correctly shaped eyebrows and she beamed upon their beauty. Before she could frame her thoughts, a few strains from Strauss's newest song hit reached her. Unconsciously her foot began to beat the time. Her eyes became dreamy. She turned away from the mirror, then hesitated, "Yes, I'm going back to Albert and the boys—sometime."

Albert hoped that the guests would leave early so that there would be time yet for him to visit with his family, but when the clouds began to darken the autumn sky, and the rain pattered softly like a little child's tears, the guests announced their intentions to remain another night. So with the same gaunt feeling Albert Harding returned to work the next morning.

The week that followed hung heavy with the odor of late rains, and the refreshed grass and shrubs stirred one with the excitement of revived life and energy. Into this beautiful scene a master stroke of new tragedy rode. It was apparent upon the face of Albert Harding as he came unexpectedly to his little home on Friday evening. He had walked from the station. His wife had not been expecting him until the next day, and was not at home. Max and Teddy were playing in the back yard under the watchful eye of a neighbor girl. Their boisterous shouts reached Albert as he stood looking out the back door. The boys were throwing themselves into their play with unlimited energy trying to make the most of the short time before they must go to bed. "They can shout and play without a care," Albert muttered grimly; "they don't know what I know. Nor will they know it tonight," he added resolutely. "God bless the dear youngsters." As quickly as one would take off his hat, he wiped the tragic look from his face and stepped out of the back door.

"Daddy! Daddy!" the boys shouted as they made a rush for him. "What did you bring from town for us?" For a moment Albert faltered. He had been so lost in his own troubles that he had not thought to bring anything for the boys. Then he met the situation nobly. "Can't you see what I brought?" he demanded. They felt his pockets; they looked inside his coat. They even made him take off his hat to see if he might have anything under it. He had played such tricks on them before. They found nothing.

"Well, where have you got it hidden this time?" the baffled boys demanded.

"I don't have it hidden," he replied. Max stood with his hands on his hips looking his father over from head to foot. Then with thoroughly grown-up candor he said, "All I can see is just you, Dad."

"Isn't that enough?" his father wanted to know.

"Hurrah!" cried Max, clasping his father around the waist. "Dad has come home a day early to play with us."

"Hurrah! Hurrah!" shouted Teddy. "That's the best present yet," and the three were quickly lost in a rough embrace. Albert blinked away a tear as Max ran to get the ball and bat. He promised the boys that they could stay up an hour longer and dismissed the girl. He would have a good time tonight while he could. No need to go over his troubles until Faith came home.

After the boys were finally tucked away in their beds Albert went downstairs to wait for his wife. Where she was and at what time she would come home, he did not know. He could have asked the neighbor girl, but it hurt his pride to inquire from her.

George Blaurock, so called because he always wore a blue coat, was the first one to accept adult baptism. He was baptized by Conrad Grebel who had come to differ with Zwingli on the question of baptism. Grebel denied the validity and necessity of infant baptism which was then universally practiced by both the Catholic church and the followers of Luther and Zwingli. Blaurock then baptized several others of the group and the new church which came to be named Anabaptists by its enemies came into formal existence on this occasion in 1525. Baptism, however, was only one of the distinguishing marks, of this group of people who took the Bible as the source and guide of their faith and conduct.

Since the Bible was their final authority on all questions of religion they followed its teachings also in regard to baptism. Their study of Jesus' teachings and the practice of the church in apostolic days led them to break away from infant baptism, and institute adult baptism on confession of faith.

Menno Simons, a priest, was led to doubt the practices of the Catholic church and turned to the New Testament for light. The beheading of a man for having been rebaptized led him to study the question of infant baptism. He became deeply intrested in the zeal and earnestness of the Anabaptists and finally renounced the Catholic church at the age of forty.

He became a practical, vital leader, and soon those who were of one mind with him became known after his name. One of their tenets, of course, was adult baptism. Menno Simons said: "In all the New Testament there is not a word or command about baptizing infants, by Christ nor by the apostles."

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

(1) The teachings of Jesus regarding baptism. (2) The practice of baptism in the early church as recorded by Acts. (3) The meaning and value of baptism to the live of the individual today. (4) The meaning and value of baptism for the church today.

IV. For Discussion:

(1) What does Paul mean when he speaks about baptism in Romans 6:3-11? (2) What else does Paul say about baptism? See I Cor. 12:13; 1:13;

1:17. (3) What does Paul say about salvation? See I Tim. 1:15, 16; Eph. 2:5.

V. Facts for Study:

In the early days of our church baptism meant a real decision. This act meant renouncing membership to the Catholic church and uniting with a small despised group which suffered a lot of persecution. No one accepted it who was not deeply convinced and in earnest about its value and desirability to join this movement which took the teachings of the Sermon on the Mount literally and tried to live what the Bible taught in their every day relations with others. Baptism was not a perfunctory rite, but full of meaning and implication. It meant identification with those whose way of living was distinguished by true sincerity in folowing the teachings of the Bible and wholehearted faith in and loyalty to Jesus Christ. The Mennonite church has tried to keep true to this meaning of baptism through the centuries. Those who have been its members have been known by the sincerity of their lives.

Claiming a Maverick

C. T. Brady, a missionary in the west, tells how he once baptized a young girl in a small town on the border of Indian Territory. Her father was a cattle man, the owner of enormous herds. Each cattle owner here has a brand of his own for marking his animals, and the mavericks, or young cattle born in the range, belong to the man who can get his branding iron on them first. This girl had to remain away from a session of the public school for her baptism. When she returned, the children set upon her with hard questions, and inquired skeptically how she was in any way different from what she had been before.

Finally when she had exhausted all other means trying to explain to them, she turned to them with her bright eyes smiling through her tears, "Well," she said, "I will tell you. I was a little mavrick before, and the man put Jesus' brand upon me. So when Jesus sees me running wild on the prairie, He will know I am His child." That conveyed the idea.

The Voyage of Life

Song: "Brightly Beams Our Father's Mercy"
Captain's Message (Leader's Talk)

Throughout the ages the life of a sailor has been one of thrilling adventure. The church is to the Christian what the ship is to the sailor. Each of us is expected to carry our share of the work, and all expect to reach the port at the end of the journey. If we are to ride safely the storms of life we must be prepared for the trip. We must have faith in our Pilot, obey His commands and have our sins washed away in the waters of baptism that we will be ready for a fresh start.

If one should endeavor to cross the ocean, how foolish it would be to try and make the trip without chart or compass and without an experienced crew or a tested ship. How much more pleasant it is to board an ocean liner which has a captain and crew trained in the safest methods of travel.

As we prepare to put out on the sea of life let us embark on that ship, the church, which has safely outridden all storms and which has for its Pilot the Master of storm and sea.

Song: "Sailing, Sailing," or "My Anchor Holds."
Talk: "Seaworthy."

The law does not permit a ship to sail with a crew and cargo unless she has been proved seaworthy and well protected by life preservers and boats. The seaworthiness of a ship depends not only on the ones that make the ship, or the ones who own it,, but upon the ones who control it and keep it on its course. If anyone from the crow's nest to the engine room fails in his duty, the ship is imperiled because of his negligence.

If God's ship, the church, is to be a seaworthy craft, it will require the skilled, unselfish service of each member. For if one member fails, it spoils the effeciency of the ship and may influence some other member of the crew to neglect his duty.

Talk: "Sailing Orders."

We know that neither chart nor compass could save a ship if its crew failed to heed the orders or obey the commands of the captain. The crew must learn the dangers of the course, and this comes only through the study of the chart, through experience, and implicit obedience to higher commands.

We are comparing our church to the ocean ship. And if we would keep it on a safe course we must know the commands of our captain, Jesus. The Bible is both chart and compass for our voyage of life to that eternal shore. The Psalmist has written, "The law of the Lord is perfect; the statutes of the Lord are right." Since our orders are perfect, is is important that we, the sailors, shall make it the rule of our lives to study to know the Bible—the book which contains these orders.

Talk: "Carrying the Cargo."

If a ship does not convey its cargo of passengers or freight into the destined port, it has failed in its real mission.

If the church does not take souls safely to heaven's gate, it has failed in its mission. If each member carries his share of influence, prayer, work, and giving, no soul will miss the eternal port.

Solo: "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep."
Prayer Song: "Jesus, Saviour, Pilot Me."
Prayer Poem: "Crossing the Bar."
Sentence prayers.
Benediction.

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT

FOLLOWING OUR FRIEND AND GUIDE
I Peter 2:21-22; Luke 14:25-27

FOLLOWING CHRIST IN SALVATION

Maybe you have asked yourself, "How is it possible to follow Christ?" Help comes from above, from the Bible, from prayer, and from other people. Jesus sees in us, what we ourselves don't know. Through the grace of the Lord Jesus, he saved us from sin and he is able to keep us. If we want to follow Christ all the way, we must follow Him FIRST in salvation.

FOLLOWING CHRIST THROUGH PRIVATIONS

If we would follow Jesus fully, we must be willing to suffer. The Bible says. "If any man will live Godly in Christ Jesus, he shall suffer persecution." (II Tim. 3:12). "Unto you it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake," (Phil. 1:29).

Often, when we follow Christ, we are willing to give up luxuries and comforts of home to go into far away places, but our reward in winning souls, far surpasses any sacrifice we might have to make.

Maybe we are asked to go into communities where Christ does not receive first place. Are we courageous enough to proclaim Him, testifying of His love, or start Sunday Schools and churches?

Perhaps there are some that must be willing to love the Lord Jesus, first of all, and more than all, even above their relatives. Many a new convert on the mission fields must give up home and parents, because he has made a decision to follow Christ.

FOLLOWING CHRIST ABOVE RICHES

Jesus told the rich young ruler, "If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in Heaven: and come and follow me."

When riches take first place in our lives they stand in the way for a close walk with Jesus. We love riches more than God. The Lord does not always demand that we give up our earthly possessions to follow Him, but He does demand that He be first in our heart and lives. He does demand that our possessions be subject to His control. How many there are who love earthly possessions more than Christ. These possessions must never come between us and Christ; he must be first. We must belong altogether to Him.

CORRESPONDENCE

SWISS MENNONITE CHURCH

Alsen, North Dakota

Greetings in the name of Christ, our Lord and Saviour. We hear so much about the chaos in which nations are today, but is it any wonder that there is chaos in the world when we have much of it even in the churches which profess to be Christ's? II Peter 2:1. "But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction." Many seem to read this verse "a damnable heresy of denying the Lord," but the verse reads, "damnable heresies, even denying the Lord. . ." So we see that there shall be more than one. II Corinthians 11:13-15 again warns against false apostles, and Christ warns us in the gospels not to follow after false teachers. Is the church alert? If not, why not?

If we will read the Word aright and study it and pray for wisdom to understand it, then we will not be tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine. But the Word also teaches us very plainly that many shall fall away from the faith in the later days. Read II Peter 2:15-22 and also Matthew 24:1-12. But then too, we have comforting words from our Saviour. Matthew 24:13. "But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved." Again in the first three chapters of The Revelation we have the different promises to "him that overcometh." So let us continue to fight the good fight of faith.

In the past months we had the pleasure of having Brother H. Albert Claassen give us a very timely message in regard to the C. P. S. camps and in the interest of Freeman College. If we had more men in the pulpits today who would take a stand for our faith as this brother does, I think the C. P. S. dues would all be paid up. It is sad but true, we still sing "Faith of Our Fathers," but many do not believe in that kind of a faith anymore.

We were thankful to have Missionary F. Isaac give us a few messages and relate of their work in India. We would appreciate it very much if more of our missionaries would visit our church. We have read in the church papers of Missionary P. A. Penner's visits to a number of churches. We hope that he, too, will be able to visit us.

On October 11 we had our Harvest and Mission Festival. Although we did not have the privilege of having any speakers from the mission fields, the brethren from the surrounding churches served us and fed us the Bread of Life. That it might have fallen on good ground and bear much fruit is our prayer.

October 1 we had the funeral service for Brother J. J. Graber. Brother and Sister Edward Duerksen from Avon, South Dakota, our former pastor and his wife, came here for the funeral. Brother Duerksen gave an English message and Brother H. Ortman gave a German message. Sunday morning Brother Duerksen also brought us the morning message.

We have been greatly blessed with material things this year, as we have been able to gather in a bountiful crop, one of the largest we have ever had. They have almost finished threshing now. The rains caused much delay in harvesting and threshing, and some of the grain was somewhat damaged by rain but not nearly as much as last year. Gardens too brought forth more than we could eat. We have so much here, and in the war torn countries there is starvation. Oh, let us not forget to give thanks unto the Lord for all that He has given unto us. That we might not forget to share with those who are in need. —Corr.

GRACE MENNONITE CHURCH

Albany, Oregon

In Jeremiah 8:2 we read, "The harvest is past, the summer is ended and we are not saved." This can be said of many men and women in this community. We are asking ourselves this question, "Have we been faithful in the harvest field, gathering in the precious harvest of lost men and women?" Folks have been busy gathering the harvest of grain and fruits. From dawn till dark, they have worked and laboured in the fields that no grain or fruit should be lost. This is as it should be. But how about the harvest of precious souls? Jesus said, "Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields, for they are white already to harvest." Again Jesus says, "The night cometh when no man can work." Do we realize that the "Day" of gathering in of precious souls may soon end?

Our prayer is, "Lord fill us with thine own divine love, sending us out daily into the large field, in this community. In our Sunday School, Christian Endeavor, preaching, teaching, and singing, we have been throwing out the life line, the gospel of Jesus Christ. Pray for us that as individuals and as a congregation we may never fail him in this so urgent work, reaching out for lost men and women.

On September 20, at 3 p. m., Miss Cornelia Funk, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Funk, Corvallis, Oregon, a member of the Grace Mennonite Church, was united in marriage to Mr. Noel B. Flynn, Senior in Oregon State College, a member of the Presbyterian Church. On October 25, 2:30 p. m. the workers of this church, will meet in a workers' conference. Different topics relating to the different departments of the work will be discussed by the workers of the church. On November 29, we are planning a harvest home, all day services. Communion services will be held in the morning—the pastor of the church bringing the message. Rev. John M. Franz will be the special speaker for the afternoon services. The morning offering will go to missions, and the afternoon offering for congregational purposes, paying of our small debt and for repairs made. We also wish to extend an invitation to families looking for a new home in the west to come to Albany. This community has many splendid farms with good fertile soil. There are many opportunities for such work as Ply-Wood Factory, Sash and Door Factory, Djair Factory, sawmills, many feed cleaning stores. During summer months, berry, bean, and prune picking seasons offer opportunities for the whole family to earn much needed money for the winter.

Then the friendly Mennonite Church on the corner of Santiam and Main offers you a church home with many opportunities for service. Here in this church "You will be a stranger but once." Write the pastor, Rev. P. A. Kliewer, for information.

Greetings to all the other congregations, I am yours in His name,

The correspondent of The Grace Mennonite Church

EBENEZER MENNONITE CHURCH

Gotebo, Oklahoma

We are enjoying lovely fall weather. People are busy gathering in their cotton crop.

In July of this year we had the pleasure of having Sister Elizabeth Foth and Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Wedel in our midst. Sister Foth is engaged in mission work in Brooklyn, New York, and Brother Wedel in Alabama. On July 16 the "Out to Out for Christ Circle" met at Mrs. Ted Schmidt's house, and Sister Foth spoke to the group. The meeting was well attended. We have our circle meeting once a month. At these meetings we study a chapter out of God's Word, and have a collection. The money goes to the most needy places. On July 20 a community service was held at the high school auditorium. Sister Foth and Brother Wedel delivered the messages, following which they showed moving pictures of their work.

Two of our church members left for camp. Aron Zacharias in July and Walter Wiebe in September.

Our pastor, Rev. Noah Unruh, conducted the vacation Bible school in August. It was held in the Methodist church. He was assisted by the Methodist pastor and a teacher.

Miss Gladys Krause, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Krause, and Mr. Jack Daws were married on August 25, at the home of Rev. Noah Unruh. The young couple are making their home in Frederick, Oklahoma.

On Sunday September 13, three new members were taken into our church. Rev. and Mrs. Noah Unruh transferred their membership here from Kansas and Walter Wiebe from the Brethren church of Gotebo.

The last quarter of our year is well under way. By this time we have all experienced trials, disappointments, and blessings. We trust that the readers of The Mennonite have especially had their share of blessings.

Sunday School and worship service have continued as usual with fair attendance, except when the roads were bad.

As our Elder, Rev. G. N. Harms, is not able to serve us as leader as he used to, we must say we yet are glad and thankful that he is with us regularly and willing to help out where he can. We feel privileged to have Rev. J. J. Voth as our pastor every other Sunday. He also arranges that our pulpit is filled on the Sunday when he can not come.

Seven young Christians, who had finished instruction in the catechism classes, were baptized and received into the church on Penticost. Rev. J. J. Voth performed the ceremony.

This summer five of our young people attended the Young People's retreat at Camp Wood, Elmdale, Kansas. The war has also taken some of our boys into the service for their country. Five of our boys have left and a few are serving at home under deferrments. May we uphold them by our prayers. —Corr.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Berne, Indiana

Perhaps some are wondering how our pastor is faring with his eye affliction. The latter part of this month he expects to go to Chicago for a final check-up. It cannot yet be definitely known what the final outcome of this affliction will be; humanly speaking, there seems a possibility that full vision may not be restored to the afflicted eye. But we know that God can still work miracles if He so chooses and that He is able to restore sight. If it is His will otherwise, we know that our pastor possesses the grace to be resigned and submissive to the Father's will. During this time that he has been laid aside we have had a number of visiting pastors as pulpit supplies, as well as some returned missionaries, and so the work has gone on.

Today, October 19, several more of our young men from the church have left to answer the call of Uncle Sam, bringing the total number thus far to fifty. Some have gone into C. P. S. camps and others into military non-combatant service, according to the way they have felt led. Among the number leaving today are two who will be missed in a special way, because of their untiring and unstinted service to the church, as well as because of their Christian fellowship. One of these is Curtis Lehman, who has served the past two years as superintendent of the Sunday School; the other is Freeman Burkhalter, who served in the same capacity the few years immediately preceding Mr. Lehman's term. In addition he has served for a number of years as director of the mixed choir and the men's chorus and has also served as teacher of the Teacher Training Class. Both of these young men are of sterling Christian character, firmly established in the faith, and we believe that they can be greatly used of God wherever their lot may be cast. As a farewell message to the Sunday School yesterday morning they sang a duet, using the song "Resting in the Shelter of His Love." Martha Gilliom, Corr.

—Woodland Mennonite Church, Warroad, Minnesota: On September 6 this church and the one at Roosevelt, Minnesota, presented a musical program, portraying the "Life of Christ." On September 9 and 10 Missionary F. J. Isaac held services in our midst. A song festival was held in our church on September 13. —Jake G. Quiring, Corr.

—Friedensfeld Mennonite Church, Turpin, Oklahoma: On October 4 Rev. Marvin Eck was installed as pastor of our church by Brother Victor Graber. The Kismet Church was invited for the occasion. A basket dinner was served at noon. At present Rev. and Mrs. Eck are busy organizing different activities of the church. A Sunday School teachers' course is to be taught in connection with the Wednesday night prayer meeting. —Corr.

—First Mennonite Church, Upland, California: "A Truck is leaving Monday morning for the Mennonite C.P.S. Camp at Camino (Placerville). Anyone wishing to contribute to the camp by way of canned fruits, fresh fruits, vegetables, etc., should have it here at the church either today or early tomorrow morning." A special offering for C.P.S. camps was held the first of November. About ten of the intermediate C. E. members sang in the county chorus which was active throughout the county C. E. convention.

—Deep Run Mennonite Church, Deep Run, Pa. Five young people were received into the fellowship of the church on October 3. November 8 is to be observed as missionary day. Mrs. Harvey Bauman, medical missionary to India, is to speak in the morning, and Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf, recently returned from China, is to speak in the evening.

—Zion Mennonite Church, Donnellson, Iowa: Dr. L. L. Ramseyer, President of Bluffton College, visited this church during the week of October 18-25. "The young people of the four churches of Donnellson have organized a union C. E. and plan to meet on the first Sunday evening of each month. The plan was presented at a wiener roast. . . .which was attended by almost fifty young people. Different types of programs and constructive recreation are being planned for these evenings." Five young people were baptized on September 13.

—Bulletin, Bethesda Mennonite Church, Henderson, Nebraska: (The following is taken from a letter written by a young man in a C.P.S. camp.) "We realize more than ever that the young men of the Bethesda Church have left a faithful and spiritual community which is willing to make sacrifices for our convictions. I. . .thank them for it. We have become aware that it does not take huge wages to be happy. (The men receive no wages.) We have also learned to know and appreciate our many different branches of Mennonites, and we find that we can live and worship together as one large family without difficulty. Above all, we have learned to know our Saviour better by daily contacts with Him in prayer, devotion, discussions, and through our fellow campees. We have received new hope in Hebrews 13:5, 'I will never leave thee nor forsake thee.' It is just a year ago last Friday September 18 that I left home to enter camp. . ."

After being interned three times in concentration camps in France Miss Schnieder escaped to the United States in February, 1941. After one year at Schauffler College, Cleveland, Ohio, Miss Schneider transferred to Bluffton College, largely because of an acquaintance begun with Miss Edna Ramseyer in France. "Previous to the eight years she lived in Paris as a social worker and as a student, Miss Schneider studied two years in the School of Social Work, Berlin, under Dr. Walter Friedlander, now of the University of Chicago, and Dr. Susanne Schure, Assistant Professor of Child Welfare, Western Reserve University, Cleveland."

—"Robert Kumata, Japanese transfer student from the University of Washington, arrived at the Bluffton College campus this week to begin work, under arrangements with the Federal Relocation authority. "AS WE FORGIVE"

The desire and need for forgiveness is great. Our hearts cannot be filled with peace and joy from God until we know His forgiveness. As imperfect human beings we are ever guilty of something which needs to be forgiven. We desire and need not only the forgiveness of God but also that of our fellowmen against whom we trespass. The knowledge that someone "holds something against us" pricks us. The unforgiving attitude of some Christian brother tends to confuse and discourage us. The breath of such an attitude is not life-giving, but rather it is poisonous. Forgiveness is Christlike. It is an absolute necessity for brotherly relationships. It needs to be practiced thoroughly and sincerely if we are to be right with God and with one another.

We pray, "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us." The word "as" in the foregoing petition is very important. We may well ask, "How do I forgive those who trespass against me?" Do I remain largely unaware of God's request that I do forgive? Or am I dimly conscious of God's expectation and try to soothe my conscience by telling myself that I forgive the other person, while I continue to carry in my heart a feeling of antagonism. Is my forgiveness so superficial as to make me partial towards my Christian brethren, some of whom have treated me well and others ill? Or is my forgiveness something so thorough and deep that I not only think forgiveness in my mind, but that I also "feel" it? Do I feel as loving towards the brother who has trespassed against me as I do towards him who has not sinned against me? Is it not true that if I forgive another, the sin should be entirely wiped away as far as I am concerned in the matter? To forgive is a deep-going, redemptive act. It will "straighten out" someone as no amount of retaliation and ill-will can ever do. To forgive is God-like, and God does things thoroughly. I am to forgive in the manner that I desire God to forgive me. This should make me search my heart as to my forgiveness of others.

Oh, how much sadness and strife there often is in home, church, community, and conference just because we often do not forgive one another as we desire God to forgive us! We are forced to feel that we are not right with God, just because we refuse to feel right towards someone else. But what happy and edifying relationships there are where men and women, moved by God's forgiveness of their sins, readily and thoroughly forgive one another! There God has his way, and lives are lifted up from sin and not pressed further down into it. Let us forgive as God forgives.

Of What Value Are the C.P.S. Camps?

By J. W. Bergen

There are some who feel there is not enough definite Christian service provided for the boys in the C. P. S. camps. This no doubt has become the keen desire in many lives since they have arrived in the camps.

On the other hand, how many did have this deep desire and made use of the opportunities to reach out for the lost when still at home?

The C. P. S. camp experience is bringing about such desire and therefore is a school where a hunger and desire to reach out for the lost is created.

God is not able to use His children unless they sense the need of definite Christian service. Then again, it is not always through much activity through which we render the best service.

Moses was in the desert forty years before God called him into active service. Joseph, too, went through a prison experience before God made him a blessing both to the Egyptians and Israel.

In Psalms 27:14 and Isa. 40:31, we have the exhortation of waiting.

David says in Psalms 139:23, "Search me O God and know my heart. Try me and know my thoughts."

If the C. P. S. camp had no other service to offer than to bring about a revival among our young men through heart searching experiences, waiting upon God and a full consecration to the will of God, it then would have rendered a service worthy of its cause.

What we need is a burden for the lost and God will provide the opportunity.—Yours in the bonds of fellowship.

BOOK REVIEW

CHRIST, THE REDEEMER AND JUDGE

By John C. Wenger

During 1941, C. F. Yake, editor of The Youth's Christian Companion, ran a series of studies for young people written by John C. Wenger, Th. D., instructor in the Bible School of Goshen College. Since then this series of thirteen practical studies has been published under the above title and made available for study classes.

In the introduction, written by C. F. Yake, concern is expressed that the Book of Revelation has not received the same emphasis in teaching as other books of the Bible. This seems to be especially true among Mennonites. The neglect in instructing our people in the teachings of the one prophetic book of the New Testament has caused our people to become dependent upon sources outside of our own church. Where this teaching has been extreme in many instances, it has altered a simple faith and led to a speculation concerning future events which may not always be wholesome.

The purpose of this series of studies is to ground readers more deeply in the faith of our fathers.

It is natural that at a time such as this there will be a greater interest concerning future things. The hope is expressed that it may fill a very definite need and "be a means of unifying to a greater degree our denominational thinking on eschatology, and of creating a more sympathetic attitude among those holding different millenarian views."

In a straight forward manner, the author faces at least four types of interpretations. He warns against the danger of holding only to one school of thought as there seems to be elements of truth in each. The Book of Revelation certainly referred to events and people in the days of the writer, it naturally deals largely with end-time events, it may give a preview of the main events of history from the time of the writer to the end of the world, and it definitely also holds spiritual applications based on fundamental principals which the various visions are intended to convey.

In view of the fact that a person is apt to hold a mixture of two or more of these interpretations, one is impressed with the frankness with which the author approaches the study, scrutinizing each element of strength and weakness. He says, "We shall do well not to bind ourselves to any one of them before we have examined carefully the entire message of 'The Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him.' " He cautions that the reading of any exposition of the Revelation should be preceded by a careful reading of the Book of Revelation itself.

The author regards the book as one of "high spiritual quality," which holds a "firm place" in the New Testament from the early times. He finds the Bible to be very incomplete without the account of the fulfilling and restoring of those things which sin marred in the beginning chapters of our Bible.

The author refers to the Book of Revelation as one which is somewhat different from any other New Testament writing. " Ordinary rules of interpretation seem inadequate to explain the visions of the seer of Patmos." He is inclined to believe that if a student had only The Revelation as a source of doctrine he would hardly arrive at the same scheme of eschatology as would those who had only the Gospels and Epistles. He realizes the necessity of adopting one of the two courses. (1) One must either interpret some of the difficult visions in the light of the rest of the New Testament, or (2) accept The Revelation as the norm for interpretation for the remainder of the New Testament.

The author assumes the nonmillennial position as having "the weighty support of the historic creed of Christendom." Although premillennialism is accepted by some influential leaders in the Mennonite Church, he maintains that the real struggle today should not be between rival schools of interpretation but against the spirit of naturalism which is constantly seeking admission into our churches.

He offers several objections raised against beliefs commonly associated with the premillennial view: (1) the teaching that multitudes will be saved after the return of Christ; (2) the belief that Jews will be saved in some other way than through the proclamation of the Gospel by the church; and (3) the dispensational view which holds that the teachings of the Sermon on the Mount, such as nonresistance and the non-swearing of oaths, are "kingdom truths" to be applied to daily life during the future millennium.

In the appendix, which gives a "synopses of Millenorian Views," the author states that "it is important to note that honest and spiritual students of God's word have arrived at these varying views of the future from a study of the Scriptures - - - We must note further, that the view one holds regarding the millennial teaching has, to the orthodox Christian no particular bearing on the essentials of salvation and Christian experience. It is one of those matters on which Christians may hold differing views as they unitedly look forward in faith and hope for the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ." —Walter H. Dyck

"For we will sooner endure, in our mortal bodies, misery, poverty, tribulation, hunger, thirst, heat, cold, bonds and death, and adhere to the word of the Lord, than lead secure easy lives with the world, and for the sake of a short and temporal life, ruin our souls."

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

Eleven Weeks in America

By Harvey R. Baumans

Just eleven weeks ago at 5:30 this morning the Lord brought us safely back to Quakertown. Our arrival here was a complete surprise to the dear friends of this community as well as to our folks. A telegram had been sent from New York. When it arrived in Quakertown it had been abbreviated to Sam Baum instead of Samuel Bauman and the party could not be located. I took delivery of the telegram and took it out to my father. Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander took us out.

Two weeks were spent with my folks before going on to Missouri to Dr. Ella's relatives. During this period most of the time was spent in washing up from the six weeks trip and in canning. About one hundred quarts of apples, beans, and corn were canned during this period. On the ship the bathing and washing water was rationed, and it was impossible to keep clean. Remember we had to supply our own bedding on the ship. We were happy that we did not need to bend over the wash board for all this as in India.

The Lord has provided us with a 1937 V-8. In this we left on July 28 for Missouri, stopping off at Dalton and Bluffton, Ohio, and Columbia City, Indiana, and arriving in Missouri on the evening of the thirty-first. On August 2 we had a blessed day in the Bethel Church both morning and evening. In the afternoon the whole family group was together.

The following week end (all too short, we admit) was spent in Moundridge and Newton. It was good though to meet so many mission friends in such a short time. That time in Missouri was too short, too, but we wanted to attend the Middle District Conference in Summerfield, which was held August 16-18. It had been our intention to attend for inspiration and fellowship with old and new friends. We were happy though to take the place of Rev. and Mrs. P. A. Wenger who had been booked for the conference but could not attend because of a retreat. On the eastward trip half a week was given to each of the Berne and Bluffton communities. Open doors and warm hearts greeted us everywhere. We thank all our friends most heartily and pray that God may reward them and richly bless them.

We arrived in the Quakertown community August 29, hoping to get well settled in Quakertown before the opening of the public schools on September 14. Our patience was somewhat tried when we had to wait till September 21 before the key was handed over to us, for had not the previous renters paid the rent up to the twenty-first? They moved out on the eleventh but kept the key even when we offered to pay the rent for them. Thus, the children had to commute from the country by bus for one week. Time, however, was not spent in idleness. We have now canned over 360 quarts of fruit and vegetables besides making a lot of jelly. God gave a good harvest this year. Some canning was done for half share, so the total canned was about 400 quarts plus jam and pickles.

During this time of resting we have appeared before audiences forty-four times. Mission interest appears keen everywhere. People may be more reluctant in attending week night meetings, but the interest is evident. Four addresses were given week nights to non-church organizations with the most inspiring response. In these days we need to have a very positive message and show the world where we stand.

One is reluctant in giving any impression of America so soon after returning on furlough. We might mention though that we were amazed the first night in New York when we noticed that no blackout was being observed. We had blackouts in Champa every night (and rigid, too) from May 15 on. Another thing which shocked us was the impression which quite a few people seem to have that if we spend a hundred billion dollars or so we will win the war. All that is necessary is to spend and spend. God seems out of the program. Fortunately, the Mennonites still believe that God rules this universe.

People have been most kind in helping us get settled. This has been a summer of showers in more ways than one. The Bethel, Missouri, people dismissed us with a "shower", and the Bethany and West Swamp people greeted us with "showers" since our return east. We thank one and all for their love and kindness. —40 South Third Street, Quakertown, Pa., September 29, 1942.

PEACE SECTION NOTE

In connection with the Civilian Bond Plan we have been getting a great many inquiries about the rate of interest and maturity dates of these alternate Civilian Bonds. This is explained in the folder but perhaps not made sufficiently clear. One should consistently keep in mind that the Treasury Department is not issuing special bonds for us. They have only agreed to make available from time to time certain of their regular offerings which are not especially for war purposes. It is thus easy to understand that one offering may be entirely different from another. The Civilian Bond Committee aims to select such issues as will be most suitable to our people which in a general way compare in interest rate and maturity with current war bond issues. Usually, however, the interest rate will be somewhat lower. It is impossible in advance to issue a given rate of interest or any definite maturity date.

To those congregations who have appointed solicitors among their own people, we would like to give one bit of instruction: It is imperative that the subscriber should sign his own subscription order form when sending in the order to the Provident Trust Company. One other common difficulty is that our people give the name of their local church or congregation rather than the general church affiliation. This is confusing. We urge all who are making out subscription forms to give the general church affiliation rather than the local church. —J. W. H.

On October 9 the Civilian Bond Committee authorized Provident Trust Company of Philadelphia to invest all funds then on hand in 2 per cent United States of America Treasury Bonds of 1950-52. This particular offering was, however, not available in $50 denominations. Therefore, only subscriptions of $100 and higher could be invested in this offering. A total of $233,600 was used in this issue. Subscribers of $100 or higher whose subscriptions were with Provident Trust Company before the evening of October 9 should be receiving their registered bonds shortly. As of October 22 there was again available at Provident Trust Company a total of $113,650. —O. O. M.

CPS Camps

In Behalf of the Camp Dining Tables

In order to aid the dieticians of the Mennonite camps to achieve uniformity and to meet government standards of diet under increasing food prices the Mennonite Central Committee has secured the services of Mrs. Ralph Hernley, dietician at the Howard, Pennslyvania, camp to tour the camps.

Mrs. Hernley's work will extend into the winter months and will call for a tour of camps throughout the country. At each camp a survey will be made of food problems with a view of solving them in the light of good dietary standards and greatest economy.

The Conscientious Objector in Great Britian

From a bulletin of the Central Board of Conscientious Objectors in London it is learned that the number of men who have applied to be registered as C. O.'s in this war is nearly four times as great as the total for the last war.

Until July 4, 1942, a total of 50,750 men had been heard by local tribunals in the British Isles. 2,595 or 5.1% were given total exemption; 18,888 or 37.2% were given conditional exemption; 14,785 or 29.1% were assigned non-combatant military service; 14,509 or 28.6% were denied all claims as C. O.'s and inducted into the straight military service.

Camp Population

Following are the Mennonite-administered camps and their respective enrollments as of October 15, 1942:

No. 4	Grottoes, Virginia	110
No. 5	Colorado Springs, Colorado	152
No. 8	Marietta, Ohio	68
No. 18	Denison, Iowa	153
No. 20	(Sideling Hill) Wells Tannery, Pa.	110
No. 22	Henry, Illinois	132
No. 24	Hagerstown, Md.	132

Camp Briefs

On October 21 a carload of 39 boys arrived at the Hill City Camp in South Dakota from Medaryville, Indiana. On October 23 a total of 98 new assignees arrived at the Hill City Camp. Sister Edna Peters of Kansas is the nurse-matron of this new camp.

The Marlboro State Mental Hospital at Freehold, N. J., is the newest hospital to be opened for Mennonite boys. Twenty-five boys from two mid-western camps will be assigned to this hospital.

THE WORD OF GOD

"FOR THE WORD of God is quick and powerful and sharper than any two edged sword." Hebrews 4:12.

Today we hear of tools of force
And implements of might,
Their weight is measured by the ton,
Their speed nigh swift as sight,
They shake the earth beneath our feet—
Great structures overthrow,
And tho their strength seems limitless,
A greater power we know!

For what excells that matchless power
Which takes a shiftless man
And by transforming grace can bring
His soul to life again?
So let man's might in "multi-tons"
Go thundering o'er the sod,
We'll glory in superior strength—
The quickening Word of God!

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

SOIL EROSION AND SIN

Experts on the matter of soil erosion tell us that in the United States over 35,000,000 acres of land have been completely destroyed for agricultural purposes; that the top soil of an additional 125,000,000 acres has been removed; and that another 100,000,000 acres are starting toward depletion. This means that the equivalent of one million 160-acre farms have been destroyed or are seriously threatened at the present time by soil erosion due to careless farming and deforestation.

The Subtlety of Sin

Most of us paid little attention to the matter of soil erosion, until the acuteness of the situation forced itself upon our attention by the top soil of Kansas and Nebraska farms blowing on the office desks of New York merchants and bankers. We are at last doing something about it only after a tremendous amount of damage is done. This is what we do in so many realms of our lives. We go to the dentist after the tooth is decayed; we see a doctor after a dangerous disease has broken down our health. There is something strangely similiar in the nature of soil erosion and sin.

Sin operates in a sinister fashion. It seeps in through the unprotected crannies of our spiritual walls. It begins in a small way in unnoticed and unfelt places. It gradually eats away at the heart of our vital spiritual tissues, destroying our entire moral fibre and eventually our whole spiritual vitality. The treachery of sin is that it goes on destroying and undermining in an undramatic and subtle way making us believe that we are perfectly whole and healthy.

Soil Erosion Is Subtle

In this sense soil erosion is like sin. It operates in an unnoticed way. Unless the good soil is adequately protected by proper amounts of grass, shrubs, and trees it will be washed away, a little at a time until gradually all of the fertile soil is removed. The earth which remains is then barren and unproductive just as is the life that has been undermined by sin. This is exactly what has happened to millions of acres of good earth all over the world. That which God has given us to be good stewards over has been allowed to be destroyed or to be made unfruitful. We have violated God's trust. The millions of acres which have been allowed to become unproductive bear the mark of unfaithful stewards. God said, ". . . for the land is mine; for ye are strangers and sojourners with me." (Lev. 25:23) We have brought a curse upon the land by our ignorance, neglect, greed and oppression.

C. P. S. and S. C. S.

I believe that one reason why many people do not think soil conservation is of national importance is because it is not as dramatic, colorful, and momentarily exciting as some other forms of national service. Viewed from a long time point of view, which is always God's view, soil conservation is not only nationally important, it is divinely important. To preserve millions of acres of fertile soil from becoming barren desert lands, as has happened in the ancient Tigris and the Euphrates valleys, in China and in North Africa and in various areas in America, is indeed important. It is preserving the soil that man may till it, that he may prosper and replenish it, that he may make a garden out of it, that seems to have been God's purpose for man from the beginning.

RELIEF

A MONTH IN THE CHACO

Bro. Vernon Schmidt's October 8 letter gives a diary of his activities for the month of September in the Chaco of Paraguay:

Sept. 1. Had a "schultz" meeting in Philadelphia about the work on this road project—whether or not they will cooperate; answer: "We wish to do so."

Sept. 2. Went to Menno Colony, "Versammelong" in Somerfeld for same purpose; answer was the same there, also.

Sept. 3. Dr. John and I went to Dorf 11 to see the new church being built there, and to see some others, also.

Sept. 5. Mr. Harder, from Menno, Mr. Legiehn, and I had a talk about the division of work between the two colonies and the time to start work.

Sept. 6. Church in Philadelphia, then in p. m. watched Indians play a sort of "hockey."

Sept. 8-12. Made another trip along road to investigate another shortcut near Poz Azul; but land is entirely too low to make a road.

Sept. 13. Had a Song-Fest in Philadelphia. Whole day of singing. In evening, John and I heard a group of Indians chanting, as for a sick man, so we went to their camp nearby, and watched the "medicine man" draw the "evil spirit" from the sick man! (Did he get well? I do not know).

Sept. 14-16. Helped John with some routine work in hospital.

Sept. 17. John and I went on trip to an old Chaco war battleground; saw lots of their fortifications and half a dozen old skeletons lying there.

Sept. 18-20. Around Philadelphia. Nothing special.

Sept. 21-24. Worked some around Hoffnungsfeld, clearing the proposed road. Rained some while there —enough that some of the colonists could plow, so there will be no more work on the road now, I guess.

Sept. 26. Attended a wedding in the afternoon. After that, John and I were invited to N. Siemens for coffee, along with the students of the Bible School, which had its closing program this evening in Philadelphia.

Sept. 27. Church in Philadelphia in afternoon, most of the patients on whom John and Herbert Schmidt had operated came to the hospital for tea, and we took a picture of the whole group.

Sept. 28-30. Doing a little more investigation on Palosantos oils.

For Winter in France

Bro. J. N. Byler's September 25 letter from Lyon, France, gives a hopeful picture regarding food supplies for the children's colonies as they approach winter. Food distribution through the several canteens is also promising.

A paragraph of Bro. Byler's letter tells of securing 880 pounds of artificial wool from Switzerland. The wool will be knitted into children's garments. Quoting from the letter: "If we succeed in doing this I am sure it will be a blessing to many this winter."

The 21,000,000 middle class families in America are classified by the Wine Review as follows:

27 per cent are morally dry
22 per cent prefer beer or hard liquor
5 per cent already consume wine "heavily"
46 per cent consume wine infrequently or in small amounts.

THE WESTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE LOAN LIBRARY

Recently the Loan Library has added to its collection eighty new books. Since the days grow shorter and the evenings longer, we urge our churches to order books for use among their members. The library circulated over 800 books last year. This number shuold be at least tripled during the coming year.

A considerable number of the eighty new books were donated to the library. Even non-Mennonites have contributed gladly to this collection, because they considered the Loan Library to be a very valuable means of enriching our churches.

If non-Mennonites take this attitude, our own members certainly should be increasingly eager to build up our library. There are many homes in which there are books which are not used any more and have become a burden to the housewife. Please, send these in to the Loan Library which will set them, if possible, into circulation.

Address your packages or letters to: The Loan Library, North Newton, Kansas.

THE LATE COMERS

Everek R. Storms

She always gets to school by nine,
She's never late you know;
No matter if it's rain or shine
Or how the winds may blow.
Now Sunday Schools don't start till ten,
The bells begin to chime;
But it's just a little different then.
And she's seldom there on time.

He's never late for work you know,
Of course that wouldn't do;
And yet he has so far to go,
It's quite a walk, 'tis true.
The weather may be hot or cool,
He's always there by eight;
But when it comes to Sunday School,
Somehow he's always late.

The fact'ry starts at sev'n o'clock,
And everybody's there;
Sometimes they have to run a block,
But they make it, I declare.
And when it is a baseball game,
They have no time to fool;
But then, somehow it's not the same
For Church or Sunday School.

Imagine saying to your boss,
"Don't think I mean to shirk,
But we had company at our house
So I was late for work."
Say! If we can get to work all week
By seven, eight, or nine,
We surely ought to get to Church
And Sunday School on time!

My Church

Deep in my heart I know that the Church is of God. That in spite of human frailties she has brought blessings untold to all generations, including my own. That she has made my community and my country a better place in which to live, to work, to establish a home, and to rear my children. That I would not want to live or die in a land where no church spires point its people heavenward.

I also know that the Church continues to live triumphantly even when men and nations reject her by indifference or open hostility.

In this knowledge I gladly give myself to my Church and offer her my loyal support by intelligent membership, regular attendance, generous giving, ardent prayer, and devoted service.

The Church welcomes you!

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Herbert E. Miller, Deer Creek, Oklahoma

NOVEMBER 15—"Get thee out of thy country—from kindred—father's house—unto the land that I will show thee. And I will make of thee a great nation and make thy name great." Gen. 12:1, 2.

God spoke these words to Abram, later called Abraham. It must have been a wonderful experience to walk by faith in God, not knowing beforehand where to go, but to journey in full confidence that God would watch, protect, and guide. God gave Abraham great promises which he never fully realized in his day, but Abraham believed every word that was promised, and it was counted to him for righteousness. When God said, "I Will," Abraham never doubted. The Scripture is full of God's promises. Some have been fulfilled, some are being fulfilled, and some are yet to be fulfilled. So let us walk in peace and simple faith before God. God fulfills all his promises, so what a joy is ours to search the Scripture to find them.

NOVEMBER 16—"And Pharaoh said, who is Jehovah that I should hearken unto his voice to let Israel go? I know not Jehovah and moreover I will not let Israel go." Exod. 5:2.

A most tragic statement of a man whose life ended in a great tragedy—he didn't know God. Moses had asked Pharaoh to let his people go. Pharaoh recognized no higher authority than himself. Today the heart of God is still deeply touched in compassion for the thousands who also say, "I know not God," and "moreover" they will continue to live in ungodly ways. In the judgment day these will look upon Jesus whom they crucify, but the day of salvation will be past. So, as we hear His voice today, let us not harden our hearts. Jesus said, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, take up his cross, and follow me." Matt. 16:24.

NOVEMBER 17—"Be strong and of good courage; be not affrighted, neither be thou dismayed, for Jehovah thy God is with thee withersoever thou goest." Josh. 1:9.

Joshua was a mighty leader, because he obeyed God. Success in life to him meant carrying out God's commissions. God had promised him and the Israelites the land of Canaan, and Joshua said, "Let's go and possess it," because he believed in God. He entertained no doubts, because he believed in God. He knew he would have victory in life, because he believed in God. Joshua found happiness in his work, because he believed in God. He was strong and of good courage, because he believed in God. Faith in God dispels fear, anxiety, and despair, or it isn't real faith in God.

NOVEMBER 18—"Be patient—Brethren." Jas. 5:7a.

"Go slow, my friend, and walk with God
As Enoch did of old.
Your life, as pleasing, then may oft
In future years be told.
As measured by eternal things,
God never can be slow,
Yet measured by our thoughtless haste,
Seems often to be so.

"Take time to pray—to let God speak,
Our will in His combine.
Take time for reverence to burn
And all our dross refine.
Our soul's enrichment let us seek
Nor haste God in His plan.
Why hurry so? Be patient while
God makes a better man."

NOVEMBER 19—"And that repentence and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations." Luke 24:47.

A pastor lectured to a group of theological students in a New England school. He stressed personal evangelism, and they agreed with him that personal work was very important. However, they regretted that there was so little opportunity for such work in their school. The pastor later talked with the elevator man and with the janitor and found that neither had heard a word about evangelism in ten years.

"A charge to keep I have,
A God to glorify;
A never-dying soul to save,
And fit it for the sky."

NOVEMBER 20—"Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God and of Jesus our Lord." II Peter 1:2.

Doctor Lindsay of Boston gives this definition of grace, "Grace is giving to someone what he needs instead of what he deserves." Often we forget that Jesus came to give us something which could not be found in the world, but was needed daily. Jesus brought with him from God's storehouse of mercy and love, a title for each one of us, namely, an heir of God through Christ Jesus. He brought a promise and assurance of eternal life for "whosoever believeth." Also such gifts as love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance. All these gifts are ours for the asking. Thus, may grace and peace be multiplied to us, and we experience the joy of telling others the "good news" of the gospel.

NOVEMBER 21—"Mine house shall be called a house of prayer for all people." Isa. 56:7.

Brother John was a man of God who loved to go to the village chapel to worship. A friend asked him one day what attraction there was in seeing the same place, the same people, singing the same songs— John interrupted, "Listen, my friend, you like to fish, and you go to the same river, sit on the same bank, cast your hook in the same water. But the water that is here today will have passed on into the ocean tomorrow, so you really always fish in fresh water. So also, everytime I go up to the chapel the Lord has something fresh for me." Thus, we pray for our spiritual needs, "Give us Lord our daily bread," and He has a fresh loaf for us each day. Our soul needs daily, systematic nourishment from God, and his table is always spread. To partake of His blessings we need to pray.

Can We Follow Christ in a Total War?

As the totality of war continues to press closer and closer, we are almost overwhelmed by the problems of following the way of love given by our Christ. But to these problems we must find an answer, for never before have we had such an opportunity to really put into practice the things Jesus taught. If we are ever again to proclaim Christ to the nations we can not now reject His way of living.

It has been said that we too hope and pray for a United Nation's victory, but God forbid that we pray for anything but a cessation of hostilities! How could we pray for the destruction of those to whom we must bring Christ? How could we pray God to use our evil to overcome evil when He has commanded us to overcome evil with good?

They say that our corn and wheat—the clothing we produce—the taxes we pay—the natural resources we preserve,—all we contribute to the war effort. If that is true we are sorry, but how could we deny food to anyone? Are we to let the soldiers starve? Would not that be a denial of the very thing in which we believe? And are we to let the little children and their mothers suffer? Is it not they who would be the first to hunger if there were no food? Would not they starve before soldiers lacked food?

There are those who have struggled with this problem only to accept the medical corps as an answer. But this we must reject, for we can not give a life consecrated to Christ to an army whose very existence is a denial of the way of life Christ taught. And when we say we enter the medical corps to save lives we fool ourselves; actually we keep another soldier from saving lives. We send him to the front where he can take lives which we will never save.

We have been told that by being conscientious objectors we are confused. They say that refusing to take part in war does not mean that we do not take sides, but that this very refusal constitutes giving positive aid to the enemy. It sounds a bit queer. We had always supposed that the "aid" we give the Axis when we do not participate in the war waged by the United Nations is completely offset by the "aid" we give the United Nations when we do not take part in the war waged by the Axis.

We not only can follow Christ in a total war, but there is no other time when truly following Him will mean as much as it does now. Let us not hide our light under a bushel.

IN HIS STEPS

"The road is too rough," I said. "Dear Lord,
There are stones that hurt me so."
And He said, "Dear child I understand;
I walked it long ago."

"But there's a cool, green path," I said.
"Let me walk there for a time."
"No, child," He gently answered me,
"The green road does not climb."

"My burden," I said, "is far too great;
How can I bear it so?"
"My child," said He, "I remember its weight—
I carried my cross, you know."

"But," I said, "I wish there were friends with me,
Who would make my way their own."
"Ah! yes," He said, "Gethsemane
Was hard to face alone."

And so I climbed the stony path,
Content at last to know
That where my Master had not gone,
I would not need to go.

And strangely then I found new friends:
The burden grew less sore
As I remembered, long ago
He went that way before.

Unstable Woman

by Ruth King Duerksen

As the quiet stillness of the early night settled down upon the earth the grip of his trouble seemed to close upon his soul. It had come so suddenly that it seemed impossible. He had known that sometimes there were disagreements between the senior partners of the firm, but he had never dreamed how serious the contention might be. Evidently the trouble had been smouldering for months. One partner had been dishonest. There was a big scandal, and quite unexpectedly the company declared bankruptcy and Albert Harding, along with many other men, had lost his position. The newspapers had unmercifully published it, adding their bit to make the story more attractive. The entire company was disgraced.

What was Faith going to say? There had been a time when she would have tried to understand, a time when she would have been sympathetic. But now what would she say? How would she face her friends? Would she condemn him for what he could not avoid? Would she grow more distant? For sometime Albert had felt the strain tighten between them. They could no longer enjoy the same things. How long could they go on like this? He knew there must either be a mend or a break. He had tried to avoid thinking of it. He had hoped that he could rise in his own way to meet the esteem of his wife, but now what chance was there?

"My God," he cried, "help me to be as strong as you would have me be. Help me to do what you would have me to do. Just help me!" he pleaded; "help me!" and he knew that God would help.

When Faith had heard his story her resentment was very bitter. She was unmerciful in her condemnation. Albert did not relax until she threw herself exhausted upon the bed and fell into a troubled sleep.

There would have been a fairly substantial reserve of finances if Faith's new standards of living had not made such deep inroads on their savings account. But the situation was now extremely critical. There was only one resource to fall back on, and that was his father's farm. It was in Albert's name and the renter was leaving. Faith declared indignantly that she would not be a farmer's wife, and that if Albert took one step toward the farm she would go to the city and earn her own living.

In the next few days Faith fought a battle within herself. The future of her family lay in the balances. She must do the weighing. Even though she was desperately angry because Albert had lost his position, through no fault of his own, and although she hated the idea of going to the farm, she knew that that was the thing to do. She knew her hasty decision was not wise. Her duty lay with her husband and children. "Of course I'll go with them, but I'll hate it. I'll hate it!" she told herself vehemently.

Plans were being made for the change. The house in Rosedale was to be sold and the money used to buy implements and live stock for the farm. To sell the house was the hardest part of it all for Albert, for this was the little home that he and Faith had chosen before their marriage. It was across the front doorstep that he had carried her after their honeymoon. But he clung to the faith of his mother, and the adage she used to repeat in trying times was a stronghold for him. He could hear her say it now, "Keep your head up, but your heart bowed; the Lord holds the plans." But Faith had nothing to which to cling. She kept their new plans from her city friends. She tried to deceive them into thinking that all was well. She was hoping suddenly to drop out of existence as far as they were concerned, and disappear completely without any of them finding out that she was to be a farm wife.

The house was sold and the packing well on the way when the Hardings received a surprise visit from Mr. and Mrs. Strauss. Not knowing that all was not as usual they were bewildered at the upheaval that they found in the cottage. Faith explained nervously that it was housecleaning time. It was a weak explanation, and she could not meet Mrs. Strauss's searching eyes.

"Faith Harding, you are lying to me. Tell me what is going on here!" Mrs. Strauss was not adept at concealing her feelings. It was Albert who came to the rescue and explained the entire situation to the horrified guests.

Mrs. Strauss turned upon him in a rage. "Do you mean to tell me, Albert Harding, that you are kidnapping our dear Faith and taking her away to be your slave on a dirty farm like a common servant?"

"I only mean to say that we are moving to a farm," Albert replied evenly. "There is no kidnapping and no slavery connected with it."

"Perhaps not in your opinion," she screamed at him. "You are only a common sodbuster, but Faith is a lady. You have no idea what effect drudgery would have upon her. To you want to kill her? Do you want to torture her little by little until there is no life left in her?"

Faith rose in alarm at the savagery with which Mrs, Strauss accused her husband. How dared she speak like that to Albert.

"Mrs. Strauss—" she protested.

"Now you be still and keep out of this, Faith, my child. This husband of yours has been a fungus growth upon your social life long enough, and I mean to put an end to his nonesense right now; how many times have you told me that you couldn't do things just because of your husband?" Faith colored vividly. It was true she had been disrespectful to Albert when among her friends.

When Mrs. Strauss had tongue-lashed Albert until her fury had partially abated, she turned upon Faith who was sitting in a chair weeping. "As for you, my poor little child," she gurgled, "you are quickly to get together a few things that are your personal belongings and come with us to the city. Mr. Strauss has been wanting a capable person to help him with his music, and you are just the one suited to that task." Faith opened her eyes wide in astonishment. Albert did not look her way. "Hurry," she insisted. "We have no time to waste." Faith turned imploring eyes toward her husband. He was gazing out the window.

A queer fear struck her heart. Perhaps Albert would be glad if she did go to the city. Maybe Albert hated her. Maybe the boys would be glad if she would leave them. She felt very limp and helpless.

"Faith!" Mrs. Strauss commanded firmly. Faith arose slowly from the chair. She looked again toward Albert. His gaze continued out the window. She turned quickly and ran up the steps.

Packing was very simple, for already the suitcases were lined against the wall and some of them were partly filled. Faith quickly folded her choice dresses. Her nervous fingers ran wildly over the contents of the dresser drawers. Her mind refused to give her advice. It was obliterated by the sudden confusion of feelings and events. Two small suitcases snapped shut. Faith viewed the partly dismantled room with eyes that saw nothing. In the hall she stopped and set her suitcases at the head of the stairs.

"I must kiss the kiddies good night," she said mechanically. Her ice-cold hands opened the door quietly.

"Do bless Mamma and help Daddy," prayed Max, who with Teddy was kneeling before the open window.

"And take those bad people away, please," Teddy supplied; "and don't let them take Mummy along."

" 'Cause they talked ugly to our Daddy," Max broke in again. "Dear Jesus, help Mamma love Daddy."

"And us, too," Teddy finished.

Faith turned away quickly and quietly, blinded by her own tears. She grasped for the stair rail and stumbled down the steps. Mr. and Mrs. Strauss had retired to their automobile. They preferred that to the company of Albert Harding. Albert had not stirred from the chair he had been sitting in. His eyes were still glued to the window. Faith hesitated in the doorway. Then slowly, but resolutely she crossed the room to where her husband sat.

"Albert—I'm sorry," she said simply.

Albert turned his hot, tortured eyes toward his wife. "It's all right, Faith, if that's the way you want it. If you can't be happy with me, then go where you can be happy." He rose from his chair and held out his hand to her. "Good-by, Faith. Where are your suitcases? I'll take them to the car for you."

"B—but," Faith faltered, "there are no suitcases."

"You aren't taking any of your things?" Albert asked.

"No—you see I—I'm not going."

"What?" he cried with a flush of life overtaking his voice. "You mean to say—you mean—?"

"Yes, I mean I'm going to stay—if you will let me. I'm through with the city crowd. May I stay?"

"May you—may you? Oh, Faith—"

"Don't hold me so tightly, Albert, dear. I must go tell the Strausses; then I'll be back —for keeps." Faith slipped quickly from the room. Albert's eyes followed her. There was an argument at the car. Would Faith yet give in? No, his little wife was coming back to him. Albert smiled as the limousine left the driveway with a sudden lurch. "Oh, God," he breathed passionately, "thank you for helping me —and Faith."

At the window upstairs two little boys smiled happily through their tears.

SENIOR DEPARTMENT

SERIES: OUR MENNONITE HERITAGE

Mennonite Principles and Ways of Living.

Deut. 28:1-6; Ps. 118

I. Worship Service

(1) Songs: "O Power of Love, All Else Transcending," No. 517; "How Great, Almighty, is Thy Kindness," No. 516. (2) Reading of leading topic, prayer leader's remarks. (3) Group singing of chorales found in Hymnary Nos. 505-574. (4) Offering for Home Missions.

II. Leader's Introduction:

Long ago a Dutch statesman called the Mennonites "The Honeybees of the State." Our people have been known as being industrious and frugal.

Their beautiful farms both in the East and the West in the United States attest to this, also the few families who have been poverty stricken, as well as the well-to-do, successful men who have chosen a business career. Their honesty has been so highly respected that their simple verbal promise was sometimes taken in lieu of a written promissory note. It is a challenge to all of us to live up to this heritage, and we appreciate it if a business man of our day says, "I have never yet received a bad check from a C.O."

Another distinguishing mark worthy of keeping and cultivating was the "simple life." Simplicity in dress, in household furniture, in habits of eating, in manners, in church services, but all the same, nothing slipshod but rather truly genuine, distinguished their way of living. One may, perhaps, even speak of their simple faith and trust in God, their child-like dependence on Him and His care.

They were known as a kindly, helpful people. Anyone in their midst who suffered distress and hardship was taken care of by interested sympathetic neighbors. The needs of the world found a ready ear in our circles as the large offerings and contributions for China and India relief and for other causes testify.

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

1. The Mennonites in the relation to the state. 2. The "Simple Life"—what was it like—shall we keep it in our day? 3. The "oath" and the "ban" as practiced through the years. 4. Peace and non-resistance, what do these principles mean?

IV. For Discussion:

1. Why should Church and State be separated? What do we owe to the State? 2. How far is the Sermon on the Mount to be taken literally and used as a way of life in our day? 3. What can we do to "seek peace and pursue it"?

V. Facts for Study:

About the relation to civil government, Menno Simons says in part: "The office of the Magistrate is ordained of God . . . we have ever obeyed them when not contrary to the Word of God and we intend to do so all our lives. . . . We pray for the imperial majesty, kings, lords, princes and all in authority . . ."

Our fathers held that that the church was a voluntary organization, composed of those of a regenerated heart. Political force could not dictate in matters of religious faith. The Church was not to be governed by the State. It was to be kept clean by means of the Ban, excluding unfaithful members from the fellowship of the church. The Bible was the sole source of faith and practice.

The New Testament taught them to love even their enemies and so it was wrong to take life, not only as an individual, but also by military force and by judicial process. Jesus said, "Swear not at all," and so they took no oath. Baptism was to be administered only upon confession of faith and hence only adults could be baptized. The Christian must live a life separated from the world.

They were faithful even to the point of death. Many of them laid down their lives in the persecutions which they suffered in the various countries through which they spread. For the sake of maintaining freedom from military service many of our fathers were willing to suffer loss of property and to migrate from their homeland into another country. Their emphasis on non-resistance and the peace principle has gained new attention in the life of our day.

VI. Food for Thought:

No vision and you perish,
No ideal and you're lost;
Your heart must ever cherish
Some faith at any cost;
Some hope, some dream to cling to,
Some rainbow in the sky,
Some melody to sing to,
Some service that is high.

INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT

Mission Study

We trust that many of the Intermediates have had a chance to read the book, "With Christ On the Edge of the Jungles" by Missionary S. T. Moyer. It is our intention to plan three studies on this book. Most of the work will need to be done by you. We are merely suggesting points for study. If possible, have a large wall map of our India Mission field for these meetings or secure the small maps of India from the General Conference Literature Committee at the small price of two cents each.

Before you begin the study of the book we would suggest tiat your pastor or superintendent tell you about the homes and education of Rev. and Mrs. Moyer. pp. 56 and 57

1. Home—On the Edge of the Jungles—Basna, India.

"God was our all-seeing Protector. His spirit was our guide. Christ was our abiding presence on the edge of this jungle."

A. Describe the jungle on which camp was first established. pp. 1-2.

B. Tell of the difficulties experienced in building the first mission home in the jungle. pp. 3-6.

2. The Call—go to the outcastes

A. The first pioneer, probably from the English Baptist Mission had been preaching to only the upper classes of people as he followed the century old tradition of his mission. God later brought to him the call to preach to the lowly and the poor. It was very difficult for the missionaries to obey this call.

Tell of the inner struggles of these missionaries until they were willing to go.

B. Tell the story of Habil and how his life influenced his village. pp. 8-11.

C. Because they obeyed God's call there came into being in that area in the span of thirty years a church of nine thousand men, women, and children.

LEARNING TO SERVE Matt. 20:25-28, John 13: 1-5

"A Practical Meeting"

How true it is that God's children often forget to help others. The following story is told of Sammie: Sammie lived in a slum section. He was taken to Sunday School by a kind Christian and later accepted Christ as his heavenly father, in whom he had all trust. All his neighbors knew he was a Christian. On a certain cold day he sat shivering on the curb of the street. He was cold because he was barefooted and ill-clothed. A neighbor said to him, "If God loves you, why doesn't he keep you warm?" The little fellow thought for a moment and then, with tears, said, "I guess he tells someone to help me but somebody forgets."

David Livingstone, the great missionary who spent thirty years in darkest Africa, gave God his undivided service. His prayer was that he give his whole self completely to the Master. His life challenges us today to do no less under more favorable circumstances.

Joyful service is one which Christians render whose hearts are filled with happiness serving the Lord. A certain Chinaman could not be persuaded to accept Christ. Then one day he came to the missionary and asked to be told of his religion. "I have seen how joyous it makes you and your people, and have heard the laughter of you and your countrymen. Our land needs more people filled with joyous Christians."

The Question Bee

1. Why can we not be selfish if we want to serve? 2. How can we serve in our church? 3. Why can't we serve God and the world at the same time? 4. What is our reward for service?

The Prayer List

1. Pray for a humble heart and spirit.
2. Service that is obedient to God.
3. Love that constrains us to do God's bidding.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

A. S. BECHTEL

November 22, 1942

MOTIVES THAT STRENGTHEN FAMILY LIFE

Exod. 2:1-4, Josh. 24:14, 15, Eph. 5:28-31, 6:1-4

"The four cardinal units of society are the family, the school, the church, and the state. The latter three units are deficient in any country where the motives of family life are weak. The family is the original of the four units and builds itself into the superstructure of the school, the church, and the state." "Christian leaders in America today realize that the American home must be strengthened with the power of Christian faith if America is really to be strong." (Christian S. S. Quarterly). As the years go by there are changes developing in all the members of a family. These changes will either strengthen or weaken the family life. They may grow away from each other or they may grow closer together. The four lesson references present four motives that will help to strengthen family life.

Similar Religious Background of Parents, Exod. 2:1-4

The father and mother of Moses were both of the tribe of Levi. They had a similar social and religious background and similar moral and religious ideals. They could well unite their lives around the things which they held in a common view-point. This is essential for a happy and harmonious home. Miriam's loving watchfulness over her brother (vs. 4) depicts another element of strength in family life.

Family to Serve the Lord, Josh. 24:14, 15

Joshua had given a brief history of God's goodness to the Israelites. He now admonishes them to stand in awe of the Lord God, to serve Him loyally, and to renounce all idolatry. Some of the Israelites had taken part in the animal worship of Egypt. Now, having been delivered out of Egypt, these idols are to be put away forever. Joshua gave a direct command. He did not offer a choice between God and idolatry. "Choose ye this day," (vs. 15) either serve God or else refuse to serve Him and be counted as His enemies. God has given us our wills and we are free to choose or reject Him. Parents must make a choice and the spirit of Joshua should always direct them in their determined choosing for themselves and family.

Love of the Man for His Wife, Eph. 5:28-31

Paul is illustrating his conception of the union of Christ and his Church by the marriage relationship. Paul says that men ought to love their wives as they love themselves, their own bodies. Husband and wife are "one flesh" (vs. 31), so ordained of God. The two are as one in heart and spirit—united in love for one another. The husband shall show as tender a love for his wife as Christ shows for the Church. True love ought to be the basis for every marriage. It will take love and patience to meet the problems satisfactorily that will arise in married life. However, in the midst of these, love will grow when husband and wife accept the responsibilities which each one should carry. They "shall be joined together" —not merely be attracted to each other—"glued or cemented together, and nothing but death should dissolve their affection." (Clarke).

Responsibility of Children and Parents, Eph. 6:1-4

Paul assumes that parents act as Christians in exercising their authority. Children are to obey them with loyalty to Christ as a motive. The child is to obey as far as he can remain a Christian while obeying. Such obedience honors the parents, and the general tendency of it is toward lengthening of life and prosperity. Parents should be reasonable with children and not irritate them to resentment and anger (vs. 4).

A large place must be given to the influence of religion in the factors which strengthen family of life. Pure and undefiled religion affects the whole life. It defeats many influences which would weaken and disrupt the home. Religion in the heart gives a disposition to forgive others. Christians can trust each other. Their faith in God gives them strength to meet all situations in the home.

Why is the caution in Eph. 6:4 addressed to the fathers only?

ON THE WITNESS STAND

Two accusations being hurled at the Church are: (1) The Church has lost its message; it has turned away from the fundamentals of the Christian faith. (2) Members of the Christian Church are inconsistent, not proving by their lives their faith. These I have heard again and again in my work among lost men and women. These accusations have come to me from unbelievers and from those who do not hold fast to the fundamentals. Inconsistencies make it hard here and in every other place to win men and women for Christ. I am convinced that a departure from the fundamental truths of the Christian faith is the cause of the second accusation. Men and women who have not been born again from above cannot live the Christian life. All of this makes me sad as I see so many souls reject Christ and go onward to hell.

SALEM MENNONITE CHURCH

Wisner, Nebraska

“Blessed is the Lord, Blessed is the man that feareth the Lord, that delighteth greatly in commandants.”

There is not so much to report, since we are so few members left. However, I will let everybody know that we are still alive and continuing to keep up our spirit in helping and doing what we can.

During the summer months we had services every other Sunday. These were delivered by Hugo Mierau, of Henderson, Nebraska. He is a Bethel student and is preparing himself for the ministry. We understand that he will be ordained very soon, he is a very bright young man and has a good deliverency. We wish him success and faithfulness in serving the Lord and the good cause.

We also had a few ministers this year, visiting us and serving us with the word of God. Rev. Friesen, of Henderson, Nebraska, was here. He brought us a very timely and helpful message at the morning service. We also had communion.

Thanksgiving Day will soon be here. Many years ago the Psalmist wrote, “Offer unto God Thanksgiving and pay thy vows unto the most High.” Such living produces great results. And now as we move on to Thanksgiving Day let’s plan to express our gratitude. Cultivation of such thoughts will bring us to the realization that there is much to be thankful for, and that when we express our gratitude in one way or another both we and the recipient benefit. We here at Wisner have much to be thankful for. We have such a wonderful corn crop; no drought nor grasshoppers this year. May we all be faithful in helping build up the Kingdom of God.

« « JOTTINGS » »

—Marietta, Ohio, C.P.S. campees saved during a six month period a total of $202.16 for European relief by having a frugal meal each Saturday noon. The contribution per man for this period averages about $2.70. The reporter writes, "We scarcely missed the extra food—possibly felt better without it. One can only conjecture what could be done by a camp, by all C.P.S. camps, even by the church as a whole, if individuals would determine that others shall be fed before they could enjoy the tightening of their own waist lines."

—Princeton Plan: "C.P.S. leaders and leaders of pacifist colleges have felt that future relief workers should have opportunity to study the climate, natural resources, topography, social conditions, etc., of foreign areas where relief may be carried on. This feeling has led to the proposed "Princeton Plan" which is awaiting Selective Service approval. Under the plan some twenty-five or thirty qualified men in Civilian Public Service camps will be selected to do research work in the library of Princeton University. They will prepare monographs covering the foreign areas, and this material will be sent to C.P.S. camps and to several pacifist colleges where interested groups will assimilate the material... Both General Hershey and Colonel Kosch are enthusiastic about the plan and hope to see it in progress by Christmas." —Whispering Pines —Four inches of snow lay on the ground when some of the new campees of the Hills City C.P.S. (Black Hills) camp arrived.

—Dr. J. E. Hartzler, former president of Goshen and Bethel Colleges, one-time president of Witmarsum Seminary, former lecturer for the American University and the Near East School of Theology, Beirut, Syria, and now lecturer in the Department of Systematics in the Hartford Seminary Foundation, spoke at the Marietta, Ohio, camp on October 24 and 25. Rev Donovan Smucker spoke there on October 7.

—Delvin Kirchhofer, the educational and assistant director of the Grottoes, Virginia, C.P.S. camp is to sail for Switzerland, where he is to open a central relief station to administer aid to the needy areas of war-impoverished Europe. Brother Kirchhofer speaks the Swiss language and is single.

—Elmer Ediger, educational director of the Weeping Water, Nebracka, C.P.S. camp has left for the training school to be conducted by the M.C.C. at Akron, Pa., and Washington, D. C.

—Belton, Montana: "Late Thursday afternoon we reached our destination, Belton, Montana. Our camp, just at the foot of two fair-sized peaks, is beautifully located along the middle fork of the Flathead River. Surrounding the camp are thousands of acres of forest which were burned off about fifteen years ago. In this area young trees are now growing, with many of the old trees standing as monuments of bygone days."

—Esko Loewen, formerly of Newton, Kansas, and a graduate of Bethel College, is editor of the M.C.C. News Letter. Writing in the camp paper of Grottoes, Virginia, he says, ". . .This same spirit of calmness and fellowship has been the most impressive feature I have noticed. It impresses one greatly. It convinces me ever more that C.P.S. men are endeavoring daily to make their Christian faith a living faith which bears them through the drudge of daily toil as well as the joys of life. As the days pass, I pray this same spirit may continue to live in us, so that this life of ours may constantly give witness to the Christ we adore. Those hours of duty in the office, kitchen or project, as well as the hours of leisure in games, hobbies, relaxation or study, can be full if our hearts are right. So, regardless of what the day may bring, may we ever keep the faith."

—Campees of the Fort Collins, Colo., camp recently spent Friday afternoon and Saturday and Sunday searching for a deer-hunter who had become lost in the vicinity of Greyrock Mountain. Sunday evening, as plans were being made for the next day's search, they were informed that the body of the lost man had been found by another hunter. The man probably died from exposure and exhaustion. The General Conference of Mennonites has the largest representation in this camp with a total of sixty-four. The eighth grade is the education peak of the highest number. There are forty-seven married and 103 single men. In the occupation list of the men farming stands on top with 112 listing it as their former work. Kansas has the largest representation with forty-seven sons present. More men are age twenty-two than any other age.

—Medaryville, Indiana, C.P.S. camp: Similar to the lice control project carried on in New England by volunteers from Friends camps will be the project sponsored by the medical clinic of the University of Chicago to determine the effect of prolonged exposure at high altitudes. Two men of this camp will take part in this form of detached service. They will have to live six hours daily in a large chamber under reduced pressure and will be required to remain in the Hospital buildings twenty-four hours a day for a period of eight to ten weeks. There is no danger and only a minimum of discomfort. . . . Some twenty mothers recently came with "buttons by the gross," "patches by the yards," and "darning yarn of all hues by the mile" and repaired the boys' clothing. More than that, they brought thirty-two chickens which when all dressed in brown were most delicious.

—Rev. R. Weinbrenner brought to a close his pastorate of the Second Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, with an impressive communion service on Sunday, November 1. The congregation gave Rev. and Mrs. Weinbrenner a farewell reception with a fitting program and cafeteria-style luncheon during the preceding week. Expressions of appreciation were offered by representatives of the various organizations in our church. A farewell tea was given for Mrs. Weinbrenner by the Tabitha and Mary-Martha mission societies on another occasion. We thank the good Lord for what these dear people have meant to us, not only through Brother Weinbrenner's inspirational sermons, but also by their example in Christ-like living. May God richly reward them and continue to make them a blessing to many in their new and larger field of labor.

Bethel College, North Newton, Kansas, will celebrate its annual Homecoming, Saturday, November 7. The program for the day as planned by the Student Council features the annual Wheat Bowl football game, Bethel versus Bethany, at Athletic Park at 2:30 p. m., and the Homecoming banquet in Memorial Hall at 7 o'clock. The main speaker for the program following the banquet has not been announced as yet.

Tickets for the banquet are fifty-five cents and are now on sale. Reservations may be made by addressing: Chairman, Banquet Committee, Box 53, North Newton, Kansas.

Since this is the last Homecoming before gas rationing, a large crowd is expected.

A drive for costumes at Bethel College for the presentation of plays and pageants is being sponsored by the dramatic arts department of the school. The increased facilities of the new Memorial Hall make it possible to enlarge this department.

The costume drive committee is interested in contacting anyone who has any of the following items: ladies' clothing, men's clothing, drapes, lace curtains, hats, shoes, feathers, plumes, or costume jewelry, such as buckles, pins, beads, rings, or bracelets.

The lace curtains need not be in good condition since they will be used to make costumes.

Anyone who is interested in contributing to the drive is urged either to bring his donation to the campus or to contact Miss Winifred Regier, North Newton, Kansas.

—By the time this appears in print the editor and his wife will have ended their services to a church which has been outstanding in its faithful and bountiful support, both material and spiritual. Reluctantly we leave our work here. However, we would follow God's will in the work he has led us into. We desire the prayerful support of our reading constituency in order that this paper may be what it should be. Mail all articles and correspondence to The Mennonite, North Newton, Kansas.

—The annual Western District Conference convened this year in the spacious new Memorial Hall on the Bethel College campus, North Newton, Kansas. This was, undoubtedly, the first time that such a large conference met in a Mennonite hall so large. Those attending found it commodious and convenient, a good place to be. The Women's Association of Bethel College worked hard to serve excellent meals to the visitors who numbered nine hundred for one meal. Rev. Arnold E. Funk was re-elected as president of the conference. The conference session ran smoothly with its business matters and messages.

Drop Thy still dews of quietness
Till all our strivings cease;
Take from our souls the strain and stress,
And let our ordered lives confess
The beauty of thy peace.

OUR HOME MISSION WORK

A. J. Neuenschwander Secretary of the Home Mission Board

Baptisemal Candidates, Hoffnungsau Mennonite Church, Cuauthemoc, Chih., Mexico

The seven candidates, shown above, were baptized on August 9, 1942, by Rev. Jacob Janzen, pastor (left side). Shortly before this event Brother Janzen had been ordained as elder by Rev. J. M. Regier (right side), chairman of the Home Mission Board, who was visiting the community and the church at this time.

HOFFNUNGSAU MENNONITE CHURCH
Cuauthemoc, Chih., Mexico

While this congregation did not ask for, nor does it receive financial aid from the Home Mission Board, but because the board sponsored the trip of the chairman of the Home Mission Board to visit this congregation and officiate at the ordinance services, we feel that a brief report ought to appear in the mission numbers.

A congregation of over thirty members, with almost as many children under fourteen years of age is located at Cuauthemoc, Chih., Mexico. The spiritual leader of this group, Rev. Jacob Janzen, was not ordained as Elder, and therefore the congregation asked for an Elder to come and officiate at the baptismal services of seven young people who had been carefully prepared for this important step.

Rev. J. M. Regier, Hillsboro, Kansas, was asked to go. Since this congregation, a member of the Western District and General Conference, is so far removed from other Mennonite churches, Rev. Regier thought it would be a good step to ordain Rev. Janzen as Elder if the Home Mission Committee of the Western District and the congregation agreed to this and Rev. Janzen was willing. The Lord so led that all agreed and felt this as directed by Christ, the Great Shepherd of the Sheep.

A week of services were held before the event, and on Sunday, August 2, Rev. Jacob Janzen was ordained as Elder. All preparations for the baptismal service on the following Sunday, August 9, had been made.

With the entire congregation present and also many visitors there, Elder Janzen in joyous solemnity performed the rite of baptism, after which Rev. Regier brought the scriptural message for the occasion.

May the Lord bless this congregation and keep them true and faithful. —A. J. Neuenschwander, Sec.

MENNONITE BIBLE MISSION
Chicago, Illinois

Greetings in the name of our Master and Savior Jesus Christ, in whose name we are laboring here in the city. Having received a call to report for the fall missionary number of The Mennonite, it occurred to me that perhaps a story of the work of today would give somewhat of an insight into our work here. Before giving the day's happenings may I say here that we endeavor to carry out an all around program of evangelism, ministry to the sick and needy, teaching, and cooperation with other Christian people in the work of the kingdom of God, with due consideration for the principles of the church and the faith for which our Fathers stood and which we believe with all our heart is the right interpretation of the teaching of Christ.

The scripture for the family devotions was the story of Peter's question about the number of times he should forgive his brother. This is a good passage to start the day with as we have plenty of opportunity to practice forgiveness. May I introduce the family so that you will become better acquainted with your workers.

Esther has to go to work. She works at the Great Northern Chair Company; she is payroll clerk and has had ample opportunity to testify to the faith of the Mennonites. Especially, was this true in regard to Victory Bonds. They have, however, respected her position, and God has cleared the way. Elwina is in her fourth year high school. High school is the place for propaganda and temptation. God has preserved and led. When the class in English had to write on "Winning the Victory" she wrote an essay on "Winning the Peace." This was read in class and another victory won for Christ. Ernest and Helen are in grade school. The smallest Edith is home. When Jesus had sent away the multitude he went off to pray. This is the duty of Mother. She sends off the children to work and school and then prays and works. Today was my day for correspondence, visitation work, etc.

Included in the morning's mail that went off were—three cards to people that had been missed for some time in church. Some of these we look up while visiting, but some, as it seems, can be reached better by a card. Also included in the mail were about ninety letters containing copies of Sunday's bulletin, called the Christian Education bulletin. The cover of this was furnished by Bluffton College; the inside pages contained announcement of our Sunday School, catechism class, ladies' meeting, girls' choir, and Junior Bible Club, all activities in which Christian education has a part. These were mailed to people in the community. A letter to Bluffton College with a contribution taken on Christian Education Sunday. A letter to one of the boys in the service. There are now seven boys in camp. A letter to Miss Fast engaging her to speak here at the mission. A letter to Rev. Neuenschwander in regard to the coming twenty-fifth anniversary of the mission. This will be held in December.

Again the mail brought Sunday School quarterlies from the Mennonite Publication Office and a package of tracts from a tract supply house; also an announcement of the meeting of the women of the Historic Peace Churches.

Part of the afternoon was spent in visiting. The first place was at a home where the mother has been sick for about ten years. We need strength of faith and guidance from God in work of this type. In a recent visit at this place we learned that she had found great comfort in a poem in The Mennonite. This she had read several times, and she asked me to read it again. In the second place was also a sick woman. She has been an invalid for several years. Both find comfort in prayer and God's word.

In the evening we had our mid-week prayer service. Here we find a group of mostly women. But they are earnest in their prayer. The sick, the boys in camp, the missionaries in China and other countries are remembered, very often personally mentioned. Preparation is also made for the next Sunday School lesson.

While I am writing this late in the evening there is the cry of a drunken man next door, an elderly man standing at a back door trying to get in. He has no shirt or coat and is shivering in the cold. I tried to talk to him, but he is beyond the stage of reason. As I went in to get an old coat or sweater for him he staggered away and I could not find him. Cases of drunkenness are getting more common. There are fifty places where liquor is sold to the one church in this community!

We shall end the day's work with prayer and praise to God that He has called us out of this dark world into His glorious Fellowship.

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY PLANS MENNONITE BIBLE MISSION

Greetings in the Name of our Lord Jesus Christ! In December of this year is will be twenty-five years since the mission work at this place was started by Rev. and Mrs. Wiens and their family. A Sunday School was opened at that time. The community was not thickly settled then. Soon Sunday School was held both morning and evening. Preaching service and prayer meetings were also begun. Since then over twelve hundred people have been enrolled in the Sunday School. Some of these have come only a short time; others have come longer. About ninety have been baptized. Some of these are scattered to the far parts of our land; several are in mission work; some have not stayed faithful; again others have stayed in the community and have been faithful members for years.

Sunday morning and evening services have continued throughout the years, also the mid-week prayer meeting. This has been of great sustaining power to people who had special burdens. The work has very largely been among the poorer class of people; however, this has changed somewhat lately since so many of foreign descent have moved into the neighborhood. Now practically all are earning good wages. The foreign element has however made the work more difficult, as they are mostly Catholic and speak very much in their native tongues.

Plans are being made to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary the first week in December by holding a week of meetings. Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, secretary of the Home Mission Board, has been asked to conduct the meetings. We earnestly covet an interest in your prayers.

EVANGELISTIC AND COORDINATING WORK IN CANADIAN CHURCHES

During the months of May, June, and half of July, Rev. J. J. Esau, blind evangelist from Bluffton, Ohio, labored under the direction of the Home Mission Board in the Canadian provinces. His work was to be directed toward an evangelistic effort, but it was also to form a closer bond of understanding between the Canadian lay-members and General Conference work as a whole.

The following is a summary of the work and activities as submitted by Brother Esau to the Home Mission Board. We feel certain that everyone will agree that Brother Esau was a very busy man all the time. May the Lord bless all the efforts and the extensive seed-sowing.

In Ontario—Visited eleven churches; preached twenty-one sermons; gave eight talks to young people and made sixty-three home visits.

In Manitoba—Visited forty churches and Mennonite groups. Preached fifty-nine sermons. Gave thirty-two talks to young people. Made 103 house visits.

Special Occasions—Special message, School Festival, Gretna, Manitoba. Two messages, Song Festival, Steinbach, Manitoba. One message, Canadian

THOUGHTFUL PROVISION FOR HOME MISSION WORK

Some twenty years ago there was a movement to establish a Mennonite settlement and build a church at Woodlake, California. A group of Mennonites settled here. A movement was started to collect a building fund. The congregation had been formed and organized. When some new movement is started it is well to consider what should be done if it does not succeed.

According to a resolution by the congregation at that time, "this money, if not used for building a church within ten years from this date, shall be donated to the Home Mission Board. This board to use the money for the purpose that it deems best."

A sum of $920.00 was collected by the group as a fund. This sum was invested in a certain company. It is too bad, but it is a fact that the new settlement did not materialize, and hence the plan to build a Mennonite church was abandoned.

The "thoughtful provision" provided that the principal and interest, now amounting to $1,656.00, be turned over to the Home Mission Board. The sum, received early in October, is intact for the time being, until the board has time to consider where it shall be used for the greatest good in the cause of Christ.

The Brethren, A. P. Haury and D. E. Bachman, Woodlake, California, saw to it that this notable sum was turned over as the provision called for. Our sincere thanks and appreciation is hereby expressed to them and all others who may have had something to do with this arrangement. The Lord bless the gift and all givers and His work.

THE ALBERTA COMMUNITY CHURCH
Portland, Oregon

Many changes have taken place in this fair city within the last few months. All, no doubt, have read of the three famous shipbuilding yards which save arisen within this district. An influx of one hundred thousand persons has recently come to this city to be employed in these war industries. These workers come from all parts of the United States, from every walk of life. This situation has caused a strain on the housing program. Even in our district, which is an older established section, one can readily see its effects.

The effect of this influx has been felt most severely in our Sunday school work. Quite a number of our star pupils have moved into other sections of the city where we lose our contact with them. After the rent ceiling came into effect many of the homes were shamelessly sold from under the renters without any reasons whatsoever. Here we see the grim effects of greed and lust for money. Many of our people have no assurance that they will have a permanent home this winter. It creates anxiety and fear.

As to our Sunday school work we shall have to re-canvass our district and to a large extent start with a new group. Many difficulties thus arise, and we feel as though we are unable to continue our follow-up work as we should.

Our regular Sunday morning church attendance has not been affected as has our Sunday school. Several new families have moved into this community and desire to make this their church home. Then, too, some people are beginning to realize the seriousness of the present crisis and are looking for spiritual guidance. Christ is the only sure refuge for such times as confront us these days.

There are many complex problems which face a city mission worker these days. One often does not feel capable in performing the tasks which should be done. There are so many questions and situations to be dealt with, that it is difficult to know just where to turn. But we are aware of your prayers and know that the Lord is able to meet these situations as we place our trust in Him. It is with but one aim that we carry on in this work—to glorify His name. May God richly bless all who are interested and have helped this missionary cause.

Women's Missionary Society of the Alberta Community Church of Portland, Oregon

The missionary society of the Alberta Community Church in Portland, Oregon, met regularly once a month at the homes of various members, and when necessary, work meetings are called extra. For the first half of the year the booklets entitled, Uprooted Americans, were studied and for the last half our own mission fields were taken.

In October the ladies held a sale of fancy work, etc., in connection with a "Penny-a-spoon" dinner. Both were very successful, and a fine spirit of friendliness prevailed upon this occasion. The proceeds of the evening went for mission and relief work. The December meeting is always held in the church with a special Christmas program. On this day the society was privileged to have a speaker who had done missionary work in the Kentucky Mountains. It was an instructive talk and gave one an insight into the conditions of other people in our own land.

We were also fortunate in having a local welfare worker, Miss Jean Lauterbach, meet with us at one of our meetings to tell us about her work among the poor in Portland. One really does not realize just how much work our local welfare departments do. All present enjoyed this talk very much.

Perhaps the most unique meeting of the year was the anniversary one in charge of Miss Etta Davis. It was a Chinese dinner. The hostesses were dressed in Chinese costumes, and a real Chinese dinner was served. Following this Miss Davis gave a talk on her work in China.

The ladies took an active part in trying to help our relief program. By means of this way we feel that we will become more closely united with the Mennonite churches in their various projects and needs. As we enter upon another year in our society, we pray that it may be a blessing not only to the members but also to those we try to help.

Young People's Activities

The Young People's activities for the coming year look encouraging. A larger number of the members seems to be taking an active part in the meetings, and we are anticipating a blessed time with them this winter.

The Dorcas Hi Girls meet every week at the home of Mrs. H. Anderson. During the past year they have had many varied activities, such as assisting in a program at Wyeth C.P.S. camp, being in charge of the Sunday evening program, and then conducting several outings. They have also sewed for needy families and have helped in various mission projects. The girls and their leader should be commended for their good work and we hope that their efforts will be richly blessed.

—Rev. and Mrs. Arnold J. Regier, 5215 N.E. 23rd Avenue, Portland, Oregon.

MOUNTAIN ECHOS, NORTH CAROLINA

Greetings in our Saviour's name. I Thess. 2:4; John 10:14, "Call upon me and I will answer thee." God has been pleased to answer many prayers in regard to Bible work in public schools here in the Great Smokies in opening five new doors to me this year of 1942. Now I have seven schools in different communities; we also have Sunday school here Sunday morning and another in a community twenty miles away on Sunday afternoon. Both Sunday schools are coming along nicely.

Last year Bible work was new in the schools of North Carolina. I was invited into two schools far back in the mountains over a long, rough, narrow, and dangerous roads. My little car clings to the mountains like a bug as I go back to the handicapped schools. There I go every week and hold Bible classes in each school for forty minutes, teaching the children and teachers Bible choruses, Bible memory work, and object or Bible story prayers. Then to the next school, leaving Sunday school papers and tracts to be taken home and read by the children as they sit around the fireside after sundown.

Last year the teachers realized that the Lord honored the schools where the Bible was taught in allowing the children of handicaped schools with a lack of supplies to go forward in their secular studies, as well as doing very well in their Bible work.

At a recent teacher's meeting one of the teachers advertized our Bible work in the school, and teachers have invited me to come to their schools. Hence, new open doors. The children memorize the Bible stories, choruses, go home and rehearse to their pappy and mammy all that "The Bible Woman" said in school. Thus the Bible is getting into the homes through the schools.

Beside school work, homes visited, tracts and clothing given out; tracts are given out to travelers a-foot with a prayer for the readers as they travel on the highway.

The children are encouraged in learning their Bible work by being rewarded with a Bible plaque or a scripture pencil, Bible pictures, etc.

This work is beginning to bear fruit. Where I went to school last year three teen age girls were really born again. They are giving evidence of growing Christian lives.

One of the teachers where I go each week to teach His word began to realize her neglect and duty to the Lord after my Bible story, and, realizing her responsibility began to do personal work among the parents and backed me up by home visitation. Pray for her.

I do thank the Lord for answered prayer in new open doors in other communities besides Paint Rock. Please continue to pray for me. The Lord will bless His word in the hearts of these boys and girls and in the teachers' hearts that the word will bear fruit in lives here in the Great Smokies. Pray that there will be witnesses in later years to many that know Him not.

This work has been born through many obstacles and much opposition, but praise Him for victory.

Should any of the readers have any discarded clothing for which they have no further use, I would appreciate having same. This is one of the means for getting into the school work. Or if you have other things which I could use for rewards at Christmas time, I would appreciate this also. It is one thing to teach these children Bible work, but at Christmas time they look for something extra.

Please do not send any Sunday school papers, as I have so many from the Union Gospel Press house. It is an undenominational house, and it is best to use down here. I thank you for your prayers. Many discouragements and many lonely times are confronted. Do pray for me.

—Elsa E. Grantland

IN THE HOP-YARD

What a busy little girl she was, indeed. From early morning she stood there beside her basket, picking, picking, picking hops. Would she never tire of her work and run away to play? It didn't seem so, for every time that I glanced up from my own work, she was there—eyes downcast and fingers flying.

Hour after hour crept slowly by and the day grew intolerably hot! Therefore, imagine what a rush there was when we suddenly heard the cry, "Ice-cream for sale! Ice-cream for sale!"—The children scampered out of the hop rows for all the world like chickens being called at feeding time! Oh, how they did run! In a minute the ice-cream man was surrounded and almost overpowered.

Turning away from this amusing sight, I happened to look at the opposite row—there was the same patient little figure at her post, picking on and on and on! But I caught the wistful look in her large eyes as she looked away from the crowd of children to smile at me in her sweet pathetic way. Evidently she had not received permission from her father to run away and buy ice-cream like so many of the other children.

At that instant a man came back with ice-cream for his whole family. And imagine!—he had, by mistake, taken one popscicle too many. (Perhaps, he forgot the number of children he had—who knows!) Looking around for someone to give it to before it melted, his eyes fell on he little girl I have been telling you about and handed it to her! Aren't you glad she got it?

I was! And I expected her to eat it immediately. But she didn't. With shining eyes she looked around and called her little brother who was playing near by. The little fellow was there in an instant and together they ran to their lunch box. Sister opened it, got out a knife, and then a very important ceremony began. They both knelt down on the ground. Little brother bent forward with breathless interest and watched his sister poise the knife over the chocolate-coated slab of ice.

The knife hung in mid-air for a few seconds—fell—and cut the ice-cream exactly into two equal parts! Ahhhh—! What a sigh of satisfaction!—Happily they sat down together in the shade of the hop vines to enjoy the little bit of sweetness to the utmost!

Bless their little hearts! I am sure their guardian angels joyfully reported in heaven that night of the unselfish love that they had found in the heart of a little girl.

RIDGEDALE, SASKATCHEWAN

Christmas greetings to all readers and subscribers of The Mennonite with Matthew 28:19, 20.

Another year of grace has elapsed since I wrote for this paper. There is so much to be done, and certainly if there ever was a need for more laborers it is now. By God's grace the work here in the northern part of our province has been carried on. Yet new fields lie before us.

Our work this year was carried on in the following places in either English or German as desired and sometimes in both languages: Teddington, Carrot River, Lost River, Petaigan, Pas Trail, Silver Echo (school), Langham, and the surrounding district, Gortitz Hall, and in different homes. We have made about five thousand miles in this work. Never has the work given us greater joy. Many souls were saved. Backsliders were restored, and souls went on encouraged not only to fight but also to have victory in Christ Jesus.

Invitations for special services have come from different parts of Saskatchewan and some even from Manitoba. These would have kept us busy all year round, but owing to my work as teacher, we had to turn most of them down. In most of the places mentioned above there are at least some workers; however, many of them feel the need of fellowship with other workers. But there are plenty of places that have no worker whatever. Nipawin is a large town—larger than Rosthern; Codette is is about the size of Waldheim and is only six miles from there. Neither of them have a church nor a worker that is a Mennonite. Yet they have a goodly number of German-speaking people, and the closest church is about thirteen miles from Codette and about twenty miles from Nipawin. What can be done?

We went to see the people at Nipawin on Saturday and Sunday. We spoke in the Salvation Army Hall both nights. During the day we were out to the Indian camps north of there and brought them the gospel. How they rejoiced and pleaded that we should come again. Do they not have souls also? How will we give an account of what we have neglected with those so earnest desirous people. These are Cree Indians, but most of them understand the English. How we should like to go and bring them the Word. Yet two months of vacation are far too short, and Sundays are always booked ahead. Home visitations are badly neglected. In some homes the minister has never entered. In others he is due for a number of years! Surely we need workers and very soon. Yes, may we press forward as one people bringing the hungry bread, and the thirsty at least a cup of water. Anyone interested in this work might get in touch with me or the Home Mission Board. As to the financial side, there are plenty of poor ones here too, in fact, most of them are poor. Much more could be done if money would permit.

Wishing you all His dearness and nearness,

—Brother and Sister Charles and Tena Dirks

EMMAUS MENNONITE CHURCH
Swift Current, Sasketchewan

Another year has almost passed, and again, we are trying to count the many blessings that our Lord has showered upon us. It has been a year of abundant rains and therefore a bountiful harvest resulted. However, because of the excessive rains, only about twenty-five to thirty per cent of the harvest is gathered in. Then also, the farmers can only sell five bushels per acre, which they require to pay expenses. Thus, there is very little extra money available.

The usual church activities have been carried on throughout the year, to the extent that the Lord gave us grace to do so. Services have been held regularly at all six places of worship. On a whole, the attendance has been fair, although we long and pray for a real revival and refreshing from the Lord. All year we have been yearning for spiritual rains as abundant as the natural rains.

It seems the same here as everywhere else. A general apathy and lack of zeal or genuine interest in spiritual matters is gradually becoming more evident. The war seems to cause so many side issues and fills the mind with so many temporal matters, that little time and consecrated effort is left for God and His Kingdom. May God in His good time cause this upheaval to come to a close once more. How the soul yearns for tranquility again!

In spite of all this a goodly number of members have been added to our church roll. We hope and pray that we may all be a mutual blessing to each other and may be able to serve our Lord's cause better.

We had special services for some time during which time we tried to have our visiting worker, Rev. Peters, visit especially the old, feeble, and shut-ins. A real visible blessing resulted.

During the summer months, vacation Bible school was held as usual. Also a young people's camp was conducted. It was attended better than ever. A number of conversions and restorations resulted. Praise His name! Rev. W. L. Rempel, who was in charge will report more fully on this activity.

Every first Sunday in each month we collect money for war relief in England. We have also had special canvasses for this purpose. The results have been gratifying. May God bless these gifts to the alleviation of much suffering.

War rationing and the tire problem are making it increasingly difficult to carry on the work as it should be carried on. We trust the Lord will provide means for doing His work even through these distressing times.

A Full Time Minister Needed

Then there is that perennial fact that the harvest is great but the laborers are few. None of the few workers who, available for this large and scattered field, can devote full time to the work. That is very regretable. Much could then be accomplished which would be of great blessing. That, of course, rests on the understanding that a means of transportation would be available. In other words, we need a real shepherd, who is always on duty. Many of our young people, and often the most promising, are coaxed away by others who are constantly on the job.

I feel very, very keenly on this point. Right here rests the future of this and many other Mennonite congregations. Let us get at least one thoroughly capable worker and keep him, so that he can devote his full time to the Lord's work. It is absolutely imperative. As a practical example or object lesson, I shall conclude with the following:

A young couple, who lived in Wymark during the winter was saved from a path of sin and was all on fire for the Lord. We had sweet fellowships all winter at our Monday evening prayer meetings. It was a joy to watch them grow. In spring they moved to a farm in a district where they have no fellowship. They are really suffering from lack of help and fellowship. When we visited them recently, they wept tears of joy and just poured overflowing hearts and went before the Lord in prayer with us. Such are bits of heaven. However, they illustrate very forcefully the great need of "feeding my lambs."

Work of Sunday School, Young People, and Women

Another year has passed, and today is our National Thanksgiving Day. We have especially much to be thankful for to our Heavenly Father this year, as He has blessed us with an abundant harvest. Due to excessive late rains the harvest is very late here. So far only approximately one half is gathered in. But God has again blessed us with several weeks of very fair weather, and people have been exceptionally busy. Our gardens too were very good, and we scarcely know where to store it. Praise His precious Name for it all!

In Swift Current there is a Sunday school of about forty-five on the roll. They have, I believe, five classes which includes the adults. They have made special efforts and collected money for our War Relief work in England.

In Wymark we have a large Sunday school group. The total enrollment is seventy-four. Our average attendance is about sixty. We have four classes. Our collections are very good and we have made various contributions to missions and war work (for needy children in the children's and old people's homes in England).

In Shonfeld, a village two and a half miles south of Wymark, is another large Sunday school with an enrollment of some fifty pupils with three classes.

In all three of the above mentioned places we have young people's meetings once a month. There is always a good attendance and the collections are distributed to the various mission fields. In Wymark last winter we put on a play of India, and our proceeds went directly for that needy field.

We have a Women's Missionary Society in each of the above mentioned places. Swift Current had its sale on October 4. The proceeds were very good, better than at any other time. They received somewhat above two hundred dollars. It is to be distributed equally between foreign and home mission work. Due to the late harvest Wymark and Shonfeld have not had their sale yet, but plan to have it some time in November. Here in Wymark we have been attempting to contribute to the upkeep of a child of leperous parents in India. Our proceeds have also been distributed to various home and foreign mission needs.

We have also done considerable work toward the war effort, and have sent several shipments of clothing to war sufferers in England. At the present time we are planning a third shipment of clothing which we hope to send before Christmas.

There is much more I could tell you, but I fear my letter will be too long. May God give us strength to remain true and faithful in His services, and may we be a bright witness for His cause is my prayer for us all. And may we all, above all things, remember on this Thanksgiving Day to give Him all praise and glory for His bountiful blessings.

GENERAL ARTICLE CONCERNING THE CHURCH AT SMITH CORNER

To the Home Mission Board of the General Conference Mennonites, and to the many friends who may chance to read this article, Greetings:

In writing about the work of a mission church in general, there are so many topics one wonders which would be most interesting.

First I would like to have you who were never at Smith Corner see the church and country here. We are located in the hills of the Allegeheny Mountains; we have hard surfaced roads now for the most part, electric lights, creeks, meadows, some fields and many hills and streams. Our church building is a frame structure about thirty-eight by forty feet. It seats about two hundred if seated carefully. The parsonage within twenty feet of the church is also a frame structure of six rooms. Both church and parsonage have furnaces. We have recently installed a water system, so that we have running water in both buildings.

We have a membership of seventy, and during the past year the average attendance was 57.5, with an average offering of $4.29. This was for the Sunday school. The morning service has about the same in attendance, few leaving after the Sunday school. Offerings in the morning service are small. The evening service is, all things considered, well attended.

Our members are scattered out quite a bit, many driving past several churches in order to get to their own. There are few who live so close to the church that they can walk to the service. They drive from one to thirty-five miles to get here, often driving six and eight and even ten or more miles. What the tire and gas rationing will do to us I cannot foresee.

Our folks live so scattered that when the pastor visits all the families he has driven quite a distance. Some of this driving is over mountain roads which often are not in a good state of repair, however, if they can get out to church we can get in to visit them.

Our members come from many walks of life, farmers, brickplant workers, railroad repairmen, one freight conductor, etc. We have one boy in a CPS camp and three in the army.

We have the following organizations; Y.P.S. which meets every Sunday evening; Ladies Aid; Brotherhood; and three organized Sunday school classes. These all hold regular meetings.

We are happy in the work—especially when we can see some immediate fruit; then we know that "Our labor is not in vain."

—John S. Raugh, Pastor

The Sunday School, Young People, Ladies' Aid, and Brotherhood

"The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few," Luke 10:2.

This writing comes in answer to a request from our pastor. Our Sunday school has been fairly well attended the past year; during the past few months the offerings have risen. I think the Lord had something to do with it, in fact, I know that is was He that did it.

There are different things to say about our Sunday school to show that the Lord has been working in our members' hearts. We have added two more classes to the school, by rearrangement of the pupils, thus making it much better in teaching the facts of the lesson. Our Sunday school is rather scattered, and some of them have quite a distance to travel, making it difficult to keep the school together, however, there is nothing impossible with God.

We are very happy in the Lord regarding the young people of our church. We have meetings every Sunday evening from 7:00 till 7:30. In these meetings we have some good talks given by the young people. Many good thoughts are expressed.

The young people had a "thrill" on Sunday evening, September 13, when the pastor was sick and unable to speak to us. (No thrill for the pastor). So the young people had the whole evening for their program. We thank the Lord for helping us keep the group together during these trying days when work is abundant and money is to be had, and many jobs are offered to drag young people away from the church, home, and community.

Ladies' Aid and the Brotherhood meet the third Friday of each month; they have joint devotions, including a song service, scripture reading, prayer, and a talk by one of the brethren. The ladies have a special meeting to sew. This they just started recently. In the brotherhood meeting they discuss various things and plan on how they can help the work along. The writer, as well as others, looks forward to these meetings and thinks they are a help to the church.

It might interest you to know that the writer of this is also the president of the Y.P.S. I might also state that I am always glad to take part in the work of the church to keep the work of the Lord moving along. These days, more than ever before, we need to look more to the Lord for help. In my talks to the young people, and in talks I hear others make, as well as the pastor often mentions, we in Smith Corner can thank the Lord for the wonderful protection He has given us so far and will continue to give us if we do our part.

In writing for the different groups of the church I could not write all I would have liked to write, including the church, Sunday school, Ladies' Aid, Brotherhood, and organized classes. Thank you for this opportunity.

May God grant you and all the conference offcals grace and blessing in all your problems.

WESTHEIMER MENNONITE CHURCH
Rosemary, Alberta

It is with feelings of deepest and sincerest gratitude toward our gracious Heavenly Father that this report on the work and activities of the Westheimer Mennonite Church in Rosemary, Alberta, is written. Only twelve years ago our group here consisted of approximately forty to fifty members; we did not own a suitable building in which to conduct services; these were held in the two-room school house. As such arrangements proved to be of great inconvenience to all concerned, an old abandoned C.P.R. farm house was occupied, free of charge. With the coming of new settlers into the district, these accommodations again proved inadequate. It was then decided in 1932, if I remember correctly, to build a church. Free collections and free labor made this possible. Nothing to boast of, no, the name of the Lord be praised.

Today the Mennonite Church in Rosemary has over three hundred members. Of these twenty-three were added in the last year, viz., ten through holy baptism, and thirteen members, newly arrived, have joined our church. The number of ministers serving this church is nine. Rev. C. D. Harder is Elder. Of these, three young brothers were elected recently, and in all probability they will be ordained into the ministry within the near future. During the summer months revival meetings were held in our church, and many young people as well as older ones were willing to give themselves up to the Lord; many were converted. Such meetings mark the highlights of our missionary work.

Now with the approach of the autumn season the two leading groups of Mennonites have combined to conduct a series of Bible classes among the different groups of our Mennonites, scattered in all parts of the province. This work, and also the conducting of prayer meetings during the winter months, will be, no doubt, seriously handicapped by the restrictions on travel by automobile.

However, God willing, we shall "preach the word, , . . .in season, out of season." May God grant that His Word may yet reach the heart of many a needy soul. May God bless His Work.

Auxiliary Societies of the Westheimer Mennonite Church in Rosemary, Alberta

The Women's Missionary Society consists of two groups: the older women comprise what is commonly called the "Frauenverein," and the younger married women form the second group of the missionary society. Affiliated with these two groups is the Girl's Missionary Society. These three groups work along the same lines. Through the efforts of these societies over three hundred dollars were collected during the last year, and during the same period two bales of clothes were sent to England.

The Young People's Society holds its meetings fortnightly, the prayer meetings alternating with program meetings. Besides these meetings, conducted in English, the society holds regular monthly meetings conducted in German. The meetings in English have become a good and great source of missionary work, since they are visited by a large number of English-speaking people, many of whom do not have chances to visit church services regularly. Recently two revival meetings were held very successfully. Through the efforts of the Y. P. Society a fairly good piano has been installed in the church.

The young people in our church are attended to as well. Six Sunday School teachers are in charge of approximately 150 children. The average attendance is very good. So far the good. So far the work in the Sunday School is conducted in German. But there remains little doubt that, due to the inability of our children to understand and express themselves intelligently in their mother tongue, this work in the Sunday School will have to be changed. It is evident now that we will not make an exception to other groups of foreigners whose children have forgotten their mother tongue or use it only sparingly and only when it is absolutely necessary. However, God understands all languages, and He will not forsake His work, conducted in His name. God bless us and keep us all.

MEMORIAL MENNONITE CHURCH
Altoona, Pennsylvania

"We then as workers together with Him, beseech you also that ye receive not the grace of God in vain," II Cor. 6:1. What a challenging privilege is ours to be counted worthy to be workers together with God in saving souls for eternity.

We have accepted what we believe to be God's call and challenge to us in taking up the work here at Memorial Mennonite Church. However, we have been here only a few weeks and do not feel justified in giving a report of the work accomplished during the past year.

We do know that we need the help and strength of the Lord and the prayers and support of all God's people. Our request is that you consider us as workers together with you in the Lord's work and that you will uphold us in your petitions and requests before the throne of Grace.

—Rev. and Mrs. Delbert E. Welty, 2204 11th Avenue, Altoona, Pa., October 23, 1942.

IN HIS SERVICE

The Home Mission Board suggests that those supported by the same write something about the work which they are doing, and I envy my coworkers who will have to tell a lot of their doings and achievements.

My work is to throw seeds out into the dark and practically never to see anything of them again. God supplies the seeds, and the Home Mission Board provides the strength to throw them far and wide. I remain with the question, "What will the harvest be?"

God alone knows.

From time to time letters come in telling me about the effects which my "Briefe an unser Volk" had here and there. A dying lady was strengthened and encouraged by one of my sermonets; a girl, about to loose her faith, was brought back to her Saviour through another one of the letters. I rejoice, "God is merciful!"

Now I am preparing the manuscript for a calendar with little expositions for every morning and every night in the year (in German). When I began that work I thought I had a job ahead of me, but I am finding out more and more that it is a job and a half. And still the question remains with me, "What will the harvest be?"

Yes, and I need the money to print the calendar. Who is going to send it to me?

Some Recently Published Books
Which Should be in Every Mennonite Home

THE STORY OF THE MENNONITES
By Dr. C. Henry Smith

This is the most complete and the best history of the Mennonites ever published in one volume. Dr. Smith, who has long been known as the best informed Mennonite historian, has produced a book that is an authority in this field. It is entitled The Story of the Mennonites because it reads almost like a story, and yet it is an authentic history of the Mennonite people from the time of Menno Simons up to the breaking out of the present World War. It comprises 824 pages and is bound in a beautiful brown satin cloth.

Price $2.50 postpaid in the U. S.

THE MENNONITE HYMNARY

This book, first published in 1940, has already been issued in three editions. Never before has a Mennonite hymnbook, either German or English, sold so fast or made such an impression with our Mennonite people as this one. Already over 12,000 copies have been sold. The book contains 623 hymns and songs, 56 pages of "Aids to Worship," including 90 well-chosen Responsive Readings, and 38 pages of Indexes. It is printed on durable white paper and bound in strong cloth. It can be had in either dark blue or maroon color. Price $1.40 postpaid in the U.S. 12 or more copies $1.21. each not prepaid.

WITH CHRIST ON THE EDGE OF THE JUNGLE
By Rev. S. T. Moyer

This book is not a study. It is a story of a series of experiences through which the author has passed during his twenty-one years of missionary work in India, under the auspices of the General Conference Mennonite Mission in that country. The story is true to the last detail and, for this reason, is informative and intensely interesting. $1.00 postpaid in U.S.

THE NEW TESTAMENT BASIS OF PACIFISM
By G. H. C. MacGreggor, D. D., D. Litt.

This is not a book on the practical issues involved in the problem of Peace and War, but the author endeavors to show what is the bearing of the New Testament teaching on the particular question of war. The book is written in the hope that it will provide all Christians, whether they are "Pacifists" or not, with the material necessary for thinking through for themselves this greatest of all modern ethical problems. Price 50c postpaid.

MISSION FESTIVAL MENNONITE CHURCH

Philadelphia, Fernheim, Gran Chaco, Paraguay'
South America

One of the high points in our church life centers around our annual mission festival, which was held yesterday, September 6, in the Philadelphia Assembly Hall. Cool and truly delightful weather, which was not enjoyed for a good while, greeted and encouraged many an individual to hasten to this special worship service.

Our youth group, which in the course of two years and three months received catechism instructions in thirty-five sessions, contributed a part of the program. The Barren Fig Tree by Moderson was presented in poetry and song in such an earnest manner that many a hearer's eyes were filled with tears. . . . Has the Master found in me the fruit he sought in me in spite of my lukewarmness? Have I sought to cover my barrenness with a lot of leaves for show? . . . Am I in danger of being cut down . . . Indeed not; from this moment on it shall be different so that I might bring in fruit for eternity! . . . Such and many similar thoughts were provoked by the poems as they were presented with such sincerity. The Spirit of God was present and followed the listeners pew by pew, to induce everyone to live lives that would be pleasing to our Heavenly Father.

The missionary address by Rev. Jacob Duerksen, using Gal. 6:9, 10, as text, was another challenge for everyone "not to be weary in well-doing." We are not to give that the Lord will have to return it to us as it was done to a certain worshiper, who thought that he had given a large amount when he gave three mark. While he was returning from church, behold, he found three mark in the street. While he was congratulating himself, his hired man asked him whether he may not have gotten his gift back from the Lord, because it was not given in the right spirit in the first place.

Following this most appropriate message the morning worship came to a close with a quartet number by the Neufeld family. They rendered the mission song about the harvest being white unto harvest. All had to feel, "God is calling me."

A brief congregational business meeting was held. In it some vital questions were discussed that had come up among the members. At the close Rev. John Tiechgraf read a report of the trip he made some weeks ago into the eastern part of Paraguay. We learned again how our brethren in the faith have to contend with many hardships in their separate settlement. The climate there seems to be more agreeable than here in the Chaco, which caused the Hutterites to settle there. There are also some other advantages, but not in cattle raising. They are closer to markets, but these get oversupplied, so the gain is not so large. To move back and forth is always a disadvantage, since one would still be in this tropic climate, to which we are not acclimated yet. We struggle on in order not to fall prey to the same characteristics that are found in the natives of this country, the Indians.

As a place of safety and shelter no better one could have been found than here in the center or heart of South America, far from the centers of war and contention of the nations. That this should be a permanent home for years to come for us and our children is still open to question.

Fellowship Dinner

The noon day meal which was enjoyed by all, (142 present) consisted of a choice dish known and liked by every one, Russian Borsch. The spirit of fellowship and the discussion of points previously made, made the occasion a memorable one. In the middle of the three long tables set for the occasion were placed the Elder, Rev. Abram Harder, and the youth group. Two of this group, who had never missed any instruction period were given special recognition when they received framed mottoes, while all the others received smaller tract leaflets.

After the dinner all the things that had been brought to the mission festival were disposed of by an auction. One man went so far as to bring a cow, which netted four thousand pesos.

Last on the day's program was a paper on The Problems of Youth by Brother Peter Wiens, a teacher. The points and applications made were very appropriate and well grounded in scripture. The sure purposes of God and also His goodness toward Israel were illustrated. All these things reminded us to acknowledge God's rightful claim on all of us and that it is essential that we repent from our free and careless way and acknowledge God's judgment on the nations today.

It was a day that the Lord had prepared for us. To Him be honor, praise ,and thanksgiving.

CALVARY CHURCH, MECHANICSVILLE, PA.

The work of the Sunday School at Calvary Church is considered one of the important phases of Christian work. A number of new faces have been seen in recent weeks; it is our hope and desire that many more may become interested in spiritual things. One of the extra activities is the young people's class meeting held monthly the last Saturday of the month. A spiritual program is always given including a prayer period for a member serving under the China Inland Mission, namely Anna K. Swarr. When letters are received they are read before the group. Following the program games are played; refreshments are served including the evening's social gathering.

The Christian Endeavor Society holds two meetings a month. Occasionally a special speaker is invited to address the group. In April the Rev. Lawrence McMannus gave us a timely message on sin. The brethren Carl Gough and Mr. Gracie favored us with numbers on the piano and violin respectively. On October 25, Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf, recently returned missionary from China, was our guest speaker. In this work of Christian Endeavor both young and older take part.

Our Ladies Missionary Society functions in a commendable way. Monthly meetings are held in homes. Spiritual programs are given; prayers are offered for missionaries. As occasion presents itself sewing is done for some conference project or even for needy local families. For several years an anniversary service has been held, usually in November. At this service either the members present the program or a guest speaker is secured. This year, November 8, Brother P. A. Penner, returned missionary, will be the guest speaker. A fine spiritual service is anticipated.

BETHEL CHURCH
Winton, California

A year has passed since we sent in our first report from Winton, and how time does fly. Now we have been in this terrible war for nearly a year. Young men and even older ones are being called every month. This takes quite a few away, so it is getting to be noticeable. From our little group here only three have gone so far, and one of them is our son who is in the U. S. Army. Twenty more will be called soon, but we are going on here as usual. We have about twenty families that attend our services. Some are not very regular. This summer our Sunday School attendance fell off, because of the work in harvesting the fruit crops here. This takes about three months, August, September, and October. We have Thompson seedless grapes, almonds, peaches, and tomatoes. Because of the shortage of labor some have to work on Sunday. Many new babies have also come into the homes. Our services are about as follows: 10:00a.m. Sunday school; 11:00 a.m., preaching, song by the choir or from some individual. We have preaching every other Sunday evening, and we have our regular C. E. programs given by young and old. Wednesday night we have Bible Study and prayer. We try to visit all our members occasionally and also other people. Special meetings were held last spring. Two young people were baptized and received into the church which brings our membership up to forty-five.

We conducted daily vacation Bible school for two weeks with three other churches here. It proved very successful.

We have a difficult field, but we are praying for the Lord to help us, and we know he is with us. May we be found when he comes.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Glanzer, October 8, 1942

Sunday School, Young People's And Women's Society

The Sunday School of the Bethel Mennonite Church is well attended. The attendance averages from thirty-five to forty-five regularly. We have four classes. They are the beginners class, junior, the young married and unmarried people's class together, and the adult class.

We have a Young People's Christian Endeavor program every other Sunday evening. We begin by having the Juniors sing a few choruses, after which the leader has an object lesson or Bible story for them. Following the story we have our Christian Endeavor program which is also well attended. Everyone is quite active in taking part. On the Sundays when we do not have a program, Rev. Glanzer brings an inspiring mesage.

The Sewing Circle of the church was organized March 16, 1942, by the ladies of the church. The meeting of the circle is the first Tuesday of every month at the different homes of the members. At present there are twenty members. Various articles have been made and most of the sewing is done at home by the ladies during the month and then brought to the place of meeting at the first of the month. A mission sale is to be had of the finished articles either in November or December, and the money is to go for home missions.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH
Chicago, Illinois

We of the First Mennonite Church of Chicago extend a word of greeting to our many Chrsitian friends who have contributed to this work with intercessory prayer and with material gifts. We thank you for your prayers and for the support that has made this work possible.

As we look back over the year that has gone, we can truly say that the Lord has been good to us and has blessed us in so many ways. And we need to search our own hearts to see if we have been as loyal to Him as we should have been. The war with its darkening shadows is leaving its mark upon the hearts and minds of the people here. In some cases it has brought about a closer walk with God, but in others, the effect has been the opposite. Quit a number of our people are employed in defense industry, or in work closely connected with the war effort. The demands of shop and factory for longer working hours and a general speeding up of all work has had a definite effect upon interest in church activities. Yes, these are perilous times and instead of surrendering to the forces of darkness, we need to go forth with renewed effort and zeal that we might be a true witness of Him who is the Light of the World.

We have continued our Sunday School service at ten every Sunday, and the worship service at eleven. The Sunday evening services, which were discontinued through the summer, have been resumed. Through the winter and spring months the attendance at both the Sunday School and church services was good. Through the summer months many of the city people go on vacations and on week-end trips into the country, but now that summer is past we are again getting back to normal in our attendance.

We have had no deaths or serious illness so far this year, for which we are truly grateful. Beginning on October 18, Rev. J. J. Esau of Bluffton, Ohio, will be here to conduct two weeks of evangelistic meetings. We are looking forward to these meetings and expect to receive many blessings in the renewal of our spiritual life.

We are looking forward to the time when we will be a self-supporting church. The local support of the work has been very good in the past year. All contributions are given through free will offerings. There are no pledges or assessments and very few appeals for funds are made. The response to this system has been very good.

During the time of our evangelistic meetings we are sending out special invitations to all of the Mennoites in the city. We want to contact all that we know are here in the city, and we urge you to let us know if you have a friend or relative coming to Chicago so that we can get in touch with them.

Mid-week prayer services have been held throughout the year. The young people have their services every Sunday evening at seven. The Women's Missionary Society meets every month for a program and a business meeting in which they plan the various activities of this organization. Their open meeting is on October 16 with Miss Aganetha Fast as the speaker.

We covet the continued prayers of our many friends, and hope that we may ever be true witnesses of our Lord and Saviour.

A SMALL FAMILY IN A BIG BOARDING

By Helen E. Nickel

I hear a slight noise at the front verandah the morning after I return from Pendra Road where I had a pleasant three-weeks' vacation. The girls have come to say salaam, every one of the small family who remained in the Boarding during the summer holidays. I am happy to return for their sakes, now we still have five weeks left before school will reopen to do all the necessary things, chief among which is to have a daily friendly contact with each girl. During the busy months of school, when the Boarding family numbers one hundred and there are teachers and workers around, it often is difficult to treat the girls as individuals.

Florence Bai, herself a girl who has known no other home than the Boarding, has done the work of assistant matron while Lila Bai could take a month's leave to live with her three sons and a little daughter. Florence managed the housekeeping, measuring and dividing out daily supplies of rice, dal, wood, oil, etc. She also took a motherly oversight over David Rabinranath, the darling baby. He was teething in the hottest weather but thus far has come through the heat without getting sick. He is so good, and the girls adore him, and he in turn entertains them with every new gesture he has learned. And David Robin, (as we call him), loves me also and plays with the buttons on my dress, but he is not courageous when I wear dark sun glasses in the glaring light. Then he calls for Florence. Kalawati is smiling her welcome, she is still not of school age but she has come back from her first long journey by buffalo cart. She went to attend the wedding of her father. He brought her to us more than two years ago when his wife had died, now he married again but it seems best to keep Kalawati in Janjgir as there are too many little mouths to feed in the new home in Mahaudie. Bundquar, so fair and frail, seems no thinner than when I left, and has not had spells of fever, the others report. But she is such a studious little girl that she tells me that she is ready to have school open now. Jasmine giggles about that because even though she learned many more things in the first grade that we ever gave her little head credit for, yet she plainly shows that play and holidays suit her better. Rhanai has become so dignified, and oh, how her sparkling eyes give me a friendly welcome. She was an orphaned and neglected child, now she washes her face and combs her hair and has got over the first self-consciousness which made her feel proud but act and look strange in dresses. She is the newest addition to the family but seems quite at home by this time.

What have the girls done to spend the days? There was the excitement that this was a good mangoe year. The garden tree bore a prolific crop of the juicy tasty fruit so that they could have a share, and throughout the summer they could occasionally buy more from "vegetable money." There were several special services in the church but no wedding since the lovely double affair when Barbara Dalton married Daduram, a Bible school student, and Lillian Anuj, whose home is nearby, another student who finished his course this year. His name is Prabhudin Patras. But when Barbara left the Boarding late in April it made such a gap to have this "big sister" go. There really are only Normina and Biasakha and Reba left. I must tell you about Reba. She is a Bengali girl, and was of Brahmin caste, but she gave her heart and life to Jesus Christ shortly after coming to us and has also learned to read Hindi. Perhaps she can attend Bible school for a year to learn more of the Christian religion. She ran away from her relative's home in Calcutta because of mistreatment, and somehow in a mysterious way had the name and address of our school and Boarding and of the railroad station, Naila, written in a small notebook, so she came last April and begged to be taken in and sheltered. We reluctantly consented. To make more orphans or rather mission charges is not our desire, but the plight of this twenty-year-old girl touched me and I have never regretted that we opened the doors for her. She is cooperative in the Boarding and will soon wish to marry and establish her own home.

Rupo and Kashaliya and Chandramoni, who sings so well; and Champaklata who imitates so perfectly, and Helen, who enjoys the play that other girls plan, have kept the Boarding lively. Of course when the sun rose high and the heat was very great everyone could be forgiven for getting lazy, but in the cool of the evening they organized group games and once or twice dressed up for an impromptu drama. One day the girls all planned a tea party for which they had to write out invitations and make breads over a hot fire. And they laugh when they tell me how often they have practiced the songs for Miss Burkhalter's farewell service. The ship was delayed for such a long time. Rachel has memorized many new songs from the hymn book which will give her pennies for a special thank-offering in the church. We all enjoy hearing her sing them as solos. Theresa, who will return early in July for her final year in high school, has been helpful in many ways and has taught Reba to write Hindi, and has reviewed English with the middle school girls. She is a teacher in the making, and we all expect her to complete her schooling in a commendable way.

And now busier days are ahead; every morning we will meet on the bungalow verandah for morning prayers, songs, and sewing. From the smallest one who can handle a needle to the high school girl who does machine sewing nicely, all will be planning their very simple wardrobes, a few pretty plaid dresses, a white voile chaddar (head covering) for Sundays, petticoats and underwear, and a few warm coats. All will be ready by June 24, when school opens again. Some girl will be sure to say after all are settled down to work, "Misahabji, please tell us about the war." I will hardly have the heart to take up that subject, but our girls have wider interests than their own little circle. Every day during prayers they will remember the sick, the wounded and dying, the lepers, the orphans, and those stricken because of the terrors of war. They will also remember to pray for you, dear friends in America. America for them is still an ideal country of generous Christian people.

DEDICATION OF JANZEN MEMORIAL SCHOOL BASNA, INDIA

By John Thiessen

February 4, 1942, dawned with a cool drizzly rain. It was the day set for the dedication of our Jansen Memorial school building. Our hearts were somewhat saddened, because we had invited many friends and we had yearned for a bright day. The season is the dry time of the year, yet it rained out of season. The time of the dedication was to be 2:00 p. m. At noon the clouds disappeared and a most brilliant oriental sun shown down upon us. The guests poured in. Representatives from our neighboring missions had also come. We all gathered outside in front of the new school building. The police superintendent, Mr. Felix Abraham, a Christian brother, who is a son of one of our oldest evangelists in the Champa area, was the chairman. As principal of the school I made some opening remarks, telling briefly why the school had come to Basna (because of the terrible flood in Mauhadih). Then I told the audience how it all came about that the new school building now stood finished before us. The audience was reminded that it was a product of love; love for India's people in the heart of Brother Herman Jansen of Elbing, Kansas; who has gone on to the eternal home, but whose family had now fulfilled his desire to do something special for Christ and India's children.

After these opening remarks we all entered the new building where our leading teacher, Brother Rubin Kirtan prayed the dedicatory prayer. The representatives from our neighboring mission spoke. Several government officials also gave short addresses. Then the students gave a brief entertainment. After this we had tea with our guests. In the evening we had a fellowship dinner with all of our ex-students. A full and important day for our work among the children of India came to a close.

PROGRESS OF WORK IN THE LEPER ASYLUM

By O. A. Waltner, Superintendent

Greetings with I Pet. 1:3-5. A leper Christian in a conversation told me, "You know, if it weren't for a merciful Father, what would we have?" It is a gracious privilege to thank God who in His abundant mercy has given us our prized possession, the gift of hope, through the resurrection of our Lord from the dead. In these days of strife, destruction, worry and care, man is prone to ask, "What is there left for us?" We who love the Lord have everything because "we have a living hope."

The hot season on the plains of India was a new experience for us. "The hottest hot season since many years," is what the Indians told us repeatedly. And we admitted that it was hot! We fought a losing battle in trying to save all the trees on the compound. Water reservoirs and lakes dried up. Water in the wells was insufficient. The house was unbearably hot. Nights afforded but little relief from the heat. As we look back we realize that God didn't exactly give us comfortable days but He did give us grace and patience to bear the ennervating heat.

The Bethesda Leper Home is still God's concern. His marvelous grace and mercy is new every day. His intimate care of every day reveals His Fatherly love. We humbly bow before Him in gratitude for His willingness to bestow upon us His bountiful gifts. It is our intense desire to be concerned for these people with a divinely given compassion and sympathy that goes out in loving service. God's concern is to be our concern.

The number of patients in the B.L. Home is now 562. Of that number, 32 are in the hospital wards for special treatment. In the last two years the medical phase of our work has made great progress. Mr. A. D. Miller, secretary of the mission to lepers, at his visit last March remarked very favourably upon the medical work. At present the medical staff consists of an Indian doctor, a laboratory technician, a compounder, operating room assistant and dresser, a general helper in the dispensary plus eleven nurses.

Because of Dr. Bauman's furlough, we are now without the services of a surgeon. Miss Pauls must now devote more time in supervising the work of the Christian Hospital. Formerly Miss Pauls divided her time between the Christian Hospital and the B. L. Home Hospital. It is very essential that we have the services of a full time European nurse plus a surgeon. Unless we have that, the standard of our medical work will suffer.

To provide able lepers with opportunities of necessary excercise, attempts are under way to expand the agricultural projects. The program includes the raising of more vegetables and fruits to provide mineral and vitamin giving diets. Medical research considers a properly balanced diet essential in combating leprosy. For the same reason the program includes the keeeping of a dairy herd to provide the especially needed calcium found in milk.

The successful treatment of leprosy lies not in medicine alone nor in an adequate diet alone nor in the combination of the two. Neither is it sufficient to place the patient in a right mental environment. The ministry to the spiritual needs is imperative. Indications are that the leper Christians respond to an all-inclusive treatment most readily. Hence we constantly attempt to increase the usefulness of the church with its various activities.

The Sunday morning worship services, the S. S. classes, the Sing-fest, the weekly prayer meetings, the C. E. programs, the teachers' preparatory classes, and the special evangelistic meetings all attempt to bring the inmates in touch with the Great Physician of the Body and Soul. I am convinced that the success of the B. L. Home lies not in the buildings or well planned grounds of this place (although they all contribute in part, but much rather it lies is this, that Dr. and Mrs. P. A. Penner were able to so permit God to be personally present every day in their lives that this place assumed a spiritual atmosphere, a spiritual atmosphere felt in the medical work, in the agricultural work and in the church work that we must maintain. It is then that our results will be abiding—eternal and glorifying the Father.

For the quarter that is ahead, what is our hope in these dark days? As I visit the lepers in the hospital wards, they frequently tell me, "You are our master, come visit us every day for your presence gives us courage and helps us face the future." In a like manner we say to our Lord Jesus, "You are our Master, come and visit us every day for Your Presence gives us courage and helps us face the future." In Him is our victory.

A PRAYER FOR INDIA

Oh Lord, these are days of great events for Thee and India. They call for large souls with enlarged minds, laden with Thy power which delights to manifest itself in superhuman achievements.

As we face these events of tremendous importance, we come humbly, needy, trembling, lest we fail Thee, lest we fail to buy up this opportunity for Thee, lest we fail to measure up to the day of Thy visitation. May first rate events not be dealt with by second rate ministers of Thine.

Cleanse us, Oh Lord, of every hindrance, every love of ease, every sin which hinders Thy power and glory with us. Oh my Saviour! Cleanse me of the enemy within. And when thou hast cleansed us, then empower us with physical vigor, enlargen our hearts with spiritual power, give us keen mental grasp for Thy tasks for us. Give us Thy love and compassion. Give me Thy love and compassion, my precious Jesus.

We pray, Oh Lord, for the 180 inquirers at Champa, Mauhadi, Janjgir and Korba, those whose hearts Thou hast touched. Oh Lord, descend upon them with Thy fire, to burn out all the dross, that they, enkindled by Thy Spirit, may come and receive water baptism during the autumn of 1942 and these days while it is day. Make Thy Word within them the Sword of Thy Holy Spirit.

We pray, Oh Lord, for Thy servants, Indian and foreign. Send them forth in the faith and power of others who have been sent forth by Thee, Elijah, John the Baptist, Paul and Barnabas, Finney, and Moody. And when Thou hast thrust them forth, oh triune God, then honor their faith with an abundant harvest of souls.

We pray, Oh Lord, for Thy church on our field. We thank Thee for this church. We thank Thee for what Thou hast done in the Basna area. We thank Thee for the believers in eighty different towns and villages. Come and sanctify this church there, and in Janjgir, Champa, Mauhadi, Korba, and all the smaller groups of believers in many surrounding villages. For Thou hast said in Thy Word, "The nations shall know that I am Jehovah, when I am sanctified in you before their eyes." The times, Oh Lord, are in Thy hands. This day, this year is ours. We know not the future. We plead with Thee, do Thou sanctify Thy church, wholly, entire, blameless, that India may know, and believe.

We ask is in the name of Him, Who, when He saw Jerusalem, wept, because she knew not the day of her opportunity, in the name of Jesus our Saviour, India's Saviour. Amen.

WEDDINGS IN INDIA!

By Mrs. Hilda Dester

What an important and uppermost subject of discussion in the minds of our Christian people! Not only is it discussed verbally, but even in print in our Indian periodicals. Quite often, in our Christian as well as in the Hindu communities, the child's wedding arrangements are made while it is still in its babyhood. There are still only a very few who marry the mate of their own choice. Usually friends or relatives do the choosing. It is not even considered good etiquette for a young man himself to propose to the lady of his choice. That is the task of the father or friend.

One of the tasks of the Christian Church is to teach that girls are not to be sold at chattels, often to the highest bidder. In some parts of India the custom is just the opposite; the father of the girl offers a sum of money to the prospective groom. That sum has often been big enough to help a student get his education. In one instance reported, the dowery paid was big enough to help a young doctor get his post graduate work in America.

Another great task is to teach the people to keep the wedding expenses within the financial status of the groom's family. Many of our poor Christians will sell their fields, cart, plow, cattle, or take a heavy mortgage on them just to get a son married. It often takes years for them to get out of this debt. Just recently a poor crippled father spent about Rs. 40 to get his oldest son married and now has been sitting on our door steps almost daily begging for seed rice to sow his fields.

Among our local people here the wedding feast given is of far greater importance that the wedding ceremony. It has happened here that the wedding ceremony had to be delayed because the parents were not present. Some one had to go call the parents, and persuade them to attend the wedding. They were so busy supervising the cooking of the meal to be served later. At another time, the church bell had rung and folks had assembled only to wait and wait for the bridal party. The bride was not satisfied with the Orriya, home woven wedding sari furnished by the groom. So another one, the kind worn by the local educated people, was borrowed from a Bible woman, and after hasty preparations, the bridal party marched in as though nothing had happened.

The hot season is usually the time for weddings, but this one passed by without a single one in our local church. That may be due to the hard times and the dearness of everything for youths we have of the marriagable age. One of the two weddings we have had since Christmas was a most unique one in that a missionary lad served as "best man." It was a very pretty wedding for our people. There was no veil, no bridal bouquet, no wedding march, nor anything that smacked of the Western customs, but a lovely, quiet, impressive ceremony and both parties were happy and contented with their choice.

We, who were in the hills this hot season had the privilege of attending a beautiful Western church wedding in Kellogs Union Church. Both bride and groom are missionaries, both teachers in Woodstock School. It was a real treat for us to witness this for we have not attended any such since we have been in India.

SNAPSHOTS FROM JANJGIR

All night long in between our "forty winks" we heard the call, "jagte raho; tonhi bahar na janne do; jagte raho; Jagte so!" "Watch out! Do not let the witch come! Watch and sleep!" It came floating through the night air as a wierd alarm.

Cholera was raging in nearby Janjgir. It had not yet come to our suburb. Daily from two to ten people were dying. The toll may easily mount up to one hundred. These people believe that if any family has all members sleeping at one time, then the witch will come and touch that family with cholera and one will die.

Sunday morning an old faithful helper, Mina, came with his usual buoyant step and glad smile. In his hands were two beautiful bouquets of wonderful, large lilies gathered from a nearby reservoir. We took them to church to help us praise God through their beauty. Late that afternoon he got sick. Soon after Monday noon his corpse was under the sod.

* * * * *

This morning off on the northern horizon was a heavy bank of deep blue enmassed clouds. In a few hours the rains came pouring down. The compound was flooded. The monsoon had come. The farmers could now plant their rice in hope, and hope like the rising sun casts its shadows behind.

Shadows? Yes, there have been shadows. Two years ago there was only a very partial crop. Last year many of our Christians suffered a total failure. If you live from hand to mouth in a wretched economic system, and the hand is empty for two years, what will the mouth do?

* * * * *

Darkness was fast coming on as I left the home of a sick young man. Was it cholera? My wife's medicine bottle and the faithful services of Seolall, community nurse, brought complete relief by the time I got there.

A bursting flame off the outskirts of Janjgir, half a mile distant, could not fail to catch my eyes in the deepening gloaming. What is that? All around the monsoon rains had filled the fields with water. The landscape was drenched. All was dripping wet. "Oh" came the reply "they are burying another cholera corpse. Then they will take the ashes to the sacred Ganges and dump them into the holy waters." Further down my homeward road I called the attention of Hindoos to the leaping flames. They repeated the explanations. I asked, "Why do these poor people spend half a year's wage to get Salvation by works, when Christ our Saviour gives it free by His marvelous grace?" They replied, "The rail fare and food is not the only expense. There the Brahman priests will take a good fat fee in addition."

Is it more awful that 100 die of cholera than that 1000 die yearly without Christ? In my parish 5000 die yearly and go into Christless graves. Which is worse,—cholera or poverty—or a Christless life and a Christless grave? S. T. Moyer

A DISTRICT GROUP, SUKHRI, INDIA

SUKHRI GROUP AT SERVICE
Mrs. Christina Harder Duerksen

A DISTRICT TRIP

By Mrs. Christina Duerksen

It is perhaps just about twenty-five years ago when Rev. and Mrs. P. J. Wiens made a trip down into the jungle country south of Mauhadih in order to come to the village of Sukhri. It was not an easy trip but there was a divine urge to go. Just a year before Rev. Steiner had been met by Gopal in the weekly bazaar some miles away and had been persuaded to come to Sukhri to see some people who wanted to take baptism. Workers had been sent there immediately and now a group was ready for the step that outwardly testifies to an inward experience.

Yesterday, January 18, 1942, it was our privilege to spend all day Sunday there. Mr. Duerksen had often come here for various services but for me it was the first opportunity. How easily we had made the trip compared to our senior missionaries twenty-five years ago! We went by car—and although the road was only a cart road yet we experienced no difficulty in getting there. And we did enjoy the jungle through which the road wound. We reached the village just at dusk and so a simple Indian meal and then to bed finished the day for us.

There used to be a nice little church building at this place but the group of Christians went through a period of spiritual slump when they failed to make the necessary repairs. The result was that the building went to ruin. The evangelist's house still stands and part of it is used as a school now. We used it as our stopping place.

Both of the men through whom this settlement started are no longer here. But their direct descendents are. Brother Gopal's wife is still living but is at present not in good standing because she doesn't control her tongue. Gouardhan's grandson is the "Shepherd" in charge of this area and he was also there for the day. His uncles, brothers and cousins make up the greater part of the church group.

It was a cool morning and so the people spread a bit of straw under two big trees and the church was ready. Reverently the meeting was conducted—singing, prayer and the Scripture study. Back in the shadow, as it were, stood all those other leaders—Steiners, Wiens, Moyers, Wengers, Mrs. Burkhard—who had worked in this place.

The group seemed rather small to me until I began to check up to where the children of these early Christians had scattered. I have already mentioned the grandson of Gouardhan who is the ordained "Shepherd" in this area. Another grandson is the housefather in the boy's boarding in Jagdishpur and also the deacon of the mission station church. One of Gopal's sons is in training in the Bible school in Janjgir; another works for the home mission board. One of his daughters is the respected wife of a village school teacher while another one is teaching in the mission school primary department. Some of the young men who went out have not made good and one feels a keen disappointment. But for those who by the grace of God are making good, we rejoice. But back to the present Sukhri!

The evangelist's plan had first been to have an afternoon service but as they talked things over at noon they decided that with so many guests present, this would be a good time to go into the next village to witness there. So after a short rest we set off single file along the footpath to this village which was only about a mile away.

I own to a feeling of uneasiness whenever we come to a strange village to preach, but the evangelist knew where he wanted to take us. We went to the home of a relative of the ruling caste. The husband was not at home so after arranging for us to meet the women, the men with Mr. Duerksen, went on to hold a street meeting. They had a huge crowd, the kind that sat through the meeting of over an hour. The workers were able to sell all the Hindi Gospels and tracts that they had taken along.

In the meantime, our ladies made their appearance. After a few questions and answers (conversation often lags at such meetings) we told them that this, being Sunday, was our special day in which we studied God's Word and sang His praises and that we would like to sing for them. Three young women and our two girls were along with me. The woman whose home we were at smilingly consented, so we sang a song with an Indian melody. Villagers, who are not used to the missionary, often do not understand us when we talk to them. Nevertheless, I tried to tell her how it happened that I had heard a call to this kind of work and how people in our country, who loved the Lord, sent money so that people here in India could go out and tell others about the Saviour.

We sang again and then one of the women gave a good testimony telling on Whom we based our hope of salvation and why. Besides the woman on whom we had been calling there were other women sitting near. Did they really understand what we had been saying? We wondered. Sometimes the darkness of heathenism is so dense that the light of the Gospel cannot shine through. As we rose to go we were politely thanked for coming. By dark we were back in Sukhri again.

The day closed with a short service in the meeting place. Tomorrow we would have to get back to our camp again. But I was so glad I had had the opportunity to be at this place which has been so important as a beginning of the work in the Phuljhar area.

THE WORK IN THE LEPER ASYLUM

By the new Superintendent, O. Waltner

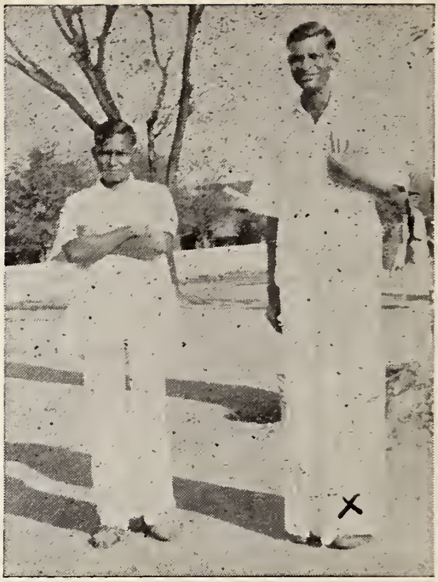
The shocking and dreadful suffering caused by leprosy makes the Christian stop and think. Servants of Christ have seen millions of lepers suffering the limits of human agony and pain. And such servants of Christ have realized the necessity of positive action. Action that has a soul! Action prompted by the very heart of God Himself! Action that constrains one to bring the leper to Christ for him to touch! For it is His touch stimulated by a heart of compassion that is able to heal. Such services meted out to mankind springs from the heart of God to the heart of men and when man is touched by the heart of God, he receives an impulse to give even as God gave. That is why the one gave His life to help alleviate the physical suffering of his fellow men. For the same reason another gave his life to the task of helping his fellow brothers cherish and accept the love of God. And that is the reason why the one, with her constant smiles, spreads the joys of a renewed hope in Christ Jesus. That is the very center of the activities in this haven. The center that provides the impulse to act and work for it is more than human business—it is spiritual business.



Kotari and Joel Asna

Pastor of the Leper Home Church at Champa

Whether in the primary schools where some children because of deformed fingers laboriously write their lessons, or in the wards where older inmates slowly pick out words in their Gospels, there is an atmosphere that lifts the mind and heart above the apparently hopeless future of these people. Whether in the hospital ward where pain wracked patients may toss on their beds, or in the operating room where nurses and the doctors amputate a limb to save a life, there is the same consciousness of an Abiding Presence that comforts the patients and guides the medical staff in lessening bodily sufferings. Whether in the catechism class, where the Brahmin and the untouchable together learn the way to the Cross, or at the Lord's Supper where the redeemed leper responds to the revelation of the suffering Lord Himself, there is the same recognition of the Saviour of the world who calls men to accept Him and then invites to give all because He gave all.

So whereas of the over 550 lepers, many responding to medical attention and treatments, the eternal victories lie in this that the lepers respond to the ministry of the Holy Spirit through His servants. In the past year 76 such victories were recorded! Such victories would ever be impossible if the Bethesda Leper Home were soulless. And thus God continues to triumph gloriously in the lives of the lepers of the B. L. Home because,

The sun can mirror his glorious face,
In the dew drops on the sand,
And the humblest leper heart reflect
The life and love of God.

"BUT FOR THIS CAUSE CAME I UNTO THIS HOUR"

By Harold Ratzlaff

In these days when the world is so upset and our own United States finds itself in the struggle, we are often prayerfully mindful of you, our church throughout the home land, whose representatives we are trying, by the Grace of God, to be. Being less than two years removed from you, the church in which we have grown up and even given some of our effort, and having seen you in actual preparation for this present day situation, you are very near to our hearts and therefore very often on our minds these days. It was last April when we last received an issue of The Mennonite. Therefore we really have no direct statement as to the difficulties which our Church is facing. Yet we cannot help but know that you are facing difficulties which bring with them added responsibilities of many kinds. We cannot help but know that you are facing situations, both in your personal lives, and in the church as a whole, which demand a living, vital faith in God and man. We cannot help but know that you are carrying on enterprizes and various projects in which you are living up to and expressing "The Faith of our Fathers" in a very real way. We think of the great financial burden of the Civilian Public Service camps which you as a church must bear during these times. We think of the great financial strain which you are put to in order to properly support the Relief Committee in its great and urgent work. And over and above these mentioned burdens, we know full well that there are many others. All these matters are not only financial burdens, that perhaps is among the lesser phases of it. They are all burdens of prayer, of responsibility, in many instances of anxiety, perhaps, as to how it shall all continue to go on, for go on it must. I say, we are thinking of you—all of you in our Mennonite Church—as you carry on even in the face of all these odds. And our thinking of you is a stimulant, yes a literal cause, by which we are made to search our own hearts, for are we not also included among those financial burdens, among those burdens of prayer, among those burdens of concern, which you are being called upon to bear in this time? Yes we are. We are here, living and working because you have sent us here and because you are so faithfully supporting us. This fact makes us realize that we too are a very definite part of your burden, and that even now, when the demands which are being made upon you are so great. In view of all this we have to think and think very hard. But not only do we think so seriously, we at the same time have to pray and pray fervently that God shall make us worthy of all of you and of those many sacrifices which you are making for us. We do pray and pray fervently that God shall guide the work which is being done in our mission so as to accomplish His will and glorify His name and build His Kingdom among mankind here in India.

We know that you, as a church, and as individual members of that church are, by God's grace, faithfully shouldering many heavy burdens these days and that your lot is not easy. Therefore, being one of those burdens, as we are, we are trying hard, with God's help, to be a worthy burden. And by that I mean, of course, that we mean to do our work in accordance with God's guidance and will. The very knowledge of your faithfulness and your willingness and your God-given ability to uphold all these good causes even though you have to make great sacrifices in doing it, is and will continue to be an incentive as well as a source of encouragement to us. Thus it behooves us all—you in the home land and we here, to ever be up and doing for our Master.

And speaking of our Master, did He not face difficult times? We all know that He did. But how did He face them? In John 12:27, 28 we read, "Now is my soul troubled and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour: but for this cause came I unto this hour. Father glorify Thy name." There is our example! To be sure, all of us come up against situations in which we want to pray, "Father save me from this hour." But that would be defeat for the very existence of that difficult circumstance is the very purpose of our being in it. Were the circumstance not difficult, there would be no reason for our being in it. Therefore I am convinced that you and I are living today in order that God might cope with this situation through and in us. As Jesus said it, "But for this cause came I unto this hour." We need only to change the "I" to "We" and thus apply it to ourselves. So again, just as Jesus prayed in His hour of difficulty, so must we too pray in this our hour of difficulty, "Father, glorify Thy name." And we may rest assured, human and inadequate as ever we may be, if we unreservedly give ourselves into His will while doing the work of His cause, the Father will glorify His name, even through us, His children.

FAMILY SUNDAY

By H. E. Dester, M. D.

Sunday, July 12, was set aside as family Sunday in the Basna church. Instead of the one hundred and fifty or more children going to the junior church, they were all to meet in the new church and were to sit with their parents in family groups, something seldom done here. On Friday it began to rain and rained incessantly. In twenty-four hours, ending Saturday evening, six inches of rain had fallen. We were not encouraged to decorate the church and prepare for the special service. However, on Sunday morning the clouds were lighter and the sun occasionally peeped through. The church bell rang and kept on ringing for twenty-five minutes to remind the folks of the special call to worship. As the people entered the church they saw large lillies and red bougainvillea in vases on the table. Colorful leaves, usually always present in the jungle, and long hanging clusters of yellow jungle flowers completed the decorations.

By starting time the church was well filled. Some sat on benches, others on planks placed on blocks of wood. Most of the children and many of the adults sat on mats spread on the floor which is of ground. By having the folks sit close together on the floor and by filling every available space, possibly up to two hundred more could have been crowded into the building.

There was a special song by a class of boys, and also one by several of the families. Bible verses were recited by individuals and also by some of the family groups. The head master of the Jansen Memorial School spoke on the Christian marriage. We are confident in saying that all present received a special blessing and quite a few expressed the opinion that this type of service should be repeated.

The new church is sufficiently large for our regular services. It is airy and well ventilated because of the openness. It is not difficult for the speaker to make himself heard throughout the building. We have a church of which we need not be ashamed.

The church roof cost about eight hundred dollars. We are endeavoring to pay this of mission funds, most of which have been provided by the mission societies at home. The rest of the fund, also amounting to about eight hundred dollars, was raised largely by the local congregation. Missionaries and churches of our other mission stations gave substantial aid. One of our missionaries has promised to be responsible for a cement floor.

Another feature about the new church is its beautiful setting among large, stately beja, mauha, and sarai trees. The Christian Endeavor is planning to beautify the yard yet more by planting shrubs, vines and trees. We are indeed happy and grateful for the new place of worship.

UPON THE THRESHOLD

By Mrs. Ruth Ratzlaff

In another three months, in the middle of October, our formal language study will come to a close and we will be ready for active missionary service. We are eagerly looking forward to this time although we realize that language will still be a handicap to us. One cannot master a language even in two years.

This is a challenging time to be living in India. Even though war does not enter our doors, still times are changing in India and one is uncertain of the future. One realizes that the position of the European and American in India hangs in the balance. How much longer our white faces will give us a position of respect and honor we do not know. Perhaps that honor which was bestowed upon us because of our white faces was not always deserved. Be that as it may, to be entering active missionary service at such a time is indeed a challenge. Perhaps changes must come in missionary methods and techniques even though changes can never cause us to lose sight of our great commission. Perhaps our Indian brethren will be forced to rethink the advantages and disadvantages of having foreigners in their midst and of being dependent, many of them, on foreign funds. The future may mean that the missionary will have to make some adjustments in his work and in his living, yes, he may even be subject to inconveniences and danger, but at the same time the Indian himself may be called upon to make adjustments, for he may have to shoulder church and community responsibilities which are new and strange to him. Our prayer at such a time is that we may be able to help our Indian brethren make these adjustments even as we make our own. If independence comes, then new responsibilities as well as new privileges will fall on the Indian. If God can use us in any way to help our Indian friends to shoulder these new duties and to guide them in the use of their new privileges, then we pray that He may do so. We do not know what the future holds, but we do know that God sent us to this land for a purpose, and we look to Him for guidance so that we may not fail Him.

A TESTING TIME

By J. R. Duerksen

I have just returned from a trip to the villages off to one corner of our district. It was very unusual. The roads and the paths were as lonely as I have ever seen them. No people, no foot prints and no cart tracks. They were as smooth as if the rain had patted them down. And why was this so, when at other times roads and foot paths are crowded with travelers? Because of fear of cholera. Villages, where this dreaded disease has not started, keep their watchmen out day and night to prevent all persons who might want to enter or pass through to do so. The first night out two of our Indian preachers and I camped on the verandah of a school building which was some what apart from the village. We were not permitted to enter the village. It was no hardship to us because we had our bedding with us and we usually sleep outside anyway.

The fear of cholera is so great that each village practically cuts itself off from every other village. This causes real suffering because many depend on getting their food supplies from the nearest weekly baazar. The sudden quarantine imposed upon the people, not by law but by universal fear, made many go without meals who would otherwise have had money to buy rice, salt, etc., at the regular market. It is easily seen what happens to those at such times who even before, because of poverty, were unable to get a meal every day. News came that many were dying and we naturally were concerned about those of "the household of faith." Our church leaders were not permitted to go from village to village as they usually do. We were anxious to have our Sunday services in all places if possible. For this purpose the three of us were on the way. One was stopped but two were able to go in opposite directions and held worship services in a number of villages.

It was wonderful to hear the testimony of Christians. In the first village I visited they were praising the Lord that their village had been spared thus far. In the second village a bereaved husband was in sorrow because of the death of his wife but he was thankful that she had not died of cholera. They had been able to bury her according to the way of the Christians. It seems that in these villages the body of one who dies of cholera is not buried but dragged out of the village and thrown into a field or bush. The Bible speaks of such conditions when the dead are left unburied but I never realized how terrible that is, until the stench of dead human bodies by the side of the road was horribly evident as I went along to the next village on this Sunday morning. Here they had had twenty-seven deaths in a few days. The Christians at this place were most thankful that all of them had been spared. Some had been very sick but they said, "We called upon the Lord Jesus and He has made our sick ones well." They joyfully gathered for worship.

The next village was on the other side of a low jungle-covered mountain range with about six miles of winding road leading to it. There had been a very heavy shower, while we worshipped in the last village, and so the road was muddy and slippery but not sticky. When I was thoroughly tired, I came to an old, deserted bungalow with luxurious surroundings of thick forest and towering green hills. The doors were wide open and the floors were swept clean by wind and rain. Here I ate my noon lunch. A fine, young man, who had seen me on the road laboring alnog, came to entertain me while I ate and rested. I very much enjoyed this visit. At 3 p.m. I came to the next village. Here the Christians have been persecuted since they accepted Jesus as their Saviour about two years ago. Land was forcibly taken away from them and all kinds of threats were held over them continually. Twenty-five had died in this village during the week and their bodies had been thrown into the jungle across the road, where vultures and wild beasts were doing their part for the sanitation which men, because of fear, had neglected for the present. Thank God, this condition does not ordinarily exist.

I was anxious to meet the Christians and to my surprise I found them courageous. Some had been sick but were now restored. They said, "Jesus Christ has made them well." One said, "The Lord Jesus has taken all fear away from us. The village owner still persecutes us but the common people love us." Then he went on to tell how the non-Christians of the village had had a meeting in which they decided to leave the gathering of a certain jungle fruit to two of the poorest Christian families so that they might be saved from starvation. For all this they gave thanks to God.

From here I went to another village only about two miles away. The road led through a village where twelve deaths had occured. The village owner asked me for some cholera tablets which I gave him. There are no Christians here so I went on to the above mentioned place. Here we have a church building and the Christians quickly gathered for worship. There was no sickness in this village but the poverty is distressing. So far we were able to say none of the Christains have died of hunger, but recently a girl from a Christian home died of hunger in this village. One of the extraordinary features of the service in each place on this particular Sunday was that after the close of the service I untied my bundle of rice and another little bundle of salt with which I had provided myself to give a small portion to each congregation. It always caused a lot of amusement because there were so many hungry ones and so little to place before them but when I explained to them that on such muddy road one was not able to carry more than fifteen pounds on a bicycle they saw it all and I received the most profuse thanks.

It was about evening now and one more village to reach. The road led thru a thick jungle and around a big hill so two young fellows offered themselves as escorts. They helped me over the difficult places and then returned home. I was glad to come to a place where I anticipated a night's rest. The Christians had just gathered for their evening prayers and they took me in wholeheartedly. But before sitting down I untied my bedding and breadbox and put on clean clothes. I was not quite through when the village owner came and with the sternnes of a good Indian ruler ordered me out of the village. He said I was bringing this dreadful sickness to his village and he would not have me spend the night there under any circumstances. The Christians then explained to him that I had brought rice and salt and medicine and that I was harmless. So they let me sleep that night in the verandah of the new church building which was built this summer and which I saw complete for the first time now.

This is a time of testing and, praise God, the Lord is having the victory in the hearts of His people. Matt. 11:25—"At that time Jesus answered and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes."

In other villages at least seventeen from Christian homes have died during these last few weeks. We believe that they have fallen asleep in Jesus and are thankful that they did not have to die without Christ. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life."

WHEN, HOW, AND WHY I HAVE ACCEPTED JESUS CHRIST

For a Brahman to become a Christian is a very rare thing. But the following autobiography is an example of how the power of Christ can enlighten and save to the uttermost. Kotari Master has been a school teacher in our leper home ever since he came to us. But since he has become a Christian, his influence in the leper home and his service in the church has greatly increased. He is still a patient but improving satisfactorily. The readers will be interested to hear his life's story as he has written in it his own words.

"I was Brahman by caste and come from the descendants of Aurvedic Kashyap. Although I do not come from a rich family, yet I can faithfully say that the general condition of our home was good. My father was the headmaster of a government Anglo-vernacular middle school and he received a good salary. By his efforts and recommendation, I also got an employment in a similar school.

"The change of time has its effects upon every one. Wise men can talk about the present and the past, science can invent many things, but the future of a man, how his life will pass, none but God alone knows.

"Neither I nor any of my people could even dream of those days when I would be afflicted with leprosy, a great disease that casts people so low and detestable in the human society. Needless to say how depressed we were in the family when we discovered that I was a leper. Naturally a man does everything to take himself out of troubles when he finds that hard days are upon him. He is so disappointed at times, that he does not mind to commit suicide. A desperate life is the turning point toward God. Finally he gives himself in the hands of God. My life is just the same and I came to Champa with the above idea in my mind. My condition got worse every day and I was very worried. I looked for pity. During my school days I learned the following verses:

'Where there is a will, there is a way.'
'Courage brother do not stumble,
Though thy path is dark as night,
There is a Star to Guide the humble,
Trust in God and do the right.'

"I was left to my fate and set out from home doomed to die. All the time I had but one thought in my mind that God is a loving God and He will guide me on my adventure. As I have said before, I did not spare anything to cure myself from leprosy. At last I decided to go to the famous home for lepers where I was kindly taken in, and the superintendent of the Bethesda Leper Home took compassion on me.

"A month passed by and the Christian atmosphere of the home made a very deep impression on me. I decided to accept Christ as my Saviour and prayed to Him that if it is according to His divine will, I may be cured from this disease. I promised to serve Him and read His Holy Bible and listen to the messages given in the church. Sometimes it appeared beyond my belief, but I prayed and prayed very humbly. Often I have cried on account of my leprosy.

"After a few days we had a Bible course in the leper home. I attended it. My doubts were cleared off and I remember the words in the hymn, 'I do not understand many things, but surely do I believe in Him.' At once I gave room to the Lord Jesus in my heart.

"It is true that sacrifice is very necessary to be saved from sin, and people do everything for salvation. My parents took me to pilgrimages, and according to old old customs of India my parents recited the Hindu scriptures Bhagwat Gita, Ramayn, and Mahabharat. In the Brahman caste a consecration ceremony is observed when the man puts a string on his shoulder (which is called Janeu in Hindi) after which he must do some religious deeds, i. e., worshipping, reciting verses from the Holy Scriptures, etc. This is the second birth of the Brahmans, but I must write here frankly that I had my third birth and this was the baptism which is an open confession for real Salvation. I still wonder with great surprise that on my consecration ceremony as Brahman my father spent about Rs. 800—but I got nothing for my soul. If money would buy salvation where could poor people find it?

"I thank God that through Jesus Christ the way to Salvation has been opened for all whether rich or poor, a Brahman or a low caste man. What have I received from Christ Jesus? Through scripture I have learned about His love, our great hope and our strength in Him. In sorrow and trouble the Bible gives me comfort. Heb. 12:5, 6, 'And ye have forgotten the exhortation which speaketh unto you as unto children, My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him: For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth.' Isa. 41:13, 'For I, the Lord thy God will hold thy right hand, saying unto thee, Fear not; I will help thee.' Through the Bible I have learned about a temperate life. Titus 2:12, 'Teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world.' I have learned that patience and righteousness. Acts 13:39. 'And by Him all that believe are justified from all things, from which we could not be justified by the law of Moses.'

"I thank God that through Jesus Christ I have received many blessings for my body and soul. My pen cannot write them all."

HAVE I THIS ZEAL?

By P. W. Penner

Someone recently wrote among other things under the question, "Why should I give to missions?" these words, "I am put to shame by the sternness and liberality of heathen converts."

Jharruh (meaning broom) who attended a now abandoned mission school had then obtained certain Bible truths in the daily curriculum. After those days he entered his vocation apparently unaffected by the Scripture knowledge gathered during his childhood days. The talk was current, "Mission schools for non-Christian children belong to so-called fruitless enterprises." Jharruh like Daniel, "Kept the matter in mine heart." As Mary, he "Kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart." Yet he had beheld one of his older colleagues meet with discouraging opposition when he broke through for Christ. He withstood the fierce persecution and remained firm in the face of all the cursing, etc. Now his senior from among those scholars is rising to an influential leadership among our mission's Christian workers.

All this jointly convinced Jharruh that the knowledge lying dormant within him embraced power unfelt. New light streamed into his heart. He did not keep his enlightenment for himself, but shared it with his wife, divulged it also to the Christian workers. During the midnight hours he like Nicodemus stole away to the Christian's home where he drank in diligently further instruction and truths. He knew if this became known, especially to his caste brethern, alarm would be struck, a turmoil be the result, and an opposing force would be mustered in that and in other villages. Ultimately exactly this happened. When Jharruh swept out fear, he harboured "Perfect Love"; he made known his desire to testify faith in the Lord through baptism.

The headmaster of the government school, a bitter opponent, singled out the village owner's house for the attack on Jharruh who was employed by the village owner. A committee was summoned. The headmaster drafted a document in which it was stated that the mind of Jharruh was deranged, and he had now become sorry regarding his intentions. If he should anyway become a Christian the mission should be made responsible for the support of his family, furthermore obligating the mission to deposit Rs. 1,000 to serve as an endowment fund to cover other expenses. Other lying paragraphs were found in this document. The headmaster induced those present to put pressure upon Jharruh to sign this paper. Poor man, he reluctantly signed under protest. The headmaster detected that the village owner came and with the sternness of a good through the mission school, showed no interest. He wanted to make him become more responsible, urged him now to keep the document in custody, telling the village owner if he would be found lax his influence among the tennants would certainly wane.

The headmaster furthermore observed in spite of these strenuous efforts Jharruh's determination remained unshaken. He removed therefore his dhotie (loin cloth) spread it out on the ground, and said to Jharruh, "You must remember I am the foremost among the youth of this village, a leader in another village, my name is great,

CHURCH AT DEGANIA
Twenty-Five miles northeast of Basna, India. Formerly a Baptist church. Turned over to Mennonites in 1941

my fame undisputed, what I order must be complied with. You better look out what shall happen to you and your family! I am now going to lie down upon the spread-out dhotie, you take this other dhotie, spread that over me, put a clod on top of it, exhibiting thereby that you have committed an unforgiveable crime. You have killed and buried a foremost person by your becoming untrue to the forefather's religion by embracing Christianity. The births after death, through which you shall pass, will be degrading, and your banishment from God's presence is sealed forever!"

There stood Jharruh like Daniel, amazed but facing the enraged and cursing crowd like a flint unmoved. He appointed the day for baptism; I was summoned to officiate. The midnight instructions continued. Jharruh was thrown out of employment; banished also from his living quarters, and the house was locked; the wife was enticed away and removed to another village unknown; most of his belongings were confiscated. Jharruh was, alas, left utterly destitute. He previously carried the clean baptism clothes secretly to the evangelist's home for custody until needed. When the enemies noticed the day of baptism drawing nearer, Jharruh was forcefully seized and locked up in a house, which was carefully guarded until I was gone again.

Some weeks elapsed uneventfully. One Saturday Jharruh with his wife, who had in the meanwhile returned, went to her folks in another village, from here he hastened to our camp in Bominidi. Here he received baptism. He then returned to his wife filled with joy. The next day he went with her to his village, glorifying God in the presence of the angry crowd, telling them what had taken place. What else could be done by his own people? The caste pronounced him dead; this sentence, however, was not conferred upon his wife; all efforts to make her disloyal to her husband utterly failed. Some weeks later she was also baptised. A happy couple freed of their heathenish belief carried on their work. The village owner who had discharged them, re-employed them. Now he testifies that they are trustworthy servants, discharging their duties faithfully.

"There are Daniels nowadays, and the questions must be put, 'Am I one, and are you one?' "

"BUSINESS GETS A SOUL"

By Harold Ratzlaff

That was an article in the recent edition of the Readers Digest. The Bethesda Leper Home has a soul—that is the history of more than 40 years of humanitarian and spiritual ministry of the Bethesda Leper Home to hundreds of lepers.

Finding more than mere brick walls, tile roofs, long verandahs, shade trees and garden plots, a leper girl of the teens who knows a little English juggled the alphabet and got her famous K. O. S. Now Keep-On-Smiling is the accepted principle of the lepers.

A leper boy was happy enough for the weekly rice allowance, whole wheat flour, respectable clothes and clean blankets. But the "why" and the "whereby" of all these provisions challenged the lad's thinking. Life powered by Christ fascinated him. Moreover, it provided the answer he sought. An inventory of his life resulted in giving a quit-claim deed to Christ. Two years ago he was discharged as symptom-free. This year he will be graduated from the Janjgir Bible School. His frequent sermons in the spacious leper home church contribute definitely in making the Bethesda Leper Home more than an institution.

Daily baths, clean bandages, soothing medicines, healing injections and hospital beds are but a dream to most lepers. Here these things are facts. That all this should be provided for the welfare and comfort of lepers to the mind of another leper lad was more than a mere incident. It was a dynamic force in the lives of men that impelled them to serve the most unfortunate of the unfortunates. That force gripped this young lad. In Christ he received sympathetic love for the people whose suffering he so well knew. But genuine love wears working clothes—its watchword is action. God so loved—He gave. True love does not fail to keep us busy in life. And this young lad gave his life in the service of his fellow sufferers. Declared symptom-free, he stayed on and is now the chief-injector of our home.

INDIA

Annual Composite of the General Conference Mennonite Mission from 1941 to March 31, 1942

By P. W. Penner

I. Beginning

The stations were opened from 1901-1926, viz., Champa, Janjgir (1901), Mauhadih (1911), Korba (1915), Basna (now Jagdishpur) (1924); Medical (1926).

The most northern is Korba, the extreme southern, Jagdishpur (Basna). A straight line measures about 85 miles. All stations have thus far been supervised by European missionaries, assisted by a goodly number of Indian Christian helpers of both sexes. The third largest Bethesda Leper Home between Champa and the Hasdeo River was opened in 1902 with two inmates; it has now close to 600, mainly supported by Missions to Lepers of Scotland. Our mission furnishes the supervisor. At present Rev. O. A. Waltner is the superintendent.

II. Field

A—Approximate area in square miles	8,000
B—Approximate villages and towns (no large cities)	2,900
C—Approximate population (difficult to obtain)	1,000,000

A straight line drawn from Calcutta to Bombay, 1223 miles, crosses the field in the northern portion 400 miles from Calcutta. The Hasdeo River flows southward until it empties into the Mahanadi River which crosses the field midways from west to east. The Bengal Nagpur Railway crosses the field with Champa and Janjgir close to it. The field, in a valley with mountains in the north, is traversed by a low range in the southern half. The soil is fertile for rice culture; a little wheat is raised, also maize, and large quantities of peas. The northern and southern portions are densely forested. There are tigers, leopards, bears, wolves, etc., roaming about dangerously. The rainfall is in the neighborhood of 50 inches. There are three seasons: cool (October to March), hot (April to June), monsoon (July to September). The thermometer ranges from 45 to 122 degrees Fahrenheit. Snowfall is unknown here and there is some hoarfrost. The languages mainly employed are Hindi and Oriya. More than 65 different castes are found, major number of the population belongs to the lower castes, from which the bulk of Christians emerges.

III. Working Staff

		M.	W.	Total
A—European missionaries (all except one U. S. A. citizens)		9	13	22
B—Indian Helpers:	Evangelistic	54	18	72
	Educational	27	20	47
	Medical	31	19	50
	Institutional	2	5	7
	Industrial	15	6	21

To each of the European missionaries fall on the average over 45,400; to each missionary and Indian worker are assigned over 6,000; to each church member about 431. Can effective work on all be done to these multitudes? "Pray ye, therefore, the Lord of harvest, that He will send labourers into His harvest!"

How many are ready to say with the apostle Paul, "I am debtor," "I am ready," "I am not ashamed"?

IV. Christian Community

A—Organized churches (leper ch. included)	23
B—Outstations with residing Christians	115
C—Members of our churches	2,393
D—Christians not members	55
E—Unbaptized children	1,250
TOTAL of all Christian constituency	3,736

There were 433 baptisms in fifteen months

V. Christian Activities

A. Main mission stations		6
B. Outstations with Indian workers only		38
C. Primary schools 15, enrollment 607
D. Middle schools 2, enrollment 196
E. Villages touched		648
F. Zanana visits		5,150
G. Bibles disposed of		78
H. New Testaments disposed of		173
I. Bible portions disposed of		1,188
J. Books, tracts, handbills		5,320
K. Sunday School work
1. Number of schools		38
2. No. officers and teachers	138
3. No. scholars	1,750
Total	1,888
L. Other organizations
1. Number of Christian Endeavors		6
2. Number of Women's Societies		6
3. Testimony bands		4
4. Mutual aid banks		2
5. Weaving association		1
6. Bible courses		6
M. Orphanages		2
1. Boys		7
2. Girls		12
N. Boardings		2
1. Boys		122
2. Girls		98
O. Widows		127
P. Leper home		1
1. Men and women 569; Christians 370
2. Sp. Treatment		569
3. Dismissed		8
4. Relatively cured		194
5. Untainted boys		26
6. Untainted girls		42
Q. Medical work
1. Number of hospitals		2
2. Number of dispensaries		6
3. Number of patients (January)		17,720
4. Number of impatients		2,194

NOTE—Three is a large number of treatments not registered.

R. Industrial work pursued is weaving, smithing, printing, dairying, farming, and gardening. There is a general awakening to the paramount task of making every scholar and student a productive useful citizen. The procedure is slow; however, progress warrents good hope that ultimately the goal will be reached.

S. Financial Achievements
1. Church dues	Rs. 3,415
2. Sunday collections	1,130

3. Special contributions	1,501
Total	6,076
(326½ is $1,852.00)
4. Sunday School	512
5. Evangelical Bibles, etc., sales	335
6. Educational	2,953
7. Medical	15,745
8. Institutional	1,015
Grand Total	Rs. 20,560

These collections, in spite of the two-years' crop failures, have more than held their own from last year. Tithing is making progress. On various occasions considerable is said, special meetings held, encouragements given wherever opportunity offers itself. The sale of literature has enhanced perceptibly, largely due to the "All Family Bible and New Testament Campaign" at Champa during the Bible course. More Bibles and Testaments have been disposed of in the mission than any other year. The Champa Church had more baptisms than any previous year in its history. The last communion in 1941 saw 168 at the Lord's Table, 41 more than any previous time.

God in the midst of war rumors and more or less domestic political unrest has caused His work to progress, His guidance was felt perceptibly.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Herbert E. Miller, Deer Creek, Oklahoma

NOVEMBER 22—"In my Father's house are many mansions—I go to prepare a place for you.—I will come again and receive you unto myself." John 14:2, 3.

Jesus said these words to his disciples in the passover chamber. He was soon to leave them and ascend to the Father. Jesus could not have left them a greater promise than that he would come again someday for his own. This promise is also for us today who believe in him. Our life now while yet in the flesh, is as the Apostle Paul wrote, "Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face." I Cor. 13:12a. "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." I Cor. 2:9.

NOVEMBER 23—"And Joshua rent his clothes and fell to the earth upon his face until the evening." Josh. 7:6.

Joshua the man of great faith in God, but why such distress? The answer is in Josh. 7:11. "Israel hath sinned: they have even transgressed my covenant—they have also stolen." Thus God continued in verse 12, "Therefore the children of Israel cannot stand before their enemies." So what must Israel do? In verse 12c God tells them, "I will not be with you any more except ye destroy the devoted thing from among you." Achan had taken of the forbidden spoils of Jericho. He tried to hide and cover up his sin, but God demanded justice. Are we laboring under spiritual difficulties because of hidden and unconfessed sins? Jesus is most willing to forgive us our transgressions, so that we might find genuine happiness in Him.

NOVEMBER 21—"Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils." I Tim. 4:1.

This verse describes a pathetic condition. However, it is also a verse of comfort in that God prepares his people for coming events and conditions. This is evidenced throughout all Scripture. Jesus told the disciples that he would be led before rulers, be mocked, crucified, and would rise again the third day. In our day, though people depart from God, our comfort is that God does not depart from those who believe in him. It is a satisfying thought to know that no person or power can overpower God. We can place our complete trust in him. Jesus said to Peter, "Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat, but I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not."

NOVEMBER 25—"But speak thou the things that become sound doctrine." Titus 2:1.

Two farmers were once sitting by the roadside discussing the events of the day. A traveler came along and asked the way to the next town. The first farmer said, "Go to the next corner and turn left." The traveler proceeded. The second farmer turned to his neighbor in astonishment, "Don't you know you told him the wrong direction?" "Sure, but what difference does that make to me?" Would we not like to have caught up with the traveler and told him the right direction? God wants us as his witnesses to speak of his doctrines as recorded in Scripture. Such doctrines as redemption, atonement, regeneration, Christ's second coming, and many others. Let us speak of the Scriptural truths and facts and find joy in witnessing for Christ.

NOVEMBER 26—"Blessed is he whosoever shall not be offended in me." Luke 7:23.

John the Baptist had sent two of his disciples to enquire of Jesus whether he was the Christ or if they should look for another. Probably, he thought Jesus should have revolutionized the world by that time. Jesus told them to tell John of his ministry of healing the blind, the lame, the lepers, and raising the dead. Rather than prescribing what Jesus ought to do, our Christian duty is to carry out his commands. Jesus went the way of the Cross, but to some this is a stumbling block. He gave his life so that they who believe in him might have life eternal. Let us not find offense in Him, and be unhappy, but praise Him and be filled with his Spirit.

NOVEMBER 27—"Men ought always to pray and not to faint." Luke 18:1b.

Prayer is the power house in our Christian life. It is the "upper room" in our devotional life. Prayer is casting all our care, worry, difficulties, heartaches, and soul struggles upon Jesus. We may sometimes think we are doing Jesus an injustice by taking all our trials and troubles to him. But notice, he asks us to do just that rather than faint under our burden. If we faint He has not had the opportunity to show us his love and power. It is a virtue beyond description to do as Jesus bids and find Him to be the Way, the Truth, and the Life.

NOVEMBER 28—"Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." Prov. 22:6.

"A man in a covered wagon, driving through a Western town, stopped and hailed a man on the street. 'Hey, any saloons in this town?' he asked. 'Yes, four,' was the answer. 'Giddap,' said the stranger, moving on. 'I can't locate here; I've got three boys in this wagon.' 'Stop a minute,' yelled the stranger, 'what's your business?' 'My business is to save these boys,' came back the answer, as he disappeared round a bend in the road." (S. S. Times). It may be quite difficult in our day to find a town that is free of the temptations and allurements of the modern city. But there can be Christian homes and churches where children are taught to pray, and are taught the stories of the Bible. Homes where children learn to love and respect the Lord Jesus. What sacrifices do we make that they can learn the way of the Lord?

NOVEMBER 29—"The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." Luke 19:10.

A banker in New York had a great desire to get the gospel to the soldiers at Sandy Hook, but was not permitted to carry the message to them in person. In order to fulfill his desire he called on a firm which manufactured advertising novelties and had them make several thousand small mirrors about three inches in diameter. On the celluloid back of each mirror he had printed the words of John 3:16. Beneath the words of this incsription was written, "If you want to see who it is that God loves and for whom He gave His Son, look on the other side." How important it is that we see our own name mentioned in John 3:16. Remember, Jesus is interested in each one of us personally. "Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time." I Pet. 5:7.

NOVEMBER 30—"Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain: that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you." John 15:16.

"Have thine own way, Lord! Have Thine own way!
Thou art the Potter; I am the clay
Mould me and make me after Thy will,
While I am waiting, yielded and still.

Have Thine own way, Lord! Have Thine own way!
Search me and try me, Master, today:
Whiter than snow, Lord, wash me just now,
As in Thy presence humbly I bow.

Have Thine own way, Lord! Have Thine own way!
Hold o'er my being absolute sway!
Fill with Thy Spirit till all shall see Christ only, always, living in me."

THE MISSION OF THE CHURCH

Matt. 18:15-17, Acts 1:8, 2:42, 6:1-4, 11:27-30, 13:1-3, I John 1:3

The Church began at Pentecost. The name designates a people called out of the world—the ecclesia—to be separated unto God. The Church is the entire body of believers in and followers of Christ. The word as used in the Bible does not refer to a building or to a denomination. The Church was founded by Jesus, and in a unique sense is His Church. It has grown from a very small beginning to the present world-wide proportions. In spite of great opposition, the gates of hell have not prevailed against her; in fact, the Church is continually growing. Significant things are taking place, especially in heathen lands.

The Church is responsible for the preaching of the gospel in all the world. Our lesson references touch on a number of things which are the mission of the Church. Jesus indicates four steps to be taken to bring about reconciliation between two members of the Church who have a quarrel with each other (Matt. 18:15-17). This advice is to Christians, and it is good advice for anyone to follow. The main purpose is to save the offending brother. Unchristian conduct of a member is a concern of the Church. No one can be saved by condoning his sin.

The first mission of the Church is to witness unto Christ (Acts 1:8). This was the last commission He gave just before His ascension. He promised the necessary power of the Holy Ghost to enable His disciples to witness to the death, resurrection, and saving power of Christ throughout the whole world. The Church of today is to be a witnessing Church.

It is the mission of the Church to provide spiritual nurture for converts to Christ. The Church should not be satisfied with merely bringing the gospel message to men and leading them to Christ. The Church needs to "continue steadfastly" in Christ's doctrines (Acts 2:42) and give spiritual nurture to the new-born Christians. These need the fellowship of the more mature Christians.

The problem of taking care of the needy within the membership had to be taken care of in the early Church. Those who had means gave liberally. There were those among the foreign Jews who felt that they were being neglected in the relief work (Acts 6:1-4). Steps were taken at once to remove all cause for complaint. The first church organization came into existence. A division of labor was effected and both the spiritual and the relief work were well taken care of. It is the mission of the Church today to arrange such organization as is necessary to do needed relief work among her members and elsewhere according to ability. The ministers of the Church should not be hampered with the details of the relief work (vs. 4). The Antioch church sent material relief to the brethren in the Jerusalem church in time of serious need (Acts 11:27-30). They laid down a pattern for the Church of all time—to relieve distress, and especially in its own fellowship.

Jesus commissioned his Church to send witnesses into all parts of the earth. The Antioch church was moved by the Holy Ghost to send her two ablest men, Barnabas and Saul, as missionaries in response to that commission. They were sent forth by the Church to share the good news of the gospel with those who knew it not. It is the mission of the Church to find and prepare missionaries and send them into the field and support them by her prayers and means. Churches who are faithful to Jesus' commission are sharing the gospel with the needy ones. The Church can scarcely be true to Christ if she is not active in missionary work. Through the church we may share with the under-privileged wherever we can support missionary effort.

It is the mission of the Church to win souls for Christ and to help them to live Christlike lives. The Church is Christ's agency for carrying on His work here on earth. He works through His servants. The Church is to provide the opportunity for people to fellowship together in worship in a spiritual atmosphere. All Christians need nurture with spiritual food or they will die spiritually. The Church is to furnish spiritual food which will enable us to grow more Christlike. The Church should help us all to see what God requires in Christian living.

What must we do so that we may obtain the most spiritual help from the Church?

When should difficulties and personal offenses between brethren be taken up by the Church?

What is the value of personal testimony both to others and to the one who speaks?

IN MEMORIAM

JACOB H. QUIRING was born in Koppenthal, Russia, July 1, 1875. His father, John Quiring, was in minister and elder of the Mennonite Churches in The Volga District.

At the age of eleven his father placed him in a private school on the Weierhof, Germany, where he remained until completing his studies. He then entered the Basal Seminary, and returned to Russia at the age of twenty-one.

He was ordained to the ministry by his father, and served the General Conference of Mennonites in Russia until he came to the United States in 1905. From 1905 until 1907 he served the various churches under the auspices of the Home Mission Board of the General Conference of Mennonites in this country.

On September 17, 1908, he married Dora Haury, daughter of Dr. S. S. Haury of Newton, Kansas.

He entered Moody Bible Institute in the fall of 1907 and continued his studies at McCormick Theological Seminary and Chicago University. In 1913 he went abroad and entered Berlin University as a Fellow in Hebrew from McCormick Seminary.

He was professor of Greek, Hebrew, and Biblical Literature at Witmarsum Seminary and Bluffton College from 1921 to 1931.

From 1931 until his death on October 26, 1942, he resided in New York City. He was an active member of the Riverside Church of which Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick is the pastor.

In addition to near relatives in Russia he is survived by his wife and three daughters, Mrs. Maurice Huber of Cleveland; Mrs. William Williams of Columbus; and Helene.

Funeral services were held in the Mennonite Church at Bluffton, Ohio, Saturday afternoon, October 31, 1942. Rev. J. N. Smucker had charge of the service and Dr. Ed. G. Kaufman spoke words of comfort based on the word of Paul in I Corinthians 13:12, "For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face."

JACOB B. REIMER was born on June 7, 1861, in South Russia in the village Klefeld and died Octtober 14, 1942. He was the son of Bernhard B. and Anna Friesen Reimer.

His childhood and school days were spent in several different villages in South Russia. Among his favorite teachers he mentions in his life history Isaac Duerksen, then one of the most progressive instructors. Him he also credits with being most influential in his decision to give his life to Christ. Especially, was he fond of the life story of Joseph.

He came to America with his parents in 1877. They left the train at Burrton, Kansas, and settled on a farm four miles east and three-fourths north of Inman, where he made his home for the rest of his life.

On May 30, 1880, he was accepted as a member of the Hoffnungsau Church, where he retained his membership until the Inman Mennonite Church was organized. Of this he became a charter member.

On January 4, 1884, he was united in marriage to Katherina Kliewer. They lived happily together and shared life's joys and sorrows for almost fifty-nine years. This union was blessed with six children.

He always lent a helpful hand where an opportunity existed. Not having had the opportunity to attain any schooling in America he was always on the alert to gain knowledge. This also explains why he took so much interest in youth and education. He was a willing church and conference worker and took an active interest in community work.

WILHELM B. FLAMING, son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Flaming, was born on November 7, 1917, near Dubois, Idaho. In December, 1919, they moved to Kansas. Here he finished two years of work at Goessel Rural High School. On May 16, 1937, he joined the Alexanderwohl Mennonite Church. "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose," Rom. 8:28, was a favorite verse of his. When Camp Henry was opened December 9, 1941, he was in the group who started the camp. A fellow campee writes of him as follows: "We who came later looked to him as one of the experienced campees and every one who became intimately acquainted with him appreciated his constant friendly attitudes."

The campees didn't realize that he was sick until he did not appear at the breakfast table. They found him in bed with an upset stomach. At 10:30 he was removed to the camp infirmary where he could be under constant care. For lunch he ate a sandwich. This made him feel like vomiting, and Sunday evening his temperature had risen to 101.5. They tried to get a doctor, but one was out of town and the other was sick in bed. Monday morning his temperature had gone up a degreee, and when the doctor came that morning he diagnosed it as intestinal flu. During the day the doctor's prescriptions seemed to do no good, and by the evening when the doctor called again his temperature had gone up to 104 degrees plus. Tuesday morning the doctor found him very much better. Wednesday morning he was apparently some better including his temperature. While they were eating the patient suddenly called for help. He had severe abdominal pain. He said, "Call the doctor, because I don't think that I can stand this pain much longer." This all happened at about 6:30 a.m. Wednesday. He was removed to a hospital. He was operated upon. They found his ascending colon misplaced. This had led to a misrepresentation of facts. The first diagnosis was intestinal flu, but the operation proved a ruptured appendix and severe peritonitis. The doctors gave him from five to thirty hours to live. From 9:00 p.m. to about 5 a.m. he seemed to rally. After this he grew weaker and weaker and at 8:35 a.m.,Thursday, he passed away at the age of twenty-four years. He died just when his parents with Mae Banman arrived.

Menno Holdeman, camp infirmary attendant, testifies, "Our fellow campee led such an exemplary life before us all that we are challenged with his life." He leaves to mourn his departure: His father and mother; his fiancee, Mae Banman; four brothers and four sisters, John B. Flaming, Jacob B. Flaming, Mrs. Rudolph Hiebert, Mrs. Menno Hiebert, Mrs. Adolf E. Franz, and at home Theodore, Susie, and Alvin.

HENRY DYCK was born in Elbing, West Prussia, on April 4, 1866, to Frank and Maria Dyck. In 1875 he came to this country with his uncle, Isbrand Remple, who settled near Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, and later in Beatrice, Nebraska. It was here that Henry was baptized in 1882.

In Beatrice he married Maria Elizabeth Allert. This devoted couple spent nearly fifty-three happy years together.

In the fall of 1902 they moved to Adams County, Washington, and settled near Schrag, living on this place until 1939 when they made their home with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Franz. Father Dyck continued to live here after the passing of Mother Dyck in June, 1940, visiting his other children frequently.

He was a charter member of the Menno Mennonite Church and served as deacon for many years, being a regular attendant at divine worship until the very last. He was also active in community affairs, having served as both school clerk and director in his district.

His health had been failing him for some time, but he had had a happy visit with his sons and other relatives in Colfax when a turn for the worse came just twenty-four hours before his death.

He went to be with his Lord and Savior on October 2, 1942.

Surviving him are: two brothers, Abraham and Peter Dyck of Paso Robles, California; seven children, Justine, Anna, Gerhardt and Henry of Colfax, Frank and Agatha of Schrag; and Helen of Menno; and twenty-four grandchildren.

His desire had been that he might never be a burden to others, and he never was, for everywhere he went he helped to lighten burdens rather than to make them heavier.

WHAT IS HOME WITHOUT A BIBLE?

"What is home without a Bible?
'Tis a place where daily bread
For the body is provided,
But the soul is never fed.

What is home without a Bible?
'Tis a vessel on the sea,
Compass lost and rudder broken
Drifting, drifting aimlessly.

What is home without a Bible?
Listen! ponder while I speak;
'Tis a home with Bibles in it,
But not opened once a week."

MISSIONS IN THE POST-WAR WORLD

The world lies in darkness. Nation has risen against nation, and human blood is flowing everywhere. We cannot foresee the end. We only know that God still reigns, and that the eternal light awaits to break through the darkness. Light will only break through our darkness through men of God who seek new ways of bringing love into human relationships. Such an enterprise is missions.

Do we really know the meaning of missions? Suppose that we try to evaluate the meaning of missions. Is it not sharing in a quest? Here is one who has found a great truth for life, a pearl of great price in the wide field of experience. He would not enjoy it by himself, but shares it as did Andrew, the apostle, with his brother. Having found one jewel suggests that there may be many.

Missions teach men the meaning of real brotherhood. When a country is Christian it tends to break down caste and improve the conditions of the underprivileged. The spreading of opportunity results when men understand the worth of persons.

Taking one's share of the responsibility is essential in the smooth running of a home, a business, a nation, a universe.

Opening the door to a larger oneness comes most fully and completely by way of the Christian mission enterprise. Then what do missions really mean? "Searching out the hidden roots of things—whether it be in man's quest for God, the proper relation of brother to brother, opportunity to grow and develop, the taking of one's share of the responsibility, or the realization of a higher oneness; missions do something for all these in the homelands and even more in the unfortunate countries. We are God's servants, and He is calling us. The missionary in his own person is a strong mediating influence. He proclaims a gospel of lawfullness, order, and discipline and is an instrument of peace within the nation which he serves.

It is sometimes charged, that the missionary creates disorder. The charge is wholly false, except in the sense that he aims to produce a discontent with sin. In that sense he is a wonderful disturber; otherwise, he is a peace agent. He goes to warlike tribes and leaves them a law-abiding, industrious people He lives not beside, but among the people. He comes not to spend a few years, earn a pension, and then to home, but to make his home with them for life. The missionary is in a unique way humanity's cleaning house of ideas and ideals—of motives and movements. Christian missions is, probably, the most effective instrument for mediating between and bringing together the human race.

No human enterprise requires stronger motives than the work of Christian missions. There is no enterprise so vast in its extent, so difficult in its character. It often staggers our faith. Nineteen centuries after the birth of evangelism, the disciples of Christ still face great unoccupied fields where the name of Christ has never been proclaimed. Missions disappoint hope. At times where the harvest was ripening the blast of persecution or the blight of revolution has ruined the expectation of the reapers.

We may all be missionaries wherever we are by showing love and doing deeds.

"While the souls of men are dying
For a little bit of love,
And the children, too, are crying
For a little bit of love,
Stand no longer idly by,
You may help them, if you try,
Go then saying, 'Here am I,
With a little bit of love.'"

A man saw a little girl carrying a little boy nearly her size in her arms. He asked the question, "Little girl, isn't that boy too heavy for you?"

She replied, "Oh no, sir, he's my brother."

That was mission work at home.

The history of the church reveals many motives, and yet not all these motives were approved of God. For example, the Pharisee's zeal at the time Christ was for Judaism rather than for God. Missions which are based on rivalry of church parties are based on an unworthy missionary motive. Christian imperialism is one important motive. Missions promote civilization, encourage trade, and produce social progress. The flag follows the missionary and trade follows the flag. The conditions of the non-Christian world are such as to move the hearts of God's servants. There is poverty. Every non-Christian land is poor. The non-Christian world is hungry. It is estimated that in Asia and Africa more than two hundred million people always go to bed with hunger unsatisfied. The non-Christian lands are physically afflicted; they are disease smitten countries. The non-Christian world degrades its womanhood and neglects its children. It is a world of social oppression. They are ignorant and illiterate.

These needs must be met by religion. The non-Christian religions are inadequate to bring relief, for they have had their chance. Turkey is the answer to Mohammedanism, India is the answer to Hinduism; China to Confusianism; Japan to Budduism.

But the perfect adequacy of Jesus Christ to meet not only individual requirements but the whole range range of social and national need has been proved in every land to which He has been taken. Again the great motive of duty, Christ's last command to His disciples should appeal to every man's conscience in the sight of God. As the Duke of Wellington expressed it, "We have our marching orders." We are to begin with man on our right hand belt of the globe until we come back to the man on our left hand. Did Christ say, "Preach to every creature, except to the Hindu, Buddhist, and Mohammedan, who have religions of their own"? No he made the scope of His command absolutely universal.

"Can we," you will ask, "find back of all these motives a final motive for missions?"

Yes. The final outcome is the passion for the glory of God. In this motive we find the only test of success. When we consider the glory of God, success blossoms from seeming defeat. The cross is always victorious. The harvest is not the end of the annual report, but the end of the world. The reapers are not the missionaries, but the angels. We have only to wait on God—His power is infinite, and His time limit is eternity. With God, the missionary enterprise has in it all the glory of the impossible, the glory of apparent defeat and real triumph at the end.

The church is confronted by a challenge and an opportunity never exceeded. The war reveals the possibilities of thorough moblizations—mobilizations of men, material, leaders, education, etc. But now is the time for similar mobilizations of the Church of Jesus Christ for Her world campaign.

We recognize that the spirit of patriotism, the calling for supreme sacrifice in the interest of righteousness and of our country must not be discouraged and the cry of distressed humanity cannot be ignored.

Talk missionary expansion to some persons in war time and they promptly reply that this is the time to retrench. They say that Christians are not in a position to meet the required cost. Funds have multiplied so greatly that they have felt it necessary to transfer the money they had previously been using for missionary purposes to these emergency needs. The deflecting of money from missionary purposes to some benevolence does not represent one's own giving at all. Suppose a man's missionary contribution has been going to the support of our orphanage in China, and he suddenly stops that flow of money and turns it into a Red Cross fund. He has not added anything to his benevolent expenses; sacrifice was made in China where part of the orphanage had to be shut down.

The requirements of missionary work and all other necessary enterprises in the years before the war are requirements still. We discover that most of the great missionary advances in common with other forward movements in the moral and spiritual life of nations in modern times had their birth in times of war. It was in 1649, at the close of a great civil war, that the first missionary society in England was founded. It was during the War of 1812 that the first missionaries were sent out by an American society. At the time of the American Civil War one of our foreign missionary societies had its beginning. In France we had a similar record at the close of the Franco-Prussian War. So we see that the large missionary enterprises had their beginning in times of the greatest national and international upheavals.

Whether it has been due to the quickening of Christian sympathies in time of war, the great spirit of sacrifice, the disciplining of the church, or the special blessing of God upon the faith of the Christians who were ready to go forward, the inspiring fact stands out that times of war have been times of missionary advance. Shall it be otherwise now?

Today the great majority of the people are more eager for Christian instruction then they have ever been before in all the history of modern missions.

The missionaries with their prestige and with their message of comfort and hope hold a position unique in history. Foreign missionaries can now render a genuine patriotic and national service, both to the country from which they come and to the country in which they serve. It is clear that missionaries are the true soldiers of the better order which is to bind the world together after the war. They are quite as important to America as her army or her navy. May we not call them more important, for are they not the peacemakers of the world?

"It is therefore a call upon all who love their country, who long and pray for universal brotherhood and for peace among nations, who hope to see the principles taught by Jesus Christ become the principles that will underlie all human society and rule the nations of the world, to regard no effort or sacrifice too great for the most complete possible mobilization of the forces of the Christian Church for her world campaign."

Even though the world lies in darkness and war is raging everywhere, we know that the eternal awaits to break through the darkness. Light will break through this darkness through men of God who seek new ways of bringing love into human relationships. Christ is softly and tenderly calling his servants today for the great task. Is He calling you?

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

CHRISTIAN SYMBOLISM

The Roman Catholic Church and a number of protestant churches are full of symbols which are to aid the worshipper in having a more vital religious experience while in church. When our Mennonite forefathers broke away from the Catholic church in the sixteenth century they renounced all the symbolism along with the ritual and much of the Roman Catholic treology. They contended that these external adornments were unnecessary to a vital personal religious experience. This is why in the Mennonite church today there is no elaborate imagery such as statues of Jesus Christ on the cross, no crosses, no candles, no elaborate altar, no priestly robes, no sacristy and no elaborate cathedrial style of architecture.

Are Symbols Needed?

It is a debated and debatable question in our church today whether it is desirable to reinstitute symbolism into the church. Some evidences indicate that many of the churches in our conference are answering this question in the affirmative. There are symbols reappearing. There are paintings on the front of the church over the chancel wall of the open Bible; of a descending dove; of a crown of thorns; of Jesus in the garden and a variety of other religious symbols. Stained glass windows, rich in symbolism, are beginning to reappear, pulpits are being moved from the center to the sides of the chancel and a table or an alter moved to a position in the center. Many of our churches have the national flag, which is of course a political symbol, in the chancel along side the Christian flag, which is in itself an innovation for Mennonite churches. In at least one church a service flag has appeared in the front of the sanctuary. In another an altar with a lighted cross and an open Bible in front of it have been placed in the center of the chancel.

What is the Meaning of This?

I do not wish to pass judgment on any of these practices. It is rather my intention to call attention to definite trends that are noticable within the General Conference of Mennonites and ask what is the significance of these trends. Is the reappearance of these symbols the result of unconscious outside influences? Are these symbols chosen because they express the basic religious principles for which our church stands or are they chosen because other churches have them?

It seems to me if we want symbols at all we should be discriminating in our choice and use of them. A symbol is a picture or an object which stands for an idea or a principle or a cause. What symbols will best express our own and our church's interpretation of the Bible and of Christianity? Our style of church architecture can itself become a powerful symbol which shows the world our conception of Christ and His Gospel. The more conservative branches of Mennonites have a much more uniform style of architecture expressing the quality of Christian simplicity than is the case in the General Conference. Does this fact not have a wider religious significance?

TIPS

A wealthy man who spent a month at a hotel last summer had the same waiter during his entire stay. After each meal he gave George, the waiter, a tip of one cent. Such liberality would have been scorned by many a waiter. But George was not that kind. His service was always prompt, efficient, and courteous.

At the end of his visit the wealthy guest called George and said, "I've been giving you a tip after each meal, haven't I?"

"Yes, sir; thank you, sir."

"Well, would you mind returning all of those tips?"

The waiter returned with eighty-two pennies. Mr. Man put the pennies into his purse. Then he gave George a check for eighty-two dollars.

Some of the topics are: "Four Things God Wants Every Person to Know," "The Man Who Wanted to Come Back From Hell," "Can We be Saved in This Life and Know It?" "Will Everyone Ultimately be Saved?" A note in the bulletin says, "It may interest you to know that your pastor appeared before the Presbytery of Philadelphia of the United Presbyterian Church for trials to advance to the status of licentiate. After the trials he was licensed. In the future he may, if desired, be of help in performing the marriage ceremony or burial act."

I was touched as I took notice of the many five-dollar bills, and, especially so, when I opened an envelope with a gift from some children. . . . The board discussed some improvements at the parsonage. It was decided to call a meeting of the men of the church soon and present the amount it would cost to put a basement under the house and build a garage. Will you consider this and pray about it. Some of the members are interested in this, and two have promised fifty dollars each."

Cottonwood County Temperance Sunday was observed with H. Millard Jones as the speaker. The Male Chorus of the C.P.S. camp at Denison, Iowa, rendered a community program in the church. November 15 was observed as Hospital Day with afternoon and evening programs. On November 11 the congregation had a "fellowship meal" followed by a program of praise to God for His special blessings, especially, as revealed in the church. Opportunities were given to make a pledge for paying off "the last brick." The revised membership list shows 518 active members and fifty-five inactive ones. The list was created in joint session by the Board of Deacons and the Board of Trustees. In the pews there is an information card on which needs for pastoral attention may be reported. Interesting C.E. changes to be considered are: (1) To establish a new branch of C.E. for children up to the eighth grade, to be called, "Junior C.E." (2) To change the name of the present Junior C.E. to "Intermediate C.E." (3) To divide the Intermediate C.E. and Senior C.E. at the age of high school graduation. (4) To have the three C.E.'s meet simultaneously in order to conserve heating and transportation expense. Mrs. M. C. Lehman has cordially acknowledged a clothing shipment of 530 pounds.

This suggestion was a very good one.

The Bethesda Cemetery Association, which is an organization separate from the church, recently purchased another acre of land for the cemetery and gave it its usual fall cleaning up. An assessment of one dollar per family head member was made. On June 1, 1942, there were 164 paid up members. However, it was found that thirty-five families had died out completely. To these 125 members fifty new ones have been added.

"This morning after the service an offering will be taken for the C.P.S. camps. Information has come from Rev. Bohn. . . .in which he states that the expenses of operating the camps is mounting due to two factors; first, the increase in food prices; second, the rate of increase in the number of campees. The present rate of increase is practically three hundred per month, and in terms of money it means a total expenditure of $14,000 a week. This shortens the six month financial period to four months, and that means that the General Conference must meet its obligation of well over $27,000 not in three months from now, but in little over a month. My Thanksgiving

By Joanna S. Andres

I would give thanks to Thee
This day, O God.
Why should my lips keep back
To bring its love;
Why shuold my lips keep back
The song I sing—
Let it be in Thy sight
An offering.

I have no firstlings of the flock
To give to Thee,
No fruit of ground
To gather from a laden harvest bin
And bring my offering in.
But God, dear God,
Look down. Deep deep within,
Upon the altar of my soul,
There burns a sacrifice for Thee.
Be merciful to me.
It is my love. Oh let it rise
And come before Thy holy eyes
As incense sweet in savor.
I ask not for Thy favor
Nor for Thy words of blessing now.
I only bow
On trembling knee
And pray:
"Accept, Oh Mighty One, this day,
My soul's love sacrifice for Thee.
I have naught else to bring.
This my offering."

Happiness through Thanksgiving

Do you sometimes feel perturbed and severely unhappy when things go wrong? Mother intended to sew on some new curtains that day, but Mary developed a toothache and had to be taken to the dentist. Perhaps, mother felt slightly irritable because she had to change her plans. Father got up very early to husk an extra load of corn that day, but the cows broke out into the neighbor's wheat field. The extra load was not husked, and father felt that the day was somewhat spoiled. Martha had planned for that new coat a long time, but the money had to be used to repair the tractor. John wanted to go to college, but he had to go to a C.P.S. camp instead. Experiences such as these often keep people from being as happy as they long to be.

If you have had similar experiences then you may find help towards fuller happiness in the words of Paul as given in Phillippians 4:6. "Be careful for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God." Paul puts "requests" and "thanksgiving" side by side. This is uncommon. The human tendency is to abound more in requests than in thanksgiving. Observe most prayers. However, Paul suggests that in every prayer the requests be coupled with thanksgiving. We are not to concentrate so hard upon what we need from God that we forget to thank Him for the great abundance which He has bestowed upon us. We owe God much thankfulness. That is one reason for thanking. There is another.

If we would be happy we dare not be more conscious of "what we need" than of "what we have." God's will and way is that our requests be balanced with thankfulness. Such a balance makes for happiness. Extreme concern for one's needs makes one tense with worry and fear. On the other hand one can be too content with things as they are. Such a condition is detrimental to growth and work. Our well-being depends upon a balance of the two. We need to be under a certain amount of tension because of our needs. But this tension must be kept in bounds by the relaxation of thankfulness. This need for balance is evident, for example, in typing. Extreme tenseness makes for slow, inaccurate, laborious typing. Extreme relaxation might make one fall asleep at it. A balance of the two makes for fast, accurate and easy typing. We are to ask, seek, and knock, but we are also to give "thanks for all things unto God." If we neglect the latter we lose our balance and that full measure of happiness which should be ours as children of a loving Father.

"O God, if something goes wrong today or tomorrow, I would find something for which to be thankful. Then I shall be happy in Thy care, which is never withdrawn. For Thy love which passeth all human understanding, I thank Thee." —rw.

Please and Thank You

A legend retold by Mildred M. North

Two angels, so the legend ran,
Came to earth as day began.
One carried a basket deep and wide,
The other a small one by his side.
Then spoke one of the heavenly pair,
"O but this world is wondrously fair!
If it were not for heaven I'd be content
To dwell on earth beneath the firmament.
My basket is large, I'll soon begin
To gather men's thanks and pack them in."
Said the other, "I'll help you when I get done,
I'm to gather their wants in this little one,
And the sighs and murmurs of those who pout—
But it's large enough without a doubt.
God's bounties are scattered on every side,
You'll need your basket deep and wide;
I'll meet you here when I get done,
And help with the thanks; 'twill be more fun."
Away they sped, and as darkness came
They met again, but not the same.
Both were weary, both were sad,
They'd found so little to make them glad.
Said he, with the basket wide and deep,
"My heart is heavy. It makes me weep.
Look in my basket; you'll discover
The thanksgivings scarcely the bottom cover!"
"While I," said the other, "have made three trips
With the wants and complaints from people's lips!"
Only a legend—yes—and yet,
If the angels came what would they get?
Do we thank Our Father for all his care,
For His loving gifts when we kneel in prayer?
"Ask—seek—knock," we're told, 'tis true,
But "forget not benefits," God said, too.

RURAL LIFE INSTITUTE

The Rural Life Institute which was held at Bethel College November 11, 12, and 13 was an excellent opportunity for getting facts and inspiration which help make farm life successful and satisfying. An author who made farming his side-line once related in one of his articles how he had the habit of spending a great deal of time studying up on various farm problems. But he added that he never got around to applying his knowledge, and therefore, he was not a very good farmer. This was the experience of a man who liked to read and write. The experience of a great many of us is generally the opposite. We are so loaded with work that we take very little time for the theory that gives the right direction to that work. Yet we know how poorly and inefficiently we often do things just because we have not taken the time to think them through thoroughly or to learn from them who have studied about them. Practice needs to be mixed with theory for best results. This institute husked no one's corn, but it may be instrumental in helping someone grow more and better corn. Above all, it may help him to do so from a spiritual viewpoint and for a more spiritual goal. For the spiritual emphasis was uppermost at this institute. —rw.

RELIEF

Over $26,000 Worth of Clothing Sent from Clothing Depot Since January 1, 1942

Following are excerpts from Sister Lydia Lehmen's recent report on the Clothing Depot at Ephrata, Pa. (Near Akron):

"Since January 1, 1942, five shipments of clothing were made: One to Paraguay, one to France, and three to England. The shipments amounted to 28,723 pounds or over fourteen tons and were evaluated at $26,463.95. We have had word of the safe arrival of all these except the last two shipments that went out. We hope to hear soon about one of these and the other left only ten days ago. God has heard the many prayers for the safe arrival of these shipments. He has also honored the spirit in which they were given. We are counting on your continued prayers.

"We are often asked: 'What is most needed?' We cannot receive too much of all that children from the baby on up—boys and girls, and women,—wear. We also need clothing for men, but more of the others. Bedding gives much comfort and is so much appreciated. Home-knit sweaters are a real joy and prize."

(Clothing shipments should be addressed: Clothing Depot, Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pa.)

A "Thank You" from England

From Sheffield, England, a Mr. Roy Shaw writes a letter of thanks to the Mennonite churches in the United States and Canada. Below are excerpts:

"We are happy to know that your relief work does not take the form of a large wealthy community distributing surplus cash to the poor. In those beautiful quilts you send over, and in small things like the shelter bags, we see an expenditure of a great deal of time, skill, and love—which we appreciate more than I can say.

"To the patient sewers in countless United States and Canadian homes, the thanks of hundreds of blitzed folk here are due. And although few of them may find the time or the words to express their thanks direct to you, be assured that the gratitude is there. We thank you and God who inspires your generous love."

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

WE THANK THEE

We thank Thee now, our gracious Lord,
Who holy art and much adored;
We stand in deep sincerity,
To thank Thee in humility.

For friends whose aims are just like ours,
Who feel the pulse-beat of this hour;
Who live not to themselves alone,
But anxious for those far from home.

For invalids who suffer pain,
Who, with their cheer, put us to shame;
Who spend their days and moments rare,
In intercession for us there.

For all who show us loving care;
An estimation of their share
Of noble work, we would receive;
Our Father in heav'n, we thank Thee.

News From the Philippines

"Reliable information has been received from persons who recently returned from Manila to the effect that religious workers in general have not been interned, and that they have a certain amount of freedom. It is said that Protestant missionaries are permitted to remain in the various residences, and are allowed to conduct religious church services." Tribulation, Joy and Challenge

Our study of Ezekiel 16:6-12 disclosed anew to us God's love and compassion. We greet you with love and compassion, which still abound. A long time has passed since we last wrote.

Drought

We stayed in the mountains of northern India for five weeks to escape unprecedented heat. It is astonishing to see how many huge fruit and shade trees dried up. It was a pity to see them go. The rainfall last year was below normal. After the monsoon there was practically no rain. Those missionaries who remained in the plains became very much distressed. It is surprising that some of the shrubbery survived.

Cholera

Cholera raged ravagingly in the beginning of the present monsoon. Some 140 died in Janjgir village, about eighty in Champa, thirty succumbed one and one-half miles from our bungalow, and over a dozen died less than a mile away. Oh, how many of them had to suffer. Doctors and nurses stood by helplessly, observing life ebb out gradually while the victims suffered indescribable pangs. How dreadful a disease! Only one or two of the Christians died. God's protection has prevailed, while precautions are more carefully observed.

Since the disease is so contagious the survivors are reluctant to handle the corpses. Consequently some bodies are thrown into ditches to become prey for the vultures. Others are buried in shallow graves. One of our evangelists, who lives close to a river, noticed one day when the river was in flood stage a dozen corpses floating by. In this same river the people bathe. They use the water for household purposes, wash their mouths with it, and drink of it. Here are ample reasons for the unabated spread of the epidemic. Tens of thousands from among the 400,000,000 of India are snatched away weekly. What vast room for improvement! We apparently were singled out by God's grace, so that we can be numbered among the living ones. We have excellent health for coping with the manifold obligations.

Famine

We have had near famine in this part of India for two years. In many places there was no rice crop. Under the present world conditions the prices of everything have soared high. Soap, salt, red peppers, sugar, and flour cannot be gotten. Rice used to be dear when we got eleven measures to the rupee last year; now it is five. Today they said only three measures. No work to earn money. What is to be done? Oh dear brothers and sisters, it is so pitiful. Some follow us almost every step, saying, "We have not eaten today, do give us some rice or money," etc. Some of the little children and also some of the adults of our Christians have become emaciated. We need more help! It is still three months till the next harvest. May God grant enough rain to supply the rice fields with water.

In Great Need

Some of our Christians are coming to church with the upper part of their bodies unclothed, because they have nothing with which to buy. Cloth is very expensive. Sugar and kerosene are very hard to get, almost beyond reach for most of the people. We wonder whether we shall be able to get more flour from Calcutta after ours is all. Lamp chimneys and rubber rings for jars cannot be had until after the war. As you know, our obligations have been to Champa and Mauhadei since last Christmas sixteen have been eight gallons of gasoline every month. We saved it for the long trips to Mauhadei. All of it is gone, and we have to resort to the buffalo cart which requires twenty-four hours for twenty-five miles.

Causes For Joy

Are we depressed and unhappy? No, and again no! Circumstances can take everything, but no one can take Jesus and His word from us! In all this turmoil we find many reasons for shouting with joy. Here in Mauhadei since last Christmas sixteen have been baptized, and a nice number are on the waiting list to be gathered in the coming weeks. Last month we conducted the yearly Bible course in Champa; this month we held it here in Mauhadei. In Champa we had twelve classes; here we have four. Ezekiel 1,2,3, John I and II Peter, Jude, and James are the books studied. I have the sisters who are very well schooled. In Champa I had sixty-three; here I have twenty-two. Peter teaches the leaders of the church and the more educated ones. May we be closely drawn into the fellowship of God through this Bible study. Rich blessings have already come to us.

Pray and Write

Now, our dear brothers and sisters who remembered us before the throne of God on August 7, the day of our fortieth anniversary. Even in India this is possible. With God all things remain possible. Our hearts are full of praise for what He has done for us. We feel so unworthy of it all.

Continue praying for us and the Lord's work. No one knows what is before us; it looks dark. Write; tell people to write, so that at least once in a while a letter will come our way; even if it is four months old, it is like a big present to us.

Nellie

Darling Nellie teaches in the girls' school at Janjgir. She enjoys it. Yes, she is very, very busy. We hope that she will have the strength to cope with the situation. She sends greetings. Her salary is twenty dollars. By the time she puts out her tenth, the provident fund, the board, you can realize how little is laid aside to pay back her school debts. Very gladly does she make the sacrifice, because she felt the call to the work in her own mission. How nice it would have been for her to be able to board with us.

God bless and keep you. Do remember all of our starving Christians—you, young people, included. The situation almost crushes us and interrupts our sleep and appetite.—Your happy brother and sister in the Lord's work, Mathilde and Peter Penner. (Signed by Sister Penner.)

Sixtieth Anniversary

The Johannestal Mennonite Church, near Hillsboro, Kansas, had a mountain-top experience on November 8. Since our church was organized sixty years ago this fall, plans were made for observing its sixtieth anniversary.

Filled with joy we hoped for spiritual blessings, and good weather. Today we look back and say that the Lord has been good to us. He granted us favorable weather so that the program could be carried out and all who desired to could attend.

Each evening from November 1 to 6 Dr. J. Winfield Fretz lectured on "The Rural Church." His lectures were very interesting and inspiring. He began with "The Early Church" and closed with "Why I Am a Mennonite." It is very important for young people to study Mennonite doctrine and for them to know why they are Mennonites. The meetings were well attended. Each evening two numbers of special music were rendered by different groups. November 8 was Homecoming Day. The meeting house was filled for each of the three meetings. The morning meeting included a Sunday school session and the anniversary program. Brother Jacob Ewert read a paper on "The Early Development of the Church." After this Rev. Valentine Nickel, once a member, brought the anniversary sermon.

At noon a dinner was served to all present, and a few hours of Christian fellowship were enjoyed. Old acquaintanceships were renewed and new ones made. May such fellowship also uplift us in our spiritual life.

The afternoon program was of great interest. Subjects discussed were: "The Development of the Sunday School," "The Development of the C. E.," "The Development of Music," "Charter Members and Church Leaders."

Pastors from four local churches extended greetings, and a few letters were read. In the evening two inspirational messages were brought. The Rev. Walter Gering spoke on the theme, "When Is a Church Christian?" and Rev. J. J. Plenert spoke on "Dynamic Christian Service." Both messages were heart searching. We felt that we must reconsecrate ourselves to Christ. This was expressed by a show of hands.

Music was rendered throughout the day by the regular choir, the men's chorus, the old people's choir, the children's choir, and a quartet which sang the same song which they sang forty-three years ago. As chairman of the program, Rev. J. M. Regier, our pastor, made fitting remarks.

Rev. J. J. Plenert closed with prayer and the benediction, after which the congregation sang, "Jesu Geh Voran Auf Der Lebensbahn." Our prayer is that this anniversary experience may, especially, be a blessing and an encouragement to our young people who are to carry on the work in the years to come.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

ADOLESCENT BAPTISM

In the September 15 issue of The Mennonite on the front cover is a picture of the class of members that joined the Mennonite Church at Henderson, Nebraska. I was impressed not only with the size of the class but also with the age of the majority of the members. Upon inquiry I discovered that it was cusomary in this church for young people to join church in their late teens and some even in their early twenties. This is significant. It is in sharp contrast to many catechetical classes in our churches where the average age runs somewhere between twelve and fourteen. This is, of course, a noticable departure from the once firm belief and practice of adult baptism in all Mennonite churches.

Causal Influences

It is an interesting and, I hope worthwhile, question to raise as to what influences are at work to bring the baptismal age of church members lower and lower. It seems that the prevailing practice of churches in surrounding areas has a significant influence. The children in school discover that their Lutheran and Catholic friends go to confirmation class at the early adolescent period. Other Protestant churches then, too, follow in line. There is usually a good deal of ceremony and special attention paid to this occasion by the more liturgical churches, and this is not without its effect on Mennonites in such communities. Slowly, gradually, and subtly changes are made so that in the course of a decade one can definitely notice conformity to a non-Mennonite pattern.

There is also the feeling that the age of puberty is the natural time for youth to be recruited for the church. The feeling of fear is expressed that if young people are left to decide the matter until they are twenty they never will join, so it is better to get them now. There are various other influences effecting these trends, but whatever they are, I doubt whether they are made as a result of Biblical authority or a new revelation direct from God.

Adult Baptism

Adult baptism was practiced in the Apostolic Christian Church. There is not the slightest Biblical authority for infant baptism. Adult baptism was the rule and infant baptism the exception for the first four centuries of the Christian era. The practice of adult baptism in the Reformation period by our forefathers, therefore, has good Biblical authority and traditional support in primitive Christian practice. It is a practice related to the concept of the true church as a fellowship of believers, as a communion of saints. It is a select group not one composed of everyone in the community. It is made up of those only who voluntarily have joined after they have had a personal religious experience. Naturally, this excludes unconscious infants and small children. But what about adolescents?

There seems to be no scriptural injunction against adolescent baptism, and our fathers seem never to have forbid it expressly, but the underlying assumption that human beings generally are not spiritually mature any sooner than they are morally and physically mature.

The Meaning of Adolescent Baptism

The standards of the church are determined largely by the initiatory requirements of its members. If members are admitted at an age when they cannot be helf fully accountable for all their behavior, conduct, and decisions, then obviously a great many allowances have to be made in matters of discipline and conformity. This weakens the tone and level of the total organization. Baptism as such has no magical powers. It is a symbolic act in which the baptised person publicly acknowledges his intention to follow Jesus Christ as his personal saviour. The more intellectually and spiritually mature a person is when he makes this vow the more likely he is to live up to it. It is not a question of insincerity on the part of adolescents but rather a question of sufficient nurture. Should not the program of religious education in the home and church and school be continued longer before joining church so that the candidate for admission would have a fuller meaning and understanding of his decision? Churches that have been most isolated from non-Mennonite influence have continued to practice adult baptism longest. They are chiefly rural churches. These same churches have held their young people as good or better than have those who practice baptism at an earlier age. The subject bears a good deal of reverent meditation.

ROSTHERN BIBLE SCHOOL AND DEEP EXPERIENCES

(This article and two coming ones should all be read in order to get a more complete picture of what the Rosthern, Saskatchewan, Bible School is doing for its through its leaders and its director, Rev. John G. Rempel. When these articles came in Brother Rempel noticed that all of them had been written by girls. He wants us to know that they also have young men who might have written such articles. One only needs to read all three articles to feel the deep spiritual motive which meets and overcomes all difficulties and prepares the individual for joyous service for the Lord. As we read these reports let us ask ourselves as to whether we have a faith and devotion equal to theirs. —A.J.N.)

Our Summer Bible School Work

In 1937 a lone student of the Rosthern Bible Sshool who in between attended the Mennonite Academy at Rosthern, went out four miles from Rosthern the summer holidays to teach the children in a Mennonite district for two weeks. The last summer twenty-nine students and teachers went out to work in this important mission field, and 754 children were served in this way. The workers received two and one-half dollars for a school, plus their travelling expenses. The total expenses amounted to approximately four hundred dollars. This was covered by donations from the members of the Rosthern Retreat, the Young People's Endeavor Societies, and from the parents of the children, the last being collected at the programs of each Bible school session. This work proves to be of great value to our Mennonite Church as a whole and a real blessing to the children and their parents. As a sample of what the workers experienced we present the following letter. This young girl, a first-year student, went with another girl to a remote Mennonite community.—Rev. John G. Rempel, Rosthern, Saskatchewan.

Summer Bible School at Erwood, Saskatchewan

I am happy to know that the Lord has promised that whatsoever we shall ask in His name shall be given unto us. With this mind we can trust Him at all times regardless of what the trial may be. How often the Lord has answered our prayers! When I think of the daily vacation Bible schools that have opened these last few years I cannot help but praise God for the wonderful privileges that He has given us to go out and tell others of the Saviour who died for us.

Our Trip

Sara Lehn and I were sent to Erwood, which is thirteen miles from the Manitoba boundary. When we left Rosthern many of the students and summer Bible school workers came with us to see us off. We had a blessed time singing hymns while waiting for our train. The train came at last. My heart thumped at the thought that I was to bring the gospel to others, for I didn't feel worthy. When we were about to step on the train the group sang, "God will take care of you." I knew that all I could do was to put my trust in the Saviour who is always willing to help.

Off we were on our trip, heading for God's service. The first station we stopped at was Prince Albert. Here we waited an hour and one-half for the next train. We certainly were glad to continue our journey. Beautiful scenery surrounded us on all sides as we traveled on. It was as though God's presence was felt wherever we went. We could not help admiring the beauty of nature that God had created. When evening drew nigh we began to wonder whether we'd ever get to Erwood. The day seemed long to us. It was midnight when we changed trains at Hudson Bay Junction, with only nine more miles to go to Erwood. Another few more minutes and we were there.

Erwood and Community

We got there tired and sleepy, wishing we could lay our head on a pillow. It was very dark, and no lights were in the town. I believe a feeling of fear crept over us. We just finished saying to one-another how we wished that somebody would be here to meet us, when a young gentleman asked if we were the students from the Rosthern Bible School. He took us to a hotel. We stayed there for the night and part of the next day.

The next morning we took a walk through the town. Sometime after dinner we were taken to the place where we were to stay for the two weeks. No finished roads were found in this part of the country. We were taken through the woods where the trees were cut down all the way through the bushes. The wagon went bumpty, bumpty. We had never experienced the like before. Of course, it wasn't so bad, knowing it was something for Christ. We enjoy doing things for His glory. At last we came to William Bergen's farm. We were greeted in a most wonderful way, and we had a very good night's rest there.

When we awoke the next day, it was a lovely Sunday morning. We received a great blessing from the Sunday service. I took charge of a Sunday school class. There were many children in church that morning. They were anxious to see what we'd be like. After the Sunday school the announcement was made that the children were to come to the summer Bible school the next day.

Our School

The next day we opened our school. The children all came with a smile on their faces. They were happy to hear more of their friend Jesus. The very first thing that appealed to me that morning was a little four-year-old boy's prayer. While Sara Lehn conducted the worship period he clasped his hands, shut his eyes, and prayed quietly,

> "Ich bin klein,
> Mein herz ist rein;
> Soll niemand drin wohnen
> Als Jesus allein."

(I am small—my heart is clean—shall no one dwell therein—but Jesus alone.) The thought came to me that he knew what prayer meant. The attendance was very good. We had a class of sixteen. It really was surprising to see what power there is in the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. Even the children could understand it.

Mud and Mosquitos

The afternoons were spent in visiting the homes of the children. We walked many miles during the two weeks. Walking was rather difficult for us, because we weren't used to the clay soil. The clay would stick to our shoes; it was nothing else but thick mud on our feet. The best thing for me to do was to take off my shoes and walk bare-footed. Sometimes we walked through swamps, and, of course, we would sink in almost up to our knees. What about mosquitoes? Never before had I seen so many. Some of the children have been wearing mosquito netting over their faces for protection. The mosquitoes would keep me awake during the first part of the night. But all this is nothing at all when we think of what Christ has done for us.

I often prayed that God should be a blessing to others. But I could not help but thank Him for the blessing the people have been to me.

Closing Program

The children gave a program at the end of the two weeks. It consisted of what they had learned during the time. It was a great success. We were very grateful for the fact that the parents cooperated in such a wonderful way. The school house was filled with people that evening. The parents were happy to learn that their children had learned much in the short time that we had been there.

In spite of all the mosquitos we enjoyed it very much. The Lord blessed us greatly.

CPS Camps

Mennonite Boys in Camps According to States

On October 31, 1942, the following was the number of the 1,996 Mennonite boys in C. P. S. camps from the respective states:

Kansas	341
Ohio	335
Pennsylvania	283
Indiana	247
Illinois	138
Oklahoma	104

Other states were as follows: Iowa, 90; Nebraska, 71; Michigan, 60; South Dakota, 58; California, 48; Oregon, 46; Virginia, 42; Minnesota, 35; Montana, 25; Missouri, 14; Colorado, 12; Maryland, 12; New York, 10; North Dakota, 9; Delaware, 4; Idaho, 2; Wisconsin, 2. One boy is from each of the following states: Alabama, Arizona, Florida, New Jersey, New Mexico, Texas, Washington, and West Virginia.

Akron Session of Training School Completed

From October 30 to November 8 eighteen men (all but one were campees) spent an intensive period of training at the Akron, Pa., office in preparation for their duties as assistant and educational directors in the present C. P. S. camps and in the ones yet to be opened.

During this time the group attended classes on Mennonite Peace Convictions led by Brother H. A. Fast and also sessions on Mennonite Non-Resistance in Practice led by Brother M. C. Lehman. The camp educational program was outlined by Brother Harold S. Bender and Brother Albert Gaeddert led sessions in the discussion of camp life problems. Brother O. O. Miller gave the group a picture of the history of the Mennonite Central Committee and challenges of the present time.

C.P.S. finances, records, and reports were explained by Brother Ernest Bennett and Brother Jesse Hoover told of the work of the Peace Section. Brother Robert Kreider, Educational Secretary of Mennonite C. P. S. camps, introduced the new Educational Director's Manual to the school.

Others to appear before the group and give helpful counsel were Brethren Ernest J. Bohn, C. H. Hostetter, Jr., C. H. Hostetter, Sr., Amos Horst, and Eli Bontrager. These brethren spoke largely in behalf of the concerns and interests of their respective church groups.

While the time spent in classes and instruction was highly profitable it was the sentiment of the school that the deep fellowship which all enjoyed did much to make this period an inspiring and unforgettable experience.

From November 9 to December 3 the group (with the exception of three) will be in training at Washington, D. C., and will here become acquainted with the government relationships in the Civilian Public Service program. Following this training members of the school will be assigned to duties on camp staffs as the needs for their services arise.

Camp Briefs

Brother Marlin Lauver of the Hagerstown, Maryland, camp has been transferred to the Akron, Pa., office to assist in the secretarial work of the camp program.

The state mental hospital at Norristown, Pa., will soon receive a contingent of Mennonite C. P. S. boys.

The total number of boys in Civilian Public Service as of November 5, 1942, is 4,937.

Of the fifty-one camps now operated 20 are Mennonite, 14 are Brethren, 13 are Quakers, 2 are Catholic and 2 are cooperatively operated.

—Compiled by Grant M. Stoltzfus, Released November 11, 1942.

Camp To Be Moved

In the very near future C. P. S. Camp No. 22 of Henry, Illinois, will be moved to Downey, Idaho. The present project, it is reported, no longer provides sufficient work for the camp personnel.

The new camp in Idaho is a Soil Conservation Service Camp and is seventy-five miles from the Aberdeen Mennonite community.

Mental Hospital Work

Upon transfer of twenty-five boys from the Henry, Illinois, and Medaryville, Indiana, camps to the Marlboro State Mental Hospital at Freehold, New Jersey, three mental hospitals will be operating with Mennonite C. P. S. boys on their staffs. (Staunton, Virginia, and Wilmington, Deleware, are the other two).

In mental hospitals C. P. S. boys are furnished by the hospital with room, board, a small monthly allowance, and working clothes or uniforms. Working hours average around ten to twelve hours per day and call for disciplined day-by-day labor. The work generally consists of serving as attendants and orderlies to the inmates of the hospitals.

Hospital authorities are reasonable in allowing periods of leave from work. Recreation and health facilities are usually provided for by the hospital. The use of certain of the hospital quarters for religious gatherings and services is also granted by the institution.

CORRESPONDENCE

REMINISENCES

As we look back over the past four years we can again say that the Lord has done great things for us, whereof we are glad. Yes, we must say that the Lord has done exceedingly, abundantly above that which we had thought or asked.

It seems but a short time since we gathered together on October 15, 1939, to dedicate our new church building. It is also on this day that our pastor, Rev. Homer Leisy, was ordained into the ministry. I am sure that we cannot express in words what his faithful ministry has meant to us, but we would wish for him God's richest blessing, and that the Lord may continue to use him for greater things in His service. On this day forty-five new members were added to the fifty-two members of the Grace Mennonite Church. Yes, we had much reason to rejoice. Our church has grown steadily during the past four years. In 1940, fifty members were received, in 1941, thirty-four members, and in 1942 thus far, thirty-six members have united with our group. This makes a total membership of 217. It has been a real inspiration to see these new members sharing in the work of the church. During the past four years we have also become debt free and a self supporting church. Also many improvements have been made inside the meeting house, as well as in the yard.

The Ladies Aid Society has always been a very active organization. They furnished the kitchen and the nursery and helped in other ways. The returns from their annual sale in 1939 was $258, in 1940 it was $256.54, and in 1941 it was $719.65. Much of this money has been given for missions.

The Christian Endeavor Society has also continued as a very important part of the church program, giving programs every other Sunday evening. During the past year we have had a series of studies of the doctrines of salvation and have had some very interesting outside speakers. The request programs and "Everybody Sings" have been especially interesting.

Our large group of young people felt that they did not have enough opportunity to express themselves in the regular C. E. so in May, 1940, they organized their own Y.P. Society. They have been giving a half hour program every other Sunday evening, preceding Rev. Leisy's message. Besides these programs we have given several special programs, and last summer the entire group went to Portland and gave a program in the Alberta Community Church there. We are hoping that we can have more such exchange programs. We have also taken part in the two annual Oregon young people's retreats. In 1941 it was held at Silver Creek Falls Recreational Park from August 29 to 31. The ministers of our four Oregon churches led us in our Bible studies and discussions. This year it was held at the Turner Camp ground from August 14 to 16. We were privileged to have as our instructors, Rev. and Mrs. Paul Wenger and Miss Etta Davis. We have had the opportunity of becoming better acquainted with the pastors and the young people of the other churches of our conference. Those who attended came home with a greater desire to serve the Lord more faithfully.

This spring the Juniors felt they would like to have their own Junior C. E. They have their own officers and help to plan their own programs. Every other Sunday evening they have their meeting downstairs, while the young people have their meeting upstairs. They have been studying Old Testament characters. Their sponsor is Helen Thiessen.

Old John's Thanksgiving

By Edith Kennel Graybill

"It's mighty little we have to be thankful for, mighty little, I say! One thing sure, we aren't going to church tomorrow." And Old John tossed the evening paper in a dejected heap beside his chair, and propped up his heels for his customary evening snooze.

"What's this you're saying about church?" asked Lizzie, looking up from the already filled cookie jar into which she was trying to squeeze still another and another of Old John's favorite spice cookies, made just that morning so as to be good and fresh for his Thanksgivin'.

"You're not goin' to church tomorrow! Not goin' to church on Thanksgivin' day, and the rulers of the land have even asked us 'to assemble" on that Day? And we've never missed a Thanksgivin' sermon since the day we were united in the holy bonds of matrimony!" Lizzie paused for breath, while her fingers trembled so much with excitement that her biggest and fattest spice cookie dropped to the floor and broke into six pieces.

"No, we're not goin' to church tomorrow! That's exactly what I said. I can't be thankful for all those potatoes that we didn't grow this summer. Nobody can be thankful that the morning glories grew all over the potato patch, and choked out a bumper crop of potatoes right at the time when I got a good dose of rheumatism in my back, and couldn't pull them out!

"No, every time I see that skimpy potato pile in the cellar, I says to myself, says I, 'The Lord cartenly didn't bless us this year.' " And Old John settled back once again for his evening nap.

"But the grapes were good this year," hopefully suggested Lizzie, remembering the abundant crop of Old John's favorite blue grapes. "And if we don't go to church, the people will think we are startin' to be heathen," she meekly suggested.

Old John's only reply was a melodious snore from his corner by the stove, and Lizzie knew he had "said his say," and it was useless for her to try to change his mind.

Lizzie felt suddenly old and ill. Climbing the stairway to the little bedroom, she put Old John's overcoat and her "meetin' dress" back in the clothes closet in the "good room," and set their freshly blacked shoes back in their places again. Then she got in their stead her mending basket and trudged wearily back to the kitchen and began to mend Old John's socks.

Old John groaned in his sleep. "Poor fellow, his rheumatism must be bothering him again," Lizzie mumbled; and getting the liniment bottle she placed it near the stove to warm it up a bit for him when he awoke.

Still Old John dreamed on. The morning glories were growing all over the potatoe bin in the cellar, and instead of being filled with potatoes, his cellar was full of morning glory vines. With a heavy heart he walked down the road to the store to buy potatoes, just to be told that there weren't any; but in their stead they would have to sell him morning glories for there were no potatoes at all anywhere that year.

"Seems strange, seems strange," he grumbled trudging home again. The cold wind blew through his torn coat and chilled him to the bones. "Funny how Lizzie forgot to patch up this 'ere coat," thought Old John. "She always seems to know just when it is torn without me ever having to tell her other times."

"Guess I'll feed Doll before I go in to supper," he said aloud to himself, and started for the barn; but the mow was empty. In a daze he turned to the oats bin, hopefully lifting the lid only to find that there was not a grain to be seen.

"Well, I never had this happen for me before in my life," said Old John in perplexity. "What will I do without any feed for Doll all winter long?" And he drew his unmended coat about him, and hurried to the house.

"I say, Lizzie, what do you think?" But Old John's hand tightened on the doorknob for support as he gazed around the room in dismay. No steaming supper was on the table, as usual, to greet his return. Instead, the cloth on which he had spilt his coffee lay wrinkled upon it. He stretched his shaking hands toward the stove, but no genial heat issued from it as he expected; and Lizzie was nowhere to be found.

Dazed and hurt, Old John stumbled from the house and started across the lot to Neighbor Brown's. "I say, old fellow, what do you want here?" came a cold voice from the inside somewhere, instead of the customary, "Howdy, neighbor." The unexpected tone so startled Old John that he couldn't think of a single word to say, and he retraced his steps homeward.

"Lizzie, Lizzie," he called through the empty house, but his echo only mocked his loneliness.

Dropping to his knees, Old John started to pray to the Lord out of anguish of heart, but the Lord answered him by saying, "You don't need to pray to Me anymore, for I've decided to quit answering prayers for all those who are not appreciating what I have been doing for them."

Old John felt his face flush, and a guilty feeling gripped his heart. Guess I'll go down to Preacher Jones and tell him I'm a pretty big sinner, and git him to help straighten me out," concluded Old John; and trembling in every limb he went down to the minister's house as fast as his rheumatism would allow him.

"No, I quit taking care of folks's failin's and such like," answered Jones; "and I guess you hear that there will be no church tomorrow or any other time, for I got tired preachin' and preparin' sermons when so many people stay at home and don't appreciate what I've been doing for them."

Old John thought of all the preaching and singin' and fellowship he was used to enjoying for so many years already, and all the fine people you see at the meetin', and exchange the time of day with. He felt suddenly poor and wretched, and lonely, and ill. Never in all his life had he felt so sad and heartbroken. A great sob shook his frame, and he awoke with a start. He opened his eyes to find Lizzie's kindly face bending over him wide-eyed with anxiety.

"What's ailin' ya, John dear?" she questioned. "Is your rheumatism gittin' worse?"

"Lizzie, old gal, it's really you, isn't it?" he said huskily, kissing her faded old cheeks again and again.

"I must have been dreamin', Lizzie," said Old John, rising from his chair and looking all about him to ascertain whether everything was as it should be.

"Hurry, Lizzie, git your best dress on! We're goin' to church for Thanksgivin' as sure as you're alive! . . . What are you laughing at?"

"This isn't Thanksgivin', it's only Wednesday night!"

"Well, sure enough, you're right! I only wish it was morning already, for Lizzie, gal, I'm so full of thanks to the good Lord for all He's given me,—just the plain, ordinary, common stuff, Lizzie,—that I'm afraid I'll burst if I don't let some of it out before morning. And squeezing one of Lizzie's wrinkled hands in his, Old John sang at the top of his voice, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," while big tears of gratitude rolled down Lizzie's cheeks as she exclaimed, "Why, John! Why, John!"

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

A. S. BECHTEL

December 6, 1942

THE MEANING OF CHURCH MEMBERSHIP

Colossians 3:1-17

Our lesson topic is of great practical importance and indeed needs more definite study and emphasis. Joining a church is too lightly regarded by many. "Church membership should mean far more than the formal act of entering the church by baptism" (Christian S. S. Quarterly). The spiritual qualification for membership is foremost. Paul sets forth clearly a standard of religious experience and of practical Christian living. He refers to the church as "one body," the mystical body of Christ, consisting of those who let Christ rule their hearts. The Christian who lives up to the standard of our lesson will give real meaning to his church membership. This can mean much, or it can mean little. It will mean to us just what we make it mean. It all depends on each one of us personally.

Affections Upon Heavenly Things, vss. 1-4

Paul is writing to the members of the Church, those who have risen with Christ into a new life (vs. 1). Now as members of the Church, as followers of Christ, they—we too—are to direct the whole life toward the heavenly things. We need to set the heart and mind on the things that are above. If we want to love Christ we must think about Him. Thinking about Him seriously and earnestly will give shape to our outward acts. We will then value earthly interests at their true importance. A Christian lives close to Christ, draws his strength from Him. Our spiritual life is hid in Christ. Our church membership should be a real help in living in close touch with Christ.

A Transformed Life, vss. 5-11

Christians, church members who have received Christ, have also received power to overcome the evil desires and temptations to sin. If we are dead to sin, we do not respond to its allurements. When the old life is dead, the old habits will pass out with it. Clearly it will require a divine transformation within the heart to enable one to do this. Jesus taught clearly that the Christian's manner of life is to be definitely different from that of the non-Christian. The Christian experience is a miracle by which one is given a new nature, a new life principle, a new heart. When we take our stand with and in the church and set our face resolutely toward Christ, we know what our friends, and the church, and the world expect of us (vs. 10). Paul glorifies the new life, the spiritual transformation through which the image of God is renewed again in us.

Positive Evidences, Obligations, vss. 12-17

Paul mentions Christian qualities (vs. 12) which are the outward manifestation of an inward holiness. Holiness is the essence of Christian character. The Christian church member is to show his goodness in definite and positive ways of living. Paul defines the obligations of Christians, of church members in view of their spiritual privilege and high calling (vss. 13-17). Christ is our model in forgiveness. Love is the distinctive mark of the Christian, the substance of all Christian virtues. It is the girdle which binds all the other graces into a perfect whole. The peace which Christ gives to our heart is the security of the believer against doubts and fears. The Christian is to put the word of Christ into practice and then all deeds will be such as are according to His will and will promote His cause.

Church membership is both a privilege and a responsibility. The latter is plainly forgotten by far too many members. Vows are taken when joining a church These include a promise to support the church according to ability. It is deplorable that there are so many members in our churches who feel little or no responsibility to fulfill this promise. Are we willing to give as well as to get? Are we ready to pay, to suffer, and to work hard in order to preserve the privileges of the church for ourselves and for others? Church members should be devout Christians; workers for Christ and the Church. They should strive earnestly to measure up to Christ's standards.

What should be the minimum requirement to become a member of the Church?

Why does so large a percentage of church members take little or no interest in their church?

What should be our highest aim as church members, as Christians? Why?

CORRESPONDANCE

Music is always a very important part of any church service. The young people's choir, under the direction of Dietrich Diehm, brings the special misic for the Sunday morning church service. They have also given several special musical programs, and an Easter Cantata. The Sunday school choir sings at the close of the Sunday school hour. Dorothy Leisy is their leader. The ladies' and men's choruses and the mass choir have added much to the Sunday evening services with their special members. The orchestra, under the direction of Ernie Schmidt, plays for each service.

Wednesday evening is always a busy time at the Grace Mennonite Church. The orchestra and the choirs and choruses meet for rehearsal, and the Bible study and prayer group also meets. We had been meeting on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, but because of the tire situation it was decided to meet only once a week. This has proved very satisfactory. During the year of 1940 the Bible study group studied the Teachers' Training Course. A group of eight took the examinations and received their diplomas. They have since studied the books of Ephesians, The Revelation, Romans, and Philippians.

Our church entertained the Pacific Conference in 1941. This was certainly a time of blessing. Most of the churches were represented by their pastor and other delegates. It was interesting to learn how the work of our conference is carried on and to hear the discussion of the problems which confront our churches as a whole.

During the past four years there have been three funerals, six weddings, and two silver weddings held in the church.

As special guest speakers we have had the privilege of having six returned missionaries in our midst. Miss Etta Davis and Miss Aganetha Fast brought us very interesting reports of the work of our conference in China, and Dr. and Mrs. P. A. Penner and Rev. and Mrs. Paul Wenger told us of the work in India. Dr. Penner's moving pictures were very interesting and brought the work among the lepers of India very close to us.

Yes, the past four years have been happy and profitable years for our group, but we know that it has only been God's blessing and goodness that has permitted us to go forward in Him. I am confident that we do not feel worthy of it all. There is much more which could have been done. There is much more that must be done, for there are still many who are without Christ. We know not when the Lord is coming to receive His own. It may be soon; it won't be long. So let each one of us examine our own lives and consecrate ourselves anew to Him, so that the Lord may do even greater things in and through us.

GRACE MENNONITE CHURCH

Pandora, Ohio

The pastor, Rev. Forrest Musser, is conducting six special study and prayer services on "The Idea of the Cross in the Bible and Christian Life." Leadership in the church is being stressed in this study.

The Sunday school class of Gideon Schirmacher recently presented the film, "The Life of St. Anthony, of Padua," at an evening worship service.

Four young people of the church participated in the annual peace contest sponsored by the Ohio Council of Churches. They took charge of an evening service in November.

The annual mother and daughter banquet in which all the women and children of the church participate, was held in November. Miss Aganetha Fast spoke very interestingly of the customs among the women and children of China. She also showed slides of some Chinese Christians of our mission stations.

Recent visitors in the pulpit have been: Miss Edna Ramseyer, Dean of Women of Bluffton College, who spoke of her summer's work in Mexico. Miss Janet Gilbert, chairman of the Otherbein Guild, who spoke the subject "Faith Is the Answer;" and Miss Aganetha Fast, missionary to China, who spoke of her work in China.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Reedley, California

Again the fall of the year has come around, when we look back for all the blessings God has so richly given.

Speaking for myself and many others of our church workers, it has been a special privilege to enjoy health and strength to carry on in the every day tasks that confront us in a fuller measure in these days when help is so desperately needed. When we see the need round about us, one feels like helping by giving of our time and sharing the blessings we have received with others. We should give, as God has given us. Our All-Church-Sunday is to be observed November 8. It is an annual fellowship meeting when everybody is welcome who worships with us.

We are very thankful to have our full number of the new Mennonite Hymnaries. We have had special services arranged for singing from them.

A former student of Miss Lalitha Neufeld in Nanking, China, now a student at Berkeley University, spent the week end of October 25, in Reedley. He spoke to the Sunday school, and being asked as to what we might do for China, he said, "Pray for China and the Chinese Christians."

On November 1, Rev. and Mrs. Arthur Friesen, missionaries at Canton, Oklahoma, were in our midst.

Thanksgiving is drawing near again. We certainly have many reasons to be thankful for innumerable blessings, when we think of countless ones in want and despair. May we as Christians be strong and ready to obey when duty calls to help someone in need. —Helen E. Penner, Corr.

EICHER MENNONITE CHURCH

Near Noble, Iowa

On August 23 Rev. Welty preached his farewell sermon. He spoke on the subject "Benediction" and used as his text, "May that grace that was in Christ Jesus be in you." He brought us the point that grace was a fine gift from God and couldn't be bought with money. Sometimes we are inclined to be selfish. So many think that the gospel is free and forget that everything we have belongs to God. We were sorry to lose Rev. and Mrs. Welty. We wish them success in their new field.

So far we have not been able to secure a pastor. We have had different ministers preach for us. On August 30 Rev. Bauman preached on Christian education. We need to educate ourselves so that we know how to carry on the work of God. On September 6 Rev. D. Koening, a county Sunday school worker, brought the morning message. He stated that every Christian must have faith, courage, knowledge, temperence, patience, godliness, charity, and kindness. Rev. H. E. Nunemaker, pastor of the Donnelson Church, conducted a week of meetings beginning with Sunday evening. His subjects were: The parables of "The Soils," "The Lost Coin," "The Lost Sheep," "The Lost Sons," "The Ten Virgins," "The Majesty of the Church," and "The Parable of the Good Samaritan." On October 18 Rev. L. L. Ramseyer, President of Bluffton College, brought the morning message. On November 1 Rev. Sommer of the Pulaski Church brought the morning message and conducted the communion service.

Our mission society has been having an all-day meeting once a month. We have been doing some sewing for relief. —B. G., Corr.

JESSE H. LOGANBILL DIES

The editor was told on Friday evening that Brother Jesse H. Loganbill, who formerly served at Bethel College and who now was serving at Bluffton College, had passed away. Brother Loganbill attended Bethel Academy from 1909 to 1912. He received his A. B. from Bethel College in 1916. He taught there from 1932 to 1936 and at Bluffton College from 1937 to the present. Besides teaching he served as dean of men at both schools. He was much beloved by the students. He was a brotherly man.

—Rev. Lester Hostetler left on November 20 for Goshen. Indiana, to conduct a series of special meetings in the Eighth Street and Silver Street churches. During his absence the brethren R. C. Kauffman and R. Weinbrenner will bring the messages in the Bethel College Church.

—Linotypists began setting copy for the first quarter issue of the Christian and Intermediate Sunday School Quarterlies around November 6. This seems early. However, the aim is to get them out before the Christmas mailing rush.

Observed in the Mennonite Historical Library, North Newton, Kansas: A charcoal picture of the Mennolinde by Gladys Klassen of Mountain Lake, Minnesota. A file which lists all articles written by our missionaries from 1882 to 1940 and published in the Bundesbote. To compile this list Brother P. J. Wiens carefully went through all the copies of the Bundesbote of that period. Then he typed the name of the author and the article and other information on cards and filed them systematically. This took much time and effort, but it makes possible certain kinds of research. This process is illustrative of the great amount of work it takes to make information readily available.

—The Oraibi, Arizona, Mission Work was begun in 1893 by the late H. R. Voth and wife. Next summer fifty years will have passed by since the beginning.

—The Lehigh (Kansas) Mennonite Church is repapering and painting the interior of its meeting house. John Graber, Bethel College ministerial student from Pretty Prairie, brought the message on November 15.

—Arthur Krause, grandson of Rev. Peter Krause, is the new director at the Denison, Iowa, C.P.S. camp. Brother Krause was principal of the Perryton, Texas, high school. Previously, he taught in Oklahoma where he had some challenging experiences when the citizens learned of his C.O. stand.

—Brother Edwin Stucky, who served the Hillsboro, Kansas, Mennonite Church in the past summer, received his A. B. degree from Bethel College at the end of the first quarter.

—The Hillsboro Church dedicated its new parsonage on November 15. This parsonage was purchased for $3,500.00, one of the members paying $2,500. Some remodeling was done on it after it had been purchased.

—"O Pow'r of Love" the first issue of the Bethel College Choir Series edited by Walter H. Hohmann will be used in the Advanced Choir Class of Boston University. So writes Dr. H. Augustine Smith who teaches church music at that university.

—Second Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: Rev. H. Albert Claassen, former pastor of the Salem-Zion Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakota, and now connected with Freeman Junior College, has consented to serve the church for about six months or until June 1, 1943. We are hoping and praying that the good Lord may soon show us the man whom He has chosen to continue this work in our congregation. Rev. J. D. Epp, of the University of Nebraska, has brought us inspirational messages since Rev. R. Weinbrenner, our former pastor, took up his new duties at North Newton, Kansas.—W.C.A. Corr., November 16, 1942.

—Rev. H. T. Reimer, a lay minister in the Second Church of Beatrice, was operated on November 12. On November 16 he was quite low. Brother Reimer is in the Mennonite Hospital, Beatrice.

—Dr. D. D. Eitzen of the University of Southern California spoke to a laymen's missionary dinner in the First Mennonite Church, Upland, California, on November 19.

—Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: The latest financial drive for the church building fund culminated in a fellowship meal on the evening of November 11. Following the meal a service of praise and thanks was given in the church sanctuary centered in the theme "Now Thank We All Our God." The different organizations of the church were represented with short messages, each expressing their joy for the spiritual blessings received in the past year. The debt on the new church building is now reduced to approximately forty-five hundred dollars.—Mrs. D. H. Fast, Corr.

Bulletin: "It is hoped that Rev, A. C. Schultz of Bluffton College will preach in our church next Sunday afternoon (November 22) the service beginning at 2 p.m. Rev. Schultz is a grandson of our former Elder H. H. Regier. He will conduct a series of special meetings at the Bergfelder Mennonite Church beginning November 17.—Send in your subscriptions to The Mennonite and to the Bundesbote before the Christmas rush. . . .Every Bethel home should have at least one of these papers."

—First Mennonite Church, Shafter, California: Rev and Mrs. Chris. Ummel, the representatives of this church to the Pacific Conference of last summer are to give their report on November 29, and Emma Ruth of Reedley is to show some moving pictures which she took at the conference.

—Rev. Freeman Schwartz of Norristown, Pa. preached in the First Mennonite Church of Berne, Indiana, on November 15. Rev. Sylvan Lehman of Mechanics Grove, Pa., served in the evening. On the same day Dr. R. C. Kauffman of Bethel College brought the message at the Hoffnungsfeld Church near Moundridge, Kansas, and R. Weinbrenner served the Hutchinson, Kansas, Mennonite Church.

—First Mennonite Church, Hutchinson: Rev. C. H. Dirks conducted evangelistic meetings in Medford, Oklahoma. He began similar meetings in Halstead, Kansas, on November 16. The Pretty Prairie C. E. rendered an inspiring program in our church on November 15.

—Eighteen and nineteen-year-old boys are now subject to induction into the armed forces of the United States. It has been suggested that because of the large amount of "paper work" to be done no 'teen age boys will be drafted before January. As the bill reached the President's desk it included: "A provision authorizing draft deferments for persons 'necessary to and regularly engaged in' agriculture. Local draft boards will determine any individual's status under this provision."

—Lets have it steaming! Good cooks try hard to serve food hot. It tastes better that way. Good news is that which has not cooled off too much. Correspondence, jottings, and bulletins are best when still steaming, Suggested motto: "Serve Immediately."

—Bulletin, East Swamp Mennonite Church, Quakertown, Pa., Dr. H. Framer Smith brought three messages on November 22. The conference was sponsored by the Quakertown Moody Fellowship. Rev. Rowan Pearce was also a recent speaker. Mrs. Katheryn Norden has given an electric clock to the church in memory of her husband. A group called "The East Swamp Gospel Messengers" will begin radio broadcasts on December 5. About C.P.S. camps the following is said, "At a recent ministers' meeting of the Eastern District Conference we were encouraged to get behind the C.P.S. camps 100 per cent. The Eastern District quota thus far was $7,352.00. Our district has raised only a little over $1,000.00. . .We were told that even boys in the armed forces have sent their contributions toward the C.P.S. work, not feeling that their fellow members were cowards for taking such a position, but rather respecting their position . . .Most of us are now able to give due to war wages, so let us do what the Lord would have us do in this respect."

—Subscribers to The Mennonite: You can save delay and inconvenience in starting or renewing a subscription to The Mennonite by sending your order directly to The Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas. On the other hand, all material which is to appear in print in our paper should be addressed to The Mennonite, North Newton, Kansas. Newton has its postoffice, and North Newton also has one.

THE STORY OF THE MENNONITES

By Dr. C. Henry Smith

This is the most complete and the best history of the Mennonites ever published in one volume. Dr. Smith, who has long been known as the best informed Mennonite historian, has produced a book that is an authority in this field. It is entitled The Story of the Mennonites because it reads almost like a story, and yet it is an authentic history of the Mennonite people from the time of Menno Simons up to the breaking out of the present World War. It comprises 824 pages and is bound in a beautiful brown satin cloth.

Price $2.50 postpaid in the U. S.

THE MENNONITE HYMNARY

This book, first published in 1940, has already been issued in three editions. Never before has a Mennonite hymnbook, either German or English, sold so fast or made such an impression with our Mennonite people as this one. Already over 12,000 copies have been sold. The book contains 623 hymns and songs, 56 pages of "Aids to Worship," including 90 well-chosen Responsive Readings, and 38 pages of Indexes. It is printed on durable white paper and bound in strong cloth. It can be had in either dark blue or maroon color. Price $1.40 postpaid in the U.S. 12 or more copies $1.21. each not prepaid.

WITH CHRIST ON THE EDGE OF THE JUNGLE

By Rev. S. T. Moyer

This book is not a study. It is a story of a series of experiences through which the author has passed during his twenty-one years of missionary work in India, under the auspices of the General Conference Mennonite Mission in that country. The story is true to the last detail and, for this reason, is informative and intensely interesting. $1.00 postpaid in U.S.

THE NEW TESTAMENT BASIS OF PACIFISM

By G. H. C. MacGreggor, D. D., D. Litt.

This is not a book on the practical issues involved in the problem of Peace and War, but the author endeavors to show what is the bearing of the New Testament teaching on the particular question of war. The book is written in the hope that it will provide all Christians, whether they are "Pacifists" or not, with the material necessary for thinking through for themselves this greatest of all modern ethical problems. gartner became the bride of Roger Lee Sprunger on November 7, in the First Mennonite Church. Thirty young trees have been planted in Lehman Park which was struck by a high wind this past year. The Byler Quartet of Goshen College sang in the First Mennonite Church on November 22.

—Church reports will be made by many organizations of many churches in the near future. These can either be dry formality or something vital and inspiring. One pastor suggests, "Make your reports clear and brief so that we can get as good an understanding of the work of the church for the past year as possible. These reports can be made both interesting and useful for our work in the future, and should be prepared in that spirit."

—The Alberta Community Church, Portland, Oregon: The Sunday school has bought a piano for informal services in the basement. Certain Sunday evening meetings have been devoted to the study of church history. The church conducts an "After-School Story Hour." Twenty-five children attended one week's meeting, some coming from long distances. Besides story telling there is chorus singing and participation in crafts.

—Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, Pa., The Women's Missionary Society heard Catherine Niswander of Philadelphia speak on home mission work. The women have been sewing for relief. November 1 was emphasized as "family day." Frank Kulp and Norman G. Alderfer have left for the newly opened C.P.S. camp at Galax, Virginia. Miss Welhelmina Kuyf recently spoke to the Intermediates and Dr. Harvey Bauman to the young people at the annual fall rally of these groups of the Eastern District. Rev. E. J. Bohn conducted a series of meetings at the Hillsboro (Kansas) Mennonite Church during the week of November 15. On November 18 Rev. Jesse Hoover spoke at a father and son banquet. Rev. Russell Mast brought the message on November 15.

—Bluffton College: Students included in the "Roll of Bluffton Scholars" for 1941-42 are: Frances Beckenbach, Eleanor Berky, Geneveive Fett, Mary Alice How, Magdalene Oyer, Richard Pannabecker, Bertram Smucker, Eugene Weed, Otto Elmer, Herbert Fretz, Lucia Greiser, Ernst Harder, Ruth Henderson, Mabel Hill, William Keeny, Elizabeth Lesson, Holly Mosiman, Margaret Shelly, Arthur Thiessen, Royal Thomas, and Richard Weaver. These students made A's and B's during the past school year. Miss Helen Habegger, who is a member of the women's gospel team, recently spoke concerning the Cheyenne Indians in Montana at a program given in the Mennonite mission at Lima, Ohio. Miss Habegger sings low alto in the gospel team's quartet. Miss Margaret Shelly from Pennsburg, Pa., is the president of the team. Mrs. S. F. Panabecker is advisor to the group.

—Salem Mennonite Church, Dalton, Ohio: The Girls' Gospel Team of Bluffton College and President Ramseyer visited the church on November 15. The Women's Missionary and Sewing Society is gathering clothing for relief. They want that which is usable, practical, clean, and in good repair. Gordon Sprunger and Cletus Gerber have left for the C.P.S. camp at Galax, Virginia. The pastor used for his evening message recently the story, "Wings or Weight, Which?" This story appeared in the youth section of The Mennonite.

—Herbert Fretz is a senior at Bluffton College this year and is serving the New Stark Church. During his years at college he has taken an active part in the gospel team, the Y.M. and the Witmarsum staff, and the A Cappella Choir. He intends to take up some specialized form of Christian work after graduation.

—The Sewing Society of the Hebron Mennonite Church near Buhler, Kansas, had its annual sale on a recent Saturday. At noon they served dinner to all those present. (Judging from the dinners which our Mennonite women serve there should have been some hearty bidding after the meal.)

—Civilian Bonds: As of October 22, the total subscriptions to Civilian Bonds totaled $347,250. The greatest number of subscriptions came from Pennsylvania. —The Reporter

—Grace Mennonite Church, Pandora, Ohio: Mrs. S. W. Steiner writes that the Senior Fellowship group, which consists of all unmarried young people in the church above the high school age, has begun to put out a little paper called The Highlight. This paper is to be sent to all the men in the various camps.

—Registered mail addressed to Mr. Paul Comly French is often delayed because of Mr. French's absence from Washington, and no one else is allowed to sign for it.

—The Wayland Mennonite Church, Wayland, Iowa, was the scene of a pretty autumn wedding when Delight Elizabeth Rinner and Laurence Eugene Beezley were united in holy matrimony. They will make their new home in Williamsport, Pa., at 590 Lincoln Avenue.

—The Grace Children's Home at Henderson, Neb., has moved into its new quarters. Dedication Day was observed November 15.

—Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Pratum, Oregon: "The Women's Missionary Society is again making plans to send some dried fruit and nuts to the missionaries in Montana."

ADAM S. HILTY, sixty-seven, druggist of Pandora, Ohio, died October 25, 1942, after a very brief illness. He is survived by his wife, the former Allie Pope, and two children, Wayne, druggist of Indianapolis, Indiana, and Evelyn, teacher, of Pandora; one sister, Mrs. A. C. Diller, of Onville; seven brothers, Dr. N. S. Welty and Eldon Hilty of Pandora, C. D. Hilty of Bluffton, Homer J. Hilty of Spencerville, Wilford Hilty of Lima, Monroe Hilty of Columbus Grove, and Dr. O. K. Hilty of Ft. Wayne, Indiana. Mr. Hilty's death was a shock to the community. He had for many years been Sunday school superintendent and a teacher in the Sunday school. He was a deacon in the church and chairman of the church council of the Grace Mennonite Church.

Keep Christ in Christmas

The birthday of our Lord draws near;
The "day of days" of all the year;
A day of hope and joy and cheer.

KEEP JESUS CHRIST IN CHRISTMAS

"It is sad to see Christians joining the world in the rush and hustle of a preparation for a "holiday" instead of a "holy day." How the arch enemy of Christ must rejoice to see the distracted souls busy with great preparations for a day which finally leaves the heart empty and the soul weary and unsatisfied! Why all the gifts which shall be a token of the love of God if we only keep one another rushing about, giving God no opportunity to commune with our souls and to give us the greatest of all gifts—a new infilling of the Holy Spirit through Jesus Christ our Lord!" —In the Service of the King

Ye Shall Be My Witnesses

We are not only to be disciples and worshipers of Christ, but we are also to be witnesses of Him. It is right that we read the Bible, hear sermons, and discuss the Sunday school lesson to learn of Him. It is right that we go into the quiet chamber and commune with Him in prayer and that we worship Him in the sanctuary. However, the believer in Christ must go further to "fill full" his relationship to Christ; he must witness of Him. To witness means "to give evidence of," in short, to give expression to the impression which Christ has made upon us. If Christ be in us, he should be evident through us to those about us.

Christ said "be my witnesses." We all witness of something or someone in some way or another. As believers in Christ we are to witness of Him in all of our living. In every thought, act, and word He is to have the preeminence, until "Christ-likeness" characterizes the believer. He is to be evident in every bit of the believer's life at all times.

With the "ye" Christ included the less talented of His disciples as well as the others. Every believer in Christ is to be a witness of Him, not just the preacher, the teacher, and others who give most or all of their time to what we (too narrowly) term Christian work.

The world is the jury. Christ is on trial. He wants us to be His witnesses. How forcefully do we present His case to the people of the world who doubt His character? —rw.

A WEEK OF EVANGELISM

"I think this was one of the best moves that has ever been made in this town." "I have been struck with a sense of shame that we have left these families uncared for so long." "This has brought the personal touch to the hearts of many of our townspeople." Statements like these were made at the close of a week of lay evangelism which the churches of Moundridge, Kansas, observed in October. They were made by the men who participated in this week of visitation evangelism when they tried to evaluate the work of the week.

The lay brethren, as well as the ministers who participated, felt that this united effort was of tremendous value, both to those who participated and to those who were visited. The lay workers felt that they had, perhaps, received the greatest blessing. "A world of good has come to us,"one man said. They felt that it had brought out a unity among us that we had never known before. "I have found it a great encouragement to improve one's life, an incentive to strive for a higher spiritual life," was the testimony of another worker. "We have learned to appreciate and feel the guidance of God's Spirit in this work," another observed. The fact that this was a concerted endeavor made it easier for us to make our testimony, because we knew that a number of other teams were out in other homes making the same appeal we were making.

We found, too, that laymen and ministers supplement each other marvelously when they counsel together about the salvation of unchurched neighbors. The workers reported that many people appeared to be under conviction as they spoke to them about Christ and His claims upon their lives. Several people made commitments; others were definitely touched and, we believe, inclined to turn to the Lord. In no case were resentments and animosities aroused. We came out of this week with the feeling that the doors are open for this type of work. Homes are open for visitation evangelism. The teams were gladly received. It appears as though lay people are more appreciated than ministers when they come to speak about Christ. A minister is expected to talk "religion" when he comes. But when lay brethren speak to people about Christ it seems to disarm prejudices quicker. These observations, made by the workers themselves at the close of the week, indicate the value of the effort, and may point out a line of endeavor which the Lord loves to bless.

The week was planned very largely as outlined in the articles on "Lay Evangelism" found in the August 25 and September 1 for issues of THE MENNONITE. We set for ourselves a three-fold aim:

1. To invite such people as may not have accepted Christ to give themselves to him.
2. To urge inactive church members to active participation in church life.
3. To encourage church members whose membership is in churches of other communities to affiliate themselves with some local church.

Those who volunteered to give the evenings of the week for this work met on two preceeding Sundays to plan methods and approaches. These workers then went out in teams of two to visit the homes that were assigned to them. The ladies missionary societies of the four cooperating churches provided the evening meals for this group of workers. These common evening meals afforded an excellent opportunity for Christian fellowship, sharing of experience, and prayer. At these meals reports of the work of the preceeding evening and new assignments for the evening were made. We came out of this week conscious that we had been working with God, and the fact that we had been with God in this endeavor has drawn us together as nothing else has.

Is This Work of National Importance

The Christian conscientious objector faces a twofold problem when called to serve the state. (1) He must find a service which his non-resistance conscience can approve. (2) This service must be one which the state needs and desires. So long as he gives his services to Soil Conservation or Forestry Service or to any other agency which is not attached to the military wing of the government his first problem is solved. There remains then the other problem: Is this work of national importance?

Government publications point out that fourteen per cent of our land has been ruined by erosion and more than half the land in the United States has been affected in some degree. It is estimated that 740 million tons of soil are dumped annually into the Gulf of Mexico. Enough soil is lost each year from our farms to fill a train of freight cars that would encircle the globe eighteen times at the equator. The chief of Soil Conservation Service points out that this tremendous loss is not due to any natural catastrophe but rather is due to carelessness and selfish exploitation of land. No nation or race in all history has wasted its precious top soil (as well as other resources) as fast as the United States.

Nor is soil the only gift of the creator which we have wasted. Our great forests are so abused that the Forest Service estimates that only twenty per cent of them are being managed wisely. What of the eighty percent?

Still another phase of the waste of our resources can be seen in the decrease of wild life population. Wild life depends upon soil, and where soil is eroded wild life must go. It is also pointed out that poverty, farm tenancy, abandoned farm buildings, and tax delinquency result from soil erosion. "Soil erosion brings on human erosion."

In late years our national leaders have recognized the great need for reversing these wasteful trends. Even the masses of our population became alarmed a few years ago when the sky was darkened by dust particles that were blown across the continent and scattered on the decks of ships two hundred miles at sea.

What shall be the answer to this problem? Gullies must be checked by dams. . . woodlands must be fenced. . . . hills must be contour-furrowed. . . forests must be replanted. . . pens must be constructed. Such undertaking calls for labor, and it is at this point that the Civilian Public Service camps enter the picture. The Civilian Conservation Corps camps which have been furnishing labor for much of the conservation work are discontinued, and their camps are being offered to Selective Service for use by Civilian Public Service.

Let the campee who is in a Civilian Public Service camp as well as these who make possible his being there, realize that this work is something non-resistant Christians can conscientiously do. Also, let it not be forgotten that this work, considered so essential to our country's welfare and security by our government itself, is truly work of national importance.

CHURCH MEMBERS

"A church statistician says that 5 per cent of all church members do not exist; 10 percent of them cannot be found. 25 percent never go to church; 50 percent never contribute a cent to the work of the church; 75 percent never go to the mid-week prayer meeting; 90 percent do not have family worship in their homes; 95 percent never try to win a soul to Christ." —Religious Telescope

Good News From Montana

The following wire from Lame Deer, Montana, has just arrived:

Rev. P. H. Richert, Newton, Kansas.

The Lord willing, next Sunday, November 29, the ordination will take place.

Mrs. R. Petter

This means that two of our native Cheyenne helpers, Milton Whiteman and Frank Littlewolf, will be ordained next Sunday. Milton is now in charge of the Birney station on full time.

Since these are the first two ordinations on our Cheyenne field, it marks a mile stone in our work there. Let us give thanks to the Lord and pray for the two men.

Last year Missionary Petter wrote an article for the mission number of our papers on "Two Lights," describing these two men. This article has been reprinted in both languages and can be had in any quantity by writing to Mrs. A. E. Kreider, North Newton, Kansas. This would be an opportune time to read that article, even if one has read it in the mission number.

SHATTERED ON THE ROCK OF MERCY

By John Tiessen

At the first glance this topic seems like a meaningless jumble of words. We are generally agreed that mercy does not destroy or shatter, but that it builds up and unifies. Neither is mercy like a rock, but rather flexible and conciliatory. Yet on the mission field we find that mercy, at least what is conceived as mercy, has economically brought many homes to ruin. The missionaries' mercy is trusted, so why should a man struggle to support his family? The mission or the missionary will give a loan which he will be too merciful to ask back. There are scores of cooperative credit societies or banks in India on record which are remembered as "failed." The missionaries started such banks in good faith, often putting their own tithes and other personal money in it; and the Christian brethren were very ready to borrow, and excellent promises of returning were made and signed. Paying back time came and woeful stories were produced, explaining beyond the shadow of all doubt that the loan could not be refunded. Economists well know that if too many people draw on a bank and do not make good their promises to refund, then the bank fails. So it has happened with far the largest per cent of Christian banks in India. People borrow but did not pay interest nor refund. Missionaries felt it outside of their realm to go to court.

About ten years ago a similar bank was started in our Basna area. A few people really benefitted by the bank and became prosperous. But the majority would not pay interest or refund the principle. Some four years ago the bank failed. Together with some of our leading brethren we have been considering trying to start a bank again, but it is generally agreed that every bit of mercy must be excluded from the arrangement.

However, I should also add that not only has mercy caused economic failures in connection with credit societies and banks; but also mercy that has undermined the economic independence in entirely private ways. To illustrate! Some years ago a family by the name of Pandeo became Christians in Manhadih (our former mission station). The father and the oldest son were excellent weavers. But the father had a crippled foot. To weave involved special effort. The missionary had mercy on him and gave him another job. The son became lazy. They neglected their weaving. The white ants ate up the loom. The family became poorer and poorer. Today the whole family is on the beggar level, whereas they could be on a fairly high level economically, but mercy ruined the family.

"I Have Experienced God Last Night"

Alice, Mrs. Rubin Kirtan, wife of our head teacher in our Mission Boy's Middle School, is one of the finest Christian characters in our Basna Church. Her home is a model. Her relationship with her husband is that of a constant chum and friend—a trait seen exceedingly seldom in India. They take walks together, they play together, they visit together like real friends do.

It was Wednesday evening, March 18, when Alice all of a sudden became violently ill. The doctor and nurses did what they could. At 3 a. m. the next morning they decided to operate. Rubin, the lover and husband, was agonized beyond all human strength. Should his beloved Alice pass away from him now? And so suddenly? The doctor gave practically no hope of recovery. Rubin almost sweat blood. He wrestled with God, if any human being can do that. Early in the morning, when the result of the operation gave a hint of hope, he wrote me a note saying, "I have experienced God last night; I thank Him for giving me my wife back this morning." When our brethren experience God so vitally it lifts the whole church. —John Thiessen

GOD'S LOVE

We can only see a little of the ocean,
A few miles distant from the rocky shore;
But out there—beyond, beyond our eyes' horizon,
There's more—there's more.

We can only see a little of God's loving—
A few rich treasurers from His mighty store;
But out there—beyond, beyond our eyes' horizon,
There's more—there's more!

HOME MISSIONS

Activities of the Rosthern Bible School

(See article on this subject in the preceding issue.)

When our Lord and Saviour trod upon the earth, He gave comfort to many a weary soul and also helped many a broken body. No one came to Jesus without receiving something, spiritually and also physically. This we can, especially, gather from the wonderful comfort found in the words spoken by our Saviour himself in Matthew 11:28-30; "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light."

Should not we who call ourselves brothers and sisters of this Lord show a little more love to our fellowmen by lightening their burden through a song or Bible verse or in some way share the cross with them? This will cause us to forget ourselves more and more, so that we live for the people around us.

Visits To Hospital

We as students of the Bible school were given the privilege of visiting the hospital in Rosthern many times; there we met many people with different crosses. These visits were a privilege, for I know that each one of us received a blessing from each visit. Very often we would see the patients lying there with smiling faces, and not a sigh would slip over their lips. Through a word from God's precious Book and some songs and a word of prayer we would both be blessed. On such visits we were generally accompanied by one of the teachers, but I count it as one of my precious experiences, when a group of us girls were sent out by ourselves. At such times we would visit a number of homes, and not only those who were sick showed their appreciation, but also those belonging to the household. How glad one feels later when one of these dear souls slips away to be with God. Then one rejoices that one could put at least one ray of sunshine into their last days upon earth. Oh, dear Christian young people, let us not forget those who cannot enjoy the wonderful nature which God has given us. Let us bring a bit of sunshine into their lives.

The Poor Around Us

The Lord also asks us to remember the poor around us. There is a greater blessing in giving than in taking. We really experienced this when the school bought some goods and we as a student body quickly made some clothes and also some small gifts for the poorer children. Shortly before Christmas we went out carolling and took these little things along with us. How the little faces did shine as they looked through the windows to see who was singing! They would rush to the door at the sound of the knock, and somewhat hesitatingly they would take the little gifts offered to them.

Weekly Prayer Meetings

Our weekly prayer meetings were among the activities which we enjoyed most. They were generally opened with a short selection of Scripture and a prayer by one of the students. Then some most welcomed guest or one of our own teachers would speak. In between would be items of singing with a special number now and then. Then we all united in prayer; how close to one another we felt when we prayed for certain things. Jesus promises us that if we ask according to His will we shall receive. We certainly experienced many an answer to prayer.

Special Testimony Meetings

But we must not keep the glad tidings to ourselves; we must tell others. Our teachers arranged special testimony meetings in order that we might learn to know each other better. With thankful hearts we told each other of the glad experiences and also of the battle we waged until Jesus Christ was at last crowned King of our lives. These are among the unforgetable activities participated in at Rosthern Bible School. God grant that many more young people may come and enjoy the study of God's Word in this school and then lend their helping hand to others as they see an opportunity to devote their lives more and more to the services of our great Lord and Saviour.

WITH GOOD CONSCIENCE

Early in the morning
Happy on our way
To a neighbor's cornfield
Or unto the hay.

Taking lives of others
Conscience doth forbid
Rather working harder
So that all might live.

Some may think it tiresome
Some may call it vain,
But remember, fellows—
God is still the same,

What thy hand is finding
Do it with thy might;
He, His own revealer
Doeth all things right.

In the day of judgment
God doth fully know,
Heaven comes for loving God,
By loving friend and foe.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

SCHOOLS FOR CHRISTIAN LIVING

This article is being written on the grounds of a Civilian Public Service camp. There are some things so deeply impressed upon me that I must share them with those who read this column. The young man who enrolls as a conscientious objector when he is drafted is headed for an entirely different world from that of the man who enters the regular military service. After two days and two nights of travel on the trains, chiefly in the company of soldiers, sailors, marines, loose women and a few civilians one is bound to be impressed with his experiences. The drinking and the drunkenness, the profanity and the vulgarity, the down-right immoral conduct witnesssed was most disheartening.

If this is the kind of conduct manifested in public what must one expect of behavior in more private quarters? Is this a sample of the morality all men in the national armed service are subjected to? If so, it is little wonder that many of the stoutest souls succomb and fall by the wayside. Will this war breed another wave of moral corruption and spiritual sterility as all previous wars have done? If my observations are representative, and there is some evidence that they are, I raise the question as to how lofty are the ideals which we claim to be struggling for?

By Contrast

By sharp contrast to the above observations are my experiences in the Civilian Public Service camps. From the time I came to the time I left I saw and heard nothing that did not measure up to the highest Christian standards. To be in the presence of a hundred or more sturdy and upright men who live according to the guidance of their Christian conviction is a genuine inspiration. Those who are in doubt should come and spend a day or two with the men in camp and watch them live and work and play.

Religious Devotion

There is an effort made to practice the presence of God throughout every day and every moment of their lives. Beginning at six o'clock in the morning, and earlier with some who rise for individual devotions, the rising bell rings. When all have gathered for breakfast the boys take turns returning thanks before partaking of the meal. Only a few out of over a hundred feel that they cannot offer audible prayer. Following breakfast a devotional period is conducted by one of the boys, the director of the camp or guests if there are any present. At noon whether eating in the dining hall or out on a hillside on a job the consciousness of God's presence is observed and acknowledgement to Him is made before eating. In the evening several times a week there are Bible study groups and prayer meetings and, of course, individual devotional exercises before retiring. In the CPS camps there are no paid chaplains to administer religion to the men. Outside of the camp director, the individual men are their own chaplains or are chaplains for each other. In one of the camps I discovered two prayer closets in the front of the chapel where the men could retreat for quiet individual communion with God.

Christian Brotherhood

The boys in camp find daily opportunity to put their Christian faith in practice. They live together in common dormitories, eat in a common dining room and work on common projects. There are young men from a great variety of backgrounds in each camp, but all are there from conscientious motives. It requires tolerance, patience, kindness, and neighborliness to live so close together in Christian harmony. Most of the boys learn to cultivate these virtues as they live and work together from day to day. In the hours after work their time is spent in reading, studying, discussing, or working on some interesting and creative hobbies such as wood-working, weaving, photography, and getting out the camp newspaper.

Wholesome Environment

These camps are not paradises. There are problems to be solved and difficult individuals to deal with, but on the whole the environment is good, the influences Christian and positive. Solutions to problems are sought through divine guidance, through sympathetic understanding and love; through long-suffering and Christian grace. There is a wonderful opportunity for our more than two thousand Mennonite boys to practice a genuine Christianity in these schools for Christian living. It is our prayer that from these camps will come an army of consecrated Christian young men back into the home communities after the war to give more vigorous and intelligent leadership to our church than she has ever had before.

MENNONITE BIBLE MISSION OF CHICAGO

Twenty-fifth Anniversary

The Mennonite Bible Mission of Chicago expects to celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary and home coming during the week of November 9 to December 6.

Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, secretary of the Home Mission Board, will be the speaker. The general theme during these meetings will be "Church Builders." There will also be a fellowship supper on Friday evening, December 4. Various choirs from churches in the community and the girls' choir of our own church will furnish music for each night during the services.

The offerings will be used for home and foreign mission and relief work. We are praying that God will give us his blessing and renew our efforts and enrich our lives for a greater service for him.

—Grace Bant

Thirty-fifth Anniversary

The thirty-fifth anniversary of the Mennonite Sunday School Convention of the Mennonite churches in Chicago will be held at the Lincoln Avenue Gospel Mission on November 23. The eight Mennonite churches in Chicago will gather for the semi-annual convention. Discussions are to center around Sunday school and church work in the city.

RELIEF

Schmidts Make Business Trip to Buenos Aires

October 28 letters from Brother Vernon Schmidt and Dr. John Schmidt tell of their trip to Buenos Aires, Argentina. Vernon reports success in securing a road grader which was shipped to Paraguay for use in improving the road between the Menno and Fernheim Colonies.

Dr. Schmidt is making plans to return to the United States. He also tells of making contacts which are hoped will lead to the training of nurses from the Mennonite colonies for service in their respective communities.

Both mention enjoying fellowship with the Mennonite missionaries: Brothers Weber, Swartzentruber, and Litwiler.

Brother Byler Prepares to Return

An October 29 cable from Brother J. N. Byler gives the information that with the arrangements for the Mennonite winter relief program in France now satisfactorily completed, he looks forward to returning to America.

If plans carry, he will return on a Portuguese boat via Lisbon and thus will arrive in America sometime in December.

Placement Committee of The General Conference

The Placement Committee of the General Conference has been active during the last year, from November 1, 1941, to October 31, 1942, in supporting the vacant churches to secure a minister; and in helping ministers to find a suitable pastorate.

During the last year, eight of our vacant churches found a minister whom they considered to be a godsent pastor of the flock. However, there are still eighteen churches in our General Conference who do not have a regular pastor.

The need for pulpit supply has been very acute during the past year, and will be more so in the near future. There are at the present time about twenty-four young men in colleges and seminaries, preparing themselves for the ministry; however most of them need several more years of education before they can enter into regular service. More than in previous years the words of Christ can be applied to our congregations: "The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore, the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest."

OUR HISTORICAL LIBRARY

Recently the librarian had the joy to get old copies of the Mennonitsche Rundshau and Kinderfreund from the aged Rev. M. B. Fast, Reedly, California, who served as editor of the papers around 1910. The library has now a number of complete sets of Mennonite periodicals of different branches of Mennonites, bound in beautiful volumes. We would like to encourage all friends of our history to look into their attics and find old papers which might be a valuable contribution to the historical collection.

CPS Camps

For the Boys Working in Mental Hospitals

With the opening of the State Mental Hospital at Norristown, Pa., the Mennonite boys from mid-western camps, the fourth unit of hospital men will be functioning. These units of men number around twenty-five at each hospital. In order to provide a wholesome spiritual life for the boys and to organize their life in the most helpful manner, Brother John Mosemann (heretofore director at Grottoes, Va.) has been appointed as an assistant general director to Brother H. A. Fast. Brother Mosemann's work will take him on regular visits to the boys in the several hospitals.

Brother and Sister Mosemann have served the longest of any camp staff members at any given camp. Until Brother and Sister Paul Bender transfer to Grottoes as director and matron respectively, Brother Delvin Kirchofer is in charge of the camp.

For the "Enrichment of Camp Life"

Mid-term reports from camp educational directors gave an interesting impression regarding the progress of the educational program which has as one of its broad objectives the "enrichment of camp life."

While much of the educational program consists of courses in Mennonite history, first aid, Bible study, public speaking, typing, music, etc., it also includes such features as visiting speakers and groups who bring inspiring messages and programs to the camp.

Educational directors tell of the growing camp libraries with periodicals and books on a wide range of subjects. Many volumes are donated or loaned by friends. In all the camps there are organized choruses, photography clubs, weedworking groups, and recreation which varies from rug weaving to ball games.

Dependents of Conscientious Objectors

The N.S.B.R.O. and other agencies are working on the problem of provision for dependents of C.O's, and for the needs of pacifists who lose their jobs, etc. An organization known as The Placement Council, and working under the general auspices and direction of N.S.B.R.O. has been established and will shortly be functioning. It will for the present be directed by Ray Newton (chairman), A.F.S.C.,; Jesse Hoover, Mennonite; Mrs. Ross Murphy, Brethern; A. J. Muste, F.O.R., and some one from the pacifists in the non-pacifist churches, and someone from the pacifists without church affiliation. They will enlist leading people in the historic peace churches, F.O.R., W.R.L.,etc., in states and cities to set up councils. The chief objectives will be: To find employment for dependents of C.P.S. men, and hospitality and relief for those who cannot work; to find employment in non-war occupations for other pacifists out of work; to study possibilities of placing pacifists in jobs where they can contribute toward the building of a cooperative economic order while earning a living; to study problems of employment of C.P.S. men after the war.

A questionnaire has been prepared which is being sent to C.O.'s along with Selective Service Form 101, so that more accurate information about dependents may be obtained. This questionnaire may also be used by groups to send to C.O.'s or local groups, in order that information about dependents may be obtained at an earlier stage and in order that C.O.'s may know when they are deciding between 4-E and 1-Ao, for example, that some consideration is being given by the united pacifist movement to the dependency problem.

Appeal Procedure of Conscientious Objectors Who Have A Dependency Claim

At this time many local boards are re-classifying men who have been in class 3-A (men whose dependents are mothers or brothers or wives without children). Men who are conscientious objectors and who consider they still have a valid claim for deferment on grounds of dependency are often puzzled as to which claim to press. It is a mistake to make an appeal on grounds of dependency alone, for Selective Service regulations have been interpreted as permitting only one one appeal. A C.O. may, therefore, be prevented from appealing for class 4-E if he has lost an appeal for class 3-A. We therefore recommend that men in this position accompany their appeal by a note as follows:

"I hearby appeal from classification 1-A (or 1-AO) for a classification of 3-A as a person with dependents or if 4-E as a conscientious objector to non-combatant as well as to combatant military service.

"If the Board of Appeal denies my appeal for 3-A Section 627.25 requires it to pass my file on to the Department of Justice for determination of my claim to 4-E."

Procedure To Be Followed By Conscientious Objectors To Secure Release From Army Service

The following suggestions relating to this matter, are based upon a statement on Page 2 of the September 1, 1942 issue of The Reporter, published by the N.S.B.R.O., and from suggestions made by man now in C.P.S. camp, who has passed through this experience of release from the army.

Sec. 622.51 (b) makes provision for local boards to re-classify men into 4-E who have been released upon the recommendation of the Director of Selective Service from general military service, because of conscientious objection to such service.

A man who feels for conscientious reasons that he should not be in the army should:

1. Prepare an affidavit stating his position. This should be carefully and concisely worded, and preferably typewritten. It must be notarized by the army post adjutant.

2. Prepare a typewritten letter which fully explains the nature and purpose of the affidavit. Address it to the unit commander. In the letter request the unit commander to forward the affidavit and the letter to the Adjutant General, who in turn should take up the matter with Selective Service. Make several copies.

3. Attempt to secure permission to write directly to the Director of Selective Service, asking that he request the Adjutant General to forward the affidavit to him. (Regulations do not permit army personnel to write to government agencies except with special permission). If permission is given, address this request to General Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service Headquarters, Washington, D. C.

4. Forward a copy of the affidavit and the correspondence to the National Service Board for Religious Objectors, telling them in full of the action taken. If the selectee has been unable to contact the Director of Selective Service, request the N.S.B.R.O. to do this.

When such a request reaches Selective Service, they will investigate it. If they find the selectee has proved himself sincere they will authorize the local board nearest the army camp of the selectee to induct the released selectee and provide transportation to the nearest C.P.S. camp.

"Thy Will" and Amusements

It doesn't take much thought or effort to enter into activities which are commonly called amusements. It usually takes money. These activities are a very common feature of the life of this world. Christians sometimes defend some of these activities, not realizing that in so doing they are blocking their own way into higher forms of activity which God has prepared for them and which really are much more satisfying.

Jesus pointed out that the laborers for his Kingdom were few. It is even so today. How much work there is in our homes, churches, schools, and conference activities which needs to be done if God's will is to be done more extensively!

Jesus found it satisfying to work for God. To do God's will was His "meat," the food which satisfied the deepest hunger within Him. If our deepest and greatest desire is to do God's will, then the doing of it will prove to be that which satisfies us most completely. Perhaps, some of our work for God does not satisfy us as it should because we do not see clearly enough how it definitely is God's will for us. It's the goal, the purpose, which gives meaning to our activities. Perhaps, we need to meditate a little upon the activities which may not seem very satisfying to us.

Is it not true that while there is so much of God's will to be done, we should never be engaged in trivial or even sinful activity? —rw.

FALL RALLY

The annual fall rally of the Eastern District Young Peoples' Union was held at the Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, Pa., November 1.

The service was opened with song service led by Melvin Clemens, while other musical numbers were a vocal solo by Harvey Bauman and a violin solo by Kenneth Bauman.

The society project for the rally was to collect books for the boys from our churches who are either in C.P.S. camps or military camps. Robert Kreider, who was formerly director of education at the Colorado Springs C.P.S. camp, was present and gave an interesting talk on the opportunities which C.P.S. camps offer.

The response to the project was very good. Most of the societies gave at least one book for each boy from their church who is in the service.

A very challenging message was delivered by Dr. Harvey Bauman, missionary to India. His message was entitled "Anchors" taken from Hebrews 6:17-20. He pointed out three "anchors" which we must hold on to in order to keep anchored in Christ: First, Bible reading and prayer; second, keep th Sabbath holy; third, tithing. This simple and direct message was truly a challenge to all young people to live a more abundant Christian life.

—Arlene Geisinger, Corr.

Am I a Christian?

By Arnold Reimer

The Philippian jailor asked Paul, "What must I do to be saved?" Paul answered, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." This faith must be in the heart, and not only in the mind. Jesus stressed the "heart faith" when he said, "Except a man be born again he cannot enter the kingdom of heaven."

Obviously then, the new birth is the first step in becoming a Christian, and a person is not a Christian until he is born again. What does it mean to be born again? Briefly stating, we might say that the new birth consists in the following three steps: 1. Admitting to God that we are sinners. 2. Repenting of (turning away from) our sins, and asking for God's forgiveness, because the blood of Jesus was shed on the cross for the remission of sins. 3. Accepting Christ as our personal Saviour—inviting Him to live in our hearts. That, briefly, is the first essential step in becoming a Christian as the Bible teaches.

The Bible foretells that "in the last days" there shall be a falling away from the faith—that there will be a "form" of godliness, but that they will deny the "power" thereof. We find that true in a great many churches and Sunday Schools today. They preach only a "social gospel," Boy Scout rules, good works, and other similar things, but leave out entirely the blood of Jesus. Although some of these other teachings are good for a Christian to follow, they leave out the most important part of Christianity—the new birth—which is the heart, the life of Christianity.

Without the new birth a person might have a form of religion, but it is only a shell. For instance, we can take the germ out of a grain of wheat and plant what is left. Most of the grain will still be there, but it makes no difference how much care we might give to that "shell" of wheat, it won't grow. The life, the heart is not there; it can't grow; it's dead.

So it is in the spiritual sense. Without the new birth a person might live a life that looks good outwardly, but he is still dead spiritually. He is only a "shell"; there is no life, no power, and the person cannot live a life that is pleasing to God. "There is none that doeth good, no, not one."

Is it any wonder that so many people turn away from churches and Sunday Schools because they find no spiritual satisfaction there? In some churches they get no spiritual food, and if the person is not born again he cannot "digest" any spiritual food when it is given. A person must first be "made alive," and then he can digest food.

Let us see to it that in our Mennonite churches we always uphold the Bible teaching that it is absolutely necessary to be born again before a person is a Christian. —Beatrice, Nebraska

I. Worship Service:

1. Songs: "Take My Life and Let It Be" No. 215; "Lead Kindly Light" No. 163. 2. Reading of leading topic, prayer, and leader's remarks. 3. Talk by some C.P.S. worker. 4. Offering for relief or for peace work.

II. Leader's Introduction:

It may be well to use this meeting to deal with the problem which is confronting us so urgently in our day—the problem of maintaining and expressing our conviction in regard to peace in this time of war. The statement of the General Conference as approved in August, 1941, follows in part:

As followers of Christ, the Prince of Peace, we believe His Gospel to be a gospel of peace, requiring us as His disciples to be at peace with all men, to live a life and good will, even toward our enemies, and to renounce the use of force and violence in settling our problems as contrary to the spirit of our Saviour and Master. These principles we derive from such Scripture teachings as: "Love your enemies;" "Do good to them that hate you;" "Resist not evil;" "My kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight;" "Put up thy sword into its place; for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword;" "Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves;" "If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink; for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head;" "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good;" "The servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle to all men;" "The weapons of our warfare are not carnal;" "Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps: Who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth: who when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not;" "Not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing; but contrariwise blessing;" "If a man say I love God and hateth his brother, he is a liar. . . .And this commandment have we from him, that he who loveth God love his brother also;" and other similar passages as well from the whole tenor of the Gospel.

We believe that war is altogether contrary to the teaching and spirit of Christ and the Gospel; that therefore war is sin, as is all manner of carnal strife; that it is wrong in spirit and method as well as in purpose, and destructive in its results.

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

1. Christ's teaching in the Sermon on the Mount on love and good will. Matt. 5-7. 2. Some of Jesus' later words to his diciples. Luke 9:55, 56; John 18:36; Matt. 26:52. 3. The Lord's prayer and forgiveness. Mark 11:26. 4. Christ's own example. I Peter 2:21, 23. 5. Some of Paul's words. Rom. 12:14, 17-21; 14:19a; I Thess. 5:13.

IV. For Discussion:

1. What provisions does the Selective Service Act make for the conscientious objector? 2. What are the opportunities for expressing our convictions and the Christian way of living through the Civilian Public Service camps? 3. How can we work toward peace and goodwill among nations now?

V. Facts for Study:

Our Concept of Patriotism

As members of an historic peace church we love our country and sincerely work for its highest welfare. True love for our country does not mean hatred for others. It is our conviction that only the application of the principles of peace, love, justice, liberty, and international good will makes for the highest welfare of our country; and the highest welfare of our country must harmonize with the highest welfare of humanity everywhere. Our faith is in security through love, protection through good will; and for such we are willing to make the necessary sacrifice. We are opposed to war as a method of settling disputes because it is un-Christian, destructive of our highest values, and sows the seed of future wars. We feel that we are true patriots because we build upon the eternal principles of right which are the only foundation of stable government in our world community.

VI. Food for Thought:

"If my people, who are called by my name, shall humble themselves and pray and seek my face and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land." II Chron. 7;14.

Mission Study (continued)

(Based on Moyer's book, With Christ On the Edge Of the Jungles.)

3. The call came to the second pioneer—Rev. E. B. Steiner, then missionary under the General Conference Mission Board.

A. The gospel seed was planted in the heart soil of the weaver caste. Tell the story of Gopal and his pleading for the missionary to stay and give them the gospel. He pleaded, "How can our children grow up without the same power of salvation in their lives. Here are my sons, Gundhar, Sundhar, Mundhar, Baigno. Cannot you send us teachers and evangelists even as that missionary did back in our old country?" "The history of that area was to be forever different, because one man who was not eloquent, was willing, as was Moses, to let God use him." pp. 14-18.

4. The sons of Habil baptized by the third pioneer, P. J. Wiens. In that territory in 1919 one hundred and eight were baptized. In 1921 ninety-six adults were baptized at one place and time.

A. Did it pay to answer the call of God?

B. Describe the work of a kotwal. To which caste did they belong? p. 20.

C. Tell what influence the life and teaching of the great Indian Christian, Sadhu Sundar Singh, had upon the son of a kotwal. p. 21.

5. The call of Ramo.

A. Tell of his great desire to go to the mission school. pp. 22-23. How was he enabled to go?

B. Describe the early home life of Ramo (Timothy) and his wife Noni (Phoebe).

C. Tell how this village erected their church for Timothy said, "We've got to have a building for worship in this village." pp. 24-25.

6. Land was finally obtained April 22, 1924. Tell of some of the difficulties Rev. and Mrs. Moyer experienced before a mission station was established in the territory through which Gopal had traveled. Chap. 5.

7. Read very carefully the fortieth chapter of Isaiah which Rev. Moyer read just before they left to establish this new mission.

8. Starting at the bottom in building a mission station. "A mission station may be compared to a parish compound in America which contains a church, a school, and a pastor's house. Or it may be compared to a small college campus in that it contains in some form the building equipment to carry on three types of work, primary education for Christian children, medical work through a dispensary or a hospital, homes for transient workers including the missionary, and a house of worship."

A. Tell about the building of this mission. pp. 35-38.

B. Discuss the different types of work which drained heavily upon the strength of Rev. and Mrs. Moyer. pp. 42-45.

Conclusion of this week's study.

"Christ seemed to be standing on the edge of this wilderness, calling men to repent and to make straight a way for the Lord. He seemed to lay this charge upon us. We were on the edge of the jungles for Christ's sake."

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT

HOW THE CHURCH WORKS IN CITIES AND RURAL AREAS Rom. 10:12-15, Luke 18:15-17, Luke 10:25-37.

"The Missionary Spirit"

Missions, recreation centers, park and street meetings, prisons, hospitals, migrants, Mexicans, miners, Japanese, sharecroppers, seamen, soldiers and sailors—these are all special groups who are often neglected.

A simple invitation to a member of one of these groups may lead to a soul saved.

About one half of the population of the U. S. lives in rural areas, and these people must be reached. Our churches could reach many an unfortunate, with a visit to the sick, discouraged, unlearned, a gift of material possession and above all, a word for God spoken anywhere and everywhere. The Word should be spoken in church buildings, on highways and byways, where the people are, and in the homes and on the printed pages.

A girl returned home from Bible School. She went to her pastor and asked him to give her the name of the most lonesome and needy person in town. The pastor gave her the name of her own father! Oftentimes the neediest ones are right in our own homes.

How blessed is the church who sends out missionaries. Someone asked a missionary from Africa how many members in his church? The answer was fifty! Then the question was asked "How many missionaries has your church?" The answer was "fifty!" Every member of the African church went forth to preach the gospel to the lost.

The Question Bee

1. Who is my neighbor? 2. How can we help the missionary cause? 3. How can you reach the migrants in your community?

The Prayer List

"My Jesus, my King, my Life, my All, I again dedicate my whole self to Thee. Accept me, and grant, O gracious Father, that ere the year is gone, I may finish my work. In Jesus' name I ask it, Amen." This was the prayer of Livingstone.

A familiar story is that of a visitor to Coleridge who argued vehemently against the religious instructions of the young, and declared his own determination not to "prejudice" his children in favor of any form of religion, but to allow them at maturity to choose for themselves. The answer of Coleridge to the particular argument was pertinent and sound enough. "Why prejudice a garden in favor of flowers and fruit? Why not let the clods choose for themselves between cockelberries and strawberries?"

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

A. S. BECHTEL

December 13, 1942

THE VALUE OF THE CHURCH TO THE SOCIAL ORDER

Matt. 5:13-16, Mark 12:13-17, I Peter 2:13-17

In every community or people or nation there arise accepted standards according to which people deal with each other. The social order is the commonly accepted state of human relations and standards of conduct to which people conform. The gospel of Christ, because it promotes justice and love, has always had a marked effect on the social order. The Church is greatly concerned about helping people to be good Christians. These Christians have much to say about the social order. The church helps to improve the social order by making better citizens.

Christians, Salt, Light, Matt. 5:13-16

Jesus uses four illustrations to show the value of Christians to their fellow-men. Salt preserves and sweetens food. Christians are to purify, preserve, and sweeten the social order in which they move. Their good example, presence, life and words; their whole influence is to cleanse and purify and counteract every corrupt tendency. Christians need to guard against becoming like savorless salt by losing the Spirit of Christ and their fervent devotion to Him.

The Christian Church stands as a moral and spiritual light in a sin-darkened world. Christians should bring spiritual enlightenment to others by their lives and words. This depends upon keeping an unbroken communication with Christ. It is the business of the church to shine and she must not in any manner cover her light. The life and character of each Christian should shine for the glory of God. Our good works should remind people of our Father.

Christian's Duty to State and to God, Mark 12:13-17

The Jews objected greatly to the paying of a small head tax to the Roman government. Jesus showed that He understood the purpose of His questioners (vss. 14, 15). The coin which they readily accepted indicated clearly that they owed tribute to Caesar. Jesus declared plainly that God had demands on them equally as great as those of Caesar. The state may not infringe upon the just claims which God has upon us. Our obedience to the demands of the state is limited by the obedience we owe to God. Our hearts, our lives, our service are to be given to Him.

Christian's Duty to Civil Authority, I Pet. 2:13-17

Peter urges submission, obedience to government, not from merely human motives but because it is ordained of God and should be respected. Law and order are necessary and God approves our respectful obedience. This obedience exerts a wholesome influence on others (vs. 15). The Jewish converts were free spiritually from the bondage of sin and the cermonial law. This freedom however, implied obedience to legitimate authority. Our freedom in Christ does not give us liberty to be disobedient Christian citizens.

The Ministry of the Church

The Church is Christ's agency in the world for the extension of the gospel and it is responsible for those changes in the social order which the gospel brings. These begin in the family and the community. As people are changed in Christian character, the community character changes. The greater the influence of the church, the greater the spirit of goodwill in the community. What is true of the community, applies in a larger measure to the nation. A nation needs strong and free churches, free to preach the gospel and win souls for Christ. Spiritual values cannot be ignored if a nation is to become truly strong. Churches held to make a nation peace-loving and law-Churches help to make a nation peace-loving and law-character. The highest welfare of the nation depends on this.

The churches of any nation spread their light—the gospel light—through their missionary work. Wherever they have taken the gospel and it has been accepted, helpful and far-reaching social order changes have followed. The gospel brings to those who accept it a new sense of personal dignity, a new hope and inspiration, new ideals and dissatisfaction with the old. This means new standards of life, new standards —Christian standards—for the social order.

The light of the gospel was not given to us for our personal benefit alone. What it has done for us personally, and as a nation, it can do for others also. Our love for God is measured by our readiness to share with others that which we have found. Christ's word was "go, preach, teach."

How is the church expected to give light to the world?

What is the particular business of the church in my community?

Why do dictators have little or no use for the Christian Church?

CORRESPONDENCE

BETHEL MENNONITE CHURCH

Winton, California

This morning (November 17) it is windy and cool, with a mist coming down. A fairly good rain of several nights ago helped the grain that has just been seeded in orchards and vineyards. The farmers' harvested crops have brought a higher price than last year. But with higher living expenses and taxes they are about where they were last year.

On October 18 Miss Emma Ruth from Reedley gave us an inspiring talk in the morning and in the evening showed moving pictures of her tour of the Mennonite churches of California, Oregon, Washington, and Idaho. These were very interesting to the large number present.

Our pastor and wife visited their former home at Dinuba during November. On November 15 Wesley Koehn, son of Brother and Sister Joel Koehn of Winton, and Olga Becker, daughter of Abraham Becker of Freeman, South Dakota, were married by the pastor in our meeting house. The reception and wedding dinner were held in Winton Hall. The couple received many beautiful and useful gifts and left for a short honeymoon in southern California. A week prior to this Leonard Yost, son of Brother and Sister P. N. Yost, and Priscilla Koehn, daughter of Brother and Sister Joel Koehn, were married.

On November 15 Brother and Sister Jake Neufeld and Mrs. Neufeld's sister, a Mrs. Reimer, and her daughter Leona, all from Shafter, gave us a very appropriate message with songs illustrated on a screen. The Bethel congregation was asked to join in the singing. We thank them very much for this program.

The Albert Janzens who formerly lived here and then moved to the Fredonia, Kansas, community and for a time also to Enid, Oklahoma, are again living in our midst. At present they are living in an apartment house at Atwater, for houses are very scarce.

The Ladies Sewing Circle met in the writer's home recently and planned for the coming mission sale. The Sunday school teachers also met and planned for a program for Christmas. Communion will be observed before Christmas. —Noah A. Koehn, Corr.

CONVENTION OF MISSIONARY SOCIETIES

The sixth annual convention of the Union Missionary Society of the Mennonites of Indiana was held at the Defenseless Mennonite Church near Berne on Thursday, October 22, 1942.

Mrs. Howard Gilliom, state president, presided at all of the sessions.

Leaders for the worship periods, the chorister, Mrs. Arthur Sprunger, and the pianist, Miss Grace Yoder, were from the Eighth Street Church, Goshen. This group also contributed the large poster on exhibit, illustrating the convention theme.

A large display of literature afforded opportunity to obtain materials for missionary programs and the study of relief work, C. P. S. camps, and migrants.

The business session included:

(a.) Secretary and treasurer's report of the 1941 convention.

(b.) Reading of a letter of thanks from Mrs. Noah Soldner, president of the Women's Advisory Board of Bluffton College, for contributions to the college by the women's organizations of our churches.

(c.) A standing vote of thanks to the ladies of the local church, for their gracious hospitality for the day.

(d.) Election of officers:

President, Mrs. J. S. Slabaugh, Nappanee;
Vice-President, Mrs. Harold Fraker, Woodburn;
Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Jerry Sauder, Grabill;
Recording Secretary, Mrs. Garth Stoltz, Topeka;

(e.) Roll Call: Response to roll call revealed that nine of our Indiana societies were represented, including one new society from the Highland Bethel Church, Fort Wayne. Visitors included a number of ladies from the Missionary Church group and thirty-five ladies representing the General Conference churches in the Bluffton, Ohio, area and the Defenseless Church of Archibald, Ohio. Total registration numbered 342.

Convention Echoes

"We must expand our programs to include other agencies besides missions." "Projects added to women's work in recent years include contributions to foreign relief, C. P. S. camps, Bluffton College, and work among migrants." "Make use of all available sources of information leading to opportunities for service." "Earnest prayer creates interest in the missionary society." "Make each member of your society responsible for some service." "Some present needs for C.P.S. camps: Medaryville, Indiana, thirty comforters, one dozen laundry, bags, bed socks, books, magazines, and games. Camp Henry, Illinois, sheets, pillowcases, work socks—size 11½, and towels." "Aims of the United Women's Service Committee: To have each society devote at least one program to the study of migrants and make a contribution toward that work. To find a worker to work among migrants through the Home Missions Council." "Contributions amounting to more than seven hundred dollars have been made to Bluffton College by women's organizations. A large amount of canned food was also contributed." "All kinds of clothing both used and new are needed for foreign relief. When making new garments it is more economical to buy materials ready-cut for sewing." "Shipments of clothing have been sent to France, England, and Paraguay." "When Bible schools in China were closed, they were continued in the homes of the missionaries." "Victory for Christ at all costs must be the motto for our churches."

DANIEL TOAVS ORDAINED

On August 30, six churches joined with the Bethel Wolf Point Church to magnify the Lord in the ordination of Daniel Toavs, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Toavs. The service took place in the forenoon, and was followed by the Young People's Rally which began in the afternoon and continued through the evening service.

We were indeed happy to have with us both Rev. J. J. Esau, through whose ministry Daniel was saved, and Rev. Albert Schultz, who, during the four years of his ministry in Montana, nurtured the young convert in the Lord.

The program committee chose as the motto for the occasion, "Together With Christ." This motto was set forth in three aspects during the day. In the forenoon—"Together With Christ as Constructors;" in the afternoon—"Together With Christ as Conquerors;" and in the evening—"Together With Christ as Companions."

Rev. Albert Schultz preached the ordination sermon on the theme of the morning. He chose as his text I Cor. 3:9-15, Eph. 2:20-22. His message was a personal one to the candidate, stressing: 1. God the architect with the Holy Spirit as supervisor of the work in the Church, which is His plan and work for this day. Eph.1:4. Acts 15:14. 2. The Bible, the message and the blueprint for the constructor. The Bible requires spiritual discernment and must be rightly divided. I Cor. 2:14. II Tim. 2:15. The message from the Bible must be taught and preached as the only message to save men, with a consciousness of the severe penalty of not preaching the Word. Gal. 1:6-9. I Tim. 1:3 4:6 6:3, 4. II Tim. 4:2. I Cor. 2:2. Jer. 23:21, 22. Ezek. 34:2. 3. The constructor must be a worker, being sure of his calling; he must be prepared by God; he must know what his work consists of; and he must realize his high calling. Gal. 1:16. Eph. 4:11, 12. He must also realize he is an ambassador. II Cor. 5:20. Spudgeon said, "If my son Charles should lower himself and become the king of England instead of a minister I should be disappointed." 4. The construction (the work) gives joy to the worker. 5. The constructor must some day give an account of his work before the Lord. Heb. 13:17. I Peter 5:4.

Following this message the Hoch sisters sang "A Volunteer For Jesus."

Preceding the ordination Rev. Esau gave a short message using as his text II Tim. 3:16, 17 and II Tim. 4:1, 2. He stressed the charge. First, "preach the Word;" second, reprove, rebuke, exhort; and third, the need of a clean heart. Ps. 51:10.

Rev. Ewert, the pastor, read the charge. Rev. Esau then performed the ordination ceremony. The laying on of the hands by Rev. Esau, Rev. Schultz, Rev. Ewert, and Rev. Jesse Toavs (brother of Daniel) and the prayers that followed caused us all to feel the solemnity and sacredness of the entry into the service of our Lord.

Rev. Esau then presented a Bible and the ordination certificate to the candidate who responded with his testimony. Reverend Ewert then introduced A. F. Toavs, the father, who expressed his joy and thanksgiving in having another son yielded to the call to service. The ladies trio (two sisters and a sister-in-law) sang "I Have Left All to Follow the Saviour."

A bountiful lunch was served to nearly five hundred people at noon.

The afternoon program consisted of musical numbers from young people of the various churches, and two topics were presented: "Together With Christ As Conquerors Over Circumstances" led by Rev. Esau, and "Together With Christ as Conquerors Over the Body" by Jow Palmer, a student of Wheaton College.

Following the afternoon session a light lunch was served. After the lunch the young people met for a singspiration and a discussion of the Christian's attitude in regard to the present world situation by Dan Goertzen, also of Wheaton College.

Rev. Schultz gave a very impressive consecration message on "Together With Christ As Companions" to close the day.

—Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Allentown, Pa., Seventy-four per cent of the membership partook of the Lord's Supper on October 25. The Historical Conference at the Germantown Mennonite Church was attended by the following missionaries: Brother P. A. Penner, Brother and Sister Harvey Bauman, Brother and Sister Paul A. Wenger, and Sister Wilhelmina Kuyf.

—Fort Collins, Colorado, C.P.S. Camp: The men recently saw three motion pictures films dealing with conservation. They were: "A Heritage We Guard," "Roads and Erosion," and "The River."

—Rev. Cornelius Plett, Bible instructor at Freeman Junior College, delivered the Thanksgiving message at the Bethesda Mennonite Church, Marion, South Dakota. Evening courses offered by the college are shorthand, typing, and a Red Cross first aid course. Dr. E. F. Tieszen is the teacher of the last named course.

—Mrs. G. A. Linscheid, wife of the late Missionary Linscheid, is visiting at the home of her son in Brookings, South Dakota, where he is librarian in the state school.

—A conference of "The Historic Peace Churches and Rural Life in the Middle West" will be held at Quaker Hill, Richmond, Indiana, December 11 and 12, 1942. The reason for this conference is given as, "to determine whether the Historic Peace Churches, Brethren, Friends, and Mennonites, can work out a cooperative program that will guide an increasing number of our choice young people into active rural life." Leaders and resource leaders of the conference will include: O. E. Baker, University of Maryland, formerly of the U. S. Department of Agriculture; E. R. Bowan; Prof. Guy Hershberger of Goshen College; Monsignor L. G. Ligutti; Arthur E. Morgan; and Homer L. Morris. The Quaker leader who promotes the conference says, "For some years an alarming number of our young people have left their home communities for the city. As a result our meetings are being laid down, our numbers and our vitality diminish."

—First Mennonite Church, Berne Indiana: Dr. C. H. Suckau started his work of preaching on November 8, after his prolonged absence due to his eye affliction. He has not yet regained full vision in his eye, and probably never will, according to the lastest word. He expects to be in the pulpit regularly again from now on. —Corr. Brother Suckau is preaching a series of sermons on the Articles of Faith. His subject for November 22 was "God."

—Rev. and Mrs. P. J. Wiens, former missionaries to India, brought messages in the Second Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, on Thanksgiving Day and November 29. Brother Wiens is now employed in The Mennonite Historical Library, North Newton, Kansas.

—All boys who have become eighteen since July 1, 1942, have been ordered by President Roosevelt to register for selective service. The registration will take place the last three weeks of December.

—Dr. Harvey Bauman of 40 South Third Street, Quakertown, Pa., writes, "I started the practice of medicine with Dr. R. D. Tice of Quakertown on November 11. Sunday church appointments and deputation work will be continued. One night a week can be given to the churches too if necessary. After the rounds have been made among the churches, I will have Tuesday off. The Tice clinic is really equal to a post-graduate course in medicine and surgery. All possible examinations are made except tissue sections. The scarcity of doctors here is acute. I am helping out because of the great need. I am still fully under the Foreign Mission Board and hope to go back to India after the regular furlough as soon as the way opens. Some doctors refuse to take on new patients and others do not go out on calls. The extra gas cut will make it difficult for some people to get to the doctor's office too." Brother Bauman's telephone number for day use is 450; that for night use is 451.

— Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California: "Tuesday, the truck from North Fork will come to get supplies for the camp. Thursday 7:30 p. m., Church Play Night at the Community Center at General Grant School."

—Rev. P. H. Richert, Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, plans to attend the Foreign Missions Conference which is to held in Cleveland, Ohio, from December 7 to 10. Usually the conference has been held in New York. Since it is closer this time Brother Richert plans to attend.

—The Olive Branch, Grottoes, Virginia: Talks on a Sunday evening included some on "Why Everybody Needs Christ," "What Jesus Means To Us," "How Do We Learn Our Need Of Christ," and "Why Are Many Unconscious Of Their Need?" The camp recently received two truckloads of good Lancaster County eats, including chicken, ham, sausage, pretzels, popcorn, apples, and potatoes. Handicraft classes result in beautiful woolen cushion tops and leather work.

—Belton, Montana, C.P.S. Camp: "Our work in the woods and mountains is healthy and stimulating to the appetite. . .We have climbed the mountains, visited the rivers and lakes, and find the wonderful stores of wealth that nature is portraying all around us. We have seen deer, bear, coyotes, elk, moose, mountain goats, and other animals that roam unharmed in the Park." The educational program includes studies in New Testament, photography, Spanish, typing, chorus, and disaster unit, the last being for cases of emergency such as floods, earthquakes, etc.

—In the Service of the King, paper of the Bethel Deaconess Home and Hospital, Newton, Kansas: Sister Ida Epp completed seventy years of life on September 15. Relatives and some of the sisters helped to commemorate the occasion. On October 10 the class of sixteen students which entered the school of nursing on June 1 were "capped." Because they had finished their preliminary course in nursing and the probation period successfully, they were entitled to this outward symbol of the nursing profession.

In an effort to secure investments in Civilian Government Bonds to be registered in the name of Bethel College, solicitors report a generous response without a single "turn-down" from members of the Mennonite Church in Beatrice, Nebraska. Although this case is exceptional, gifts have been received from more than ninety per cent of the persons visited by Bethel College representatives this fall.—News release —The present C.P.S. quota periods ends December 1 instead of February 1, 1943, as first planned. It the editor's record is right then all members according to our quota, should have contributed $4.75 for C.P.S. by December 1. Have you, your church, your conference met its quota?

—The new C.P.S. camp at Hill City, South Dakota, is located about fifteen miles west of the town in the Black Forest. The camp is almost new and is in excellent condition. The project is that of building a reservoir to hold some 15,000 acre feet of water to be used for Rapid City.

NOTE OF EXPLANATION

In the third quarter of 1942 our conference churches contributed $12,351.32 more into the six conference treasuries listed here than in the second quarter of this same year. Comparing the two quarters there was a rise in contributions to the treasury of the Peace Committee from $9,804.65 to $16,823.81. Undoubtedly, part of this response was due to the realization that our C.P.S. camps needed heartier support. Only the treasuries of the publication and education boards received less money in the third quarter than in the second. All others showed an increase. Church contributions to foreign mission work rose from $12,256.78 in the second quarter to $13,573.67 in the third quarter. The story of the fourth quarter will be told in the supplement which is to come out early in January. If possible the totals for the year are to be given in that issue.

Every treasurer in every church should make it a point, first, to be absolutely sure that he mentions the name of the church from which he is remitting money. If he is remitting money from a missionary or a C.E. society, or a Sunday school, he still should by all means mention the name of the church. In this way the church can be credited with its rightful amounts in these reports. If a church treasurer fails to mention the name of the church, then the treasurer of one of our conference treasuries is usually forced to credit the money to the name of the one who sends it in. Second, everyone who remits money for a church or an organization thereof should give the exact name of the church as given in the YEAR BOOK. If he does not possess the YEAR BOOK he should find out the exact name of the church from someone who knows. A great deal of confusion could be avoided if this suggestion would always be observed. Our conference treasurers would be willing to receive money in nearly any way if it were not for the fact that they must keep records and give accurate reports of the receipts. Our conference treasurers will very much appreciate clear, complete facts with the money sent in.—rw.

THE TITHE IS THE THING

Anyone who thinks about it knows that the paying of the tithe as a sign of stewardship has nothing whatever the matter with it.

It saves the Christian's self-respect. He need not apologize either for doubtful methods or inadequate results.

It conserves the energies of the Church for the Church's real business.

It puts a stop to the necessity of the Church becoming a peddler of pies, oysters, ice cream, chicken pie, and notions.

It gives the business men of the place a new regard for the Church as a business institution.

It collects itself.

It puts a quietus on all display and self-seeking in one's contributions. Nobody can get puffed up over paying his debts.

It makes the Christian's financial relation to his Church a pleasure instead of a prepetual annoyance, and so does a good work on his disposition.

It is the one sure way of proving we are in earnest when we say of God that He owns all we possess.

Mennonite Civilian Public Service

Camp Henry, Illinois

On November 14, 1941, four men in the C. P. S. camp at Denison, Iowa, received word that they were to report for work at a C.C.C. camp near Henry, Illinois. When they arrived, the C. C. C. boys were still in camp. They were getting ready to leave, however, and within twenty-four hours had moved out. Three weeks later six more men were transferred from Denison, and on December 9, thirty-eight new men reported for work. Groups of men coming in every other week has raised the camp strength to 152 men.

If you were to visit the camp, one of the first things you would notice would be a group of long, low buildings surrounding a beautiful open plaza. In the center of this open lawn space is "Old Glory's" home base. Silhouetted against the sky, the stars and stripes remind us of the wonderful freedom that this great country of ours grants us. Let me take you around the campus and point out the different buildings. The first building, along the west side of the plaza, is the camp director's office, and in the rear is the camp store room. Turning the corner to the east and going along the north side there is a row of eight buildings, namely, the recreation and chapel halls, dormitories one and two, kitchen, and dining hall combined, bath house, laundry house, and dormitories three and four. Now let's go along the other side and follow the other row of buildings on the way back. This side of the camp is next to the beautiful Illinois River. The first building is dormitory five, and the boys that live here often remark how beautiful the river is in the morning, especially, when the sun comes up over the tree tops and the landscape is mirrored in the water. The next building is the education hall, containing the carpenter shop, painter's room, photographers' dark room, class room, and library. The hospital is off a little to one side of this row of buildings. Here the boys get their physical examinations, shots for typhoid, small pox vaccinations, and recuperate from illness. The last building in this group is the technical building, where the government officials have their offices and rooms, and the Bachmans and the Hernlays have their apartments. Now we are back to the place from whence we started. Let us go across the road to the west and see the rest of the camp buildings. These buildings house the government equipment used on the work projects. Five of the buildings are garages for tractors and trucks. The others include a repair garage, an oil house, a blacksmith shop, and a tool warehouse.

Soil Conservation

In the Burke-Wadsworth Bill provision was made for the conscientious objector to do work of national importance as mapped out by the President. At Camp Henry the project is mainly soil conservation, but other conservation projects such as tree, fish, and wild life are in operation. The first step in conservation is made by the government official who contacts the farmer. He helps him to see that scientific farming is more profitable, and suggests necessary changes in the farm planning. If the farmer agrees, the government and the farmer sign a contract stating that the farmer will furnish all material to build fences, dams, tile, etc. He agrees to rotate crops adapted to his farm and do contour farming if advisable. The government furnishes all labor and tools to survey and plan his farm, to build fences around ravines that will wash if pastured by stock, to build dams across creeks that erode badly, to thin or clear timber for pasture, and to put in tile in order to drain the land that would otherwise be unproductable. These agreements are drawn up for a five-year period, but pay dividends for a much longer time.

Trees are very instrumental in the fight against soil erosion. Included in the five-year agreement is provision that a certain number of trees may be planted on the farm to help counteract erosion. Tree-planting season is now here. The Soil Conservation Service plans to set out 177,000 trees in the next few weeks. The trees are spaced at six foot intervals and will cover approximately six and a half million square feet. A large task such as this makes us feel that soil conservation is certainly of national importance.

Background of Campees

It has been said, "There seems to be a balance in any cross-section of humanity." That is, there is in such a group enough different talent to carry on a satisfactory society. This is very true about Camp Henry. Of 152 campees their occpational distributions are: farmers 83, factory laborers 15, carpenters 12, students 10, truck drivers, teachers, office clerks, etc., 32.

Of the 152 boys, 47 come from Kansas, 39 from Indiana, 22 from Illinois, 15 from Minnesota, 11 from Iowa, 4 from each of Ohio, Michigan, and Nebraska and 2 from each of Missouri, Oklahoma and Wisconsin and 1 from California.

The leading Mennonite groups to be represented are the Old Mennonites with a total of 51 boys, the General Conference Mennonites with 40 boys, the Old Order Amish with 21, and the Mennonite Brethren with 9. At least 8 more Mennonite groups are represented with 1 or more boys in camp.

Educational levels range from grade school to college graduates. About one-half of the boys have had the equivalent of grade school, 46 have had one or more years in high school, and 29 have had some college training—one to four years.

A Campee's Day

At 4:30 each morning the night watchman forgets his lonely vigil and awakens the cooks and waiters who hustle to the kitchen to prepare breakfast. The sound of the night watchman's whistle arouses the men in each dormitory at 5:45 a. m. Those who are always on time rise first while the others try to get those last five minutes! Having made our beds and cleaned house, we are all ready for the welcome call of the breakfast bell at 6:15. Our physcial bodies having been fed, we turn our attentions to a short period of meditation. The bell rings again at 7:20 which is the signal for us to get ready to leave the dormitories for the day's work. Soon groups of men may be seen heading for the trucks which take us to the fields. Other men may be seen going to their work in the offices, garages, laundry, and carpenter shop. Canteens and mess kits may be seen hanging from the belts of the project workers. It will soon be noon, and then the mess kits come in handy as the men gather together around the truck to eat their mid-day meal. One common stopping place is the camp post office, in the morning to mail letters, and in the evening to receive them. Truck loads of tired men return to camp at 5:00 p. m. After the evening meal or about 6:00 o'clock men may be seen playing ping pong, softball, basketball, working on the newspaper or perhaps practicing as a quartet. Evening classes from 7:00 to 9:00 provide the mental exertion for the day. At 9:20 the lights in all the buildings dip once indicating that it is time to get ready to retire. At 9:30 the lights dip twice telling us the quiet period is to begin during which time we may have private devotion until bedtime fifteen minutes later.

If you were to go through camp on Saturday afternoons, you would find some of the boys writing letters. One might also find some of the boys in the carpenter shop, working at their hobby of woodworking. Still others find time well spent in playing basketball, and now that spring is here the baseball spirit is fast coming into the minds of the fellows. During cold or wet weather indoor games such as ping pong and shuffleboard are played. We always have photographers around, taking pictures or selling them. The equipment necessary to develop pictures is in camp, and some of the boys avail themselves of this opportunity. The studious fellows are in the library much of the time, and though they are not numerous the group is growing larger. Recently a new hobby has been introduced—rug weaving. Some beautiful designs are woven into useful articles.

Religious Life

Nearly every campee is glad when Sunday comes, and with it the worship services. We have six Sunday school classes which meet for an hour beginning at nine-thirty in the morning. The worship service and a sermon is in charge of Leland Bachman, our director, or some visiting minister. At 7:00 p.m. a Bible service is conducted by the campees. At most of these services a quartet or one of the choruses give one or two more special numbers of music. Prayer meetings are held each Wednesday evening from 8:00 to 9:00 p.m., and approximately ninety-five per cent of the men attend. There are two types of meetings held: (1) Visiting ministers frequently come at medweek and conduct the services. The boys appreciate the interest shown by those who come to serve. (2) We have been thinking together on the general subject, "Getting Acquainted with the Bible." The better we become acquainted with the Word of God, the more it means to us. The latter half of this service is spent in prayer. Requests are mentioned by the men and each request is made a matter of prayer. Record is kept of all the requests and the answers when ever the information is available. Our aim is to make this an inspirational service of real value. One splendid method of expression is in sacred music as sung by two choruses. One of these choruses is directed by Mrs. Hernley and the other by a campee. The total number in both choruses is about fifty, one of thirty voices and the other of twenty. Practice sessions are held once or twice a week. The purpose and aim of the choruses is to become better singers and to lead others in worship through singing. There are also four or five quartets started, and they have been showing lots of enthusiasm.

It is indeed a broadening effect for a young man to come to a camp of this type and associate with fellows from twelve different states, many different churches, and many different occupations. We will never realize what it has meant to us until we return home and look back on our days in camp. Frequently a campee says, "I wouldn't take all it has cost me for what I've learned since I am here."

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT SAYS

According to Whispering Pines, the camp paper of the Marietta, Ohio, C.P.S. camp, Eleanor Roosevelt, when asked, "How do you think our boys who have gone to war and risked their lives should treat conscientious objectors after the war?", gave the following answer.

"I should think that the boys who go through the war, and who believe in what they are doing, would have a respect for a conscientious objector who had an equally strong belief that he should not kill other people.

"We have put these conscientious objectors to work in this war. They are clamoring for more dangerous work. Some of them are already doing work which requires great courage but not the taking of another man's life. It would certainly seem a curious thing to me if a boy were not able to understand, having had deep convictions himself, that other people have a right to equally deep convictions and that they should be respected."

HE GAVE A DIME FOR JESUS AND A NICKEL FOR THE LORD

By Edith Kennell Graybill

He said he "had no money,"
When the church collectors called,
And to think they even asked him,
Had his temper sorely galled.
When they talked for fifty minutes,
How God asked it in His Word,
Then he gave a dime for Jesus,
And a nickel for the Lord.

His home, it was quite modern,
And he owned three farms besides;
His car it was a dandy,
And he often took long rides;
He ate the best of dinners,
And twelve suits he could afford;
But he gave a dime for Jesus,
And a nickel for the Lord.

His bank account held thousands,
And he hoped to soon have more.
Against all need for years ahead,
Much goods he had in store;
When the church roof needed fixing,
He sought long among his hoard;
And gave a dime for Jesus,
And a nickel for the Lord.

He had no time for "missions,"
'Twas "a waste of hard-earned cash."
"Alms and charity" he sniffed at,
"It would make more shiftless trash;"
And the church upkeep he figured
Was more than he could afford;
So he gave a dime for Jesus,
And a nickel for the Lord.

Sure, he wants the Lord to bless him,
And he loves the sun and rain,
And his health, and home, and family,
He would keep, and all his gain;
And he plans to live with Jesus,
And in heaven be some time,
But his Saviour gets one nickel,
And his God gets just one dime.

HE STILL SEES OUR GIVING

The Master still sits by the treasury,
As He did in the Temple of old,
Though centuries long have glided
Since the Pharisee cast in his gold;
And the widow still comes with her offering,
All fragrant with love and with prayer,
And the Master accepts of the treasure,
The richest and sweetest that's there.

The Master still sits by the treasury,
And oft sees the rich heavy fold
Of velvet and satin sweep near Him,
And the glitter of jewels and gold,
As the maiden comes up to deposit,
From fingers all flashing with light,
A dime, a penny, a farthing,
Unconscious, alas! of His sight.

The Master sits over against it;
O brother, can you or can I
With confidence bring in our offering
And cast it beneath His pure eye?
Should He take up the gift—Oh, how paltry!
And weigh it before us tonight,
Encumbered with every mixed motive,
Oh, what would it be in His sight ?

The Master sits over against it,
A terrible thought and yet true,
When His servants, His own ransomed children,
Withhold from the treasury His due;
And each of His substance is spending
For what seemeth best in his sight,
Yet goes through the door of the temple
And casts to the Master his mite!

ARE YOU DEPENDABLE?

The father of Calvin Coolidge once said, "When Calvin was a boy on the farm, if I was going away and there was anything I wanted him to do, I could tell him; but when I got back, I never thought of going to see if he had done it—I knew it was done!" Can God depend on you like that? —Selected

CRIME UNDER REPEAL

Crime has increased under repeal, states The Watchman-Examiner, and quotes J. Edger Hoover, chief of the G-men, as follows: 1,445,581 major crimes were committed in the United States in 1939. The cost of crime during 1937 was fifteen billion dollars. The cost of crime during prohibition ranged from only nine to eleven billion dollars showing that repeal has increased the cost of crime in our country about six billion dollars a year. —Selected

THE STORY OF THE MENNONITES

By Dr. C. Henry Smith

This is the most complete and the best history of the Mennonites ever published in one volume. Dr. Smith, who has long been known as the best informed Mennonite historian, has produced a book that is an authority in this field. It is entitled The Story of the Mennonites because it reads almost like a story, and yet it is an authentic history of the Mennonite people from the time of Menno Simons up to the breaking out of the present World War. It comprises 824 pages and is bound in a beautiful brown satin cloth.

THE MENNONITE HYMNARY

This book, first published in 1940, has already been issued in three editions. Never before has a Mennonite hymnbook, either German or English, sold so fast or made such an impression with our Mennonite people as this one. Already over 12,000 copies have been sold. The book contains 623 hymns and songs, 56 pages of "Aids to Worship," including 90 well-chosen Responsive Readings, and 38 pages of Indexes. It is printed on durable white paper and bound in strong cloth. It can be had in either dark blue or maroon color. Price $1.40 postpaid in the U.S. 12 or more copies $1.21. each not prepaid.

WITH CHRIST ON THE EDGE OF THE JUNGLE

By Rev. S. T. Moyer

This book is not a study. It is a story of a series of experiences through which the author has passed during his twenty-one years of missionary work in India, under the auspices of the General Conference Mennonite Mission in that country. The story is true to the last detail and, for this reason, is informative and intensely interesting. $1.00 postpaid in U.S.

THE NEW TESTAMENT BASIS OF PACIFISM

By G. H. C. MacGreggor, D. D., D. Litt.

This is not a book on the practical issues involved in the problem of Peace and War, but the author endeavors to show what is the bearing of the New Testament teaching on the particular question of war. The book is written in the hope that it will provide all Christians, whether they are "Pacifists" or not, with the material necessary for thinking through for themselves this greatest of all modern ethical problems. Sunday School Evangelism

Evangelism is ever the main business of the church of Christ. This is a God-given task, not a self-assumed one. "Go ye and evangelize every creature" was the great command of our Lord before His ascension. The church must be about its Father's business, or else go out of business.

Is evangelism a Mennonite principle? Let us note a few selected statements of Menno Simons:

> "I strive after nothing but that the God of heaven and earth, through His blessed Son Jesus Christ may have the glory through His blessed Word; that all men may be saved, and that they may awaken in this acceptable time of grace from their deep sleep of sin. (II:328)

> "To this end we preach as much as opportunity and possibility affords, both in daytime and by night, in houses and in fields, in forests and wilderness, in this land and abroad, in prison and bonds . . . orally and by writing at the risk of possessions and life as we have done these many years without ceasing." (II:10)

Surely, for Menno Simons the question was not, Shall I emphasize evangelism or non-resistance? For him the preaching of peace was primarily the presentation of the Prince of Peace, Jesus Christ.

Without doubt, the Sunday School is one of the best evangelizing of the church. It deals with children and young people in their impressionable years. It is often able to attract unchurched children. Furthermore, it brings teacher and pupil into a far more intimate relationship than it is possible for an evangelist or even a pastor to develop. Why then should the Sunday School wait for the evangelist to lead a child to the acceptance of Christ? Why wait until the child is "sent" to Catechism Class? Surely these agencies have their place but remember that many a Sunday School pupil never finds his way into the church unless the plan of salvation is presented to him in Sunday School. Remember that D. L. Moody was won for Christ through his Sunday School teacher, Edward Kimball.

Most Sunday Schools could become more effective evangelizing agencies: (1) By cultivating an atmosphere of evangelism, reminding teachers and pupils

ANOTHER PROBLEM

"The High School Victory Corps, a national voluntary organization for secondary schools designed to mobilize students for more effective preparation for and participation in wartime service, has been launched by the United States Office of Education working in conjuction with the war, navy, and civil aeronautics departments."

This new program to draw high school students more definitely into the war effort presents another problem for Mennonite Churches to wrestle with. It is important that our churches realize the seriousness of this problem and do not just overlook it. Mennonite high school students who are not moved to a strict watchfulness by their conscience might very easily stumble into and then along this road to a definite and vital part in the war effort. Undoubtedly, most high school administrators will strive to make a success of this program. If a high school student who is a conscientious objector would remain consistent and sincere, then he must be able to keep himself from being entangled in the many strong efforts which teachers and students will make to promote this program.

This program should challenge all Mennonite pastors and parents especially, for two reasons: First, we should be very watchful because the high school atmosphere is one in which young people are very strongly tempted to compromise or lose their convictions. Second, it is not a problem clearly defined and recognized such as the drafting of young men is. Through years our peace thinking has dealt with the problem of the draft. It puts us on our guard, but some of these new war movements tend to catch many unawares. There was a time when there were no high schools for Mennonite young people to attend. We developed our own schools in which our beliefs were taught. Then the public high school moved into communities; most of our schools died out. Today most of our young people attend the public high school. Even aside from the peace problem we as a people are not fully aware of the problem which the modern high school is as far as the preservation of our beliefs is concerned. So pastors and parents need to make special efforts to think and talk through the whole

High School Victory Corps movement in the light of our peace beliefs. We must turn the x-ray of our convictions upon this movement until the skeleton of war stands out stark and sinful. —rw

IS IT FAIR?

Mr. A. has two sons of military age, and Mr. B. has three such sons. All five of these young men are ambitious and eager to get ahead in life and to make their contribution to life. Both fathers are equally anxious that their sons might have such a chance. All five fill out their questionnaires. Mr. A.'s sons are both deferred, because their father is able to turn a good sized farm over to each. Mr. B.'s sons are less fortunate and all three serve C.P.S. camps. Mr. A.'s sons are now selling 32c eggs, 46c butter fat, 14c hogs, 10c-12c cattle, $1.08 wheat, etc. while Mr. B.'s sons work just as hard six days in the week and get nothing. If the war lasts long enough Mr. A.'s sons will have a very good start in life when the war ends. Financially, Mr. B.'s sons earn nothing. Is it fair? Unless Mr. A.'s sons turn over half their earning to Mr. B.'s sons, will it be fair?

John and Henry were brought up in the same Mennonite church. John always took his religious life very seriously. Henry never was quite so conscientious. When war threatened Henry immediately secured employment in a defense industry, believing that would assure him exemption from military service. John reasoned that he was just as much a participant in the war in such an industry as he would be in the army. The result, John is in a C.P.S. camp. Henry is now earning $50 and up weekly. Financially, John earns nothing. Both want to remain members in good standing in the Mennonite church, an organization which has for over four centuries been opposed to participation in war in any form. When the war will be over, will Henry remember John financially?

Might it not be well for every church that has boys in C.P.S. camps to create a fund through monthly offering, to share with them some of the benefits of their increased earnings? Will anything less be fair? —General Conference Peace Committee

Sunday School Evangelism

that the primary goal of the Sunday School is to win souls to Christ. (2) By encouraging teachers to make case studies of problem children and do personal work with them. (3) By the use of a decision day, that is, a special Sunday once a year at which a definite appeal is made to the children to pledge their love and loyalty to Jesus Christ. Such suggestions need to be adapted to individual circumstances, but whatever these may be, let not the Sunday School worker forget that he is primarily an ambassador of Christ.

The High School Victory Corps

The High School Victory Corps, a national voluntary organization for secondary schools designed to mobilize students for more effective preparation for and participation in wartime service, has been launched by the United States Office of Education working in conjunction with the war, navy and civil aeronautics departments. The corps is designed to channel the energies and enthusiasm of high school youth into activities which will help to fit them for their destined places in the armed forces or allied services in the case of girls. It will also give them an opportunity for active participation while still in school in the community's war effort. Every high school in the nation is urged by the Office of Education and the aforementioned departments to inaugurate the program, full details of which can be secured from the Office of Education.

The objectives of the Victory Corps are:

(1) Guidance of youth into critical services and occupations.

(2) Wartime citizenship to insure better understanding of the war, its meaning, progress, and problems.

(3) Physical fitness.

(4) Voluntary military drill for selected boys.

(5) Competence in science and mathematics.

(6) Preflight training for those preparing for air service.

(7) Preinduction training for critical occupations in the armed and allied services.

(8) Community service, including training for essential civilian activities.

Members are authorized to wear overseas caps with insignia and to wear a uniform, the design for which is made up by the local school officials. Students within two years of completing high school are eligible for admission to any one of five special service divisions:

(1) Land service, calling for preinduction training for all branches of army except air.

(2) Air service,

(3) Sea service, providing training for all branches of the navy except air.

(4) Production service, preparing for war industries and agriculture.

(5) Community service, preparing for medical, nursing, teaching, and numerous other professions and civic services. Each special service division has an insignia which may be worn on Victory caps, armbands, or on uniforms. The program is definitely not an extracurricular activity but is designed to implement the training of youth for war service.

It has been hard for our schools, just as it has been hard for our industries, to think in military terms or assume the military role. Yet as the crisis deepens, the schools too must redirect their efforts toward one great end—the certain and speedy winning of this war. . . . The fundamentals of childhood education are not altered for the emergency. . . . But the high schools cannot go on doing business as usual, with only minor modifications in organization and curriculum . . . high schools boys must begin to prepare for military occupation.—John W. Studebaker, Commissioner of Education.

Every high school principal and superintendent has received copies of preinduction courses which the war department and the Office of Education have prepared so that certain basic training can be given students before they are inducted, thus saving the army valuable training time and better preparing students for participation in the armed services. Government officials are asking that every junior and senior student be given at least one hour a day training in one of the courses which are based on army training manuals.

Outlines have been prepared for one-semester courses in fundamentals of electricity, fundamentals of machines, and fundamentals of shopwork. Two-semester courses are outlined in fundamentals of radio and fundamentals of automotive mechanics. Advanced courses have been set up in code practice and touch typing and radio maintenance and repair.

A number of school systems have already instituted the program and are requiring students in the last two years of high school to take at least one course each semester.

Committee Recommends

The Western District Peace Committee recommends for immediate attention:

1. That every church make a strenuous effort to meet promptly its share for the support of our Civilian Public Service work.

2. That members of our churches buy Civilian Government Bonds in liberal quantities as a united testimony of our interest in voluntarily supporting our government in its constructive efforts.

3. That the Civilian Government Bond representative in each church should report monthly to the County Bond Chairman the names, dates, and amounts of bond investments sent to the Provident Trust Company.

4. That to assure individual credit for investments in Civilian Government Bonds ALL orders should reported to the Civilian Government Bond representative in each church.

5. That churches assume the above obligations cheerfully in order to remain clear and consistent in this time when our faith is being tested.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

It Was 123.8 Degrees in the Shade

"June 10 and 11 were hot in Lucknow, and in this neighborhood many deaths occurred from heat stroks. In Lucknow eighteen Europeans died. Some of them were refugees from Burma. Most of them were elderly.

"The official temperature is not being published, but it is reported that on Thursday, June 11, the temperature almost reached 124 degrees. No one cares to experience hotter weather than that. The editor was lucky and stopped off in Bareilly from Friday to Sunday night. He came on to Lucknow on Monday the fifteenth for a few days. He, therefore, missed the hottest days. The wind changed to the east during Friday night. The humidity in Bareilly stood at eight points on Friday, but after the wind changed it rose to forty.

"There has been a bit of rain east of Lucknow, and there was a dust storm with a slight sprinkle of rain in Lucknow on Monday. We are hoping that there will be more rain, but the signs are not encouraging. But we pray that, at least, a somewhat lower temperature may prevail. Such heat means death to the aged and to infants. Those who think that India is not a hot country should spend May and June, 1942, on the plains."

Roasting in India

Perhaps, some readers of our papers may think that the climate of India is not so bad after all, since most of us do not say or write much about it. It is true that one does get used to it, and consequently one does not say much about it. This year we had a very trying, hot reason, the most severe we have experienced in twenty years. The reason why it was so trying was because there was no let-up day and or night. I took Dr. and Mrs. Dester to the Lorry stand, which is about five miles from the Jagdishpore Mission Station, on April 28. It was a blazing, hot day. I had to go some distance farther on for some church duties. I stayed over night in a village. A few clouds came, and we thought a bit of a change would come. However, no change came until June 17. That was awful. The above quotation from an Indian Methodist Church paper tells something of what we have to go through in India's hot season. —John Thiessen

HOME MISSIONS

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

Retreating in the North

The aim of the Saskatchewan Young People's Retreat was to provide an opportunity for Mennonite young people to come together for revival, friendship, and deep spiritual blessings, as well as for physical and mental change and rest.

Held At Experimental Farm

The Experimenttal Farm in Rosthern proved to be a very appropriate place for our retreat. The place was especially convenient for the students and teachers of the Rosthern Bible School.

Our Speakers

Both last year and this year the group was very much interested in hearing from China. Last year Rev. W. C. Voth was with us and this year Aganetha Fast. Their talks were, especially, impressive because we had studied about the China Mission Field in Bible School. As we have studied about Palestine many of us have had a longing to see the hallowed places where our Master journeyed. Therefore, Rev. I. P. Friesen's story of his experiences in Palestine was of very great interest to us.

Recreation and Motto

A retreat would not be complete without some program of recreation and exercise. Someone has said, "A good time is doing something which after it has been enjoyed leaves no regrets." Such a program makes young people more cooperative.

The intimacy of retreat hours united us. May the goal of "A United Youth In Christ" soon be fulfilled. Let us "press forward to the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

The greatest purpose which one can have in attending a retreat is to help some soul to find Christ and to advance the cause of Christ. J. C. Schmidt, president of the Youth Committe and its other members, the other teachers, and the missionaries proved to us how important this is. They made it very evident that it is not a waste of time to come here. We also learned to cherish and to honor the great privileges which we possess as Christians and as Mennonite youth. Someone has said, "It is not important that we live, but how we live." We should make every effort to "show ourselves approved unto God," a united youth in Christ. Rev. J. G. Rempel, principal of our Bible school, brought this out in connection with the Mennonite principles and advantages which are ours today.

Rev. Welty Installed

On Thanksgiving evening at 7:30 the formal installation service of Rev. Delbert E. Welty, as Elder and leader of the Memorial Mennonite Church, 2204-11th Avenue Altoona, Pa., took place. A goodly number of friends and visitors were present for the occasion as well as members of the church.

The program was as follows: Rev. Freeman H. Swartz, Norristown, was the chairman of the meeting, making appropriate remarks as the service progressed. Rev. Paul Wenger, who serves the congregation at Roaring Spring, read the Scripture lesson. Deacon A. C. Shaffer, Altoona, offered the opening prayer.

Rev. John S. Raugh, E. Freedom, delivered the introductory sermon. He used John 14:22, 23 as text. Rev. George Gregor, pastor of Napier Church, delivered the charge to the congregation from the text found in I John 2:12-17. Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, Quakertown, delivered the charge to the pastor, from I Sam. 12:20-24. Rev. Sylvan S. Lehman, Quarryville, and president of the Eastern District Conference formally installed the new leader. A trio composed of Mrs. Greger, Mrs. Welty, and Mrs. Wenger sang "Have Thine Own Way." Rev. Welty pronounced the closing prayer. The chiarmen, Rev. Swartz, then asked that all members and friends come forward and extend a welcome to the new pastor.

Our prayer is that the Lord's choice blessing might rest upon this installation service and on the work in Altoona.

WALTON MENNONITE CHURCH

Walton, Kansas

Our annual Sunday School picnic was held out in a grove where we could admire the beauty of nature. We had a short program, and Miss Augusta Schmidt told us about her trip home from the India mission field. After this we had a bounteous dinner.

We organized a Christian Endeavor Society on August 30. This will meet once a month. We also have special evening services once a month. In September Helen A. Penner told us of her expriences as a relief worker in France.

Brother Henry Friesen was ordained as deacon on August 16 and Brother H. P. Buller on November 22. May we remember them in our prayers.

On Thanksgiving Day Brother Jacob Friesen, a ministerial student at Bethel College, brought us the message. We observed communion on November 29. We are happy to have Mrs. Henry Friesen in our midst again after her illness.

We have purchased a lot for our new meeting house and will start building in the near future.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

THE IMPORTANCE OF THE COMMUNITY

It is generally accepted that the family and the church are two of the most basic character-forming agencies in society. The family especially is determinitive in the early years of a person's life before he reaches the age of self-consciousness. There are educational psychologists who claim that a child's basic character is determined by the time he is two years old. Whatever the truth in the matter we all know that children are wiser and more clever at an early age than adults give them credit for being. They learn from observing adults long before they are able to talk and walk. As soon as chldren are old enough to talk and to ask questions we take them to Sunday school and teach them about God, about Jesus, and the stories in the Bible. Here at an early age they learn the good from the bad, the right from the wrong. We assume that if they continue as members of a Christian family and, therefore, as active participants in Church and Sunday school they will in due time grow up to be respectable Christian men and women.

Church and Family Not Enough

It is true that the church and the family are basic character-forming agencies. But there is yet a third agency, the community, which is also basic. In the community character traits as kindness, honesty, forbearance, neighborliness, tolerance, and cooperation are nurtured even if they do not originate there. We seldom stop to think of the importance of the daily social contacts and the physical surroundings in shaping our lives. The people we associate with, the children we play with, the men we work with, and the neighborhoods we live in are all important character-forming influences. No matter how strong our home teaching or how sound our education in church if the community in which we live and the place in which we work six and seven days a week is unwholesome, corrupt, and unchristian, the best of home and church influences will be counteracted and in many cases all-together undone.

The Small Community

Parents who have tried to raise children in communities where the companions of their own children came from non-Christian homes know the reality of this situation. No matter what they have taught their children, if they daily associate with playmates who swear, are disrepectful, disobedient, irreverant, polluted with vulgar stories and addicted to reading of cheap and errotic literature, these influences will play in time upon their own children. Every parent of course hopes that he will be able to raise his children in a community where such is not the case, but not all parents can do so. This is why the small community is exceedingly important as a character building agency. In it the quality of life can more consciously be controlled, neighbors become more intimately acquainted with each other and, therefore, interested in each other's welfare. It is all the more desirable where people in a community belong to the same church and have the same ideals and standards of morality and ethics. It seems to me in our Christian teaching we must include the community as well as the family and the church; we must think in terms of a wholesome, sanctified, and purified community as well as purified and sanctified personal life.

IN MEMORIAM

J. H. LOGANBILL, Assistant Professor of Psychology and Business Manager of Bluffton, College, passed to his eternal reward Friday morning, November 20, in the Bluffton Hospital. He had been suffering with cancer for over three months, having given up his college duties on August 1.

Brother Loganbill was born October 21, 1889, in Fortuna, Missouri. He received his A. B. degree from Bethel College, North Newton, Kansas, and his M. A. degree from the University of Kansas. For eleven years he was teacher and school administrator in the public schools of Kansas. He served one year as Instructor in Education in Friends University, Wichita, Kansas, and four years as Assistant Professor of Education of Bethel College. Here he also served at various times as Business Manager, Dean of Men, and Director of Student Employment. For the past five years he has been a member of the staff of Bluffton College.

Besides his wife Brother Loganbill leaves four sons, Fernan, who has completed his Junior year in college, Varden and Denard in high school, and Lanoy in junior high.

The funeral services were held Sunday afternoon, November 22, in the First Mennonite Church of Bluffton. The pastor, Rev. J. N. Smucker, was in charge of the service, assisted by Pres. L. L. Ramseyer and Dean J. S. Schultz. Music was furnished by the College Vesper Choir.

Brother Loganbill gave to the college five years of excellent service. His Christian character was admired by students and colleagues. His business sense was respected by fellow staff members, members of the Board of Trustees, and constituents. He gave himself without reserve to the cause of Christian education and to the building of Christian character in those young people with whom he came in contact. His passing is a distinct loss to the college and the church which he served.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

A. S. BECHTEL

December 20, 1942

The Birth of Jesus, Luke 2;8-20

Matthew and Luke tell the story of Christ's birth. The two accounts are entirely different. Matthew presents Christ as the King. He does not mention the lowly shepherds and the angel host singing the heavenly anthem. He tells about the coming of the wise men with rich and costly gifts and seeking the new-born King that they might worship Him. Luke dwells upon the humble surroundings at Jesus' birth and the heavenly testimony to the far-reaching importance of the event. He mentions the things that Mary would love to relate and ponder in her heart. This event, unnoticed by the masses, was destined to affect the course of history in a most profound manner.

Angels Announce Birth, vss. 8-14

The humble shepherds were faithfully guarding their flocks during the bright night. God chose these as the ones to whom the birth of the Savior should first be announced. A sudden and very strange and very bright light in the middle of the night greatly alarmed them. In the midst of the heavenly radiance, they heard the voice of the heavenly messenger who had come so near to them that he could be understood. He calmed their fears by declaring that he came to bring joyful tidings. God's revelations fill the heart with joy. The "good tidings of great joy" are for all people. God's goodness is not limited to any one nation.

"Christ the Lord" (vs. 11) is the Messiah, the expected one, the promised Deliverer. He was announced as the Savior who would save His people from their sins and fulfill the hope of Israel. Suddenly the vision enlarged and a great angelic choir appeared expressing gladness in an anthem of praise (vs. 14). The angels' songs breathed peace and blessedness. "Peace reigns in society, in a community and between nations, when the peace that Jesus gives reigns in the hearts of people." God sent Jesus because of His goodwill toward man.

The Shepherds See the Child, vss. 15-20

The shepherds accepted the angels' words as God's message and hastened to see the Christ child. They were moved with intense mental excitement. They recognized the child by the sign given to them by the angel (vs. 12). They could not keep the good news to themselves (vs. 17). We too should tell others. These shepherds were chosen to be the first to tell others of the new born King. Good news is to be told. The people wondered when they heard. They did not understand. Many hear the gospel story today and wonder and then soon forget it. Mary thought carefully about all these things that had taken place. She pondered on them constantly. The shepherds saw the Christ and believed that they had been highly favored of God. Their hearts were filled with a new joy and overflowed in praise to God.

If Jesus Had Not Been Born

A little thought on this will help us to appreciate the meaning of His coming. We see at once that we would not have any Christmas celebration. The Christian Church would not have been established. Our Bible would end with the Old Testament. Man would be obliged to live and die without a Savior. Redemption through Christ would be unknown to man. If Jesus had not been born there would not be Christian love such as Christ lived and taught. All that we owe to Christ would not be, if He had not come.

Christ did come, fulfilling Isaiah's prediction (9:7) of the coming of a King whose sovereignty would never end. He was is the Son of God and is without end. He still rules in the hearts and lives of those who submit to him. He is ruler and Savior. In Christ the problem of man's salvation from sin was solved. He alone could do this. "Light and healing and song followed in the train of His coming to earth. They still follow wherever He is allowed to come into hearts and homes."

How can America rescue Christmas from commercial exploitation? How do we personally and collectively help to develop goodwill toward others? Why has heaven's peace proclamation not been realized?

OKLAHOMA CONVENTION

The New Hopedale Church of Meno, Oklahoma, was host to the Oklahoma Convention which met November 7 and 8. The Convention theme was: "Contending for the Faith."

Rev. Henry Hage of Corn, Oklahoma, chairman of the convention delivered the sermon. Rev. Hege explained that contending for the faith means "Warring for the Faith" and referred to Timothy (I Tim. 1:18) who was told to carry on the good fight of faith. Other pertinent remarks by Rev. Hege are the following: "Minorities come out victorious because of their determination to hold on; because of their intangible strength through faith to hold to that which they know is good. The blood of the martyr became the seed of the Church when persecution progressed. The Church never advanced except on the knees of its members. Don't contend for the power of the faith, but for the God who is the source and substance of that power. We have the best armor, the best captain, the best purpose—we can't lose if we join His ranks and have the faith."

During the business session the following were elected for the coming year: Rev. Henry Hege, president; Rev. Rudolph Schmidt, vice-president; Mr. C. J. Thomas, treasurer; Mr. A Theodore Mueller, secretary; Rev. Noah Unruh and Mrs. J. W. Bergen, members of the Program Committee.

During the afternoon session Rev. A. J. Dyck delivered a sermon on the convention theme "Contending for the Faith." He said: Faith is a substance: thus something real upon which we can build and grow. Faith is an evidence: something we can look forward to because of our knowledge of the past and present—as in drawing a circle we start it with a protractor knowing where we will get to if we complete the circle.

Rev. Dyck emphasized the importance of contending for the faith in our homes. Napoleon was once asked: What does France need most today? His reply was: Christian mothers.

Following the sermon, reports were heard from the Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Oklahoma Bible Academy, Rev. Sol. Mouttet, the treasurer, Mr. Nelson Wedel, and the superintendent, Rev. Paul Kuhlman. A most encouraging report was given regarding the financial condition of the O. B. A. The back salaries to all teachers have been paid and the school is practically debt-free. From the educational standpoint the school has made excellent progress in that it now has a teaching staff with higher educational qualifications than ever before and has outlined its curriculum to cover three full years of Bible work above the Bible study required during the high school years. Much emphasis is placed upon practical evangelism. In addition to serving in many ways in the local and surrounding churches, each Friday afternoon seven grade schools in the community are served by the students.

Rev. Sol. Mouttet was re-elected as a member of the Board of Directors of the Oklahoma Bible Academy.

The Women's Mission Society were in chrage of the Saturday evening program. Mrs. Herman Buller of the Saron church at Orienta, Oklahoma was chairman. In response to the roll call one member of each society represented quoted a Bible verse. Rev. A. J. Dyck and Mrs. W. C. Voth (returned missionary) delivered the messages for the evening.

Rev. A. J. Dyck delivered the message Sunday morning on the subject "Where Does Your Religion Begin?" In the afternoon the over-flow congregation heard the song festival.

The Sunday evening program was in charge of the young people. Alvin Ratzlaff of the Orienta church was chairman. The program was as follows: Music conducted by Rev. Martin Eck; music by the Holliman brothers of Cordell; theme on the convention theme, "Contending for the Faith" by Rev. Lubin Jantzen; music by the Carnegie Church; and a talk by Mrs. Helen Hiebert Mueller.

All meetings of the convention were well attended in spite of the misty weather for the two days. It was good to have been in fellowship with each other; we must all work together to realize our purposes and aims to the fullest extent. Throughout the summer months many doubted the wisdom of having a convention at all, but surely all doubts were dispelled in the minds of those who attended because we received much information regarding our task, and much encouragement and inspiration to support us in the future. God's richest blessings will be our harvest if we have faith in Him.

CORRESPONDENCE

Doland, South Dakota

We were blessed this summer when Daniel Toaves from Wolf Point, Montana, conducted two weeks of revival meetings. In September three were baptized. Our church conducted four daily vacation Bible schools this summer. Our pastor, Rev. Jacob Friesen directed them, and they proved very fruitful. This month we were blessed by one week of revival services with Rev. J. J. Esau as main speaker. During this week we raised $107.00 for home missions. The afternoon of the all-day services was devoted to the young people. Rev. Esau's main topic was "Why I Am A Christian." The services were well attended.

We had a very bountiful harvest in this community. However, because of the heavy rainfall and the labor shortage we had difficulty gathering it in. This makes us think of Jesus' words, "The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few."

HEREFORD MENNONITE CHURCH

Bally, Penn.

The Primary Department collected about four bushels of apples, twenty-one dozen oranges, and one dozen grapefruit which were taken to the Old Folks Home at Frederick as a Thanksgiving Day offering for the institution.

On Sunday morning, November 29, a candlelight prayer service was held in our church. This impressive service was conducted by our pastor, Dr. Elmer E. S. Johnson and Rev. Paul R. Shelly, a son of our congregation. Rev. Shelly preached the sermon. A candle was lit for each boy, from our church and Sunday School, who are in the armed forces of our country. The candle that was lit for each boy was lit by a brother or some relative of that boy who is in the service. After the lighting of the candle, a very appropriate prayer was offered by Dr. Johnson. Attending the service was one of the boys, Sergeant Paul F. Weller, who was home on furlough. These candles were burning all through the church services.

This Sunday also marked the observance of the Ladies Aid Society. The members attended the services and served a covered dish social during the noon hour for their families. Drs. Harvey and Ella Bauman and their family were invited to this dinner since Dr. Ella was the speaker. They shared with us their pleasant surprise by bringing Rev. and Mrs. F. J. Issac from India and Rev. S. F. Pannabacker from China. All these spoke a few words to the group. A very pleasant and enjoyable surprise for our group.

A Waterman Pen and Pencil Gift Set was mailed to each boy from our Sunday school and church who are serving in the United States Army or Navy. We are also mailing each boy a copy of The Upper Room when each edition comes off the press. —Mae Latshaw, Press Agent

EASTERN DISTRICT SECRETARY'S NOTES

Deep Run—Five young people united with the church on Saturday, October 3. The church observed a special mission Sunday on November 8 at which time Dr. Ella Bauman spoke about India at the morning service and Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf spoke about China at the evening service.

The Historical Conference held in the Germantown Church on Monday, October 26, was very well attended. Foreign missionaries present were Rev. and Mrs. Paul Wenger, at present at Roaring Spring, Pa., Dr.'s Harvey and Ella Bauman of Quakertown, Pa., Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf of Philadelphia, and Dr. P. A. Penner, who was visiting the Eastern District Conference churches. Home missionaries present were Rev. and Mrs. Delbert Welty of the Altoona Mission, Rev. and Mrs. John Raugh of the Smith Corner Church, and Rev. Sylvan Lehman of the Mechanics Grove Church. We cannot recall ever having so many present at one meeting. This was a great inspiration.

Flatland—Since September the church is again on the regular fall schedule. A nice variety of canned goods and vegetables were displayed at the harvest home service, September 20. The pastor, Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, delivered an appropriate message on the theme "Food For All." The Christian Endeavor Society conducted a meeting at the Home for the Aged at Frederick on October 11. The C. E. Society took part in the project for the Fall Rally of the Young People's Union of gathering books of Christian fiction for the boys in the service and C. P. S. Camps. The Society has a boy in the regular service and one in the C. P. S. Camp.

Philadelphia, First Church—Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf is visiting the churches of the Middle District Conference at the present time. Earl Kremer has been transferred to Washington, D. C., by the Northern Pacific Railway Co. Mr. Kremer was formerly the Financial Secretary of the Mennonite Home for the Aged at Frederick, Pa.

Lansdale—Rev. Olin A. Krehbiel, the pastor, includes a short message to the boys in the service in the Church Messenger. The Eppley sisters gave a musical program in the church on Sunday evening, October 25. In a recent issue of the Church Messenger the following jotting appeared, "It pays to come to prayer meeting. One of our ladies found twelve dollars on the floor when we kneeled to pray. (The spiritual dividends are even greater)."

NEW HORIZONS

By Willis Rich

In times of discouragement, when we watch the inefficiency of our democratic church government, when we listen to arguments pro and con on superficial matters, while a war-torn, hate-filled, diseased, and hungry world is waiting for messengers of love, we sometimes feel that we Mennonites are following the course of Nero who played the fiddle while Rome burned. A Catholic friend once told me, "You Mennonites would be all right, if you only had a Pope." When we watch Mennonite churches welcome emotional evangelists who preach and practice strange doctrines and pay them generously for their services which frequently bring divisions in our church; and, at the same time, when we see our conference make feeble efforts to pension its own ministers and missionaries, we are tempted to agree with our Catholic friends.

But then, when we see the stability of our ways; when we see, after the dust of some emotional disturbance in our communities has settled, that the majority of our people are still serene, honest, dependable, and industrious—unmoved by the evil winds that blow, although frequently silent during the storms, we thank God that we belong to a Church which pioneered, taught, teaches, and practices faith in Christian democracy, with the minister the shepherd of a flock of Christian brethren.

When our young people go to the Mennonite Historical Library and review the stories of martyrs in Mennoites history, we see in the glistening eyes of our own youth the same simple, staunch, and glorious spirit which has prompted thousands to accept imprisonment and death rather than denounce their allegiance to Christ. For four centuries our people have practiced and taught Christian democracy. Officials of our government are counting on us as a useful and stabilizing influence during the period of readjustment after the war.

With deep humility because of my own human frailities but with gratitude for the opportunity of expressing what I conceive to be God's will for our Mennonite youth, let me suggest ten new horizons. The horizons which might be suggested are as innumerable as the problems which confront civilization. We are in agreement that in Christ alone is the answer to our needs, but the new horizons I am about to suggest are opportunities of Christian growth and new methods of witnessing for Him.

1. Should we not make strenuous efforts to meet our current obligations and to pay our debts? Individuals, groups, and institutions could launch out into this new horizon before any further expansion. As American Mennonites it is well that we are concerned about financial obligations of members of our faith in Mexico, Canada, and Paraguay.

2. We have fine deaconess hospitals and homes for the aged where many have found refuge. It still remains for us to establish a Christian home for mental patients. The need for it is becoming increasingly evident.

3. The need for Christian nurses and relief workers will be greater than ever before in the immediate future. How can we train such workers? Would it not be a positive testimony of our convictions to establish a C. P. S. camp for Mennonite young women who would volunteer for training and work as nurses and relief workers on a subsistance basis, without salaries, during and after the present war? We don't have enough money? It would not take sacrificial gifts to finance our C. P. S. efforts if all of our people would give as they are able to give. If you doubt this just check the bank deposits in our communities.

While the most physically fit of our American manhood is being selected and recruited to die to preserve democracy, we are not patriots of the Stars and Stripes, we are not worthy citizens of our beloved nation, and we are not friends of Jesus Christ, if today we do not work and pray and give and serve and sacrifice to meet intelligently and effectively the urgent needs of suffering humanity. We cannot call ourselves Christian if we are indifferent to these needs. We should find two things to do for our country every time we refuse, because of conscience, to perform some duty. If our country asks us to go one dangerous mile in an effort to kill—let us go two dangerous miles in an effort to save lives. And let us thank God daily for the blessings of living in a land where—even though we are naturally misunderstood and sometimes unjustly treated—we can be both Christian and patriotic according to our American constitution.

4. Would it not be a double blessing to offer our young people for civilian public service for at least one year, without pay, during peace time, as well as during war time?

5. Would it be difficult to enlist the services of retired farmers, business men, ministers, and missionaries to supervise Mennonite voluntary civilian service and relief efforts? And could we not arrange for all physically fit unemployed members of our churches to work in truck gardens and canneries under the supervision of our relief committee?

6. Another new horizon is the extension of our missionary efforts to the sadly neglected rural areas of our country. As a rural people our efforts among the poor whites and negroes of the South should be particularly effective.

7. Another task for prayerful consideration is that of making plans now to re-absorb the young men now in the service of their country into our communities after they are released.

8. The sentiments of some of our Mennonite leaders indicate the possibility of having the educational committee of the General Conference, and some day, perhaps, the Mennonite Central Committee, direct all of the educational efforts of our people. This might result in some drastic, but important changes, not possible as long as we carry on most of our efforts through separate Mennonite corporations. It might lead to the establishment of conference Bible schools and academies, as well as a Mennonite seminary, so essential to the preservation of our faith. It might also bring about the unification of our liberal arts colleges.

9. It is possible to widen the horizons of our position as conscientious objectors. As Christian Mennonites we are not only opposed to taking human life, but should we not also consistently make God's will our own will in all decisions of life and conduct? We can not be content while others hunger. We can refuse to use God's name in vain and to call ourselves Christian while we hate our brothers. We may abhor evil, refuse to cheat our neighbors, and conscientiously object to coveting, lying, stealing, committing adultery, and returning evil for evil.

As Christian Mennonites we may be called upon to lose our lives for Christ's sake. We are to be meek, to be peacemakers, to hunger and thirst after righteousness, and to share the burdens of our neighbors. As Christian Mennonites we may expect to suffer persecution for righteousness sake. We ought to study to show ourselves approved, workmen who need not be ashamed rightly dividing the word of truth, recognizing that all truth is sacred. We must not grow weary in well doing but with patience teach men to observe all things whatsoever God has commanded. Our primary concern is the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and our chief mission on earth is to teach all nations, baptising them in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit. To do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with God, with the blessed assurance that He will be with us always, even unto the end of the earth, is what the Lord requires of us.

Are any of us so perfect? Certainly not. But we should never be content with any standard lower than Christian perfection. Our Lord and Master commanded, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as the Father and I are perfect." And in this effort be it remembered that we have no time to cast motes out of our brothers' eyes while there are beams in our own eyes. This, therefore, is not the time for us to find fault with our government nor with the conscience of another Christian. This is the time for us to lose ourselves in services for others for Christ's sake. Is this pure idealism for another world? No. The kingdom of God is realism. Christianity has never failed. But, men who have called themselves Christian and have trusted in their own wisdom and in their own strength have failed. Christian love, even greater than hope and faith, is not a fraility and not a fickle emotion. It is the most dependable power in the world. The words of the poet express God's truth:

Plant lilies, and lilies will grow,
Plant roses, and roses will bloom,
Plant hate, and hate to life will spring,
Plant love, and love to you will bring the flowers of the seeds you sow.

It is for these basic, historic virtues of our Faith that I remain a Mennonite, praying in times of testing, "Revive our Faith, O Lord."

10. Humility is a Christian virtue. Its true meaning is not piety, but a willingness to learn. There is much we can learn from other branches of the Mennonites and from other denominations. If we can appreciate their Christian strengths and substitute these for our weaknesses, would it not be profitable for God's Kingdom? The following are a few suggestions:

Simple life from the Amish
Unity and loyalty from the Catholics
Confessions from the Oxford Movement
Reverence from the Episcopalians
Tithing from the Seventh Day Adventists
Christian zeal from the Nazarenes
Social service from the Quakers
A compassion for lost souls from the Salvation Army

With all of its imperfections and unfortunately divided as it is, upon the Christian Church rests the burden of preserving and extending the good news of Jesus Christ who lived and died and rose again that we might be saved, that we might have eternal and abundant life. It is the duty of every denomination to set its house in order and become so thoroughly Christian that someday Christ's concern that we may all be one, even as He and the Father are one, may become a reality. Unnecessary divisions must certainly grieve our Lord. The fact that our church grants to each member the right to interpret the Scriptures according to the dictates of his own conscience, makes it a potentially useful instrument in testifying to the kinship of democracy and Christianity. And as a denomination, the greater the tasks we undertake as a Christian testimony to the world, the more united and effective will be our efforts.

May our Mennonite youth have the vision necessary to undertake great tasks for the Lord, remembering that of ourselves we are weak, helpless, and impatient, but that as coworkers with God our resources are limited only by the strength of our Faith.

(Given at the fifty-first session of the Western District Conference, October 21, 1942.)

Walk Quietly

By Virginia Leach Ballou

Walk quietly
And know that He is God;
When the dawn, on winged steed, comes riding high,
To blazon painted banners o'er the morning sky,
And the Holy Spirit seemeth nigh,
Walk quietly.

Walk quietly
And know that He is God;
When the blaring trumpets roar a thrilling beat,
Life is lived in storm and strife, and noonday heat,
'Mid the mighty tread of tramping feet,
Walk quietly.

Walk quietly
And know that He is God;
When the evening shadows lie against the hill,
In the hush of twilight, when the world is still,
And the balm of peace soothes every ill,
Walk quietly.

Walk quietly
And know that He is God;
Let your life be governed by His guiding hand,
E'en though it varies from the way you planned,
Bow your head in sweet submission, and

PRAYER

"Lord, make me an instrument of Thy peace; where there is hatred, let me sow love; where there is injury, pardon; where there is doubt; faith; where there is despair, hope; where there is darkness, light; and where there is sadness, joy.

"O Divine Master, grant that I may not so much seek to be consoled as to console; to be understood as to understand; to be loved, as to love; for it is in giving that we receive, it is in pardoning that we are pardoned, and it is in dying that we are born to eternal life." —St. Francis of Assisi

Christmas Program

The Coming of the Prince of Peace, Isaiah 9:6,7.

No. 1 of series of three programs on peace

I. Worship Service: 1. Songs: "Joy to the World" No. 70, "O holy night" No. 86. 2. Reading of leading topic, prayer, leader's remarks. 3. Carol singing. 4. Offering for peace.

II. Leader's Introduction:

"Love came down at Christmas,
Love all lovely, love divine."

There is no room for hate, for enmity, for self-seeking where there is love. The need to tell this story of love is exceeding by great today. It is the remedy for the desperate situation the world is in. Into this darkness the angel song again goes forth with its winsome appeal. "Glory to God, peace on earth, good will to men." As long as men do not yield their hearts to the Prince of Peace, they will not find the power to live peace and good will. This present war is proof that there are yet many places and hearts where there is "no room" for him. Whosoever accepts the Christ, the gift of the Father's love, will feel impelled to become like unto Tim who came "to seek and save that which was lost," to bring love and peace and a new way of living, namely, that of ministering unto others. No nation whether it be England or Germany, the United States, or Japan can say that this Christmas the appeal and the challenge of the angel song is not meant for them. Christ is to be the Saviour of all the world, if He is given room to enter in. Then, and only in so far as He is given entrance will "all things be made new" by a new way.

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks: 1. Love came down at Christmas. Luke 2:8-12. 2. The star still leads. Matt. 2:1-12. 3. The Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Isa. 9:6. 4. Foundation for enduring peace. Zech. 2:3-5, Isa. 2:4. 5. The Meaning of Christmas. Luke 2:13,14.

IV. For Discussion: 1. How did the coming of Jesus reveal the Father? 2. What can we do to help in bringing peace to the hearts of men? to influence our nation to be minded Christlike, peace-minded? 3. What part must prayer do to bring peace on earth? What part, work? What part, just plain, daily living close to God?

V. For Study and Thought:

CHRISTMAS BELLS
By H. W. LONGFELLOW

I heard the bells on Christmas-day
Their old, familiar carols play,
  And wild and sweet
  The words repeat
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!

I thought how, as the day had come,
The belfries of all Christendom
  Had rolled along
  The unbroken song

Of peace on earth, good-will to men!

Till, ringing, swinging on its way,
The world revolved from night to day
A voice, a chime
A chant sublime
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!

Then from each black, accursed mouth
The cannon thundered in the South
And with the sound
The carols drowned
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!

It was as if an earthquake rent
The earth-stones of a continent,
And made forlorn
The households born
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!

Andin despair I bowed my head;
"There is no peace on earth," I said;
"For hate is strong
And mocks the song
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!"

Then pealed the bells more loud and deep;
"God is not dead; nor doth he sleep!
The Wrong shall fail,
The Right prevail,
With peace on earth, good-will to men!"

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT

USING GOD'S GIFT OF LIFE I Cor. 3:16-17

In an series of topics to be used in the next few meetings we will deal with the blessings given freely to human beings but not always acknowledged or put to best use.

We want to be made conscious of God's presence in the regular and ordinary experiences of our life as well as in the spectacular.

Our first topic, the gift of life, is a call to understand and observe the simple rules of health, building a strong body. There is a close relationship between health and character and winsome personality.

Life is brief; the Bible tells us life is like our shadow, or swifter than a weaver's shuttle, or like a swift messenger. To waste time is to waste life, and to misuse one of God's best gifts. Life is a pilgrimage, a preparing for heaven, and life is living for heaven. Today is our chance to get ready. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." We first have in our heart a desire, a longing, then it comes to be an action to do good for God and our fellowmen.

The Question Bee

1. What are the fruits of our life? 2. What influence do we spread? 3. What is meant by these words "Here we have no continuing city."

The Prayer List

(1). That we may never be weary in well doing.
(2). Trust in God to provide for the morrow.
(3). Help us to dedicate our bodies, strong and clean, to his service. (4). Strong characters.

CANADIANS INVITE

Requests for Next Summer—The Home Mission Board is already in receipt of a number of requests that Brother Esau visit the churches in the western provinces next summer as he did in the eastern this past summer.

The board is in receipt of many letters from ministers where the services were held this past summer, thanking the board for sending a man who by the aid of the Lord did bring them such rich spiritual messages. Appreciation was also expressed for the information that they received of the work of the General Conference in its various phases.

Upper Milford, Zionsville—Twelve young people united with the Church at the preparatory and baptismal service, October 17. Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Geissinger entertained the annual Joint Council meeting of the Allentown—Upper Milford charge, of which the conference secretary is the pastor, on November 19. Brother Geissinger is the Deacon of the Upper Milford Church.

East Swamp—The congregation recently sent forty dollars to Rev. and Mrs. George Gregor to improve the kitchen of the parsonage at Napier. The pastor, Rev. Harold Burkholder, is enjoying his studies at the Theological Seminary of the Reformed Episcopal Church, in Philadelphia.

The Thirty-Eighth Annual Orphanage Convention was held in the Germantown Church, November 15. The project adopted for the coming year is as follows: $100 toward the maintenance of the Quakertown Children's Home, $50 to the Building Fund of the Home, $30 for an orphan in India, $50 to the China Relief and $150 for European Relief. The officers elected for the year 1943 are president, Mrs. Norman Berky of the Hereford Church; Vice president, Mrs. Olin A. Krehbiel of the Lansdale Church; secretary, Verna Keiser of the West Swamp church and treasurer, Mrs. Jacob Fretz of the Lansdale church. The 1943 convention will be held in the Lansdale church.

Allentown—There are fifteen young people receiving instruction in the catechetical class. The congregation united with nine other churches in the western part of the city for the Union Thanksgiving service held in Trinity Evangelical and Reformed Church on November 25. The Pastor visited at the Home at Frederick on November 19.

Schwenksville—The pastor, Rev. Freeman H. Swartz is again studying at Temple University, Philadelphia. The Fall Communion service and the Harvest Home service had to be postponed because of the renovating program. The Young Ladies' Class of the Sunday School held their annual banquet at the Perkiomen Inn, September 18.

The Junior C. E. Christmas Party was held in Zion Mennonite Church on November 21. The presents presented by the Junior's will be sent to the Oraibi, Arizona, Indian Mission station of which Rev. J. P. Suderman is in charge and to the Altoona Mission of which Rev. and Mrs. Delbert Welty are in charge.

—From the Berne (Indiana) Witness: Gordon M. Liechty has been elected superintendent of the Sunday school of the First Mennonite Church for 1943. Mr. Liechty succeeds Curtis Lehman, who has been drafted into the nation's service and is now located at Camp Maxey, Texas—Dr. Wilbur M. Smith, D. D., of the Moody Bible Institute will be the speaker at the annual Union Evangelistic Meetings to be conducted by the Berne Ministerial Association from December 27 to January 10. The meetings will be conducted in the First Mennonite Church. The speaker is the editor of Peloubet's Selected Notes in the International Sunday School lessons.—On November 29 Rev. Philemon L. Frey, who is engaged as field representative for the Committee on Industrial Relations of the Mennonite Church, spoke in the First Mennonite Church on the subject, "What the Christian Is to the World." The meeting was under the auspices of the Christian Temperance Union.

—From the Peace Sentinel, Medaryville, Indiana, C.P.S. Camp: Dr. J. E. Hartzler spoke and showed pictures of the Oberamergau Passion Play on December 6.—Eight men have left to serve in the hospital for the mentally ill at Norristown, Pa. —Edna Ramseyer and Russel Lantz from Bluffton College visited camp recently. Miss Ramseyer gave an account of her experiences in Mexico the past summer while accompanying a group sent there by the American Friends Service Committee in an effort to create a better understanding between the two great countries. Professor Lantz gave a vivid and interesting account of what it meant to be a C.O. in the last great war. —"They say seven out of every eight of the babies in Greece are dying because there is no food. Nine out of every ten children under the age of twelve suffer from rickets and may never grow up to be healthy adults. Some say five and others say nine out of every ten men, women, and children will die this winter because there is no food. 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.' "

—Christian Sunday School Quarterly (Senior): As this is being written on December 3 the Bethel College Press is printing the first three and the last three lessons to be included in this publication for the first quarter. The remaining seven lessons will be printed next and then inserted to make up the quarterly. A total of 15,500 copies will be printed.

—Louis Beer, known as "Bucher-Beer" (Book-Beer) because he traveled extensively selling books for the Mennonite Book Concern, Berne, Indiana, died recently in the Bethesda Hospital, Goessel, Kansas. Brother Beer was eighty-two years old and unmarried.

—Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California: "The literature table . . . has some interesting literature today. Our Church, a small but well written pamphlet of information about the work of our denomination. Relief In Action, an interesting account of relief work being done on three continents. Minutes and Reports of the 1941 General Conference. This would be a helpful guide for a group study in an understanding of the work of which we are a part. Sample copies of the fall mission number of The Mennonite. . . You will be surprised at the account of interesting and valuable information our church paper contains."

—Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: A bi-monthly bulletin is to be sent to all absentee members. A copy of the annual church reports was sent with the first issue. Sister Aganetha Fast is reported back in Mountain Lake after visiting churches in the Middle District. Brother P. A. Penner stopped in on his way back to Newton, Kansas, after visiting churches in Canada and the Eastern District.

—First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: The committees of the four mission societies have packed presents and materials for missionaries, the "boys" in camps, and the MCC. "In the pastor's agreement with the First Mennonite Church it is stated 'that the pastor shall hold his office without limitation of time, but that every three years the congregation vote whether he shall continue in his service!' " A discussion of young people's problems is held on several Sunday evenings of the month. A "Question Box" is used for this. The trustees are studying and drawing up a proposed church constitution. "Correspondents to church papers are being asked to collect from each subscriber (on the basis of $1 per year) who is not paid up to April 1, 1943. One paid up to January 1, 1943, as many are, will be asked for twenty-five cents. In no case will you be charged more than $1. Those who cannot afford the $1 will receive the paper at church expense." (This church has been using the 100 per cent church paper plan for some time).

—John J. Friesen of Butterfield, Minnesota, and Mary Remple of Newton, Kansas, were married on November 15 in the First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas. Brother Friesen was formerly a teacher in Freeman Junior College.

—Rev. S. F. Pannabecker, Bible teacher at Bluffton College, wrote on October 20, "During the current year I am working on a study of the 'Adaptations To Environment In The History Of The General Conference Of Mennonites.' That this is a vital matter for the present and future of our church you will agree and the thirty-nine questions (a questionnaire was enclosed) asked here will probably raise interesting thoughts."

—Bluffton College: "Honoring the late Professor Jesse H. Loganbill, business manager, dean of men, and instructor of psychology at Bluffton College before his recent death, students and faculty members of the college conducted special memorial services in Ramseyer chapel, Tuesday morning, November 24. Professor H. W. Berky, instructor of chemistry, gave the memorial address, and Laurence Burkhalter, former Bluffton student, on forlough from CPS camp No. 28 in Maryland, played Shubert's "Ave Maria" on his violin in dedication to the memory of Brother Loganbill. Also on the program were several other selections by Burkhalter, and several numbers by the former college string ensemble, composed of Burkhalter William Boorse and Robert Neuenschwander, both Juniors from Quakertown, Pa., and Arthur and Harold Thiessen, Junior and Senior respectively, from Central Province, India.—Brother L. L. Ramseyer, President of Bluffton College, attended a seminary board meeting in Chicago and also a session of the MCC. Brother I. W. Bauman recently spoke on the topic "The Church, Society, and War" in a Presbyterian church.

A present that will repeat itself each week, a constant reminder of your thoughtfulness, an inexpensive gift—such is a year's subscription to THE MENNONITE. Why not remember your friends with THE MENNONITE this Christmas? The gas and rubber situation will, undoubtedly, make it more welcome than ever to them.

—Bethel College: "Real stability rests in the spirit of the college, from the Board of Directors to the faculty and from the students to the constituency. If Bethel College is primarily concerned about being a House of God, a Workshop of Christians, seeking first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness, we need never fear for the future of our school. Though her endowment funds be liquidated, though her doors should be closed and though her buildings should crumble, her influence would be expressed by the lives of Christians in every corner of the earth. And in God's own way and time other Christian efforts would blossom forth from the seeds she has sown. Truth crushed to earth will rise again."—Excerpt from report to the corporation, November 27, 1942, Public Relations Department.

president of Bethel College. President Kaufman is recognized as one of the leaders in Mennonite thought and education today.

All Founders Day guests are expected to stay for the free lunch at noon. It is to be emphasized that everyone is invited to join in this. A special invitation is extended to those who have generously supported the college in its effort to reduce the indebtedness this fall, to attend the meetings of the day, and to be guests of the college at the noon lunch.

The attraction of the afternoon will be "The Life of Paul" in moving pictures. A deeper insight into the work of the great apostle should bring a greater desire to know better the One whom Paul adored.

The college museum collection has been constantly growing, and, with other possible exhibits, will be open for visitors during the noon hours.

—Swiss Mennonite Church, Alsen, North Dakota: On November 3, we were blessed by having Rev. and Mrs. H. H. Quiring and daughter Anna, who is a missionary from Africa, in our midst. After Rev. Quiring had made a few remarks in German Miss Anna showed slides of their work and told us many interesting things. If they had only been able to stay longer! They went to Montana from here. On November 14 Jack Benke and Viola Klein were married. They will live at Munich. Although it is getting a little colder, the weather is still very pleasant. —Corr.

—First Mennonite Church, Ransom, Kansas: Recently our church purchased sixty-five copies of the new Mennonite Hymnary. We have already been greatly blessed through them. We changed our regular Thursday evening Biblestudy and prayer meeting to a Thanksgiving service on Thanksgiving Day. All found many things for which to be thankful. The program of our Harvest Home Festival consisted of several numbers pertaining to Thanksgiving for material blessings and a sermon on the importance of home and foreign mission work. The offering taken for this work revealed that the people were thankful and willing to share. At noon we had a fellowship dinner. —Abraham Albrecht.

—The Rev. John T. Neufeldt family and Mrs. A. F. Wiens and daughter at the Mennonite Bible Mission, 4221 So. Rockwell Street, demonstrated their kindly Christian hospitality to strangers in their city on Thanksgiving Day. A Chicago city group suggested that families entertain soldiers on the holiday; then the two families decided to extend an invitation to some of the boys from C.P.S. camps who are detached service in the Alexian Brothers Hospital, 1200 Belton Avenue, Chicago. They asked for four of the boys to come to their home. Three promisel to come, but only two came. One of the boys was too timid because he har been dealt with in an unchristian manner before. The two that came were, John Siegfried, formerly from Rochester, New York, and Abram Goldstein, whose home had been in Philadelphia, Pa. The first named belongs to the Roman Catholic Church and the second one to the Jewish faith. Both families report that both of these boys have a deep understanding and appreciation of the Biblical basis of the conscientious objector position. Earlier in the day the boys indicated that they might return soon after dinner, but their stay was so cordial and their entertainment so pleasant that they stayed until about 10:00 p.m. The golden rule still works.

The "Best Gift"

"What can I give?" is one of the perplexing questions which precedes the day on which Christ's birth is commemorated. We try to think hard of what the recipient-to-be needs and desires. Then we may think of what resources we have to fulfill his needs and desires. We know that if we can give him what he very much wants, then the gift will bring great joy. So we try to match what someone very much needs and wants with what we can give. The better this is done, the greater is the joy.

But what is the greatest need and desire of every human being? Is it not spiritual life?

He was a man who had developed a great business enterprize, but he was found dead, killed by his own hand.

He was a skilled pilot who flew far out into the Pacific for big money. After a meal with his friends he walked back into the house. His friends found him dead.

He was "very active" in the church; he was rich; he was immoral; He disliked the minister who tried to help him. At last he was broken in health and spirit. No gold could heal the wound of a child gone wrong.

He was quite an ordinary man, who ate, and drank, and did his work, and finally was sent to the grave direct from a funeral home, for the church had never been home to him.

He was somebody's son, somebody's brother, father, cousin, uncle, friend. Once he was an innocent child with the glory of life before him. Once he could have grown, and waxed strong in spirit, and have been filled with wisdom, and have received the grace of God upon him. And now—it is too late.

Did he find what he most wanted and needed? Did twenty-five, thirty-five, fifty, and sixty Christmases go by without someone giving him the greatest gift that can be given or received—Jesus Christ, the Life?

Christmas time is a time of joyous giving. May we not forget the better ones, and the best one of them all—Jesus Christ. —rw.

My Christmas Prayer

When Christmas draws nearer and all things are gay,
I kneel in seclusion in order to pray:
I ask for that spirit and gladness of heart,
Our Saviour is willing to us to impart.
I do not petition for fathomless wealth;
I do not demand that great gift of sound health;
I do not expect gifts of silver and gold,
Nor visions of beauty and grandeur untold.

In humble submission, I ask that in love,
I might show some sinner our Saviour above;
That joys of the season, as they appear,
May fill me with zeal for the work of the year.

A Popular Event

By George R. Smoker

The story is told of a Mr. Good Deeds who was so great and kind and good that the citizens of the town determined to do him honor on his birthday When that day came the townspeople assembled to honor their great benefactor. Songs had been written and were sung in his honor, and gifts were given. The high point of the occasion was a message which they had asked him to give. Everyone had such a good time that it was decided to repeat the observance the next year.

The next year the people were busy with preparations for a big banquet. There was more food, more gifts, more music than ever. True, Mr. Good Deeds was more in the background than the year before, but the people did manage to give him time to make a brief speech.

Year followed year. The celebration of Mr. Good Deed's birthday had become a fixed part of the community's life—an event more popular and more hilarious with each passing year. There was no time to have him speak any more, of course, but he was there and a few people noticed him and honored him. But finally one year, in the bustle of preparations, the people forgot to invite him, and he found himself looking in through the window at the celebration of his own birthday. And he was never missed!

The Hundred Per Cent Plan

Upon the recommendation of the Board of Publication the General Conference, in 1941, adopted the following plan with reference to our two conference periodicals, the Bundesbote and The Mennonite namely, "That the annual subscription price of these periodicals be reduced to $1.00 per copy to churches that will provide a copy of either of these papers for every family in the church-roll and pay for the same through the church treasury. Otherwise the price is to remain $1.50 for each paper as heretofore." This plan has come to be known as "The Hundred Per Cent Plan."

The purpose of this plan is to encourage and promote a more general reading of our church periodicals. According to the statistical report given at the last General Conference, the membership of the 168 churches comprising the conference was 36,032. This number represents approximately 9,000 families. But the combined subscription lists of the Bundesbote and The Mennonite show that these periodicals only go to about 4,900 homes. And this number is reduced at least by 400 because in about that many homes both papers are being read. Thus, only about one-half of the families comprising the General Conference subscribe to one or the other of our conference periodicals. There is great need therefore that special efforts should be put forth to place these papers into more of our conference homes.

Various methods have been used to accomplish these results. And while some success has been achieved through these methods, we still are far from reaching the goal set by a resolution adopted at the sessions of the General Conference in 1938, namely, "to have at least one conference paper in every Mennonite home." This goal or aim is not too high to reach, and every member of the conference constituency should feel under obligation to help obtain the same. Many new subscribers have been won in the past by those who have felt this urge and have put forth effort toward that end. But it requires united effort to achieve great results. And this is why "The Hundred Per Cent Plan" is so well adapted to achieve the coveted aim. By putting this plan into operation in any church, the aim is accomplished as far as that church is concerned. And if all the 168 churches comprising the conference adopt this plan, the goal can be reached 100 per cent in a very short time.

The plan itself is very simple and can easily be put into operation. All that a church needs to do is to put the plan before its members and to secure its adoption. Very few members will hesitate to vote for the plan when the same is sufficiently explained. And every family on the church-roll will benefit by the adoption of the plan, first, because it will place either the Bundesbote or The Mennonite in the home; and, second, because the paper of their choice will cost only $1.00 per year, while otherwise the price would be $1.50 per year.

During the past year nine churches have adopted the plan. The total membership of these nine churches is approximately 2,500. And figuring four members to a family, it means that one of the conference periodicals now goes to 625 families. And it is safe to say that before the adoption of this plan by these churches less than one-half of these families were receiving a conference paper.

And what has been accomplished in these churches can be accomplished in every conference church if the proper effort is put forth. Think of the blessings that would come to the approximately 9,000 families comprising the General Conference, if either the Bundesbote or The Mennonite would be read in each of these homes! And not only would the members of these families be benefited by adopting this plan, but the conference itself would be greatly benefited, because through a more general reading of our conference papers a greater interest in conference activities would be aroused, and contributions for carrying on these activities would be increased greatly.

Space does not permit a fuller description of how this 100 per cent plan can be put into operation, but more detailed information will gladly be furnished upon request by the Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas.

—J. M. Suderman, Secretary of Board of Publication

Junior Messenger Becomes a Weekly

It will be good news for the readers of the Junior Messenger to learn that beginning with 1943 this General Conference children's paper will be issued weekly instead of bi-weekly as before. Many readers have expressed the wish that they might receive this paper weekly, and Sunday Schools which are providing the Junior Messenger for the children in the Primary and the Junior departments also would like to give this paper out weekly. For these reasons the Board of Publication has decided to make this change.

Of course it will cost more to issue the Junior Messenger weekly, but the Board is going to keep the subscription price as low as possible, and instead of doubling the former price (which is 45c for single subscriptions and 35c to Sunday Schools for ten or more copies sent to one address), it will be only 60c per year for single subscriptions and 50c to Sunday Schools, for ten or more copies sent to one address. This price is very reasonable for a weekly paper like the Junior Messenger, and it is hoped that many new subscriptions will be received from individuals as well as from Sunday Schools.

God's House in the Wilderness

In the quietness of the mission home two hearts, beating as one, laid before their Lord the matter of enlarging the Oraibi lower village chapel. Then God spoke His will.

Hopi Christians looked for a possible rock quarry. From the Foreign Mission Board came a request for a plan and an estimate of the cost. There was no contractor in the community. The missionary felt the request to be beyond his ability, for he was not a carpenter. Then one day God seemed to give him the plan. Late in the night he was still writing and said, "I can hardly lay this aside to go to rest." The board accepted the plan.

The Rebuilt "House of God" at Oraibi, Arizona

The pupils and teachers in the foreground represent a part of the daily vacation Bible school conducted at Oraibi last spring. In addition to the seventy-six pupils enrolled at the meeting house, thirty-five more had enrolled at the house of Puhumanis, making a total of 111. Three of the teachers were white, and three were Hopis. In the back of the group is the building around which the accompanying article centers.

The missionary knew of no carpenter for building, "but the Lord knew."The Baptist Mission Board had sent two carpenters to rebuild the Toreva Baptist mission home.The job was too small for two carpenters, and so it happened that Mr. Vickers came to Oraibi and stayed until the structure was fully under roof and enclosed with rough boards.

These were months of hard toil. The missionary made "many a weary trip to the lumber mills of Flagstaff approximately one hundred miles from Oraibi with a midnight return home." Hopi women grasped the hammer, mixed mud, and plastered walls with their bare hands. A man with an artificial leg, no means of support—often being low on food—and a wife suffering from anemia, helped in many little things, especially the making of the benches. Daniel Schirmer came from Hotevilla to help. Mr. Raymond the public school teacher, showed his interest from the beginning. The week before the dedication was one continuous work party for the Hopis, who still have such for building, shearing, and harvesting. Some days it continued until one and two o'clock in the morning. The missionary's wife stood on a ladder and scaffolding to wash windows. In the basement she made all the tables and benches which were to be used for feeding the congregation. The day of dedication was at hand.

The sun rose brightly on October 5, 1941. The morning sky became blue as an Indian turquoise. "The poplars bent, shining, in the wind, and the assembled Hopis and white people bent against it, too." They had bent, too, against all difficulties encountered in the building of God's house. There on the mesa stood the houses of Old Oraibi, which is thought to be the oldest continuously inhabited village in the U. S. There too stood the black, charred remnants of what had once been the old church on the mesa. It had burned while the chapel in lower Oraibi was being rebuilt. This loss turned into gain as the purse-strings of far-away friends were loosed for the greatly needed rebuilding of the church at the foot of the mesa.

The hour of answered prayer had come. The missionary, Rev. J. P. Suderman, stood tall and

A Letter to the Churches

"All Conference publications will suspend publication after January 1, 1943, because of lack of funds. No longer will readers be able to depend upon our church papers for the latest news of missions, relief, C.P.S. camps, and the conference churches. Children in many homes will miss the Junior Messenger, to which many had become so attached. Our Sunday school quarterlies, in which some of our best-known brethren write, will no longer be available. The Mennonite Hymnary, which has been welcomed by so many churches, will not be available after the present supply is gone. Ministers will have to refer to old copies of the Year Book and the Bundesbote Kalendar for information about conference work. The custodian of the Mennonite Historical Library is already greatly worried as to where he will get adequate records for this period. Conference treasurers fear a great drop in contributions because of a lessened interest in our Conference work."

What if the above paragraph were true? Fortunately, it isn't, for with God's grace we expect our publication work not only to continue but even to become a better servant of our churches and Him for whose glory we strive.

Our publications are a growing work of our Conference. However, it is true that this work is greatly in need of the support of our churches. Increased costs brought on by the war are raising serious problems. Most of our publications are running above the red mark. The board has not raised the prices of the two adult church papers, because it feels that the Conference wants the price to be left low, so that all Mennonite homes can have one of our church papers. While many publishers are being pressed closer to the wall, and some entirely, our board is facing the problems courageously.

It can and will continue to sweat with these problems as the churches give their support. A General Conference resolution requests each church to take, at least, one offering a year for publication work. A number of churches are doing this and even more. As more and more churches take hold of this work the results are bound to become more and more acceptable every year.

You will have your annual church meeting in the next few weeks. Could you remember this part of God's work as you plan for the year?

God's House in the Wilderness

fair-haired among his people and led them in a Hopi hymn of dedication, Yep Kihu God Enem Yukilti, (This House of God Has Been Built). He read the Scripture—"Except the Lord shall build the house, they labor in vain that build it." Qooyawayma prayed. Brother Philip Wedel turned the key, and the people "surged into this renewed House of God, where they sang, 'The Lord is in His Holy temple, Let the earth keep silence before Him, keep silence, keep silence before Him.' "

The day was filled with stirring sermons by Brother Wedel, spirit-filled singing, and instrumental music. At noon some 250 partook of "corn from the season's harvest, puffy fried Hopi bread, mutton stew with its good Hopi hominy, grapes, peaches, apples and melons."

That evening the wind died down. Like a great benediction bright moonlight descended upon Oraibi. Outlined in the brightness stood the rebuilt House of God, twice as large as before. Windows of a simple Gothic form indicated where the new began and the old left off.

Perhaps, in this Christmas season the clean moonlight will again bless it, and dark-haired Hopis coming out of it will think of the star that shone at Bethlehem.

Perhaps, on some moonlit evening during the middle of next July, our workers will lift their faces heavenward and offer a prayer of thanksgiving to God, the Father, for the help which He has given to all the missionaries who labored there since the mission was begun fifty years ago by Brother and Sister H. R. Voth. Fifty years of struggle against the powers of darkness. The sword of the spirit must and does prevail.

(In the "Bundesbote Kalendar" of 1896 there is an interesting article by H. R. Voth on the beginning of this mission work.) —rw

CHRISTMAS FURLOUGHS

Regulations recently issued by the War Department state that all Government departments are required to abide by a new rule as regards furloughs for the period of December 12, 1942, to January 12, 1943. This rule calls for a reduction of furlough permits from 15 to 10 per cent of company strength. This will apply to Civilian Public Service camps.

It is hoped that since ninety per cent of the boys will celebrate Christmas in camp that their friends will not fail to remember them in some way or another.

CAMP BRIEFS

New camp papers to appear are The Trailmaker, published by the Belton, Montana, camp and The Soil, published by the Hagertown, Maryland, camp. Subscription rates are 75c per year.

The Duke University Hospital Unit of twenty C.P.S. men is the first C.P.S. unit to be administered by the Methodist Church and is sponsored by the Commission for World Peace of the Methodist Church...

As of November 19, 1942, a total of 2,092 Mennonite boys were in Civilian Public Service.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

Catholic Aims in Rural Life

It may be of interest to the readers of this column to know that we are not the only church emphasizing the importance of rural life. Among all other Christian bodies none is so efficiently, so enthusiastically, and so effectively organized as is the Roman Catholic Church through the agency of the National Catholic Rural Life Conference. In a splendidly illustrated booklet entitled "Farm Family Prosperity" this organization sets forth what it calls its four working aims. They are; 1. To care for underprivileged Catholics now on the land. 2. To keep on the land Catholics now on the land. 3. To settle more Catholics on the land. 4. To convert the non-Catholics on the land.

The author of the article then goes on to point out that eighty per cent of American Catholics live in urban areas, while only twenty per cent live in rural communities. This, he says, is cause for deep concern because city people do not reproduce themselves. "It is more than evident that tomorrow's America is being born not in the cities or in the predominantly Catholic districts but in the most non-churched rural portions of the United States," states the pamphlet. To this organization it seems both a duty and an opportunity to convert the biological source of a nation's population.

Looking Ahead

There is nothing mysterious or underhanded in this four-fold rural life program of the National Catholic Rural Life Conference. It is simply acknowledgement of a fact and an endeavor to do something about it while there is yet time. The fact is that city people do not reproduce themselves. If it were not for the annual migrations of rural people to the cities and if the present birth rate of city people would continue at the same rate, our largest American cities like New York and Chicago would be reduced to the size of small towns within the course of four or five generations. The Catholic Church has come to see where the roots of its church lie. They are making strenuous efforts to nurture these roots and plan a long-time program. They are looking ahead, not to 1950 and 1960 but to the centuries that lie ahead. They expect to convert people to rural life, but also expect to convert people to Roman Catholocism. This includes Mennonites, Methodists, and Baptists too, not you and I of this generation but our children and grand-children who wander away from the church or who hang on to the traditional name but who no longer know the meaning of it.

A Lesson For Us

There is no reason why Mennonites should not look ahead too. We have been preserved and richly blessed by God for four hundred years. It may be that He will want to use us on this earth again as long. At any rate we should work and plan for the growth and welfare of His Church until He calls us. We are in favorable position in that eighty per cent of our people are rural but this means nothing unless we recognize the importance of the situation. Some of our people may have to or may want to go to the cities but our future as a church is doomed if we allow the majority of our members to go there. Our heritage, our genius, and therefore, our future as Mennonites lies in rural soil. In that kind of soil we may flourish; in urban soil we shall perish.

BOOK REVIEW

Mennonites in Europe

By John Horsch. Volume I of Mennonite History. (1942. 425 pp. $2.00)

A few months after the death of John Horsch, there came from the publishers a book which marked the climax of his fifty years of research and writing in Anabaptist history. Mennonites in Europe, therefore, is a book that because of the scholarship back of it will occupy an honored place in the libraries of many church historians. But this book was not written for scholars alone; rather it was written to be a standard history for every Mennonite who wishes to gain an appreciation of the faith of his fathers.

Mennonites in Europe is not a dry compilation of facts. In every chapter one senses the author's deep conviction that the Anabaptist forefathers had more truly found the essence of Christianity than any other of the Reformation groups. And because they dared to be true to their convictions they became the objects of persecution and their enemies wrote their history. John Horsch found other records besides those their enemies made popular and has given them to us in this book so that now we can have a clearer picture of the life and faith of our forefathers then we once had.

The book is divided into four parts. The first summarizes Christian history up to the time of the Reformation. Part two tells the story of the rise and growth of the Mennonite church. Here there are twenty-eight chapters devoted to the rise of the church in Switzerland, Holland, and other places. Each one of the important early leaders such as Sattler, Marpeck, Obbe Phillips, and Menno Simons is given a chapter. Part three deals with the life and faith of the early Mennonites. Here one finds their teachings on such subjects as baptism, church discipline, and non-resistance. Part four consists of a number of appendices. Finally there are notes and references, a bibliography, and an index.

One of the interesting features of the book is the list of forty illustrations. The following are some of

GOD AND WAR

*By C. Henry Smith

The growing popularity of the sacriligious song "Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition," which bids fair to become the battle hymn of this war, is symptomatic of the general trend which attempts to drag God into the war.

It is natural to want to have God on our side in every thing we may do. To many people God is still a sort of tribal God, a God especially favorable to Americans, not quite equally the God of other races and nations. But God is a universal God, a father to all his children irrespective of color or race—to the Germans as well as to the English, to the Japanese as well as to the Americans. To be sure, some of His children have wandered farther astray than others, and some have even denied Him. Yet He is the Creator of all, and is equally anxious that all do His will. God takes no part in the quarrels of men.

God made all men free moral agents, with perfect liberty to choose either good or evil. He has also established certain fundamental, unchangeable laws to govern both His physical and spiritual universe, which He asks us to obey; which however, we need not obey unless we wish. But disobedience brings its own punishment. God does not force us to obey. Adam deliberately chose to eat the apple and reaped the consequences. God perhaps, might have prevented Adam's disobedience, but He did not.

If God's children deliberately choose to settle their quarrels by a suicidal war, against His will, that is their privilege, but they must suffer the consequences. God who is a God of harmony, peace, mercy, and love can take no part in the sins of men, and so He can take no sides in war. Instead of praying that God be on our side and give us victory, might we perhaps not better pray that we be on His side, and that He help us to do His will whatever that will might be?

If God can take no part in war, neither can His church. A church that claims to be universal and ecumenical institution, including in its membership children of all races and nationalities, manifestly, cannot participate in their quarrels. Of course, Mennonites and the other peace churches have always held this view, that neither God, the church, nor church members could ever bless war. But it is encouraging, at least, to note that other bodies of the Christian Church are also beginning to realize that whatever their attitude might be toward the obligations of their members, the church as such is not at war and dare not allow itself to be used by the civil authorities to bless the war effort, or become the accomplice of the state in the making of war. These churches have made commendable progress in this direction since the first world war when many of the larger denominations were very much in the war.

At the recent meeting of the Federal Council of Churches, held at Delaware, Ohio, to discuss what the churches might do to promote the cause of a just and durable peace when the war is over, the church section of the conference passed this resolution:

> "The Church is not at war. In its essential nature it is an ecumenical, supra-national body, separate from and independent of all states, including our own national state. The spiritual responsibilities of the Church, and the spiritual service which it may render derive not from the claims which the state may make, but from the freedom and autonomy of the Church itself under the Lord Jesus Christ who is its Living Head."

This statement representing the best thought of the large denominations on this matter, though not altogether satisfactory from a Mennonite point of view and non-committal on the part the church member may take in war, yet clearly admits that the church as such must rise above and remain detached from the quarrels of her children if they are to be settled by war.

If we must drag God and the church into all our wars, then mankind is hopelessly doomed to an endless and ever-increasingly, destructive holocaust of bloody carnage that will finally end in the complete destruction of civilization itself. Jesus is the only hope of the world; His church, thoroughly committed to the way of life as taught in the Sermon on the Mount, and the healing influence of the redemptive love of Jesus alone can save the world from this terrible doom.

For Those Who Have no Christmas

By P. R. Hayward

Christ of all the Christmases there have been, hear my prayer for those who have no Christmas.
For all the darkened millions who go to bed hungry tonight, and all the nights.
For all the children in whose homes the candles have been put out these days by war, pestilence, and fear.
For boys and girls whose hands press against store windows while their eyes devour the glories they can never touch.
For those whose hearts are torn by hate, twisted by prejudice, crippled by narrowness and pride.
For these who have no Christmas this day, Christ of deathless love, let Thy presence come with joy and healing in its wings. Amen
In Thy dear Name.

Two Cheyenne Indians Are Ordained

By Mrs. Rodolphe Petter

Conscious of the upholding prayers of mission friends in the churches, a representative group from Busby, Birney, and Lame Deer gathered yesterday afternoon in our little log chapel here on the mission station. Two Northern Cheyenne Indians, Frank Littlewolf and Milton Whiteman, who already served many years, were to be ordained to the gospel ministry. This was quite an advanced step in the history of the Cheyenne mission field, as these are the first Cheyenne Indians who were to be ordained thus.

The Little Log Chapel At Lame Deer

In this chapel Frank Littlewolf and Milton Whiteman were ordained on November 29, 1942. Since last spring Brother Littlewolf has served the congregation which assembles here regularly.

It was a simple, but deeply impressive all-Cheyenne service. An interpreted or part-English service would have detracted considerably from the solemnity and significance of the occasion. Brother Habegger from Busby opened the service. The congregation then sang a general favorite among the Cheyenne Christians, "Jesus zistoxetanotos" (An Jesum denken oft und viel, Bringt Wonn und Freud ohn Masz und Ziel). Two Scripture portions found in II Cor. 4: 1-7 and 5: 16-25 were then read.

The main ordination service was conducted by my husband with carefully chosen Cheyenne expressions, rich and deep in meaning. The response of the two men was sincere and reverent. Other Cheyenne songs from the new Cheyenne song books recently published in Billings were "More Love to Thee, Oh Christ" and "Maheoo, nimezeo Maheoneomotom" (Herr gieb mir Deinen heiligen Geist, den Dein geliebter Sohn mir verheiszt) Brother Habegger continued and closed the service.

Guests in the congregation were Marie Buller Miller and husband. Marie said, "I was simply thrilled when I opened the new Bundesbote yesterday and read the notice of this special service." They hurried with their Sunday morning chores on the ranch where both are employed, and in spite of distance and road conditions, arrived in time, eager to enter into the spirit of this most unusual occasion.

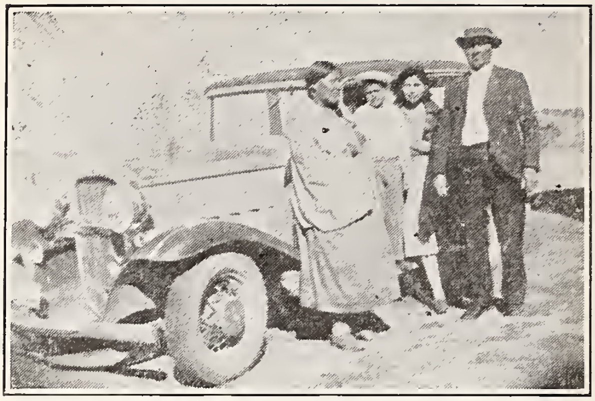
Frank Littlewolf has had a meager education in English. Some years ago he and his wife were the leaders in the "Mashaom," the greatest heathen religious ceremonial of the Cheyennes. When we came to Montana in 1916, Frank was employed as policeman at the agency here. He gave sixteen years of faithful and trustworthy service in that capacity. Both he and his wife were converted that first winter and baptized. Frank became a student of the Word. I taught him to read it in his own language. Promptly he proclaimed it publicly and privately.

When Brother Pankratz left in 1926, Frank was appointed to go to Birney for the week-ends to visit in the camps and to conduct the Sunday morning services. He did this for sixteen years without faltering once. His usual means of transportation was on horseback with lunch and extra clothing strapped behind his saddle. He covered this distance of over twenty miles each way in all kinds of weather. When it was extremely cold he would stop on the divide, kindle a fire, and warm himself before proceeding.

Since last spring when the board stationed Milton Whiteman and wife on the Birney station, Frank has served the Lame Deer congregation. Last week in conversation with Mr. Jennings, superintendent of the entire Northern Cheyenne reservation and representative of the Indian Department at Washington D.C., I was pleased to have him give Frank a fine testimony for stability and character. He has known Frank especially as judge of the Indian Court here at Lame Deer, which position he still holds.

Frank Littlewolf And Family

This picture taken a number of years ago shows Frank and his family. For sixteen years Frank made a week-end trip of over twenty miles to Birney, where he visited in the camps and conducted Sunday morning services. He usually rode on horseback. Not once did he falter.



Milton Whiteman And Family

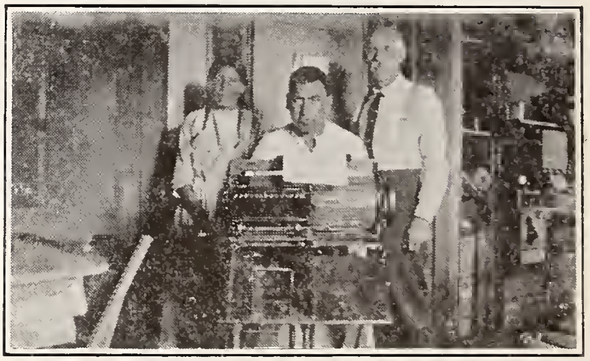
Milton Whiteman and wife now serve on the Birney station. The above picture was taken a number of years ago. While serving as chief of police for several years Brother Whiteman handled lawless elements fearlessly without weapons or violence.

Milton Whiteman's grandfather was a white man connected with the army post at Ft. Keogh near Miles City. He married an Indian woman; thus, Milton has some white blood. He has also had more contacts with white people than most of our Indians and speaks English fluently, though he also had a meager schooling. Once a stranger asked him, "Where did you attend college?" With a natural ability to assimilate a wide range of information and a bend to learn the ways of the world, Milton sowed his "wild oats" freely. His reputation was bad.

In 1926 he was converted during an Easter communion service here in our chapel. His wife partook and had her place with the communicants in front, while Milton sat alone in the back. Soon after, he said, "I felt like an outcast. I decided then and there to accept Jesus as my personal Saviour." Conversion for Milton meant truly a "right about face." He gave up drink, smoking, and women, and devoted himself wholeheartedly to his new life. A number of years he served as the most efficient chief of police our reservation has ever known, keeping order, prosecuting offenders, handling lawless elements fearlessly without weapons or violence.

A few years ago FBI men investigating a murder case on our reservation suspected Milton, a brother and a nephew of hushing important witnesses, and three were placed in close confinement in the Billings jail for a period of several months. This most unjust and severe trial only deepened Milton's spiritual life as he cooperated with Christian workers who visited the jail regularly. His strong voice rang out even there in song and praise, influencing the jailer as well as all the prisoners. When the grand jury finally met at Great Falls, they immediately sent a message demanding the release of all three.

Having a better knowledge of English than, perhaps, any other Cheyenne Indian of Montana or Oklahoma, Milton has found great joy and profit in the Word "that speaks Cheyenne." He reads it as readily as he reads the English. "I have a far better grasp of God's message by being able to read the Cheyenne Scriptures than I, as an Indian, could possibly have merely through the English language." This has been the gist of his thought expressed over and over again in word and prayer. This fact gives him a tremendous advantage over any new white missionary, who must first learn the language.



Translating the "Word" Into Cheyenne

Shown here are missionary Rodolphe R. Petter and Ernest and Anna Vxzeta. Ernest is at the multigraph which was used to print the Cheyenne translation. It is this translation which means so much to Milton Whiteman, expounder of the Word.

May this account serve to enlist further prayers for these two native Cheyenne ministers of the Word, for all the Montana missionaries, as well as for the entire Cheyenne mission field.

Instead of Questions

By Elaine H. Sommers

Harold Carter's brown curly head bent low over the desk. His eyes seemed to be glued on a spot at the upper right-hand corner of the page, but one glance could easily have told a spectator (had there been one) that his thought were far away from Hendrik Van Loon's Story of Mankind.

At the far end of the room a tiny fire was smoldering in the fireplace. It was hardly the kind of fire for Christmas eve. Yet Harold's unseeing eyes did not seem to notice the forsaken little thing. In fact, Harold hadn't even seen the holly which Mrs. Athel had arranged so tastefully on the mantel and around his mother's picture in the hope that it might remind someone of the joy and happiness of Christmas.

You see, Mrs. Carter had died when Harold was but a little boy. The big house had been so empty and lonesome with her gone that Mr. Carter had decided to sell it. Since that time he and Harold had lived here in the three-roomed apartment at 508½ South Main Street. Mrs. Athel cleaned the house for them every Friday morning, and tried to make things as pleasant as possible for Harold and his father. Nevertheless, the Carter home could never be quite the same again.

Harold—intelligent, moody, not too handsome in spite of his brown curls, and seventeen—was a senior at Warren High. "Harold is a brilliant young man and has great possibilities for success, if only he'll snap out of it!" the principal of the high school had said. Everyone who knew Harold knew what the principal meant when he said, "snap out of it." Harold was always riding too far on the bus, leaving his jacket somewhere and never quite able to figure out where that somewhere was, or forgetting to go to class, then explaining to the teacher that he was trying to figure out something very important.

Poor Harold! If he only knew it, the answers to those questions which kept swimming around unanswered in his mind were in the little black Book lying on the desk right in front of him—the Book Mrs. Athel dusted so carefully and put it back in its place to be untouched until the next Friday. His mother had read that Book and she had received untold strength, joy, and comfort from the precious mine of gold hidden between the two plain black covers.

Tonight was Christmas eve! Elsewhere people were singing the beautiful old Christmas carols which have given joy and happiness every year at Christmastide to countless thousands of people. But to Harold it all seemed foolish. "The idea, that people will go to so much bother over the birthday of just another man! They themselves admit that they are not sure whether they are celebrating the right day. Tommyrot! That's all it is."

In spite of the brave front, Harold was unhappy deep down in his heart. A lot of things bothered him. "Just exactly why is life worth living anyway? What happens when a person dies? What is the most important thing in life? Is it knowledge? Why do people do and think the things they do? Do other people think the same things I do way down inside? What causes war? What does the whole thing matter anyway?"

So on and on the questions keep rolling around in his mind. They were questions Harold could not answer, questions that kept him awake nights, questions that made him forget to go to class, or get off the bus, or eat his lunch. They were questions which nearly drove him to desperation because they were so urgent, because they would not get out of his mind even for Christmas eve and let him rest.

Even tonight as Harold sat staring at his book oblivious of his surroundings, the questions kept confronting him. "Who am I? Where am I going? What am I here for? Why? Why? Why?"

At length Harold jumped up, slammed the book shut, grabbed his hat and coat, and rushed to the door. He did not care which direction he was going. Anything to change the monotony!

The snow was dancing down noiselessly. It would be an ideal Christmas day. The little stars were twinkling in the heavens as they had on a certain night hundreds of years ago when shepherds were abiding in the field keeping watch over their flocks by night.

"Odd," thought Harold, "I had never noticed before how beautiful it can be!" On he walked down Main Street, up Market Street, and over St. John's Avenue. "Why, here is where Christine Yoder lives!"

Harold always liked Christine. She was in his economics class at school. Harold hung his head as he thought of an incident which had occurred a few days before.

One day after school a group of students were standing in the hallway discussing the caroling. "Shall we invite Harold Carter?" asked Tom Smith who seemed to be the leader of the group.

"Him?" queried Bill.

"That kill-joy!" This time it was Ethel. "I just can't stand the way he goes around talking about Einstein's theory, Darwin's theory, and all that stuff. Ugh, he just gives me the creeps. Besides, think of how he makes fun of religion."

"Wait a minute," interrupted Christine, "I don't think you're being fair to Harold. Do you think Jesus would approve of our being unkind or not treating him right just because he has some queer ideas?"

Just then Harold came around the corner from the library with an armful of books.

Christine, not noticing him went on, "Harold Carter is o.k. He . . ."

Harold flushed in anger and confusion; he could not help but guess what had gone before. "Don't feel obligated to defend me, Christine Yoder. As for the rest of you, you're just a bunch of dopes." Harold stamped off savagely.

"Look at what we've done!" gasped Christine.

Tonight as he walked past Christine's home, Harold felt suddenly ashamed of himself. Somehow it didn't seem right to lose his temper and say something like that in front of Christine. "Christine is so—so—. Well, anyway, there's just something about her . . , " he ended lamely.

Harold quickly dismissed Christine from his mind and walked on down the street, still trying to get away from those endless questions.

Here was the little white church that Christine attended. Let's see, what was the name of it? Oh, yes! Mennonite. The people inside were singing:

"O come, all ye faithful,
Joyful and triumphant,
O come ye, O come ye
To Bethlehem."

Harold had vowed never to enter a church. Anyone who can reason knows that Christianity is foolish and ignorant. Such had been his stand. But tonight standing outside listening to the music he felt suddenly very lonely. His mother had taken him to Sunday school when he was a very little boy. That had been years ago. Moved as if by a sudden impulse, Harold went inside and took a back seat.

Why! There was Christine now, several rows ahead of him. How pretty she looked in her little white cap!

Brother Miller preached a marvelous sermon on that Christmas eve. He told again that wonderful story of how God's only begotten Son came into the world as a baby and how He was born in a manger because there was no room in the inn. His text was, "On earth peace, good will toward men." He explained how God can speak peace to our hearts even though the whole world is at war. The Spirit of God was moving mightily. As Harold was sitting there on that back seat, the answers to his questions came one by one. "Life is worth living only when it is lived for Jesus. People were created to honor and glorify God," et cetera, said the speaker.

At the close of the sermon they sang what is probably the most loved of the Christmas hymns, "Silent Night." Harold felt awed and humbled as he thought of that holy night. He discovered not only the meaning of Christmas but also the meaning of life. Brother Miller explained many things to him.

The Bible, no longer just something to be dusted, became his guidebook and his constant source of inspiration. Harold, like Paul the apostle, became as zealous in his service for Christ as he had once been in his opposition. The questions which had once been like a plague to him no longer troubled him. He was a devoted follower of his Christ.

It is several years later in the same living room. Tonight the fire is crackling merrily in the fireplace. The room seems so cheerful and Christmassy. A young man and his wife are just now putting on their wraps. They must be going to the Christmas-eve service.

Listen! the young man speaks,

"Do you remember what happened just five years ago tonight, Christine?"

She answers tenderly, "Oh, Harold, how could I ever forget it?"

WHEN WRITING TO THE BOYS IN C.P.S. CAMP

DON'T

. . .write long letters for several times and then stop writing or write only occasional postal cards.

. . .tell of good times in such a way as to make him think he is missing a lot.

. . .send your sympathy. He doesn't need it and he doesn't want it.

. . .mention unpleasant things about which he can do nothing and does not need to know.

. . .send repeated invitations for him to come home for some social functions. He has only a limited amount of leaves and absences.

DO

. . .write regularly even if not lengthily.

. . .be cheerful. Tell of the things around home which interest him.

. . .remember his hobbies and interests and help him to continue them in camp. If he reads, send him a book he will enjoy.

. . .let him know in whatever way possible that the home church is interested in his testimony and everyone wishes him well.

. . .write to those boys whom you know only slightly. Your interest in them will surprise them and encourage them.

Believers in the Village Tal Deoria

The grown-ups in the above picture make up the greater part of the Christians in Tal Deoria. Once there was a much larger number of Christians in this village which lies about seven miles straight north of Mauhadei. Many of them drifted away from Christ. Recently there has been a revival in this community. On a recent Saturday we baptized three. Several more are waiting to be baptized. We expect to organize the Christians of this village into a church sometime this month. This church will be affiliated with the mother church at Mauhadei. It will be the first one to be organized in the Mauhadei area. Across the river in Beltikri there is a growing group of Christians. A second church is to be organized there. Two from this area were baptized last Sunday. Several are on the waiting list. This picture is suggestive of how churches come into being.

MERRY CHRISTMAS

Dear Readers:

Since the mail service is much impaired, we are using the columns of our papers to extend the season's greetings.

With the "Merry Christmas" and "Happy New Year" greetings made possible through the unsearchable riches of Christ we earnestly pray that peace once more will reign upon this earth, as the angels heralded in the days of yore. Furthermore, we rejoice to say that our zeal for the Master's service continues unabated. "Work for the night is coming!"

Our health, thanks to the Almighty, remains good with plenty of work to be accomplished while the door still stands ajar nad the multitudes are in great need of the gospel.

Our hearts release unspeakable praises for past in gatherings; still more so for the hopeful touring season beginning with November; then also that the Indian Church Conference is nearing a significant climax when they shall gather for their annual session at Mauhaudi, December 2, to join in closer union with mission obligations. At it more deacons, evangelists, and pastors shall be ordained.

God's Word is most powerful; at the same time Satan is not at rest. We covet your most necessary help in prayer and what lies in wake to carry on the huge task to extend His Kingdom.

Yours as ever in His cause,

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

A. S. BECHTEL

December 27, 1942

Dynamic Christian Living. Rom. 12:3, 9-21

"In the former part of this letter the Apostle has been building up a massive fabric of doctrine. He now passes to speak of practice, and he binds the two halves of his letter indissolubly together by that significant 'therefore,' which does not only look back to the thing last said, but to the whole of the preceding portion of the letter. Christian living is inseparably connected with Christian believing. Paul's way is the right way. Lay broad and deep foundations of God's facts revealed to us, and then build upon that the fabric of a whole life."—Maclaren.

The title of our lesson has a challenging ring. There is something attractive about people who are "live wires" and who do worthwhile things. This is much true of Christian living and of Christian work. There is a spiritual energy in a life lived close to God. The humblist Christian may have it.

Power from on High, vss. 1-3

When Christian living is dynamic—energetic, powerful—there must be a power which is not one's own, making it so. We are spiritually dead if we do not receive power from on high. God has unfailing supply of spiritual power. Paul mentions the necessary condition in the first verse of our lesson. Paul draws an example from the Jewish sacrifice. The body is to be dedicated to God. Without consecration to Him, self-indulgence and animal appetites will carry us in the wrong direction. This is setting the gift—the body—apart for the use of God. It is saying to Him, I am here Lord; take me, use me as Thou wilt." All acts of obedience, consecration, dedication, and surrender are included in the giving of self to God. This is the spiritual service which God asks of us.

Paul lays down two broad principles for the Christian life: first, self-surrender, and second, growth in grace. The Christian must not adopt the standards of the world, but having been transformed in the innermost nature, he is to live on the higher spiritual plane. The renewing of the mind must come before we can work out that "good and perfect will of God." The renewing of the mind brings the transformed life. The change must begin within. The renewed mind is in harmony with the mind of God. It is humble—takes a sane view of self—and recognizes that all we are we owe to God.

Practical Standards of Life, vss. 9-21

Love has a prominent place in Paul's enumeration of Christian virtues. Love is to be without make-believe, hypocrisy (vs. 9). It is to be sincere, honest, the real thing, genuine, and consistent. Genuine Christian love is not indifferent toward evil. It discriminates sharply and clings to the good. It loathes the evil. True love will show itself in kindness and tenderness toward others (vs. 10). It will not contend for places of honor but will honor others instead. We are to do with all our might whatever our hands find to do (vs. 11). The great motive of the Christian life is serving the Lord. The sure hope of the Christian is cause for rejoicing. There are difficult and troublesome times when the virtue of patience is greatly needed. Christianity is a practical religion. Love is an active force and will minister to the needs of the poor, especially the poor in the church (vs. 13). Christian love will show itself in good deeds toward enemies. It will rejoice with others in their good fortune and show genuine sympathy when sorrow and adversity come to them.

Love will seek to enter into the feelings of others so as to be of one mind, and mutual good feeling will result. We should be willing to stoop to lowlier spheres of usefulness (vs. 16). "We should aim to be above reproach in the eyes of all," (Moffatt). We must not give any just cause for our good to be evil spoken of (vs. 17). We are not to give any cause for quarrel with another. We are to be at peace with others whether they are at peace with us or not. We are to let the judgment of God take its course. He has promised to make things right for us. Doing good for evil is the true Christian's vengeance. It makes the enemy feel ashamed because his hostility has been repaid by love. To repress the desire for revenge is to gain a victory over self and at the same time to disarm the enemy. The mind of Christ is the Christian's law of life. "It is better to live much than to live long." The reward for living the Christian life is in the joy of living the clean life. The secret of dynamic Christian living is the giving of ourselves fully to God.

How will real brotherly love show itself?

What is the strongest and finest answer a Christian can give to wrongs and slights? How does it work?

Why may not a Christian take a neutral attitude toward evil?

Peace on Earth

Peace on earth—with nations warring,
Man his brother's blood outpouring?
Long ago came Peace to earth
With the Lord Christ Jesus' birth;
God's Goodwill to foe and stranger
Lay in Bethlehem's humble manger;
Earth wove thorns to crown His head:
Now she weeps, her Peace is fled.

Peace on earth—beset with sorrows,
Dark todays and darker morrows?
Still comes Jesus through the gloom
Seeking who will give Him room;
Earth may shudder with disaster:
Peace abounds where Christ is Master,
And where hearts will give Him birth
Men may yet know peace on earth.

Christmas Time at Our Convalescent Home

By Helen A. Penner

We started our preparations for Christmas on December 5 when Mademoiselle Plion, Lois Gunden, and I went to Perpignan to do some Christmas shopping for our big "international family." We purchased about thirty gifts that day, mostly for the younger children. One of the Spanish men of our personnel was going to town within the next few days, so we asked that the toys be packed so that he could bring them with him.

December 7 is the Fete of St. Nicholas in France, but it was not observed in the Home. It was the first Sunday in Advent so in the afternoon Lois began teaching the children the words and music of "Voici Noel" (Silent Night) in French. Most of the older children and some of the younger ones could read French, so I had typed copies. The tune was difficult for them as it was of an entirely different tempo than they were used to singing.

Gifts

December 9 we three again went to Perpignan to attempt to finish our Christmas shopping for the children. It was none too soon as toys were selling rapidly and already there was not as much of a selection as there had been a few days before. For a few days some of the stores lost a little of that barren appearance so characteristic of French stores in wartime. The clerks were more courteous and seemed happy to have something to sell. This time we took our purchases with us. Can you imagine with what curious and happy glances the children greeted us when they caught sight of the three of us laden with packages of different shapes and sizes? One of us carried several hoops which could not be hidden very well so it started speculation immediately as to who would receive them.

Decorating the Tree

When Lois and I were in Marseille the week end of the fourteenth of December we bought a few small gifts for the personnel at the Home. On December 18 our Christmas tree arrived. We were so happy to be able to get one. It was set up in the office temporarily in a box of damp sand. On the twenty-fourth amidst our busy preparations a letter arrived telling us again that political conditions were such that it was not certain that it would be wise for all of us to stay in France. Such news on the day before Christmas! It dampened our spirits for a while, but with the happy and excited children around us we soon thought of merrier things. There was plenty to do to keep our hands and minds occupied. After our family was tucked in for the night and the personnel had eaten the evening meal, the men moved the Christmas tree into the alcove adjoining our dining room, which also served as our schoolroom. Then we all took part in trimming the tree. Some of the decorations were rather peculiar as we had to make some of them. Not having much material of any kind it was not easy to make them pretty. There was much merriment as we gathered around the tree, each one contributing his ideas and talent. It made us feel so Christmasy that we sang some of the Christmas songs together softly. When we had done our best the gifts for the children were brought in and piled underneath the tree. They were not wrapped in pretty paper, in fact, some were not wrapped at all as paper was scarce, and some of them didn't amount to much, but that didn't seem to make any difference to the children the next day, I noticed. The names on the packages were all turned down so they couldn't see which was for who. Then the men arranged a barricade of chairs in front of the tree, so the children wouldn't get too close in their eagerness.

French Kisses

I wish you could have taken a peak into the Home on Christmas Day! Some of the little ones squealed with delight when they saw the tree and their eyes grew very large. No sleepyheads that morning! They about smothered us with kisses that day. The French way is to kiss each cheek so you can imagine what that amounted to when almost sixty children had a chance at us. Some of the little "buggers" did it up brown by kissing us in the morning and again in the afternoon when they received their gifts.

Church Services and Chocolate Pudding

Lois and I attended services in Perpignan. The singing of a familiar Christmas carol really brought thought of home. Communion was observed. It made me think of the time when people of all nations will be fellowshipping in the presence of the Lord.

We hurried to the tram station, but because the services had been a little longer than usual we missed the first noon tram and so had to wait for the next.

We had hoped to get fowl of some kind for Christmas dinner, but is was impossible. The extra treat was chocolate pudding and the children almost licked the plates. "What's so wonderful about that?" you might be asking, but you would know if you not had chocolate pudding since you left your native land perhaps as long as four years ago.

"Long Live the Devoted Mennonites"

After the noon meal we had a short program which was followed by the distribution of the gifts. A number of lovely recitations, songs, and dialogues were given. At the close one of the girls spoke a piece which had been "manufactured" for the occasion by the Spanish teacher. It had been translated into French by the little girl with the aid of the two French ladies of our personnel. In memory I can still hear those adorable children shouting in French at the close of the recitation, "Long live the devoted Mennonites; those who are with us and those far away!" Then a huge bouquet was brought in and presented to me, which I immediately handed to Lois. It was meant for her, too, so I asked her to express our thanks. My French had disappeared in the excitement.

Christmas Day, 1941, is one I will never forget. It was worth all to be able to have a part in bringing the joy it brought to these refugees, and at that, it wasn't so much that we could do.

Christmas Day, however, did not end all the festivities. On the twenty-seventh there was a special celebration for all the children at Canet Plage to which our group was invited. We had a hard time getting all of them "shoed" and clothed enough to appear in public, but after much effort we thought they would pass inspection; so we accompanied the happy and excited group to the hall where the fete was held. A part of the program was some American "music." Imagine our surprise upon hearing the Tiger Rag. We hoped that the French did not think that that was a sample of our best in the line of music! After the program toys, oranges, and sweets were distributed to the delight of all. We feared that we would have a number of sick children that night, but nothing disastrous happened.

Chicken and Visitors

We had a chicken dinner the Sunday following Christmas, so the treats were distributed somewhat. You may be assured that the chicken dinner was quite an event for us as well as our family. That afternoon the protestant pastor's wife and four girls came to visit the Home. We had hoped the pastor would come, too, but he had contracted a cold and a slight fever. They played games with the children and gave a little program. They brought a pair of home-made sunglasses for each child and also a few candies.

For New Year's Day we made little paper cups which containing a few candies served as dessert that noon. This brought to a close our first Christmas "holidays" spent at the Mennonite Convalescent Home in Canet Plage, Pyrenees, Orientales, France. The account of Christmas 1942 will probably be a story tinged with sadness much more.

"Lord, let Thy spirit in holy rebirth
Shine over all our darkened earth. . .
Let our deaf ears be attuned again to 'Peace on earth, good will to men.'"

—First Mennonite Church, Upland, California: Since the first Sunday evening in October the Adult Christian Endeavor Society has been led in a study of the Lord's Prayer by Mrs. Salzman. The interest has been gratifying, and the prayer will mean much more to us.—The Welcome Wanderers S. S. class met at the home of Brother and Sister Arnold Hostetter. J. S. Boshart presided at the annual business meeting. We sang Christmas songs and then were led in prayer by Rev. Salzman, who was present with his family. Dorothy and Margeret Salzman and Evelyn Dettweiler gave musical numbers. Edd Haury, who has been the faithful teacher of the class for twenty-one years, was re-elected. The membership dues and birthday offerings amounted to $21.00. Of this five dollars was sent to each of the following: home and foreign missions, relief, and C.P.S. camps.—Leonard Wiebe of the C.P.S. camp, Camino, spent a short furlough with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Wiebe. He gave an interesting talk on Sunday evening.—Lydia M. Horsch, Corr.

Bohn, of Soudertown, Pa., who began a series of meetings on that Sunday, spoke words of dedication, supplemented by Rev. H. T. Unruh. Mrs. Unruh then opened the door of hospitality and entertained with a lovely tea. H. J. Bartel has been elected the new deacon.

—Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: To meet our C.P.S. quota our church needs to raise over $250.00 per month. We have done our part thus far. The civilian bonds which were registered in the name of the church have been received. These bonds have a term of ten years with interest at 2 per cent. They are redeemable at face value in eight years. These bonds are registered bonds, but they are transferable at current values.

—Bulletin, Grace Mennonite Church, Lansdale, Pa. Robert Kreider, son of Rev. A. E. Kreider of Bethel College, spoke to us on the worth of the C.P.S. program. The young people gave twenty-seven books to the men in camp. Dr. Ella Bauman told the story of an Indian widow to the Women's Missionary Society. Brotherhood Day at the Retreat Grounds turned out so cold for the eight people who showed up that they had to move fast to keep icicles from forming on the paint brushes. Rev. Olin Krehbiel spoke at the Zion Church, Souderton, on Thanksgiving evening.

From it we glean, "Judging by reports, most of you (men in camps) probably worked on Thanksgiving Day. Dr. A. Warkentin of North Newton, Kansas, preached for us in the morning. He gave us a challenging message; he recalled his experience in the last war at which time he and his family were in Germany where they were actually hungry and suffering for want of bread. One of the thoughts he forcefully presented was that we ought to thank God for bread and clothing." "Prof. Plett, professor of Bible at Freeman Junior College, will occupy the pulpit in our church December 6, while the pastor will be away to serve communion in the North Church."

With the copy of the Friendly Visitor came a blotter. On it are the names of the young men from the "South Church" who are in camp. This blotter is to remind and encourage the members to write to the boys.

A Concern for Men in C.P.S. Camps

*By Albert Gaeddert

Of recent years we as Mennonites have manifested a great interest in missions. Our largest field of interest has been in foreign missions. Some of these areas are now closed to us, much to our regret. When the work can be resumed one will quite naturally expect a renewed and heightened interest therein. In the meantime another great area of missionary activity has opened up for us right here at home, the mission of our drafted men under Selective Service, especially those who have chosen to enter the Civilian Public Service program. In an effort to preserve certain basic religious beliefs within our oncoming generation and in our future leadership, we are now paying the cost of maintaining a program that amounts to nearly $60,000 monthly. This is a noble expression of our common concern for the spiritual welfare of our young young people. The noble efforts of our combined groups is worthy of an expression of appreciation, in which the boys now in the camps would want to join.

There comes to us quite forcefully a further realization and concern regarding all of the men drafted. What will they be able to do when the war is over? Numbers of them will want to enter the commendable field of relief work either at home or abroad; others will wish to resume their former duties, while there will be a rather large number who will not know just what they can do nor where thy will find the means with which to get started.

Committee and its Duties

The problem comes right down to every local church. Would it not be helpful to have in each church a committee whose special function would be to look after the welfare of the drafted men?

The duties of this committee could be myriad, but I would list four specific duties that such a committee could make its main objectives: (1) to acquaint itself with every young man subject to call or already called; (2) to maintain a bond of connection with the young man after he is called; (3) to learn of the young man's desires after release from the draft; and (4) to help the young man to realize his desires.

Comments on these four points are based partly on that which seems logical, as well as on the expressions of some of the young men now in the draft. The object of point number one is to give him the assurance that at home there is not only his family concerned about his welfare, but also the church fellowship of which he is a part. This fellowship has a vital and active interest in him. Beyond his family and his sweetheart no one would know better the needs of this young man than this church committee, needs both physical and spiritual. It would give the draftee a sense of security and a feeling of oneness and of belonging to know that the church fellowship at home had an active concern in his welfare; this would be to the draftee a tremendous lift, especially, on the days when he feels that he is quite alone in the cause.

Aid the Minister

After the draftee is in camp, such a committee could greatly aid the minister in keeping the young man informed on the happenings within his home church. I have seen and read several letters by ministers at home which seem to me to be the very nicest manner of keeping in touch with the draftee. Just to inform him of such items as who led the Christian Endeavor program last Sunday, what the minister's sermon was concerned with, how much was contributed for the cause of missions, peace, relief, education, and other interests means the continuation of a living stream of fellowship that the young man wishes to feel assured of. No letters are quite as interesting as those which are "newsy" yet without the malicious content of "gossip."

Major Function

Points three and four should be the major function of this committee. This committee could learn what the young man wishes to do when he is released from the draft. Does he wish to enter relief work for a year or so? Does he wish to enter college or pursue some educational interests? Does he wish to go back into business, or does he want to go on the farm? Many of our young men come from the rural area, and will, no doubt, wish to return there. Some are fortunate enough to go on to their father's farm, an uncle's, or a father-in-law. Others may be able to rent some ground near home, but there may be those who will want to farm but cannot find any fields to rent.

Brother Albert Gaeddert is the former director of the well-known Colorado Springs, C.P.S. camp. He is now assistant to Brother H. A. Fast, general director of all Mennonite camps. Brother Gaeddert works with the camps west of the Mississippi. He wrote the accompanying article in Burns, Idaho, while waiting for bus connections. In it he has put down the concerns expressed in a talk at the Rural Life Institute at Bethel College.

A New Colony?

This church committee should know just what the prospects are for each of the young men drafted; this could be ascertained both from the draftee as well as from the parents of the draftee. Perhaps some churches will have no one who will need help outside of the immediate family, but there may be churches who may have as many as six or eight who do not see where they can go to get a start again. This should become the concern of the brotherhood. Other churches may have the same report to give. It may be necessary that we have a conference committee to which all of these local committees could report their findings, and the need may warrant a "colonization" effort. If so, we ought to be on the lookout now for such a colonization area.

A Complete Community

And would it not be thrilling to enter into such a new community together with a group of twelve or fifteen other young couples? Here could be the realization of the dream of Dr. Arthur Morgan of a community which is built around more than agricultural interests alone. Here could be a complete community, basically religious in its interests, with the church as its center, and with provisions for schools, recreation, fellowship, all set up on the basis of a cooperative brotherhood. As a people with an agricultural background of more than four hundred years, with a group of men who have had more than a year's experience of living together in close fellowship as a nucleus, and with the mother churches fostering the proper growth of such a community, where could one find a better makeup and a better foundation for such a community?

Fund for Help

Many of these men will return from the draft with rather empty pockets and with a very limited bank account. Most of them, if not already married will want to do so immediately. How can they get a start financially? They will need some help immediately. If they see no source to which to go, there may be only one recourse: to go to a city to find some employment. It should become the responsibility of the brotherhood to avoid this embarrassment for any draftee. These men have been giving their time and many of them without remuneration, while we at home have earned normally. We owe it to our young men to have a fund from which a limited amount is available at a very low rate of interest—if any at all—to be paid back in proportion to the borrower's net returns periodically.

Organization

Reference has already been made to a central committee to which the local church committees might report. It would be preferable to have such a committee for each conference, and these conference committees again might find a central committee in the larger conference. For example, the local church committees of the Western District Conference could report to the Western District Conference, the churches of the Pacific District Conference report to it, etc, and these district conference committees in turn report to the General Conference committee. Especially, in the matter of new colonies necessary, it would be well to work in larger units.

What You Can Do

How to get such a movement under way? Local churches, led by the minister, to whom such a plan seems feasible and necessary, should get such committees to function. Even if they did not get beyond the first two points, the committees would still have served a vital purpose. Those committees who find a need that cannot be met within their own church, such as a lack of land on which the returned draftees can be placed, could make their report to the president of its district conference. This president would soon be able to judge what further steps would be necessary. Perhaps, sessions of the conference executive committee might be necessary, or even sessions of the conference as a whole.

To the writer this need is quite evident and urgent, and it is one that should receive our immediate attention.

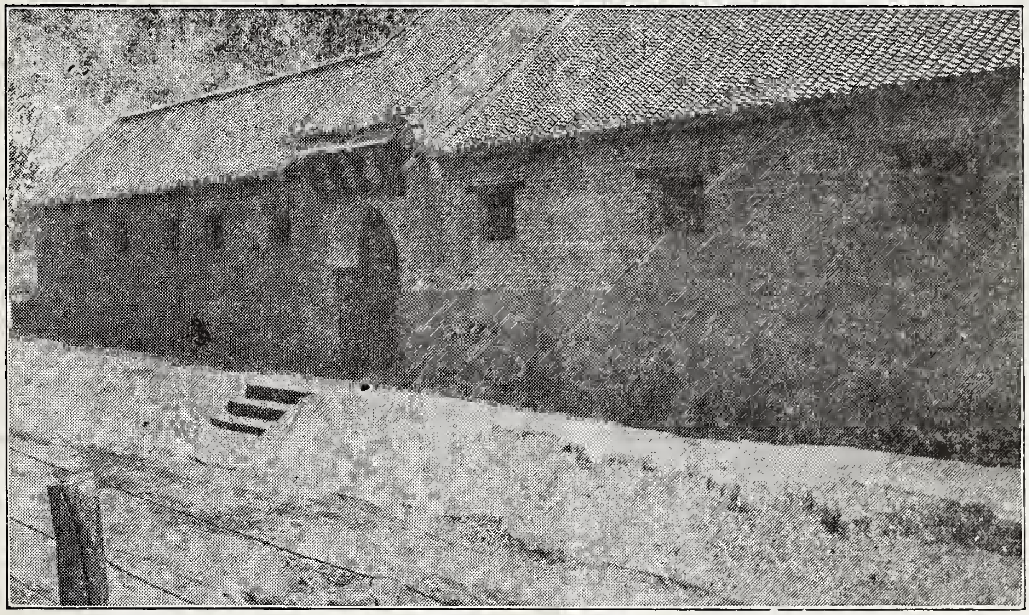
PRISONERS OF WAR

By Marie J. Regier

Monday, December 8, 1941, was a busy day at our house. The student nurses at the hospital were having examinations. So they were interned at our house until each one should have had his turn at the examination. They had the run of the house. They could play, read, lounge, whatever they wanted to do until their turn came. At noon we had extra guests; the doctor and the nurse, who had come here to give the examinations, ate with us.



The Entrance Gate of the High School Compound at Kai Chou

When Miss Regier came to this gate she found herself surrounded by guards. It was from this gate that the lonely gate-keeper nodded good-bye when the Japanese guards took Sister Goertz and Sister Regier past in a truck. There are rooms on both sides of the gateway, as indicated by the windows. The gatekeeper sleeps in one of the rooms by the gateway. The walls are built of brick. The Historical Library has a later cut which shows a brick sidewalk adjoining the base of the wall. Evidently the crumbling soil made this necessary. This gate is opposite the meeting house at Kai Chou.

The Soldiers Come

After dinner I hurried off to my English class. But I had not been teaching long, until I was called away because some government official had come for my photograph. So I went back to find one for him. No sooner had I gotten back to class and resumed the lesson when some of the boys, looking out through the window, exclaimed rather frighteningly that we were being surrounded by soldiers. I looked out of the window but could see nothing. The boy who was reading at the moment wasn't easily disturbed and said in his best English, "Never mind, never mind." But he had read only a few more words when the school principal came in and said in a rather worried tone, "Something has happened. They want you, Miss Regier."

Carried Off

I followed him down the stairs. As soon as I came to the gate I found myself surrounded by guards, who followed me as soon as I was past them. It was quite impressive to be the center of so much attention. When I got to the house the room was filled with more Japanese, and within the next half an hour it seemed everywhere we looked we saw Japanese. In a few minutes Miss Goertz came from the hospital. The moment she arrived two of the men took us aside and asked that we pack up the things we use every day and our bedding. "That means they are carrying us off, doesn't it?" I said to Miss Goertz, "How exciting!" I was so glad that they gave us time to pack. . . . Also I was glad they were taking us instead of causing the Chinese any trouble. I could not think of everything. The thing uppermost in my mind was the cold weather, and I thought of a little story mother once told me of an old woman urging her husband to protect himself against the cold, "Peter, put on, put on," and I stuffed every last piece of warm garment I had into my luggage.

Unfortunately, it didn't at the moment occur to me that we might go anywhere beyond the city, and I took no light-weight clothes along.

Purposeful Packing

However, one does think of certain things. One thing went through my mind. During spare time I would want to read, write, and sketch—hence typewriter, sketch book, and reading material went into my suitcase. Outside of the Bible I have a variety such as these: My Utmost for His Highest, Madame Curie, Gulliver's Travels, . . . and an old Christmas number of the Women's Home Companion for the Christmas holidays. . . . I also took a little Cresche, and two Christmas cards, one from Sister Hillegonda and one from Sister Frieda, first fruits of the season which had arrived only two days ago.

Our guards finally began to hurry us—it seemed doubtful to them that we were packing only the pressing things, I suppose.

Few Goodbyes

Before we left we went out to the kitchen to say a few last words to the servants. They looked very depressed, indeed. We told them to pray for us and we would pray for them. Then we went. Far and wide we could not see one Chinese. Only as we passed the school gate, the gatekeeper nodded good-bye to us. Our guards took us into the city on a truck but let us two have the best place, in the seat with the driver. All along the road we saw guards. It certainly seemed queer, all this commotion for us two harmless single women. We were so thankful that we could stay together.

Still God's Country

"Well, wherever they take us, it will still be God's country." Miss Goertz said. I thought so too. . . .

We were taken into the city into a fairly clean and warm room and left to sit in wicker chairs for the rest of the afternoon, after the guard had assured us that there was no reason to fear and we should be quite at ease.

Cocoa, Fried Chicken, Cinnamon Rolls

We were much surprised and pleased when someone smuggled some blankets and pillows to us which Miss Goertz had forgotten and even more pleased and surprised when a big sack of homemade food, a thermos bottle and cocoa, fried chicken and steak and cinnamon rolls, but most surprised and pleased of all when Mr. Wang and one of the helpers from the hospital were allowed to come in themselves. Thus, we could reassure the folks that we were being treated well and that everything was all right. Miss Goertz said, "I have an idea now how Paul felt when some of his church members visited him in prison."

For the night we slept on a big Japanese K'ang with the lamp burning all night and a Japanese guard under our window, but still we had privacy. In the morning when we got up it occurred to me all at once that now we were prisoners of war. . . . Soon after we got up we were informed that an order had come that we were to go on to Hsin Hsain that very day. . . . Fortunately the bus stopped several places in the city and we had a chance to say a few words to some of the Christians.

The New C.P.S. Quota

At the last meeting of the Mennonite Central Committee in Chicago, November 21, 1942, the matter of future C.P.S. support and quotas for the various Mennonite bodies was carefully considered. It was estimated that the C.P.S. camps will cost about $55,000 per month for the next three months. The Committee felt that the peak load has been reached and that an average of not more than 2,000 Mennonite men camp population needs to be maintained.

It was agreed by the Committee that the budget quota be set at 50c per member per month for the next three months, or $1.50 for the three month period of December 1, 1942, to March 1, 1943. The actual cost per man in camp is now nearly $30.0 per month.

The M.C.C., thus far, has never found it necessar to go into the red. We have good reasons for thinkin that it will not have to go into the red in the futur if each group does its share.

We need to be clear on the C.P.S. camp program It is a Mennonite Central Committee program wit which our Conference has agreed to cooperate. It i not a peace committee project. The Peace Committe at this time is only trying to do all it can to kee our churches informed, so that we as one of th sixteen Mennonite cooperating groups will not fail t do our share.

As one Mennonite group we should be greatly concerned that we will do our part in keeping the ligh of a great New Testament truth, which we ha historically adopted as a part of our Christian fait shining as brightly as possible. —The Peace Committe

CALLING ALL MENNONITES IN NEW YORK

Brother Gerald Stucky, 235 East 49th Street, New York City, wrote on December 9, 1942, "Last night Paul Shelly and the Mennonites from Biblical Seminary met and had a grand time together. We have thought it desirable to form a fellowship in New York City similar to the one that is in Chicago. We have chosen Wednesday night, February 3 as the date for the first meeting which is to be held at the above address at 7:30. We are interested in contacting all Mennonites in this locality and have thought maybe we could receive some address from you, or perhaps you would put into the jottings of The Mennonite the intentions of this group in regard to a New York fellowship and urge any who are in the vicinity to get into contact with Brother Shelly or myself."

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

BEAUTIFYING THE FARMSTEAD

During these winter days work on the farm can be done a little more leisurely than during the rest of the year. At the beginning of the new year farm men and women are thinking and planning their programs for the coming year. Those who are serious and alert Christians will not only be thinking in terms of crops, cattle, and cash but they will be seeking to improve and enrich their whole lives. They will want to see their community improved, their church strengthened, their home life deepened, and their spiritual life envigorated.

A Student's Comment

One of the best ways these ideals can more fully be realized is to beautify and enrich the farmstead. One of my students handed me an excellent paper the other day in which he made the worthwhile comment that a good home was something more than a place to eat and sleep. He suggested that it must become a sanctuary to which old and young may retire and regain physical and spiritual strength, a place where inspiration and stimulation are found for the better life. We are all too guilty of thinking of, and using, our homes as mere places of eating, working, and sleeping rather than as sanctuaries of refreshment and rest.

Beauty and Orderliness

The attractiveness, cleanliness, and neatness of a home probably form more intimate ties with the home than anything else. There is a close relation between beauty on the one hand and orderliness and neatness on the other. Beauty is not necessarily expensive, and attractiveness is not necessarily the result of extravagant spending or undue pride. Both of these qualities may frequently be attained with very little effort and expense. A coat of paint will transform an ugly set of buildings into a thing of beauty. Trees, flowers, and shrubs, God's own creation, properly cultivated and arranged can add greatly to the attractiveness and the joy of a farm home. Broken doors and fences, unpainted and tattered buildings, houses barren of flowers, trees, and shrubbery are anything but a delight to the eye and a joy to the resident. It is farm homes with machinery scattered widely over the premises, shabby looking buildings and a general disregard for neatness and order that alienate many young people from the farm. They come to associate farms and farm life with ugliness, dreariness, disorder, and monotony.

Inspiration To Others

If cleanliness is next to godliness then orderliness must be next to cleanliness. Well-kept homes are not only a satisfaction to ourselves and our children. They are also an inspiration to others. Who of us has not traveled along an otherwise uninteresting road and suddenly come upon a beautiful farm homestead that stood out bright and beautiful to cheer us like the appearance of the sun on a cloudy day? The orderliness and care of our property reflect orderliness and care in our lives. Christians should be concerned with both. Farming is our heritage but let us strive to be good farmers. It would be well to plan now to improve the physical appearance as well as the spiritual atmosphere of our homes during the coming year. The things we plan for are likely to happen, while the things we let drift will likely keep on drifting.

CPS Camps

Brother C. L. Graber to Washington

Brother C. L. Graber, member of the Peace Problems Committee of the Mennonite Church and and Business Manager of Goshen College, will begin full-time service in Washington on the first of December. Brother Graber will serve as an assistant to the Executive Secretary of the National Service Board for Religious Objectors and will give his services in particular to the financial problems connected with the Civilian Public Service Program.

Brother Graber will be the second full-time Mennonite employee on the staff of the N.S.B.R.O. Brother Joseph N. Weaver has been serving in Washington for over a year and a half as head of the Camp Operations Section.

Latest Camp Staff Appointments

A recent meeting of the Executive Committee of the Mennonite Central Committee resulted in the appointment of the following brethren as camp directors: Arnold Krause of Gruver, Texas to Denison, Iowa; John Duerksen, Hesston, Kansas to Galax, Va.; Emmanuel Hertzler, (former assistant director at Fort Collins) to Briggsdale Camp, a side Camp to Fort Collins; Rufus Franz, Eugene, Oregon to Lapine, Oregon (Lapine is a new Mennonite camp scheduled to open in early December.)

The following brethren, all of them assignees, were appointed by the committee as assistant and educational directors: Dwight Yoder to Medaryville, Indiana; Waldo Voth to Fort Collins, Colorado; Jacob Goering to Lapine, Oregon; Paul Guengerich to Hill City, South Dakota;

Matrons appointed to camps were as follows: Mrs. R. L. Hartzler to Medaryville, Indiana; Mrs. Rufus Franz to Lapine, Oregon; Mrs. Emmanuel Hertzler to Briggsdale Camp, Colorado;

Other appointments were: Mrs. Jacob D. Goering as dietician at Lapine, Oregon; Edwin Schmidt, business manager at Colorado Springs, Colorado; Ray Schlichting, travelling auditor of camp books. Dr. Robert L. Bender received an appointment to serve at North Fork, California and other Mennonite camps in the capacity of a medical attendant and inspector.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Wilbert A. Regier, Los Angeles, California

January 1—"For I seek not your's, but you." II Cor. 12:14.

What a tremendous challenge for the New Year! We so often misunderstand our Lord's invitation to a life of full surrender, for we are too easily satisfied with merely surrendering things! Our Lord, however, is asking not for things, but for ourselves! "For I seek not your's, but you." The reason is plain. If He controls the person, He will also control the possessions. Let us therefore follow the Corinthian example of II Cor. 8:5, "And this they did, not as we hoped, but first gave their own selves to the lord, and unto us by the will of God."

January 2—"That I may know Him." Phil. 3:10a.

These words were written by a mature Christian whose only longing was Jesus Christ. We do well in following his example, for someone has well said: "We become like that upon which our minds habitually dwell." It is impossible to be Christ-like when we have eyes only for the things of the world. If we would shine for Him, we must be in touch with Him. And if we would be in touch with Him, we must be constant in the practice of prayer. O Holy Spirit, teach me to pray: "That I may know Him!"

January 3—"Now thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ." II Cor. 2:14a

Coneybeare's translation reads: "Thanks be unto God, who leads me on from place to place, in the train of His triumph, to celebrate His victory over the enemies of Christ." God never intended the Christian life to be a constant struggle against sin, but rather a life of glorious day by day victory through Jesus Christ. Our part is to recognize that the battle is not "ours," but "His!" .Let your faith therefore rest in Him, and you will discover that "Faith need never struggle for victory, but faith stands in victory, and combats the forces of darkness from a victory position." Are you resting in Christ today? Then claim victory now!

January 4—"Ye are my witnesses." Isa. 43:10a.

Have you ever stopped to think of the far reaching implications made within that phrase? In other words the Lord is saying: "Man's conceptions of Me are gotten from the way they see my children live!" In the light of that, is your witness heightening or lowering the world's conception of Him?

One of my instructors used to say: "More people read the Bible bound in shoe leather, than there are those reading it bound in morocco." "Ye are my witnesses!" saith the Lord. And now as the world reads your life and mine, what picture do they receive of Him?

January 5—"Go ye also into the vineyard." Matt. 20:4a.

These words seem to run parallel with those of Matt. 28:19, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations." The work of making Christ known to those in darkness and sin has not been given to just an elect few, but to every one that shall name the name of Jesus Christ. Amos R. Wells once wrote, "The Christian that is not making other Christians is as much a contradiction in terms as a fire that is not heating or a flame that gives no light." Jesus Christ has seen fit to limit Himself to you and me, not that His power should thereby be concealed from the world, but rather that it might be manifested through your life and mine—let us give God a chance to reveal it through our lives today.

January 6—"But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself." Dan. 1:8a.

This world, as such, is apostatizing more and more as we find ourselves hastening toward the day when Jesus Christ will come again to receive His own. How we need, as did Daniel, to have purpose of heart in order that our spiritual garments might not be defiled with the corruption and sin of this world. "Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." II Cor. 7:1. The great need of the church is for more consecrated Christians, who are not afraid to say "no!" to the allurements of the world.

January 7—"He remembereth the obedience of you all." .II Cor. 7:15b.

Even though the above word is spoken of Titus, it never-the-less is a word that is true of our Lord. No deed of kindness, of love, of thoughtfulness that we show to another will be forgotten of Him. But His heart is made especially glad when we in love to Him and in obedience to His will do that which He has commanded in His Word. Are you faithful in reading His Word? Then the Holy Spirit is also faithful in revealing His will. And having had His will revealed, are you finding joy in doing it? "He remembereth the obedience of you all."

January 8—"And he that overcometh. . . .to him will I give power." .Rev. 2:26.

No greater tragedy can be found in a church than an abnormal Christian—one that is helpless and powerless. Powerlessness comes from lack of development, and this lack of development comes from not "reckoning ourselves dead unto sin" through Jesus Christ our Lord. It is much easier to yield to Satan than to resist him, but the Word says that power comes from overcoming the adversary of our souls "by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of testimony." May we therefore, heed the words of Philip Brooks, "Oh do not pray for easy lives. Pray to be stronger men! Do not pray for tasks equal to your powers. Pray for powers equal to your tasks."

WEEK OF PRAYER

January 3-10, 1943

THEME—Faith Giveth the Victory

JANUARY 3: "Appearance and Reality"

Scripture: II Cor. 4; 5:1-10; Rom. 8:31-37; Matt. 16:1-4; Luke 12: 22-40.

As the New Year begins the world is in a bad way, judged by appearances. We must not close our eyes to appearances—indeed, we cannot. The scientist knows that appearances often are deceptive. A person who knows nothing about the laws of refraction of light might conclude that a stick bends when dipped into water.

If St. Paul had judged life from outward appearances he might have concluded that it is not worth what it costs in suffering and humiliation. "The slight trouble of the passing hour results in a solid glory past all comparison for those whose eyes are on the unseen, not the seen; for the things that are seen are transient, but the things that are unseen are eternal." (Moffatt)

Judged by appearances many of Jesus' words seem unrealistic. "Be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." A first century Christian might well have said, "Well, that may be so but appearances are against it. Contempt, persecution, martyrdom—is this overcoming the world?"

What enabled Jesus to go on when every appearance indicated that He was going to His death? His eyes beheld the cross, but He had insight clearer than physical vision and He knew that the things that are unseen are eternal.

What enabled the first century Christians to go on in spite of dungeons, fire, and sword? Their insight saw the King in His beauty; they beheld a land that is far off; a kingdom of righteousness and peace.

We cannot close our eyes and forget. We can open our eyes and remember that the things that are seen are temporal but the things that are unseen are eternal. Prayer Point: That however physical force, injustice and brutality may seem to dominate the present scene, we may be delivered from the belief that this is the normal course of life. Hymn: Spirit of God, descend upon my Heart.

JANUARY 4: "Flight or Faith"

Scripture: Psalms 55; 73; 11; 46; Deut. 33:27; Isa. 30:15; Matt. 11:28-29; Rom. 7:14-25.

The fifty-fifth Psalm is filled with extremes of feeling. The composer. who may have been King David himself, was evidently experiencing a time of strife and violence were afflicting Jerusalem and when he was the victim of treachery and intrigue not only from one faction but from all. In the revulsion of feeling he wants to get completely away from the whole situation. "O that I had wings like a dove! Then would I fly away and be at rest."

Society is full of people who are trying to get away from reality. Some try to do it through drugs. A rapidly increasing number are trying to do it through drink. The author of the fifty-fifth Psalm experiences wave after wave of cursing anger which leaves him exhausted and then he longs for a wilderness in which he can find rest. And finding none he turns to God. "Cast thy burden upon the Lord and he will sustain thee."

Casting our burden upon the Lord is surely more than dumping our problems into God's lap. "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." He offers rest. "Take my yoke upon you... and ye shall find rest unto your souls." We cannot run away from our troubles but we can share them with the Eternal. The way to rest and peace is through faith. Prayer Point: That we may be kept from taking refuge in surrender to the easier way. Hymn: How firm a Foundation.

JANUARY 5: "Faith—A Song in the Night"

Scripture: Psalm 42; 16; 63; Luke 5:1-11; Rom. 8:1-25; Eph. 6:10-18.

Humanity has wandered away from Him. We must come to ourselves, like the Prodigal Son, and penitence and humility begin the journey back to the Father.

But if it is by returning to God that we shall be saved there must be something in men and women sore beset and puzzled, which makes it possible to return to Him. Faith is a song in the night—not a glamorous, moonlit, summer night, but a cold stormy, winter night. Faith is not speculation; it is inspiration. It is not an explanation of the night: it is the spirit which enables us to sing in spite of the night. Faith does not give us a solution to life's problems; it supplies us with courage and motive to face them bravely and hopefully. It gives us reserves of power. Prayer Point: That we may keep ourselves spiritually fit by excersising ourselves in godliness. Hymn: My Faith looks up to Thee.

JANUARY 6: "The Anchors of Faith"

Scripture: Acts 27; Matt. 7:24-27; Heb. 6:9-19; Gal. 2:20; 6:6-10; James 2:14-25; Heb. 11; 12;1-2; I John 5:4.

When the ship in which St. Paul had embarked for Rome encountered a disabling storm and was being blown upon the rocks, the crew let go four anchors and waited for day. What are some of the anchors that we may cast to keep from going to pieces on the rocks?

1. Faith in God our heavenly Father, revealed to us in the life and spirit of Jesus. We believe in a God of creative and sustaining love, who is working out His eternal purpose of good for and through His children.

2. But many a person will say with sincerity and yearning, "I do not have a deep, personal sense of God, nor do I seem able to develop it. .I wish that I could."

That person, too, has an anchor which will keep him from drifting—the anchor of steadfast living.

3. In every normal life there come moments of realization that an imminent decision will be judged by eternal standards. ."Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." ."I know that truth and right have the universe on their side"—that is a fastholding anchor for the soul.

4. The fact of victorious spiritual experience. We know persons who have overcome. They have found anchorage in the heart of God. What they have we too can find. Prayer Point: Thanks to God for persons who have helped us by the unconscious witness of their faithful living. Hymn: Rock Of Ages, cleft for me.

JANUARY 7: "The Faith That Impels"

Scripture: Psa. 32; Ex. 14:15; Isa. 6:1-9; Amos 6:1ff; Luke 10:25-37; Phil. 3:12-16; Heb. 4:1-16.

"Thou art my hiding place; thou wilt preserve me from trouble; thou wilt compass me about with songs of deliverance." .That is man speaking, confessing his faith in God's protection.

"I will instruct thee and teach thee in the way in which thou shalt go. .I will counsel thee with mine eye upon thee." That is God speaking, encouraging man to put faith into action.

In the first of these verses God is refuge, rest, peace, support. He is all of these. But in the second verse he shows that He is far more. He is wisdom. He is motive. He is impulse.

The faith that finds security in God is a comfort and help to countless souls. But if it stops with security it becomes static and is a lower order of faith. High faith is not static. It impels. It is not concerned so much with security. It risks danger.

Most people form certain ideas of God in early life which were adequate for that age. They are not adequate for mature life, but they still cling to them. They shrink from changing them and are willing to keep them unchanged. And yet, beyond the limits of our faith-patterns there are limitless reaches of God's grace and power waiting to be explored, riches of God's creative love to be discovered if we are brave enough to face the hardships and dangers of spiritual pioneerings. Prayer Point: That we may be delivered from blind spots in our faith which prevent us from seeings evils that are on our doorsteps. Hymn: Am I a Soldier of the Cross.

JANUARY 8: "Faith Plus"

Scripture: II. Pet. 1:5-7; Matt. 5:1-16; 17:1-19; Mark 3:31-35; John 13:1-17; 15:1-17; Gal. 5:22.

"Supplement your faith with goodness, goodness with knowledge, knowledge with steadfastness, steadfastness with piety, piety with a spirit of brotherhood, and the spirit of brotherhood with love." (Goodspeed)

Supplement your faith! The idea is startling. We think at once of the words of Jesus, "Only believe, and if ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place, and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible to you." .These sayings imply that having faith one has everything needful for a complete religious life. St. Peter's words stand in sharp contrast. They say, in substance, "If you want to be fruitful Christian you must supplement your faith."

There is no real contradiction between faith and works. Jesus makes this clear throughout the Sermon on the Mount. The type of life which he there sets forth is the life which translates its faith into action. The Kingdom comes through faith and service. How shall I supplement my faith? I will stand for the right. I will make myself intelligent as to what goodness is and what it can do. Prayer Point: That the quality of our living may remove the common reproach that most church members are insincere. Hymn: O Master, let me walk with Thee.

JANUARY 9: "The Faithful God"

Scripture: I Thess. 5:24; II Thess. 3:1-5; Matt. 5:43-48; 6:24-34; I Cor. 1:4-9; 10:13; II Tim. 2:1-12; Heb. 10:19-23; Deut. 7:6-11; Isa. 49:5-13; Psalms 23; 36; 89; 121.

Faith is our response to a person or principle which is faithful to us, supremely worthy of our confidence and trust.

Our ground for faith is the fact that God is faithful to His children. They may forsake Him but He never forsakes them. They may let Him down but He never lets them down. His laws are never the way of death; they are the way of life. We may try to break those laws but we are the ones who are broken. And then we blame Him and complain that He is cruel and unjust. But He is faithful. His laws are always the way of life. His love is not the erratic indulgence of a parent who plays favorites among His children who buys their obedience. It is a loving concern which follows all of us all the way, even though we walk through the valley of the shadow, though we dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, though we make our bed in hell. In disaster, in the tumult of the earthquake or tornado, on the tilting decks of torpedoed vessels, men and women have experienced the steadying love of God as a fact greater than physical death.

May we learn during this fateful year of global war that there is such a thing as a life independent of everything except faith in the faithfulness of God—a life independent of temporal conditions. Of material riches, of the things on which we ordinarily depend for security. Of the millions that are starving not all are cursing God and dying in despair. Some have nothing left but God, and they have found that He is faithful.

"Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or anguish, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? Nay, in all these

Latest on C. E. Programs

By Mrs. Gerhard Friesen

The outline below, which gives the Senior C.E. programs for 1943, has been planned with the aim of covering the various subjects suggested in the Program of Standards for Mennonite Young People's Societies. These programs will appear in The Mennonite in the first and third issues of the month. If there are five Sundays in the month a third program outline will be brought for that month. January is an exception to the statement just made.

"Mennonites and Their Heritage"

We hope to use all six of the booklets, Mennonites and Their Heritage. These booklets are now being used for the "core course" in our Mennonite C.P.S. camps. They are, perhaps, the best short presentation of our heritage that is now available. Each society should secure at least one set of these booklets. They sell at twenty cents per copy, postpaid, or in quantities of fifteen or more for fifteen cents postpaid. Those in the Western District can order their copies from Reynold Weinbrenner, North Newton, Kansas. The material in these booklets is to serve as the basis for the suggested themes and discussions for the months of February, April, June, August, October, and December, that is, for every other month. For the intervening months we will use topics suggested in the Standards, but not covered in these booklets.

Let's All Use Them

We hope that all of our young people will come to use these programs. In this way we can develop a feeling of fellowship and mutual understanding. Using these pamphlets will also help us to become better acquainted with the educational program in our C.P.S. camps. May these programs serve to strengthen us in the faith of our fathers, and thereby, help us to become more Christlike in thought and word and deed. —700 East Broadway, Newton, Kansas

IS IT ANYTHING TO US?

By Carl Lehman

At the mental hospital near Marlboro, New Jersey, 2600 men, women, and children are destined to continue in their bleak misery unless someone answers the call for help. Those who used to care for them have gone elsewhere, and now only a handful remains —hardly enough to take care of bare, absolute, necessities.

Behind the life of each one of these 2600 there is a story, each one has been part of a terrible tragedy. A few short years ago they were just as you and I. They lived and thought like other men. But now they are ill—mentally ill. When a man is sick physically, people comfort him. But when he is sick mentally—they laugh. People do not understand.

Many of them were being cured. But now their treatment has stopped. Not because it was not effective, but because there is no one left to do the work. Occupational therapy, which had become a new hope for so many, has been discontinued, for there can be no occupational therapy in an institution where every available source of man power is so desperately needed to feed the patients and keep them alive.

This is the kind of work we can now begin to do. It is something which will not be done if we do not do it. We replace no one. By doing this work we do not make someone else do things which we ourselves could not do. We do not take an oath of allegiance to a system which attempts to combat evil by a method diametrically opposed to what our Saviour taught. And where else could we bring spiritual, physical and mental help to a more responsive and needy people?

We pray for those from here (Medaryville, Indiana) who have found it possible to go. Soon others will follow and will lighten the burden in other places. Is it anything to us that men suffer? Is it anything to us that they are lying helpless by the wayside? Will we pass by on the other side, or will we forget ourselves and those things which we so selfishly cherish, and take up our cross and follow Him?

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

A. S. BECHTEL

Jesus Instructs a Great Teacher

John 3:1-16

The lesson of the first quarter are, with one exception, taken from John's Gospel,, which is preeminently "the spiritual gospel." It makes a strong appeal to the hearts and minds of devout Christians and seekers after the truth. It was written to create faith in Jesus as the Son of God, and to help men to receive life through Him (20:31). Chapter 21:20, 24, disclose the author. Many details recorded in this gospel indicate that they were reported by one who saw and heard the things related. Over nine tenths of the material in John's Gospel is not found elsewhere. John gives us exalted conceptions of the pre-existence and deity of Christ. He describes a Savior who is abundantly able to meet all the spiritual needs of men.

Instruction Concerning the New Birth, vss. 1-12

Jesus interview with Nicodemus occured while Jesus was attending the Passover feast in Jerusalem, a few months after beginning his public ministry. Nicodemus, a member of the Sanhedrin, was convinced by the miracles which Jesus performed that He was a teacher come from God. Deeds which exhibit the power of God do prove that He is helping the person who works them. Miracles convinced the hearers in the early Christian movement that those preachers of the gospel told the truth. It was altogether natural that Nicodemus, a teacher who was sincerely seeking after truth, should come to see Jesus and have a long talk with Him. He came at night time—the best time for an undisturbed meeting with Jesus.

The very brief record of John brings us at once to the very heart of true religion, real Christianity. Jesus solemnly and clearly declares that a new birth, a birth from above, is necessary for entrance into the kingdom of God (vss. 3-5). Nicodemus held the current view of a material kingdom and failed to see Jesus' meaning. He could not understand that Jews needed the new birth—spiritual birth—hence his question (vs. 4). Water is symbolic of a purification by the operation of the Holy Spirit. Jesus reiterates this foundamental truth of the necessity of the spiritual birth. It needs to be emphasized today. Man by his natural birth is of a sinful nature. He has spiritual capacities. The time comes when his heart ought to be quickened by the Spirit and his nature become Spirit-controlled. Spiritual life can come into the soul through the power if the Spirit.

We can not see the Spirit anymore than we can see the wind. We do not know just how the Spirit works transformations in the heart and soul. But like the actions of the wind, we can be certain of the reality of his work from the effects produced. The entire nature and manner of life is changed by the power of the Spirit in the new birth. Christ's teaching was mysterious to Nicodemus (vs. 9). He should have understood. Jesus vouches for the truth of His teaching. They who hestitate to believe the thing that men can be expected to learn through experience are not likely to believe the deeper spiritual mysteries (vs. 12). These can be understood and believed only by the help of the Spirit.

Instruction Concerning Jesus' Mission, vss. 13-16

Jesus instructed Nicodemus as to who He was and as to the nature of His mission on earth. He did not make Himself thus known to everyone. Jesus declared that He came down from heaven when He assumed human flesh, and that He was God's Son. The only way to learn these truths which He is teaching, is from Him, the Son of man (vs. 13). Jesus declared that it was an essential part of his mission to die upon the cross and thus to be the Savior of men. He declared that belief in Him is necessary for the possession of eternal life (vss. 15, 16). Unrepented unbelievers perish through everlasting banishment from God. In sending His Son God revealed the depth of his love. The new birth becomes a reality to men through belief in Christ. This belief involves the committing of ourselves into His hands and trusting in Him for salvation. A turning away from sin is inseparably connected with such belief.

Week of Prayer

things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us. For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor things present, nor things to come, nor powers, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." Prayer Point: Confession of our lack of faith in His constant and loving concern. Hymn: Abide with me. (The above is an abridgement of the topics written by Oscar Edward Maurer.)

Christian Stability

To date we know of not one Bethel College alumnus in more than half a century who has sought a divorce.

TREASURER CHANGES ADDRESS

Rev. John J. Plenert, Treasurer of the Home Mission Board of the General Conference, writes that his new address is 7319 Whitaker Avenue Philadelphia, Pa. All church treasurers should note this change.

CORRESPONDENCE

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH
Wadsworth, Ohio

We have been blessed spiritually in many ways. Our sermon topics for the last three months have been, "Convictions of the Evangelist," "The Meaning of Conversion," "Christian Dynamics for a Fallen World," "Fret Not Thyself," "What Think Ye of Christ," "The Failure of the Church," . . . Soul stirring messages on these topics have afforded us much spiritual food, but particularly the sermon on "The Failure of the Church" clearly pointed out how we as church members have failed.

The text of this sermon was taken from Romans 12:2,21 "And be not conformed to this world; but be transformed by the renewing of your mind. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." We should be so transformed by Christ's overwhelming love that we cannot conform to the evils surrounding us; we will not surrender convictions dear to us simply because those convictions are not a popular trend of thought.

September 20 was Rally Day, September 27, Harvest Home Celebration, and October 4, the fall communion service.

October 1, in a special baptismal and preparatory service the following publicly confessed their faith in Jesus Christ and received His baptism of the spirit; Marilyn Daniels, Dorothy Kilmer, Junior Shelly, Bonita Welday, Jean Welday, Ruth Rohrer, Carol Transue, and Jerry Stuver.

Our one hundred and twelve-year-old church building of New England architecture received a fine coat of white paint.

Leadership training classes started October 6, and are meeting each Thursday evening. A special youth class meets also at this time under Willard Hunsberger. The basis emphasis of these meetings is a spiritual renewal through prayer and diligent search of God's word.

The Women's Gospel Team of Bluffton College presided during the worship service November 5. A girls' quartet sang and Margaret Shelly very ably delivered a sermonette on "What Christ Means to Us Today."

The Ladies Missionary Society presented its annual mite box program Sunday evening, November 22, featuring Sister Herman Kreider, who returned to this country in September after sixteen years of work as a missionary in Turkey.

The Mennonite Ladies Christian Service group is busily engaged in making garments for European relief. Recently they gathered usable old clothing, mended it, and packed it ready for shipment to Akron, Pa., where it will be sent to European relief centers.

Sunday evening, December 20, a special Christmas program will be given.

We lost two faithful elderly members through death during the past year, La Mou Benner and Sister Ida Rich Krabill.

Several of our members have also moved. The most recent loss is that of the four active members of the Pharlon Weinsheimer family who are now located in California. And yet we find others who move to or near Wadsworth happy to find a Mennonite church with a warm welcome and fine message within its church doors.

Let us go into the house of the Lord. Psalm 122

MENNONITE CHURCH
Newport, Washington

May the Prince of Peace rule our hearts and minds! Truly the Lord has been good to us. There have been no deaths in our church thus far this year. Menno Woelk, who is in the air corps at Sheppard Field, Texas, was married in October. Ben Bergen is to leave for an induction center in Utah. Dan Dalke has gotten a deferment.

Our church supper and mission sale yielded $167.00, which will be used for home and foreign missions. On Thanksgiving morning the Junior girls gave two plays, "The Thank-Offering Speaks" and "Two Masters." The children's offering was $11.66. This goes to the orphan home at Henderson, Nebraska. The adult offering of $44.66 will be used for relief in India.

While the congregation was listening to the sermon on November 1, an earthquake was felt. There was no excitement, although Rev. Unruh paused for a moment and then continued. The Indians here have predicted a hard winter. No doubt, they are right. We have had about forty inches of snowfall and some very cold weather. —Mrs. H. D. Hiebert, Corr.

RELIEF

Greetings from Workers in France

Before leaving France on November 6, 1942, Brother Joseph N. Byler was asked by Brother Henry Buller and Sister Lois Gunden to extend to their friends in America the season's greetings and to thank the churches for their prayerful support. Both Brother Buller and Sister Gunden were in good health and spirits at the time of his departure.

"Hail the American Mennonites!"

Our workers in France have received over 2,000 letters of thanks from French school children and others who have benefited by the Mennonite relief program. Below is an excerpt translated from one girl's letter:

"For the children of France Providence has called on generous men with a good heart, animated by the spirit of Christ. This has inspired in them a great pity for the children, innocent victims of the war. These good hearted men are the American Mennonites. Owing to the health restoring food which you have offered us, dried vegetables, etc., for a short time at least we will not know any restrictions. Our body will be able to grow, to develop strength, our health will improve and in spite of the sufferings of the war we will be strong and robust. Hail the American Mennonites with their noble and generous heart!"

Brother Byler Returns from France

On November 29, 1942, Brother Joseph N. Byler reached Philadelphia, having sailed from Lisbon, Portugal, last November 16 abroad the Portuguese vessel, Serpa Pinto. Brother Byler left France on November 6 or several days before the present French crisis.

At the time of his leaving plans for the winter relief program were completed and Brother Henry Buller and Sister Lois Gunden were prepared to carry on through the winter. A cable from Geneva, Switzerland, dated November 27 states that Lois Gunden and Henry Buller are in Lyon. Brother Byler offers the opinion that they are there directing the relief work and may be allowed to continue though this is uncertain. There is a reserve of funds on hand which would permit work for about a year.

Brother Byler arrived in France on October 17, 1941. Looking back over the months he spent in France, Brother Byler reports that an average of 7,111 people were helped each month. This figure includes the colonies for refugee children at Lyon and Canet Plage, the food cantine at Cerebere, the food distribution at Banyuls and Collioure, and the help to stranded refugees (many Jewish). The average number of people helped was made quite large by the feeding of thousands of Lyon school children during several winter months.

During his absence Mrs. Byler was serving at the Akron, Pa., office. Brother Byler plans to return with his family to his home in Hesston, Kansas, where he will resume teaching at Hesston College.

PEACE SECTION NOTES

Classifications and Appeals

Due to more recent developments in regard to classification, causing a general tightening up along many lines, some of our men are having difficulty in getting the classification desired. It is quite important that proper steps should be taken without delay to get reclassification if one is not put into the proper class. It cannot be stressed too urgently nor to often that appeals should be made within ten days.

There seems to be unexpressed feeling on the part of many local leaders that it is not very important to take the proper steps for themselves, but that things will somehow be worked out by headquarters. This is an erroneous assumption. If proper steps are not taken from the beginning it makes it extremely difficult for us to do anything later.

In view of the increasingly stringent rules concerning parole of those who are sentenced to penitentiary terms, it seems quite important to us that local leaders and the men themselves should be properly informed and do all within their power in their own individual cases.

If your case, then, is due for consideration within the near future, make certain that you know the proper steps. If you cannot get the information locally you had better write to us in advance. We expect to get out a bulletin which will discuss more in detail the procedure. The booklet will be available in January.

—J.W.H.

Bonds

We call attention again to the necessity of having your full name on bond subscriptions. Bonds cannot be registered with only the initials. Unless you sign your full name it only causes delay and added correspondence. —J.W.H.

Civilian bond subscriptions continue to come to Provident Trust Company at the rate of about $40,000 per week. The total subscribed from the beginning of this plan to December 3 amounts to $527,100.00. Approximately eighty-five per cent of this total so far has been from Mennonite sources. No investment of funds at Provident Trust Company has been authorized since that of October 9. The Civilian Bond Committee is assured that government issues suitable for these funds will very soon be available. The Treasury Department representatives have requested and are getting monthly reports of all subscriptions received by Provident Trust Company, and we understand are now making the information available to all county and state Bond Sales Headquarters, concerned. —O.O.M.

IN MEMORIAM

SALOME GERBER BAUMGARTER, daughter of Mathias and Dina Moser Gerber, was born July 6, 1862, in Wayne County, Ohio. She is survived by one sister, Mrs. Matilda Amstutz, and two brothers, Valentine and Jacob, all of Dalton, Ohio. At an early age she joined the Sonnenberg Mennonite Church, and taught a Sunday school class of girls for several years. On February 21, 1895, she was married to Abraham B. Hoffstetter, who passed away April 10, 1898. On December 20, 1900, she was married to Simon P. Baumgartner, who survives her. At that time she transferred her membership to the Halstead, Kansas, Mennonite Church. She died in the Halstead Hospital on November 24, 1942.

HERALD C. JANTZ was born July 19, 1917, at Fort Cobb, Oklahoma, and died December 6, 1942, as the result of a car accident. He was the son of Brother and Sister Johnathan Jantz. When Herald was eleven his father died. In 1933 he with his mother moved to Meno. In 1934 Herald was baptized by Rev. P. R. Schroeder and became a member of the Zoar Mennonite Church, Goltry. At the Oklahoma Bible Academy, Herald with Marvin Eck started a prayer meeting. This developed into a Christian fellowship, which later united with the O.B.A. Gospel Team. Herald led a consistent and earnest prayer life. In 1940 he was married to Esther Regier, daughter of Brother and Sister H. B. Regier of Turpin, Oklahoma. Surviving him are his wife, mother, two sisters, Mrs. Viola Koehn and Kathryn; his twin brother Raymond Roy and one brother-in-law, Melvin W. Koehn, all of Meno.

« « JOTTINGS » »

—Brother Harry Martens will take up his duties as Director of the Civilian Public Service Camp at Colorado Springs, Colorado, on January 1. He has been serving as head of the Student Office and as Dean of Labor at Bethel College. When he was a senior in college he was given the job of finding employment for students. Since 1937 he has had charge of the expanding employment of students, which has by now resulted in a broad work program. He also had charge of student solicitation, did such community service as visiting high schools and churches with certain college groups, and engaged in personal counselling. Brother Martens and family left on December 30 for their new home and work.

—Brother H. T. Reimer of Holmsville, Nebraska, who has been ill for some time, is now home from the hospital. Sister Reimer writes "He is getting a little stronger, sits up part of the time, and eats the meals with us at the table. But after being up a while the bed still feels pretty good."

—"Not long after the founding of the college (Goshen) in Goshen, Indiana, in 1903, its first librarian, C. Henry Smith, now a widely known authority in Mennonite history, conceived the idea of establishing a Mennonite historical library in connection with the general college library." So writes Robert Friedmann, a refugee from Europe, in the December issue of the American-German Review. Brother Friedmann has become a Mennonite and is teaching at Goshen Colllege. The library which Brother Smith brought into being has by now become "the foremost collection of Mennonitica in this country."

—Brother Melvin Gingerich, who teaches history and government at Bethel Colege, left on December 26 for the Hills City, South Dakota, C. P. S. camp. He also planned to visit the Colorado Springs and Fort Collins, Colorado, camps, returning to the campus around January 2.

—The Sisters of the Mennonite Hospital at Beatrice, Nebraska, are conducting a Red Cross Home Nursing Course for interested women, according to an announcement in a bulletin of the Second Mennonite Church.

—Bluffton College: Brother Lloyd Ramseyer and Brother I. W. Bauman attended a conference of the three historic peace churches at which the subject of discussion was, "Rural Life and Its Problems." A challenge to Mennonites, Quakers, and Dunkards for the preservation of our rural traditions and rural heritage on a Christian foundation, was the major emphasis. Carl Landes addressed the Bluffton College church organization on December 13. Charles Suter, an alumnus of 1940, spoke to faculty and students concerning the future of Civilian Public Service on December 10. Brother Suter is serving as educational and assistant camp director of the C.P.S. camp at Howard, Pa. He was visiting his home in Pandora on a ten-day furlough. Parts of Dickens' "Christmas Carol" were dramatized in a program by the Y's. After this program members of the Y.W. made favors for the Bluffton Community hospital. Christmas recess for Bluffton students ends at 8 a.m., January 5.

—The First Mennonite Church of Newton, Kansas, sends a very interesting letter, called "The Home Church Letter" to the men in the camps. The one of December 16 is a mimeographed one of four pages. The division headings are: "Dr. Warkentin's Letter to You," "Reverend Entz's Letter," "Items of Interest," and "At Church." From it we glean that Brother and Sister A. Warkentin will spend Christmas in Chicago with their children John and Linda Warkentin, and Edith and Herman.

—Brother A. E. Kreider, Bible teacher at Bethel College, was gone for four days, including Christmas Day, to the C.P.S. camp at Weeping Water, Nebraska. Undoubtedly, the C.P.S. men of all camps, most of whom stayed in camp during the holidays, enjoyed the services of visiting speakers very much.

EASTERN DISTRICT SECRETARY'S NOTES

Saucon Home-Coming Service

Saucon—The Saucon Mennonite Church of Coopersburg held a home-coming service on December 13, at which time they also recognized the faithful service of Brother Frank H. Kramer who has a record of fifty-two years as a teacher in the Sunday school. The service was in charge of Brother John Unruh, supply pastor of the church. The following ministers were present, Freeman H. Swartz, Olin A. Krehbiel, A. M. Fretz, Harold D. Burkholder, Ward Shelly, Paul R. Shelly, John Unruh and Howard G. Nyce. Besides these conference ministers, the pastor of the Center Valley Baptist Church and Rev. Warren Breisch, pastor of the Hatfield Reformed Church, who was formerly a Sunday school superintendent of the Saucon Church. Rev Paul Shelly conducted a brief song service, with Mrs. John Unruh accompanying at the piano. Rev. A. M. Fretz had charge of the devotions, reading John 20:11-31 and offering prayer. Rev. Unruh stated that the purpose of this meeting was to recognize two charter members of the Sunday school, Brother Frank H. Kramer and Sister Charles Beck, both were present at the service. Rev. Ward Shelly's father, Howard Shelly, sang a solo entitled "When Jesus Comes," accompanied by Mrs. Ward Shelly at the piano. Brother Unruh then introduced Rev. Breisch as the first speaker. He said in part, "Today I cannot help but speak a few words of my association with this Sunday school and church and say what it meant to me. I left here fourteen years ago to prepare for a larger work, the ministry. The foundation of my work was received in this Sunday school. I shall never forget how Brother Geissinger made real to me one Sunday, the exodus of the children of Israel, and from that day on, things started to become clear to me. Then too, I shall never forget the prayers of Brother Kramer, who always prayed about a loving heavenly Father, which later became clear to me, and how he always closed his German prayer by saying 'Praise and Honor belong to God.' I have found many superficial things in life, but what I learned here, expressed in a very simple teaching, left an impression upon me which I will never forget."

Then he paid tribute to the church and Sunday school in a very beautiful way by using John the Baptist's expression, "When the followers of John left him and went to Jesus, he said, 'He must increase, but I must decrease.' No doubt that is what this church would have to say today concerning those who formerly attended and worshipped here. The work of this school and church is by no means finished, but it may be true that the sons going forth from this place may increase while the school takes the attitude of John 'I must decrease.' " A ministers quartet comprised of Burkholder, Nyce, Paul Shelly, and Krehbiel, sang "Take Time to Be Holy." The next message was brought by the Elder of the Church and President of the Home Mission Committee, the Rev. Freeman H. Swartz. As a tribute to Brother Kramer, he read from the fourteenth chapter of Joshua and said, "Three times we find the words "Wholly Followed." Then he said in part, "There are five marks of veteran as found in Caleb. They are the body, a healthy body, so that Caleb at eighty-five could say, 'I am as strong this day as I was in the day that Moses sent me; as my strength was then, even so is my strength now.' —Joshua 14:11. The second mark is faith. The third, courage or faith in action. The fourth is optimism, and the fifth is determination." Rev. Olin A. Krehbiel sang a German solo "Ich bete an die Macht der Liebe." Rev Unruh then read the greetings received from Brothers E. S. Shelly who served the congregation as pastor on two occasions, Andrew R. Shelly, who was formerly Sunday school superintendent, and referred to the greeting of Rev. Sylvan S. Lehman, conference president, who could not be present. Other ministers present then brought greetings. It was interesting to hear Rev. A. M. Fretz who stated "On January 6, it will be fifty-nine years that I preached my first sermon here; then for the next twenty-two years I preached here every twelve weeks. Yesterady I was ninety years old." Rev. Paul R. Shelly expressed regrets that neither his father nor his brother could be present. He paid tribute to the influence the Sunday school had on him during the years that his father was pastor of the church. Brother Unruh then called Brother Kramer to the front and said, "The members of this church desire to give you this book The History of the Mennonites as an appreciation of your service. You are requested to see each member, who will write their names in the book so that you can realize it is the gift of the congregation." Brother Kramer accepted the book, but could hardly speak; then finally he said, "I cannot tell you what it means to me to have all you ministers come here this afternoon to honor me." After he sat down Brother Unruh stated that Brother Kramer celebrated his eighty-third birthday on Saturday, December 5. After the singing of another hymn, Brother Burkholder pronounced the benediction, and a very impressive service came to a

—The Twelfth Joint Conference of Mennonites, Schwenkfelders, Brethren and Friends was held in the Lansdale Schwenkfelder Church on Saturday, December 5, with afternoon and evening sessions. The chairman for the day was the Rev. Robert J. Gottschall, pastor of the Norristown Schwenkfelder Church. The host pastor, the Rev. J. Maurice Hohlfeld, gave a very warm welcome to the joint conference after which Miss Flora K. Heebner, missionary to China from 1904 to 1942, brought the opening meditation in a very inspirational manner. Every one could feel the very presence of God. The theme for the afternoon was "Go ye therefore and make disciples of all the nations." After a period of quiet, different men representing the different groups, spoke on the theme. Supper was served by the ladies of the church, and the business of the conference was transacted at the supper table. The first speaker of the evening was Dr. Harvey Bauman, missionary to India from 1925 to 1942, who spoke on the subject "India——'?' " The second speaker was Dr. Edmund H. Stinnes, visiting professor at Haverford College. Both messages were very interesting and were followed with a brief question and answer period. There were 109 present for the evening meal and many more attended the evening session.

The East Swamp Gospel Messengers started a weekly broadcast over WSAN, Allentown, 1470 on the Dial, on Saturday evening, December 5. The time of the broadcast is 7:00 to 7:30 o'clock. The Rev. Harold D. Burkholder is pastor of the church.

Napier—It has come to our attention that Mrs. George Groger, (the pastor's wife) is a modern Nimrod. Yes, the story continues that she shot a rabbit during the hunting season.

Hereford, Bally—John Moser who has been on the sick list for over a year as the result of a mishap at work, was moved to the Allentown Hospital on Friday afternoon, December 4. He had previously been a patient in the Reading Hospital, Reading, Pa., and later in the University of Pennsylvania Hospital in Philadelphia, Pa. We hope and pray that he might find help in the Allentown Hospital. Let us pray very definitely for John.

Grace, Lansdale—According to a leaflet sent out by the church twenty-six young men are in the armed forces of our country and one in the C.P.S. camp. This is a very high average for the size of the congregation. Recently, Robert Kreider, son of the Rev. and Mrs. A. E. Keider, of North Newton, Kansas, spoke in a morning service on the importance of the C.P.S. Program. (Rev. Kreider is a member of the Foreign Mission Board and an instructor in the Bible Department of Bethel College, North Newton, Kansas.)

Quarterly Conference—The Third Quarterly Conference for the 1942-1943 conference year will be held in Zion Mennonite Church, Soudertown, Monday January 18, 1943. Dr. Levering Tyson, President of Muhlenberg College, will speak in the evening on "The Future of Our Denominational Colleges." Dr. Tyson is a member of the War Time Commission of the Office of Education in Washington, D. C., and is the only liberal arts college representative on the commission. Plan now to attend this conference and, especially, the evening session. —Howard G. Nyce

—Berne, Indiana: Rev. D. C. Stucky from Detroit, Michigan, preached in the First Mennonite Church on December 13.

—The High School Victory Corps manual may be had free of charge by writing for it to the Office of Education, Washington, D. C.

—Bulletin, Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: "No service in our church tonight. This does not mean that we are cutting down the number of church activities, but it does mean that in our effort to conserve fuel and transportation we have shifted some of our activities. We encourage our people to use this Sunday evening as a 'Family Night' at home. Sunday evening is still a part of the Lord's Day. Why not use it to enhance the spiritual life of the home? Why not have the family read together, sing together, and pray together?"

—Change of Address notifications should be sent to The Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas, and not to The Mennonite, North Newton, Kansas. The Publication Office takes care of the subscription list.

—Correction: In the financial report of December 8 the membership total and the average giving per member of the following churches should have read as follows: Hoffnungsfeld, 116 members, $2.86; Inman, 189 members, $0.22; Johannestal, 192 members, $1.81. The membership figures of the financial supplement were based upon those of the Year Book of 1942. So one mistake has led to more. We hope to get the next financial report out in January. The membership of the Burrton Mennonite Church should have been given as 182 and the per member giving as $0.48.

—First Mennonite Church, Summerfield, Illinois: Rev. Elmer Basinger is recovering satisfactorily from an operation to which he submitted at Barnes Hospital, St. Louis, Missouri, on November 21. A new furnace has been installed in our meeting house. Ministerial students from McKendree College, Lebanon, Illinois, are bringing the messages during Rev. Basinger's absence. A union Thanksgiving service was held in the St. John's Evangelical Church. Rev. Kock from Trenton, Illinois, delivered the message. Much good has come from these meetings. —Corr.

—Some very interesting jottings have come from a number of churches recently. These were short, to the point, and contained items of general interest. Thank you, correspondents and others. More pastors are sending their church bulletins. May the number increase more.

—First Mennonite Church, Halstead, Kansas: We enjoyed a fellowship supper before our annual church business meeting. Rev. C. H. Dirks, pastor of the Mennonite Church in Hutchinson, conducted evangelistic services here from November 16-20. Through an exchange of pulpit Rev. T. A. van der Smissen of Buhler occupied the pulpit of our church on November 22. On November 24 Brother and Sister John Schroeder celebrated their golden wedding with a dinner and a short program in the church basement and with open house at their home in the afternoon and evening. On December 6 Sister Annabelle Dyck, former missionary teacher in Mexico, spoke of her work and experiences there to the Christian Endeavor Society.

—Brother Albert M. Gaeddert wrote from Burns, Idaho, on December 9, "Tonight I should get to Lapine, Oregon, the location of the new M.C.C. camp; from there I want to stop briefly at the California camps, and try to be home for the Christmas vacation. Travel is not pleasant to say the least. Trains run from five to ten hours late, but I am hoping that they will run fast enough to beat Santa Claus to Moundridge (where Sister Gaeddert and the children are staying)."

—Rev. Carl Landis planned to be in the Upland, California, community sometime before Christmas. He is a former member of the First Mennonite Church there.

—Our peace position dangles loosely in the following approximate proportion in two Mennonite communities widely separated: The one has about one out of ten in C.P.S. camps. The other has about two out of nine in civilian service.

—Rev. A. S. Bechtel writes, "We will have holy communion on Sunday, December 27. It is our custom to have that on the last Sunday in the year. Our fine eight-inch snow has disappeared nearly entirely."

—Brother A. Warkentine wrote from Munich, North Dakota, on December 14, "The Lord has been very gracious on my trip. The congregations have received me kindly, and I trust that the Lord has blessed the meetings. In spite of gas rationing and cold weather we have not missed a single meeting. The day after I arrived here at Munich the thermometer showed twenty-six degrees below zero, but today it is much warmer again."

The Christmas program, consisting of instrumental music, solos, duets, exercises, and a short Christmas pageant, was given on the afternoon of December 20. Preceding it we joined in a fellowship dinner. Before that we had our regular services. On the afternoon of January 17 we will have our annual congregational meeting. We will again have a fellowship dinner. This change is made because of gas rationing.

—Year Books will again appear very soon. The editor will be very glad to receive a copy of the year book of your church.

—Salem Mennonite Church, Dalton, Ohio: "Delvin Kirchhofer states that he is unable to go to Switzerland for relief work at present due to the military situation. He will spend some time in C.P.S. camps and hopes to be sent later to some point for relief work. Christmas packages were sent to the men in the C.P.S. camps and in the armed forces. After a recent C.E. program the group listened to a half-hour program of "Messiah" records. On December 15, M. C. Lehman visited the church and gave a message based on his experiences in relief work in central Europe.

—First Mennonite Church, Reedly, California: "Arrangements have been made to have Rev. Homer Leisy of the Mennonite Church at Dallas, Oregon, hold a series of meetings from February 7-14, inclusive. His main topic will be "Consistent Christian Behaviour." He is willing to hold meetings during the day from Monday to Friday. This will be a study of some book of the Bible." "The response of our church to the needs of C.P.S. work has been good." John Strain preached on a recent Sunday morning while Brother J. H. Langenwalter was gone to serve at the North Fork C.P.S. camp.

—Mountain Lake, Minnesota: The agricultural department of the high school, under the direction of J. H. Tschetter, is offering to adults evening classes dealing with crop rotation, soil minerals, soil conservation, plant and soil relationships, water supply, etc. The school also offers an adult homemaking class.

—Mennonite girls who look past the teaching and nursing professions to take up high-paying war industry jobs instead might well think about: (1) the spiritual issue involved, and (2) the effect of a possible industrial slump after the war.

The administrators and teachers in our colleges are anxious to have parents and pastors drop in to see how their young people are getting along.
